Hunter And Dogs Bag Panther On Mitchell Ranch

C. E. Porter Brings In Huge Sheep Killer; Mate Is Sought

Two heroic dogs and the sure aim of their master spelled the doom of a huge sheep-killing panther on the John Mitchell ranch in this county Monday, the first animal of the species to be killed in this county in over 20 years, according to ranchers.

C. E. Porter and his two dogs have been hunting the panther since Easter, being employed by Mr. Mitchell and Welton Burger, in whose country the big cat also ranged. They jumped the animal early Monday and the dogs stayed on the trail for more than an hour before bringing the big cat to bay in a cave. One of the dogs was thought to have been blinded when he crowded the bayed panther too closely and received the full force of a mauling paw in his face. Mr. Porter said here Monday afternoon, however, that he believed the dog was not seriously hurt.

The panther, which was brought to Ozona to be exhibited before being sent to a taxidermist in San Angelo, measured 6 feet, 4 inches from the nose to the tip of the tail. The animal, a female, was about to give birth to five kittens. Mr. Porter ended her sheep killing career with a well aimed rifle bullet.

Mr. Porter and his dogs have gone back to attempt to take the panther's mate, which is believed to be much larger than the animal killed. Tracks which the hunter has found were measured and are considerably larger than the dead female's feet, he declared. The panthers have killed a large number of sheep on ranches in the vicinity in the last month.

ONE THING and THEN ANOTHER

By FRED GIPSON

SAN ANGELO—For two solid hours, I've been sitting and dawdling with a typewriter, trying to turn out a column. For two solid hours, nothing has come of it.

Oh, of course, I've chewed up a cigar and smoked a package of cigarettes and kicked the desk a time or two and snapped at the editor for coming over to crack some joke of his and thereby shooing off the only idea that drifted my way. It was something about some bob white quail, a very weak and puny and vague idea, and likely no good anyhow, but I just wanted to let the editor know how I felt about the matter.

And then, too, I've twisted up a kewpie doll wisp of hair in the top of my head.

I always twist up a wisp of my hair when I'm trying to think. It used to aggravate Mama nearly to death. She'd catch me at it any day: "Son, you'll have a bald spot before you're 30, if you don't quit that."

But Mama was wrong. I'm 31 now and still twisting that same wisp of hair, and it doesn't show the least signs of slipping yet.

The reason I can't think, I think, is because they're renovating the Standard-Times office here, aiming to make it a swanky place with air-conditioning and polished floors and that sort of thing. Taking all of the comfortable, home-like qualities out of it, I say, I look to slip down on those floors and cripple myself. I followed a plow too long in my life to feel right walking around on slick, polished floors.

But since they're going to put on the dog, anyhow, I've put in my claim for a blonde secretary. One with curves, I think I'd look mighty dignified and important, with a blonde secretary taking down what I had to say. I don't

Community 'Big Tent' Begins Tenth Annual Tour

The Gainesville (Texas) Community circus is the "only show of its kind in the world." The circus, with Elliott Roosevelt as ringmaster, utilizes bankers, school teachers, housewives, business men, doctors—in fact, anyone in the community. No one is paid for his services, and the circus plays in eight or ten towns within 100 miles of Gainesville, town of 10,000. This is its tenth season. Left: The organization's quintuplet trapeze act composed of high school and college girls. Inset: Nine-year-old Doris Marie Norman, trapeze artist, and, right, a Shetland pony act, under the direction of Charles Brewer, 21, truck driver by profession.

Clean-Up Group Focus Attention On Vacant Lots

Continued Drive For Clean Town Urged By Committee

Continuing its drive with a view to 100 per cent results in its aim to make Ozona one of the cleanest, neatest towns in West Texas, members of the clean-up committee of the Ozona Woman's club this week are concentrating attention on clean-up of vacant lots in the town and removal of unsightly weed growth on vacant lots, on occupied premises and on public grounds.

A double-barreled benefit is expected to accrue from an arrangement completed by the committee this week whereby members of the newly organized Mexican Boy Scout troop are to hold themselves in readiness to accept clean-up jobs solicited by the committee. The troop is desirous of bolstering its treasury and member Scouts are anxious to do clean-up work at very reasonable rates, their earnings to go into the troop fund.

Owners of vacant lots and others who desire services of one or more of these boys, at low cost, are urged to communicate with any member of the committee, composed of Mrs. Scott Peters, chairman, Mrs. Joe Pierce and Mrs. Hillery Phillips.

The coming Missionary Society conference in Ozona next Tuesday and the rodeo to follow in June, has spurred members of the clean-up committee and the general club to renew the plea for a continuation of the clean-up campaign in order that this city may put on its best appearance for the benefit of visitors. Particular attention is called to unsightly weed growth on sidewalks, in alleys and streets, trash cans in plain sight of the street, broken down and useless fences, overgrown and trash strewn vacant lots, and other unsightly spots which owners are urged to remedy.

Mexican Residents Prepare To Observe Cinco de Mayo Fiesta

Residents of the Mexican colony of Ozona are making preparations for an elaborate celebration of Cinco de Mayo (May 5), under the general direction of a celebration committee, with Luis Cardona as master of ceremonies.

The settlement will celebrate the occasion with a two-day fiesta, which is to be climaxed with a patriotic program and crowning of the fiesta queen, who is to be selected by a system of voting. Americans are cordially invited to the program.

Wool, Mohair Market Looks Up; Shearing Under Way In Area

Shearing is getting under way in Crockett county and will be in full swing for the next several weeks. Reports from the shearing pens indicate that the spring clip is going to be extra light in this territory, due to the dry, cold weather during the winter months and the scarcity of moisture at the outset of the spring growing season.

An improved outlook is noted in the wool and mohair market with scattered purchases during the past week. Sales of wool at 19½ to 23 cents at Brownwood and a quantity of mohair at Kerrville at 46 cents for kid hair and 36 cents for the adult end indicated a strengthening market and a tendency to hold for better prices is reported from the territory.

If so, we would appreciate them and will return them in good condition.

The school will be held in the basement of the Methodist church beginning at 2:30 o'clock.

"Miss Taylor," he said, "will bring many new ideas to homemakers here, demonstrating new methods developed by electric range manufacturers to save time and labor in the kitchen. The theme of the school will be cleanliness and cleanliness made possible by electric cookery."

Every woman "owes it to herself to get acquainted with the new model electric ranges" which set an all-time high for beauty, efficiency, and economy, it was pointed out. Electric cookery costs only one-half as much as the average person guesses before actually trying it out themselves.

Progress In Reverse

For a half dozen years the recovery theory practiced in Washington has been based on an analogy between the national economy and a hand pump. That theory has been that if a hand pump can be made to work by priming it with water, the national economy can be made to function by priming it with dollars.

From the beginning of this experiment with the national economy, learned economists have warned that although priming might work on a hand pump, it could not be made to pump recovery out of the well.

And even the failure of the theory in these six years has not convinced (apparently) the experimenters that the analogy is a false one. They are still pouring billions into the economy pump with no more show of concern than a farmer pouring a bucket of water into a hand pump.

And what have been the rewards of the priming theory? It is not likely that anyone has bothered to count the gallons of water pumped by a primed hand pump, but the National Industrial Conference Board has published these figures after a study of the primed economy pump: For every $3 poured into the pump, only $2 has been returned.

During 1934-38, inclusive, this study finds, the administration has increased the national debt by $14,000,000,000. These billions have gone for pump priming. But instead of causing a vast increase in the national income which, according to these spend-our-way-out-of-debt advocates, should have resulted, the income was only $9,000,000,000.

That is what a fisherman might call "catching a two-pound fish, using a three-pound fish for bait."

Worst Example

We've never been exactly clear in mind as to what a paradox is, but it might be a little country giving in to Herr Hitler to preserve its independence.—Boston Herald.

THE ROAD HOG

Penalty of State Tariffs

What happens when states set up the equivalent of tariff barriers to protect home industries is well illustrated by governmental efforts to prevent the use of oleomargarine as a substitute for butter. Some ten states are reported to have laws for that purpose, enacted at the behest of their dairy interests. Twelve others attempt to stop the sale of oleomargarine if the oils employed in its manufacture come from outside the state—a neat compromise between competing claims within the home territory.

The result, according to the Milwaukee Journal, is that the manufacture of oleomargarine in the United States has perceptibly declined, but the consumption of butter has increased very little. Apparently, most persons, when deprived of the opportunity to buy oleomargarine, haven't bought butter. They simply have done without either. In other words, the interference of the state legislatures in this matter has operated to lower the general standard of living, which is the usual consequence of protective tariffs. Further, the imposition of special oleomargarine taxes and controls has also inspired retaliatory boycotts on dairy products from states guilty of the discrimination. In such ways does the strangulation of interstate trade begin.—Kansas City Star.

Figures Diverted

Advocates of birth control say there are forty million people in this country on a depressed level of existence. They are part of the American population, but not part of the economic system. They do not function as consumers of producers. Obviously this is the same forty million Americans whom President Roosevelt has described as ill-fed, ill-housed and ill-clad. The advocates of planned parenthood have borrowed the New Deal statistics and the New Deal ideas on purchasing power. But they have not borrowed the New Deal diagnosis and cure. President Roosevelt and his supporters believe that the fault lies with the economic system; the cause of the trouble is social. The champions of birth-control, on the other hand, are committed by their very creed to the opposite explanation. The fault is not in the social system, but in the family. The nation's trouble is not too many capitalists, but too many children. The crying need for regulated production is in the field of biological production.—New York Times.

The American Merchant

The American merchant has given the American people the best retail service in the world. A typical small town store in this country, dealing in food, hardware, drugs, drygoods or anything else, offers a far wider selection of goods, of a far better quality, than a typical store in any other land. This goes for single-unit as well as multiple-unit merchandising.

Equally important, first-class service hasn't involved high price. In the typical store, costs have been cut to the bone. Centralized buying has reduced handling and distributing expense. Big turnover has made it possible to earn a satisfactory gross profit at a very small unit profit. The result, from the consumer's point of view, is more goods for less money, and a higher standard of living for the family.

Economists, consumer groups, newspapers, government officials and others have been pointing out that our American merchants should be encouraged to the full in this trend. Increased consumption of the produce of farm and factory is the key to increased production, and increased national income, increased employment—and eventual prosperity. And increased consumption is almost purely an economic matter. The bulk of American families buy all they can afford. When prices go up, they buy less. When down, they buy more.

Under a free competitive system, every merchant tries to outdo the merchant next door. He lowers prices when he can. When that is impractical, he offers additional services. He increases his advertising, and betters his displays. And the whole community profits. So does the merchant himself, who finds more and more customers entering his door—and taking more and more goods away with them when they leave.

Of late years we have had a legislative epidemic of laws which in one way or another curb competition, force merchandising costs to rise, and thus tend to reduce the general standard of living. But recently enthusiasm for such laws seems to have considerably cooled. Most of us have come to realize that no one wins in the long run when we put laws in the path of progress in any field.

know that it would do to print, though.

I don't expect to get the secretary. I just dream about her sometimes.

Well, as I was saying, they're renovating this office, and right now they're in the tearing-down stage. And of all the hammering and banging and drilling and sawing and tearing things out above and letting dust spill down upon a man's head!

Why, it's enough to make a man lose his balance and go out and start throwing rocks at innocent and unsuspecting people as they come by.

When I was in the second grade, I threw rocks at a girl once. I'm ashamed to admit it, but I did. She called me a "sisay." And I guess I showed her I wasn't.

When the principal of the school faced my rear with a peach tree switch the next morning, I made a desperate explanation of how I was only throwing rocks at a telephone pole and the girl happened to come along. But I lived to regret that lie. The rest of the day I burned with remorse until I could hardly sit down.

There's a man right beside my desk and he's drilling a hole in the concrete beam under the floor. Every time he hits the drill with his sledge hammer, a spurt of gritty dust jumps to sting my ears or get into my eyes. I jump every time. Can't seem to control myself.

I can't move. Because there are drillers at other desks, knocking grit all over them, too. Also, in my corner, I don't have to dodge boards that workmen like to swing around in the air and see who they can brain.

The way things are torn up around here reminds me of last Christmas, when the girls in the society department were made the distributors of the tons of clothes and food and toys people contributed for the poor of the city. I walked out on them here in the office once, then. That was the morning I came down and found the cover on my typewriter replaced with a pair of faded pink silk panties.

I figure there are some things a man can't afford to put up with, if he expects to keep his pride and self-respect. I figure, also, that I can't try to think any longer with all the racket going on about me. I've got to have some peace and quiet. And some street workers are cutting out some bad pavement down the street with a jack-hammer drill and I'd like to go watch them.

Jack-hammer drills always fascinate me. They make such a wild and challenging noise.

I'll try to write something next week.

New Electric Devices Need More Outlets

As more and more electrical accessories enter the home, the need for more wiring outlets becomes acute.

While most modern homes are provided with several outlets for each room, the owners of older homes are faced with the necessity of having additional outlets installed or tolerating trailing extension wires.

In adding new outlets, the home owner should consider the large number of electrical accessories used in the bathroom and place an outlet convenient to the lavatory in a position to serve electric razors.

PLANNING TO REDUCE NOISE

Care in planning can reduce considerably the noises common to a house such as squeaks, vibrations, and other disturbances.

Closets placed between rooms cut down the penetration of noises and the soundproofing of walls is another aid. Independent footing for boiler and air-conditioner, air chambers on water lines, and treatment of ducts will further reduce bothersome noises in the home.

BUILT-IN BEDS

The home owner who finds he has a problem in arranging furniture in a small bedroom can often find the solution in the installation of built-in bunks, which eliminate the bulkiest piece of the bedroom suite.

A bedroom fitted with a two-tiered built-in bed makes excellent quarters for children and young people and is usually sought after by the boys of the family. Several variations are possible, one of which provides for drawer space beneath the lower bed. In any model, however, it is usually necessary to equip the top bed with a ladder, but this can be removable to facilitate bed-making.

Annual Check Of Home Will Lessen Decay

A reliable method for keeping the home in good condition is to check it over every Spring and make what repairs are needed. The average home needs some repairs each year. If neglected, many minor defects may become major ones and will be expensive to correct. Caring for them each year as they occur is the best method of treatment.

demonstration during the week, the demonstration probably to take the form of directing traffic. Some phase of the health program will be discussed at the various women's organizations and the P.-T. A. and a school demonstration in the elementary grades is planned.

Open house will be held at the community house on Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock.

The local committee is composed of Mrs. Littleton, Mrs. S. M. Harvick, Miss Elizabeth Fustell, Miss Wanda Watson, Rev. Eugene Slater, Rev. Clyde Childers, Evert White, Miss Mary Riddle, Dr. H. B. Tandy, Mrs. Massie West, Gene Hollon and C. S. Denham.

The work of all the agencies contributing every day to the wholesome development of the child can only reach its maximum effectiveness when parents and the public appreciate the contributions these agencies are making to childhood, and actively participate or assist in furthering each agency's program, declares a bulletin issued by the state health department.

May Day Child Health Day has been officially designated by federal, state and private agencies interested in childhood as one occasion each year when the attention of the public as a whole is directed toward work of all these agencies. May Day programs are prepared to interest actively all people so that eventually every citizen of the nation will make his primary concern to make May Day, not one day or week out of the year, but provide for "May Day all year round."

highly perfected new heating elements in modern electric ranges, completely insulated ovens that conserve heat, exact methods of heat measurement at the snap of a switch, and automatic thermostats which keep current down to a minimum all contribute to this low cost of operation."

Added to these mechanical perfections, electric cleanliness, perfect cooking results, and less shrinkage of foods resulting through use of electricity assure even greater economy, she added.

Both days of the cooking school will be free. The delightfully prepared foods cooked by Miss Taylor during the demonstration will be distributed among those attending. Both men and women are invited to attend.

Miss Taylor will be assisted by Miss Eudora Hawkins, home economist for the West Texas Utilities company, who is known personally to the thousands of West Texas women already using electric ranges.

Statewide Organization Plans Fight On Disease

The appointment of Mrs. Carl Colwick, Ozona, as captain for Crockett county in the Women's Field Army for the Control of Cancer was announced today by Mrs. Volney W. Taylor, Brownsville, state commander of the Army.

Mrs. Colwick will marshal the forces of the Women's Field Army throughout Crockett county during the ensuing drive for membership in the Women's Field Army.

Captains and lieutenants have been appointed in every county of Texas to further the Field Army's organization campaign. A state wide organization, affiliated with the American Society for the Control of Cancer, the Women's Field Army has as its purpose the distribution of calm and accurate information about cancer. AUSTIN, April 19.—Publication of the first definitive history devoted entirely to the South is being undertaken jointly by the University of Texas and Louisiana State University, it was disclosed here today.

The ten volume series, to cover the period from 1607 to 1940, will be the University of Texas' first major venture into the historical publishing field, Donald Conroy, University librarian and secretary to the board of trustees of the Littlefield Fund for Southern history, declared.

Editors of the history will be Drs. Charles W. Ramsdell and Wendell H. Stephenson, professors of history at the University and Louisiana State.

Each of the ten volumes will be written by one of America's best-known historians, according to Dr. Ramsdell. Manuscript contracts, signed this week, call for "immediate work," and early volumes should appear within two years.
