Explosions Not Always Best, Lawson Little Finds

By LAWSON LITTLE CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 9—Throughout the golfing world every player has his own pet department of the game that gives him great enjoyment when he plays a successful shot.

Of course there are times when it is better to take the unplayable lie penalty of stroke and distance, especially if one is playing in a medal competition.

Now in the case where I have to play a full explosion shot from some nasty lie I have almost given up and trust to luck I can in the majority of tries get the ball onto the green, but it is just luck when it comes to rest within reasonable holding-out distance.

SHELL SCORES 11 TO 10 VICTORY OVER FROST

Golf Analyzed

Watching Tommy Armour play an iron shot into the wind it was interesting to observe that he used a club two points higher than the distance called for. That is, a No. 4 ordinarily would have gotten him home, but against the wind he used a No. 2.

It is altogether likely that Tommy could have gotten home with a No. 3 iron, but in this instance he would have had to swing hard against the wind. That is what he didn't wish to do, because, under such conditions, he wanted a maximum of control. So he took a club that would get the required distance with ease.

There is a point here that the high handicap player can well remember. When you have to press with a club the chances of error increase. Playing into a head-on wind, a pressed shot is likely to mean a hooked or sliced shot, or a skied shot. In each instance the wind will magnify the error. So

DRUGGIST RALLY IN 9TH SHORT

B. Adams, Shell right fielder, laced up a run in the ninth inning last night to defeat the Frost Freers, 11 to 10, in a scheduled league game.

Shell players scored ten of their eleven runs in the first three innings. Lopez, Asbury, Burkhardt, White and D. Scudday all scored for Shell in the opening stanza, and E. Scudday added a run in the second frame. Chalking up Shell runs in the third were Burkhardt, White, D. Scudday and J. Adams.

The Freers scattered their runs out through nine innings, making a nice four-run rally in the final inning when Williamson, Hall, Hare and Driver scored. Hare led off in the second, Driver scored in the third, and Garcia, Williamson, Duley and Choate all marked up tallies in the seventh.

Hare allowed Shell ten hits, while the Freers garnered fifteen off Burkhardt.

DURABLE 'STRANGLER' LEWIS CALLED OUT TO UPSET CHAMP

NEW YORK, July 9.—Well, it turned out just as everybody suspected it would three months ago when D. Shikat clamped that hammerlock on Danno O'Mahoney at Madison Square Garden.

If nothing else, the ascendancy of Everett Marshall to the world heavyweight championship returns wrestling to the wrestlers.

In order to hold its fort against the new and stronger combination which the capable Marshall represents, the group that has controlled to dodge for several years has had to call the old warhorse, Ed Strangler Lewis, out of retirement.

For the duration of the war, trick champions, acrobats, contortionists, football players, and general roughhouse artists are relegated to the background. The men will wrestle it out if it takes all summer, fall and winter.

When Shikat forgot that he wasn't supposed to pin O'Mahoney and jumped to the outlaws, it didn't take Professor Gustave Meyer, the Hoboken astrologist, to figure out that Marshall was to be the next titleholder.

The slight delay in transplanting the crown was due to a breach of contract suit against Shikat brought by Joe Alvarez of Boston, who acted for the more affluent promoters, Jack Curley of New York, Paul Brower of Boston, Ray Fabiani of Philadelphia and Tom Packs of St. Louis.

This action also brought the quaint All Baba out of Hollywood long enough to clear the atmosphere of a federal courtroom in Columbus by hurling Shikat out into the ring-side pews in Detroit. It was the old line title, now held by Marshall, that the beef trust wanted, not the services of the Teutonic Twister who crossed O'Mahoney.

As long as he had it, All Baba was permitted to beat Shikat again and to tour until the novelty wore off, and then in Columbus the other night—Marshall.

Marshall being on top is a decisive victory for Billy Sandow and Al Haft, the kerosene circuit promoter who strung along with the man who ran the bonebending works for more than a decade with Lewis as his shooting star.

Sandow Strikes Back

When Sandow broke with Lewis in 1932, the powers gave him plenty of ozone. But Sandow picked up Marshall, and patiently bided his time. Now he is in the driver's seat again, and Haft's small league, which he has operated out of Columbus, has a chance to expand.

Marshall is recognized to a greater extent than any champion has been since some of the better ear messengers rebelled against Gus Sonnenberg in 1929. The stocky Coloradoan requires no policeman or bodyguards. He has more hammers, locks and scissors than a hardware merchant.

Lewis, the five-time champion, is one of the few who would give Marshall serious trouble, and the Blind Bear of the Rockies probably will pass old Ed up for the same reason that Jim London played the chill for the Strangler for so long.

If Lewis elected to lay on his stomach it would take a derrick to turn him over. That wouldn't please the customers, and the show is the thing even when they can wrestle like Marshall and Lewis.

Two Other Claimants

While Marshall generally is accepted, California considers Vincent Lopez the champion, undoubtedly because he has a musical name.

Dave Levin of Brooklyn claims that All Baba droppedkick-ed him into the title, although the foul decision of the referee was reversed by George E. Keenan, the New Jersey state athletic commissioner.

The wrestling factions must have learned their mathematics from a Delancy street suit salesman, for we were taught in school that there could be only one champion to a division.

Marshall gladly would clarify the situation, however. Fortunately for him, perhaps, the antiquated Lewis has no claim to the title, although it is safe to say that the New York or some other commission shortly will create one for him, just out of force of habit.

SUSPECT RELEASED IN CHICAGO DEATH

CHICAGO, July 9 (UP)—Eddie Freed, whom police have held as a "bait" in the jealousy slaying of beautiful Annabelle Blake, walked from the police station a free man today.

Police hopes by his release to obtain the surrender of his wife, Carmelita, whom they believe was with the slain entertainer just before she died of a bullet wound in her chest last Thursday.

Freed, part-owner of a North Clark street tavern, surrendered for questioning Monday but denied any knowledge of the slaying. He admitted intimacy with the slain girl but said he knew of no reason for his wife to be jealous.

"I don't believe she minded so much," he said.

Police have been unable to locate Mrs. Freed since the shooting, although she was understood to be awaiting a conference with her husband before giving herself up.

By LARRY BAUER

One of the steadiest streams of immigration into the United States is encouraged by game experts who are constantly seeking to build up America's wild fowl supply. To this end, game birds from overseas are continually brought in with the hope that they will take the place of great native native American flocks already entirely extinct or shrinking in numbers.

First of the foreigners to be introduced were pheasants. These birds have thrived and are rather abundant in almost every northern state from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Of the several species, most common are the Chinese, or ring-neck. These have interbred with the English pheasant.

"Hungarians" Thrive

Next came the Hungarian partridge. Several states tried producing these cocky birds for restocking. Some were successful; others abandoned the experiment. Numbers of Hungarians have been raised in backyard pens by sportsmen for liberation on their favorite hunting grounds. They are doing remarkably well in parts of Canada, notably in Manitoba. Thousands of Mexican quail from the southwest were shipped into central and eastern states when the native bob-white decreased in alarming numbers. The chief difference between "Old Bob" and the newcomers is the fancy legwork of the latter. As one tired hunter remarked: "They keep to the ground and run like jackrabbits. My dogs are all worn out." Interbreeding eliminates some of their running qualities.

Now comes the Chukor partridge from Asia. At least two states, California and Georgia, are breeding this bird. Brood stock in California game farms totals about 1,400 fowl. There has been no open season for sportsmen to determine the Chukor's game qualities, but it is as fast on the wing as the valley quail, and larger.

Chukor A Champion

Georgia game officials are enthusiastic about this plucky alien. Purser Collins of the Georgia game and fish department says the Chukor should make an ideal bird for American forests and fields, adding: "The bird lays for the dog, sticks in coverts and is game in every respect."

"We hope to have sufficient stock this year to distribute 2,000 of the birds before the hunting season of 1937," Mr. Collins continues. The department plans to carry forward a large scale distribution program if the Chukor proves susceptible to mass production.

The Chukor is about twice the size of the bob-white, and weighs about one and one-fourth pounds. Its plumage is showy—bluish gray on back and cream with slate stripes underneath. The meat is white.

The bird has a reputation for being hardy, thrives in climates ranging from severely cold to extremely hot, and from sea level to far above.

Whiskey Soaked Bait To Catch Lobo Wolf

DEL RIO, July 9. (AP)—Bait soaked in whiskey is used by Louis Martin, Texas trapper, to catch the lobo wolf—"smartest wild animal of all." Every animal is partial to the whiskey odor, Martin says. He speaks of wolves as "gentlemen," and insists they are twice as smart as dogs.

McMillan had entered an order granting the state's petition for hearing on a suit by the Texas Pipe Line company against the Texas railroad commission, involving validity of a commission order made in 1934, and requiring that oil in tanks be measured on the basis of 100 per cent capacity, instead of the 90 per cent previously allowed.

First Reports Due Soon On Trade Census

Figures Covering Several States To Be Issued Late In August

PHILADELPHIA, July 9. (UP)—Publication of a preliminary report on the federal census of American business late next month is expected to reveal the trend of recovery during the past two years. Fred A. Gosnell, chief statistician in charge of the survey, said first reports probably would contain complete figures for Arkansas and several other states which virtually have been completed.

A staff of 19,000 WPA workers, taken from relief rolls have been engaged in the field work since Jan. 1 compiling information from the cornergrocer, the great industrialist, the neighborhood barber and the wealthy manufacturer. Experts De Tabulating here, 1,650 workers, specially trained in preliminary courses by census bureau experts, are checking, indexing and tabulating the returns on every business in the nation from the smallest merchant to the largest corporation.

A census of retail trade in 1929 showed sales totaling $49,000,000,000. By 1933, the figure had dropped to $25,000,000,000. Gosnell declined to make any flat predictions but said he thought this year's total would be a substantial increase over the latter figure. The 1933 survey also will offer a basis for comparison in many smaller details, including the number of retail establishments, employees, payrolls and sales by kinds of business. The 1935 census, however, is the most complete business survey ever attempted by the department of commerce.

ILLINOIS SOLON IS SLAIN BY GUNMAN

CHICAGO, July 9. (UP)—State Rep. John M. Bolton, 29, was assassinated today by gunmen in a wild automobile chase through the streets. A shotgun blast ripped through his head. Officials were at a loss to determine a motive for the slaying. They pondered the theory that Bolton's efforts to legalize handbook betting here had brought underworld retaliation. They began a new investigation of Chicago gambling.

Mystery Yarn Starts Friday In The Herald

'Murder Tonight' By Meynell Is Paper's New Serial

Arthur Burdett is the old miser whose untimely end gives the name to "Murder Tonight." Laurence W. Meynell's new story, which starts Friday in The Herald. His standing in the community was evident to Detective Inspector Hylton as soon as he arrived and plunged into the mystery. WHERE HONOR IS DUE

The appearance in Big Spring on July 17 of Senator Morris Sheppard will provide an opportunity, it seems to this newspaper, for the people of West Texas to render honor to a great statesman who, throughout his long senatorial career, has had the interests of this section at heart as much as those of any other portion of the state.

Morris Sheppard has never been an "East Texas" nor a "North Texas" senator. Those in this area who have called upon him for services and assistance time after time know full well that the welfare of the whole of Texas is his concern. West Texas owes Morris Sheppard a debt of gratitude, and a way to acknowledge this debt is to give the senator a rousing welcome when he comes our way.

Most observers have no doubt that Senator Sheppard will be returned to office for another term. There is no reason why he should be retired and every reason why he should be retained in the position he has filled so well and to such benefit to the state. No man, be he ever so able, could go to the senate and do Texas the service that can be done and is being done by Morris Sheppard.

There has been little of the spectacular or sensational about the long service of Senator Sheppard in the national congress, although he has been aggressively active in much of the work done in the senate during the past two decades and more, and has had leadership in the enactment of much important legislation. His long tenure—the second oldest senator in point of service and the oldest democratic senator—has given him and Texas a commanding position in many of the more important senate committees. He is known as one of the principal leaders of the administration forces in congress, and that alone, for practical purposes, demands that Texas, for her own benefit, retain him in office. His integrity has never been challenged and his political enemies have never been able to find serious flaws in either his public or his private record.

For a long career of service to Texas, Morris Sheppard deserves honor. West Texas should be prepared to pay him that honor when he is our guest.

★ Man About Manhattan ★

By George Tucker

NEW YORK—It is a pity that the unconscious humor which results from unlooked for accidents in plays can't be saved and put into a scenario for, say, somebody like Chaplin or the three Marx brothers. These are the contretemps and the hilarious miscues which remain as vivid vignettes long after the play and the players are forgotten.

One recalls that moment in the last act of "Cyrano de Bergerac" when Walter Hampton, grown dry and old, sits alone in a cloistered garden. It is fall and the leaves are supposed to drift down—one or two leaves, that is. As the actor murmured, half to himself, "Ah, a leaf is falling"—his colleague in the loft who was to drop the leaf made a miscue and enough leaves to fill a mattress came showering down upon CYRANO. It was several moments before the audience controlled its mirth.

Then there was the time Bradford Hatton was supposed to shoot an intruder with a pistol. At the climax of the scene, Hatton pulled the trigger but the gun refused to fire. Clutching the gun by the barrel, the actor gave a convincing imitation of one man clubbing another over the head. This should have saved the situation, but just as his assailant sank limply to the floor, somebody off stage, trying to remedy the misfire, exploded a six-shooter in the wings. Even the corpse had to laugh at that one.

Similar to this was a hapless moment that came to Estelle Winwood in a drama now mercifully forgotten. At the bidding of Philip Merivale, she crossed to the piano with the intention of playing. But before she got there the piano mysteriously began to play of its own accord. Her pianist "double" behind the scene was just a couple of strides ahead.

Sometimes it is a contretemps such as that which befell one aristocratic youth in the waltz scene of "The Student Prince." Costumed in skin-tight breeches and shining black boots, the gallant was swinging his comely fraulein to the catching strains of a Romberg waltz when there came a sickening rip. His breeches had split wide open.

More hilarious still are accidents which occur off stage in business and professional life.

There was a surgeon whose habit it was to operate in rubber boots and a pair of long woolen under-drawers. One day (your nose correspondent had squirmed his way into the operating room and was watching the proceedings goggle-eyed), while amputating a leg, his long white woolens came tumbling down.

"Get 'em up! Get 'em up!" he barked, punctuating the command with a few choice oaths. But he never paused in his work. An assistant hauled up his breeches while he carried on in behalf of the unconscious wight on the table. Denis Suesse is a Kansas City girl who wants to pilot a small boat around the world. But her work never permits. She is a composer of popular music.

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DEWEY PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The bitter civil strife now raging within the ranks of the American Federation of Labor boils down to two sources of conflict: vehement personal antipathy and jobs.

The abolition of craft unions means the abolition of lush jobs for many A. F. of L. executives. The craft union is the hand-me-down from the days of Samuel Gompers. It includes only one particular trade within an industry, as for instance, only the carpenters in the building industry, or only the stereotypers in the printing industry, no matter what their individual trades may be.

Thus the industrial union can win a strike more successfully than a craft union, since it can call out all workers in a given industry. A craft union strike may affect only one group, such as the machinists in a certain factory, leaving all other workers on the job.

Leaders of the craft and industrial groups within the A. F. of L. dislike each other with all the bitterness some union leaders have against some employers—possibly more.

There is no great personal dislike between William Green and John L. Lewis, chief leaders of the two warring factions. Green is a minor, probably could not be re-elected president of the A. F. of L. unless Lewis gives him a delegate's certificate to the next convention. Green is merely a peewee in the game, the mouthpiece for craft union generalists.

Here are some of the potent personalities who, behind the scenes, dominate Green:

Craft Union Leaders
William S. Hutchison—President of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, 300,000 members, second to miners as largest affiliate of A. F. of L. Age 62, with 280 pounds of bulk and fat, Hutchison is a bulldozer, the veteran of many fist fights and the man whom Lewis floored during the 1935 A. F. of L. convention.

An old guard republican, Hutchison coveted the post of secretary of labor which Harding gave Puddler Jim Davis, hopes to get the job this year if London is elected. Hutchison's salary for many years was $25,000, is believed to be that today.

Arthur Orlando Wharton, president of the International Association of Machinists, 92,500 members. Age 62, last recorded salary $7,500, short, aggressive, not-afraid-of-god-or-devil type, in conferences can't be shaken from preconceived ideas. Wharton is the ablest of the craft unionists. He keeps in the background, but is most uncompromising foe of industrial unionists on the A. F. of L. executive council. Friends of Green suspect Wharton of having designs on Green's job.

Daniel Joseph Tobin, president, International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs, 137,000 members. Age 61, salary reputed to be $28,000, short, beefy, two-fisted Irishman, a miniature Hutchison in pugnacity and vehemence. But they enter in politics, Tobin being an ardent democrat. He resigned from the executive council in 1928 because it would not endorse Al Smith, and had a hard time getting reinstated. Green was among those who opposed him.

In 1932 Tobin headed Roosevelt's labor campaign committee and was greatly disappointed when Miss Perkins got the job of secretary of labor.

Rebel Industrialists
Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, nearly 200,000 members. Age 49, slender, dynamic, thick-lipped, square-jawed. Hillman was born in Lithuania, educated to be a rabbi, migrated to this country at the age of 20. After three years in Chicago he led the great garment workers' strike which won the right of collective bargaining.

His union is one of the most advanced in the country, operating its own bank, cooperative housing project and unemployment insurance. Hillman has introduced a unique labor relation system, whereby the union virtually runs the factory and shows the employer how he can reduce operating costs. Hillman is high in the labor councils of Roosevelt and was an executive in the NRA.

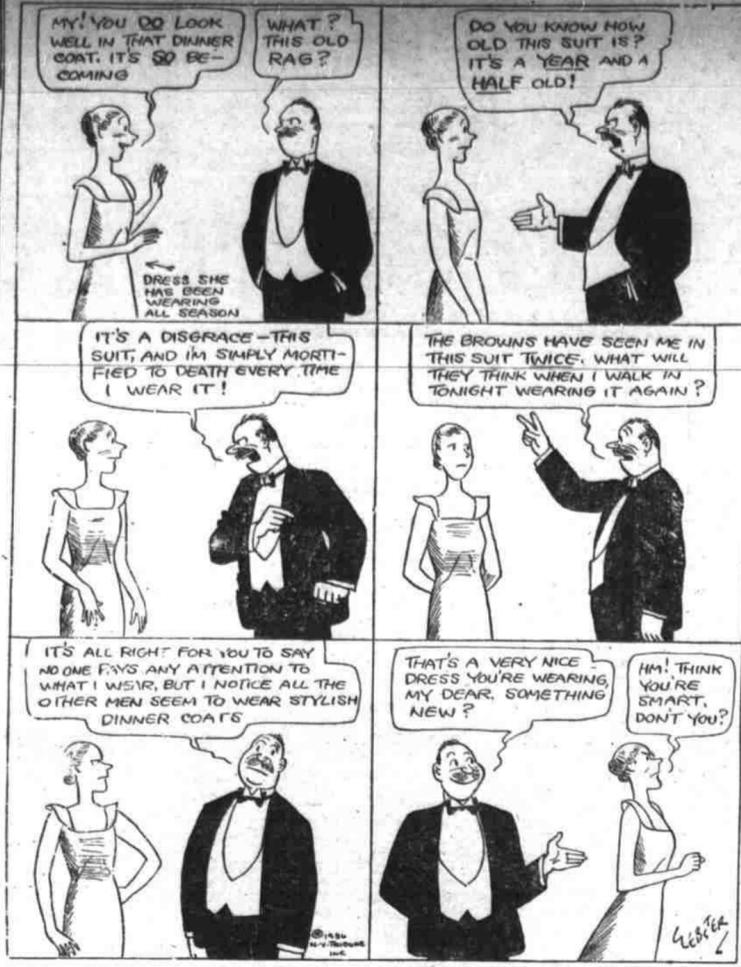

David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers, 160,000 members. Age 44, born in Russian Poland, Dubinsky went to work at the age of nine, and when 17 was expelled to Siberia for leading a bakers' strike. He escaped after five months, came to the United States. He is a socialist, but has announced he will support Roosevelt.

Philip Murray, vice president United Mine Workers, salary $9,000 a year (refused increase to $12,000). Came to United States at 16 from Scotland, where his father was a miner and union organizer. Murray studies the coal operators' business as if he worked for them—sales, marketing, etc. He organized southern miners for the first time. Refused, slow eyes, guarded speech, never uses two words where one will do, former soccer player in Pennsylvania.

Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer United Mine Workers, $9,000 (refused raise). Started as breaker boy at 12 picking slate out of anthracite. Precocious student of social welfare and social security, member of American Academy of Political and Social Sciences, can hold his own with any pundit in the academy. Elected lieutenant-governor of Pennsylvania, avoids Harrisburg society, hangs around cigar stores.

Old Settlers of Taylor County To Gather July 17

ABILENE, July 9.—The old settlers and pioneers of Taylor county, Texas, will hold their 17th annual reunion and homecoming at Buffalo Gap, July 17, 1936. This meeting is part of the Centennial celebrations of Texas. A program has been arranged in the spirit of this, the Centennial year of the state of Texas. Dr. R. N. Richardson of Hardin-Simmons university will give an address about the tribes of Indians who lived and dominated in West Texas in the early days, their customs and habits and the trials of the white men in overcoming these Indians in the early settlement of West Texas.

Senators Tom Connally and Morris Sheppard and other distinguished speakers will make addresses. Patriotic and old-time range songs will be given, old time fiddlers contest and an Indian pageant will be staged at night in the large grove of oak trees where this reunion will be held. All ex-Taylor county citizens, their friends and old timers and many family reunions will be on hand. Abundant shade, water and other accommodations have been provided. This is a basket picnic occasion where families and friends may get together and the largest crowd in the history of these meetings is anticipated.

Highway News

A recent cake-walk in the Highway community was a great success. The sponsoring organization netted $40. Thanks are extended to the Moore string band and to Madison Smith for their aid in making the affair successful. The crowd enjoyed hearing the candidates make their talks.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill H. Fowler and daughter of Fort Worth visited her mother, Mrs. C. A. Burks on the week-end holiday. Their daughter, Maedella, is spending the week with Mrs. Burks.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Milam visited Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Milam recently. They reported a good rain on their place near Ackerly.

Mrs. Henry reported improving and Mrs. Richards also is getting along nicely.

the country. Public school education, but has studied all his life; still reads economic subjects omnivorously, his only pastime, with an occasional mystery yarn. Abroad twice, once with Mrs. Lewis for "pleasure" but devoted his trip to conferences with labor leaders. Again in 1924 as labor delegate to Geneva conference.

Powerful platform speaker, always armed with facts and a vivid way of presenting them, yet speaks in an almost agonizingly slow, philosophical, passionate manner. Lewis, who was always a republican, has switched to Roosevelt. He's got a big increase in salary from $12,000 a year to $25,000.

William Green, president of A. F. of L., first worked in Ohio mines. District No. 6; was elected to state senate thrice in the early 20's, became secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, and on death of Samuel Gompers, was pushed by the miners for presidency of A. F. of L. and got it.

Green is at heart with the miners. He owes everything to them. They put him in office and Lewis himself has reconciliated him over year for president. Miners stick with him because he has always backed them in a showdown in internal squabbles; that is, until recently.

Green is famed for his bland, pedagogic personality, is described by workers as "preacher" or "teacher." He speaks as though talking from a pulpit. Round, smooth face, rimless specs, stodgy. Salary: $12,000 a year.

Chapter 44
BOY IN HIDING
 "I told Pipolo everything," Hope went on, "and asked him to take Roddie and me to Finland with him. I told him about Torrobin, and how Roddie wasn't to blame, and how he had kept straight as long as I was near him—sober, too. And he knew how Roddie and I could ride. I said we would bring boards, too; that Bowlie was being boarded at a stable in Jersey, and he would go over and get him."
 "Pipolo said he would talk it over with Olga. But Torrobin had sold put in an application for passports. He could see difficulty there for Roddie, and so could I.

 "Roddie stayed close by me, for he saw I was ill. Sometimes I'd lock the door, and he'd come into the room, and stretch out in one of the chairs, or take a bath, or smoke. You remember about that? How you asked Mary about the cigars I smoked... and I had to smoke one?"
 "This didn't last long, for father came. You sent for father—why, I didn't know. It might have been

"Father looked so hard," Hope said.

Bowlie, didn't I know? He had sold Roddie to the people in Jersey. I cried. Funny I should cry over Bowlie, when Bowlie was over Roddie, I had not cried.
 "Then some one knocked on the door. It was a telegraph boy with a message. It was not for Pipolo or any one in the house. Pipolo asked me if I could have been followed, and wanted to go home with me. But I wouldn't let him leave Olga who was not well. He told me to cause I was ill, but always the thought of Roddie was uppermost in my mind. I had kept in touch with mother. She knew I was with Roddie in New York, knew about the circus. She wrote me always the same thing—if I loved them, to come back and bring Roddie. She knew the influence I had over Roddie when I was with him. She couldn't understand why I didn't use it. Finally father wrote a sort of ultimatum. I was to come home, or else...

 "In my next letter I told them I had married. Mother wrote once more, and that was all. I knew father wouldn't have come unless you had wired him. I knew you had talked with him downstairs. I thought you knew what Roddie had done, and had told father."
 "Roddie was in the passage right then. When Mary left the room I told him to stay there, no matter what he heard.
 "Father knew nothing... except that I was ill, and that it was not I, but you, who had sent for him. If I had only known that! But I didn't begin to say 'at Roddie would never go back, would never be taken; that it was not Roddie's fault, and a lot of other things, for I was frightened and unstrung, and father looked so hard."
 "He didn't get the whole story out of me, but he got enough. He knew before he left the room that Roddie was wanted for something at home. He knew why I had married Rupert. He told me things I had not thought of—that I had abused the sacrament of marriage, and placed a respected family in danger of disgrace. He said that Roddie should come home where he belonged; and, since I had not sent for him, he went away.
 "Roddie came in when everything was quiet. Fortunately, Mary had left her door shut that night. Rupert's door, Roddie said that father was right, that we must go away, that we had no right to bring this into your house, that he had never wanted to. He would find a place for us, and we would change our names—Oh, Dirk, that changing of names—if you knew what it does to you!... I had a little money left. I told him to go ahead.
 "And then next day... You remember? When I was showing you the yellow gown... you came into the room, and talked with me, and I saw that you loved me. I saw that you had been trying to protect me from you didn't know what, even though I wouldn't confide in you; that you wanted to help me, no matter what I was.
 "Do you think it was harder to go when I knew that? When I knew that I loved you, too? It was easier. I could kiss you and go, happy—actually happy—that I hadn't harmed you, and wasn't going to harm you."
 "Dirk's arm tightened about her. "But if you loved me, and knew I loved you... why wouldn't you confide in me, even then?"
 "Because you would have made me stay. You would have insisted on sharing it. This was all I could do to repay your love and trust. You may not understand, Dirk, dear. Never mind.
 "The trouble with passports wasn't going to be so bad. I had my own, and I could swear to Roddie's citizenship. Surely they

Claims Few Are Getting Age Pensions

State Payment Policy Is Assailed In Address By Fischer

SHERMAN, July 9.—F. W. Fischer, Tyler gubernatorial candidate, in his campaign through this section, pointed out that partial payments of old age pensions to a comparatively small number of those eligible are being made.
 "Less than 10 per cent of those eligible have received pensions, and of this number, not one has received a full payment of $30, from combined state and federal funds, despite the use of revenue derived from seven months of liquor taxation," Fischer charges.
 "The governor has accumulated liquor taxation funds for seven months so as to provide partial payments before the July and August elections. After these light 'handouts,' the old people will be forced to wait another seven months or longer to get any kind of a payment," the Tyler candidate said.
 "According to the report of the state treasurer, only $303,000 was derived from liquor taxation for the pension fund in May, an 'average' liquor month. After salaries and expenses of liquor agents and the burden of pension inspectors, appointed by the governor, were deducted, only $104,000 remained for the old people. The people can state readily ascertain that if payments were ascertained to the $300,000 first cut, which is doubtful, this $300,000 could receive only a little more than $3 per month from the state."

MILD-MANNERED KANSAS RED CARRIES COMMUNIST BANNER

NEW YORK, July 9. (AP)—A mild-mannered, soft-spoken family man who goes to the movies whenever possible is the Communist candidate for President of the United States.

At the national convention of his party here, which nominated Earl Browder by acclamation, almost every delegate's tie was red—except Browder's, which was blue, like his eyes. He is a "different" kind of radical, his ancestry in America reaching back to pre-Revolutionary days.

At 45, his hair is a mixture of black and gray. His mustache retains a brownish tinge. Attired in a gray business suit, white shirt, cigar in hand, he talks quietly but with conviction about the role of his party in America, criticizing the democrats, republicans, socialists and the newly-launched union party unhesitatingly.

Claims 50,000 Followers

A typewriter, the clothes on his back, a few pieces of furniture represent the property he owns. When he begins his campaign tour, he says the party will supply the necessary funds. He expects to speak in 50 or 60 places.

He has been general secretary of the party since 1930 and estimates its membership, including the Young Communist league, at more than 50,000.

Like Governor Landon, republican nominee for president, Browder is a Kansan. He was born in Wichita, May 20, 1891. His father was a populist.

He himself entered the ranks of the socialist party at the age of 15, breaking away when the left wing split with the right to form the communist party in September, 1919.

Jailed For Draft Resistance

He worked with the farm cooperative movement in Kansas during the war, opposed the draft law and was sentenced to prison. The years 1917-20 were spent behind bars, except for such periods as he was out on bail during appeals.

"The United States," he says, "eventually will be reorganized on the basis of a socialistic system which very quickly will develop to full communism."

Quietly, without raising his voice, and with his only gesture an occasional flick of the ash from his cigar, Browder sets forth his views of the parties in the field and of their platforms.

Other Platforms

"The republican platform is the platform of the Liberty League, Wall street and reaction, with a thin veneer of liberalism intended to take off the sharp edges of contract with the democratic administration.

"The democratic platform does make some definite concessions to the trend among the people to revolt against the rule of monopoly capital," he says, "but it is largely confined to broad generalizations not backed up by specific policies.

"The Lemke (Union) platform is a series of slogans designed to catch the discontented masses while embodying all the substance of the republican platform. It is even more dishonest, if that is possible than the republican platform."

Criticizes Thomas

"Norman Thomas, in the socialist platform, makes his main attack against Roosevelt, but gives him the highest praise as heading the best administration possible under capitalism. This compromise, coupled with their attempt to make the issue this year a choice between socialism and capitalism, is leading the socialists into a blind alley."

His own criticism of President Roosevelt, Browder says, springs from a realization that "his failures in a weak program with policies that cancel one another."

PRINCESS OF SILENT SCREEN NOW DIRECTS AVIATION FIRM

NEW ORLEANS, July 9. (AP)—Tiny, demure Marguerite Clark, adored child actress of the silent film and later the wife of a millionaire lumberman and aviation enthusiast, has embarked on a business career to help her forget the sorrows of widowhood.

Elected president of the Wedell-Williams Air service corporation, which her late husband founded, Mrs. Harry P. Williams has taken over the job of managing that corporation as well as the vast Williams' plantation in St. Mary parish (county), La.

Wants Hard Work

Her husband was killed in an airplane accident near Baton Rouge last spring. He followed his pal and partner, Jimmy Wedell, in death at the controls by only a few months.

"I'm going to work just as hard as I possibly can," says the woman who was called the "fairy princess."

Browder's special study at present is American history. His wife does educational work inside the communist movement. They have three sons, ranging in age from two and a half to nine.

of the screen" two decades ago, "and I hope there's plenty to do."

The Wedell-Williams corporation has a contract for flying airmail and passengers between New Orleans and Houston, Tex.

Mrs. Williams plans to divide her time between her beautiful 22-room New Orleans mansion, occupying a full city block, and a plantation home, center of a 20,000-acre cypress tract at Patterson, La.

Still Likes To Fly

"Everything is going to go on as nearly as possible as it did before Harry died," promises the woman who quit pictures at the height of her career to marry the millionaire sportsman in the closing days of the World war.

The petite widow, less than five feet tall and weighing under 100 pounds, holds no bitterness toward aviation. She still likes to fly although she doesn't pilot a plane.

She doesn't play bridge, smoke, ride or drive a car, but she loves pets and has dozens of cats and dogs.

Marguerite Clark embarked on a stage career at 13, appearing with the late De Wolf Hopper in New York. She was in pictures four
