NEW EMPLOYMENT AVENUE OPENED BY WPA FOR ABLE-BODIED WORKERS

Family Heads Admitted to the Relief Rolls After October to Be Placed

Barred from participating in the Works Progress program by a national regulation which restricted have urged and are advocating such employment to those admitted to relief rolls prior to November 1, these "employables" became wards of their own communities January I when the Texas Relief Commission dropped all except incapacitated cases from the relief rolls.

Drought authorized district direc-

sion dropped all except incapacitated cases from the relief rolis.

Drought authorized district directors throughout Texas to accept these family heads, expected to number between 4,000 and 5,000, for employment on projects, declaring that "when we have done this, we will have fulfilled the original purpose of the Works Progress program, which was to offer employment to all able-bodied family heads on relief rolls."

The state administrator asserted the regulations had discriminated against many worthy cases who had made every effort to sustain themselves throughout the depression years and who had come to ask public aid only after exhausting all personal resources.

"After January 1," Drought said, "there was no federal agency to which they could turn, and municipal and county governments complained that they were not able to help these unfortunates."

Instructions have been issued by Texas Relief Commission officials to case workers to certify all employable cases not found to be ineligible for aid prior to the automatic closing of their cases as of December 31. These cases then will be registered with the National Reemployment Service or the Texas State Employment Service and from these offices they will be assigned until previously certified workers have been placed.

"It is important," Drought continued, "that local governmental officials do not misinterpret this order. There will not be any general relaxation of the essential employment regulations of the Works Progress Administration, The requirement that 90 per cent of all labor on projects come from relief rolls will continue to be strictly ending the regulations of the Works Progress Administration. Since 1884, tribesmen have been subjected to arrest, trial, and imprisonment by Indian service officials and judges appointed by reservation superintendents. At best it was a travesty on justice under American principle.

Now John Collier, Indian commissioner, announces that full court privileges will be granted all Indians charged with crimes.

"The judges of the Indian courts and the Indian agency superintendents over them cease to be judges, jailers, prosecuting attorneys, and policemen. Indian defendants will hereafter have the benefit of formal charges, the power to summon witnesses, the privilege of bail, and the right to trial by jury," Commissioner Collier guar-

We like the new linen suits. One that would make any modern Miss rejoice is in dark red. The fitted long-sleeved coat has a peplum cut longer in the back to make a slight tailed effect. A vestee of self material does away with the necessity of a blouse. The whole thing makes a very attractive outfit which would be just right for the first spring days.

Another version of the linen suit is a two-piece affair consisting of a brown belted blouse which is sprink-led over with tiny embroidered de-

Still another which merits our vote of approval features a blue and white printed linen one-piece dress with oddly-cut collar of off-white linen and a short-sleeved coat of the same material.

It Is Possible to Overdo Use of Face Lotions, Creams

Having warned you against wearing cosmetics which be ar no relation to your natural skin tones or, worse yet, to each other, I want to go a step further (then I'll be through with negative advice for months) and say that it's possible to overdo the use of creams and lotions.

I am reminded of a letter I received from a reader. GONZALES. (U.P.)—If farmer J. E. Davis had minded his cattle, he would have had good luck with his corn growing during 1935.

Nevertheless, he had roasting ears on New Year's day, gathered from his field, however, and ate most of his last green corn.

Davis who lives at Thompsonville, reported he first planted 20 acres from which he gathered 600 bushels of corn. During last summer he planted four more acres, using seed from the first crop.

Last fall, he planted another acre which produced 20 bushels, most of which the cows ate.
