One-Man War on Poverty to See A Fortune Spent

NEW YORK - From an office high up in one of New York's towering skyscrapers, Harrison E. Fryberger is waging a one-man war against the depression.

It is a curious situation—a capitalist lawyer who amassed a fortune in minority stockholders' litigation now stands ready and willing to spend every dime of his wealth in an effort to effect a readjustment of the capitalistic system.

Fryberger's determination to do something about poverty in this richest of nations was born of a dramatic tragedy he witnessed in the summer of 1930. Following a vacation on the Riviera he was returning to his home in Minneapolis, where he was a corporation lawyer, at South Bend, Ind.

During the remainder of his journey, the attorney pondered over what he had seen. Next day at his office, associates found they were unable to interest him in the progress of the business.

Wind and chilliness were too pronounced for the outdoor meeting. The program was not affected by the change, and the auditorium was crowded, as were the balcony and stage.

Warned of Peril, College Students Turned Back from Fields

ABOVE—Off for the coal strike districts of Kentucky to "investigate the social and economic situation," 40 men and women college students from New York are pictured here as they set out by bus from Columbia University en route to strike-ridden Bell and Harlan counties. They were the vanguard of a national collegiate delegation, expected to number 100, which was organized to conduct "an impartial survey" of conditions which have given rise to frequent and fatal clashes between coal miners and operators in the last year. The expedition was reported to be entirely student-motivated, without encouragement from college authorities.

RIGHT—Warned by speakers that their "path will be beset by peril," Rob F. Hall, a leader of the collegiate expedition to the eastern Kentucky coal fields, is shown here (right) as he defiantly insisted on "our constitutional rights to enter Kentucky and make a fair survey of conditions." He's president of the Columbia University Social Problems Club, whose members were among the 40 students who set out by bus from New York to investigate conditions among the striking coal miners. Joe Lawson, a miner from Arjay, Ky., is seen (left) as he warned the departing students that they would be confronted by "a most horrible state of affairs." Two carloads of students were turned back by authorities.

NO KIDNAPING FILMS

The Hays moving picture office in Hollywood, according to the magazine Variety, has warned all producers to steer clear of films with a kidnaping motif. It points out that such films—which might be expected to appear in quantity, following the Lindbergh case—would probably implant wrong ideas in certain heads. Hence we shall get none of them.

Here is one case where the movies' "dictatorship" is acting wisely. Less cheering are reports from New York that we are to get a flock of mystery stories centering about kidnaping.

Apart from any other considerations, such books will simply represent a new way of cashing in on a pitiful tragedy. Good taste alone ought to keep them off the market.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The world economic crisis, according to a Duke University professor, should prove beneficial if it demonstrates the value of economic planning and international economic cooperation. That is, we mustn't get on the lee side of the well-known ill wind.

South Africa eliminates competition between motor-truck and rail transportation by building trunk lines and good roads at right angles to each other. This is one of the few instances in which cooperation is achieved by pulling in different directions.

BEHIN HERE TODAY

Ellen Rossiter, beautiful 20-year-old, loves Larry Harrowgate, young artist. When he becomes engaged to another girl Ellen agrees to marry Steven Barclay, 57 years old and wealthy. Her impoverished family is indebted to Barclay, who has been married before. Scandal accompanied his Mexican divorce from Leda Grayson, dancer. To avoid talk, Ellen and Barclay are secretly married. They drive to his Long Island home, deserted except for Fergus, the butler. There Barclay suffers a heart attack. Louis Symes, Barclay's lawyer, arrives with doctors and nurses. Barclay dies at dawn. Symes tells Ellen her marriage is not legal because papers proving Barclay's divorce have been stolen. Ellen yields all claim to Barclay's fortune to avoid scandal. She believes she must keep her marriage secret to protect Barclay's honor and her own. She learns that Larry Harrowgate is Barclay's nephew. Heartbroken Fergus hangs Larry, who seeks her out, tells her that his engagement is broken and asks her to marry him. Ellen lacks courage to tell him of her marriage to his uncle. She talks with Larry to meet his mother. In the Harrowgate apartment she sees Fergus the butler. He follows her home and demands money. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVII

It was all like a horrible dream to Ellen. That she should be discussing Larry and their engagement with this man whom she despised! Why didn't Fergus leave? Why did he not go to Larry and get the money he was owed? "Are you going to give me the jack?" Fergus demanded. "No!" Someone knocked at the outer door. Fergus sprang to his feet, his face deathly white. "It's my brother-in-law," Ellen told him. She was amazed at his panic. She opened the door and stopped in surprise. The visitor was Symes but a Symes whom Ellen had never seen before. The man seemed transfused by rage. He strode past Ellen into the living room and faced Fergus. "Get your things together!" he said sternly. "You've pulled your last trick. I have men below. You're going to jail!" Fergus gave a squeak of dismay and terror. He raced to the window, looked down and perceived two figures, muffled in great coats, at the apartment entrance. The rest happened with the swift and shifting horror of scenes in nightmare. Ellen had scarcely turned when Fergus shot beneath Symes' detaining arm and straight toward the open door in the hall. Instinctively she stretched her arms to bar him. He clawed upward toward his vest. The gesture stopped the blood in her heart. Frozen, rigid, she looked straight into the muzzle of his gun. "Get out of my way," Fergus screamed. "Duck, Ellen, duck! He's gone crazy." It was Symes' voice but the girl did not move. She could not move. This for an endless second. The wide eyes of the running man were like the eyes of the blind. He had almost reached the door when he tripped and fell. His hand, which had pitched forward and instantly Symes was on his back, had pinned his arms to his sides. Fergus' hands beat the air in a flurry of agony. The gun clattered to the floor. Symes kicked it across the carpet and into the kitchen. "All right, I surrender," Fergus whimpered. For a moment his face seemed almost peaceful in its profound despair. Suddenly he ducked his head and sank his teeth into the lawyer's wrist. Symes howled, relaxed his hold and reached out too late to grasp empty air. Running frenziedly, with the fleetness of desperation, Fergus fled into the kitchen and banged the door. "Where's the key?" Symes shouted. "We'll lock him in." In the door, Ellen gasped. She heard the rasp of the key. Symes braced the flimsy wooden barrier with his body. Ellen reached his side. There was a crash of glass and metal from within. "He's trying to get out to the fire escape," the girl sobbed hysterically. "That was my window box that fell. The window's been stuck for weeks." "He'll break through the glass." "It's barred! Oh, what's come over him? Has he gone crazy?" she sobbed. At that instant they both heard a rush of footsteps within, felt the shock of a body slamming against the wooden door. The hinges groaned. "Run downstairs," Symes ordered Ellen. "There are men waiting in front of the house, men from my office. Bring 'em up!" "You can't get away!" he shouted through the door to Fergus. The words were lost in the sound of a single shot. The color drained from Ellen's face and she and Symes faced each other for a wordless instant. "He did it," Symes said slowly. "He did get away." They opened the door. The butler's body lay on the scarred linoleum, his head resting in brown dirt from the window box among broken red and pink geraniums. In a few moments police filled the small apartment. Ellen was pale and shaken in her own bedroom while Symes held off the questioners. Molly and Myra and Bert arrived from the movies. They did what they could for Ellen. There was not much that could be done. Fergus' body was taken away. It was after one o'clock when Symes, heavy-eyed and weary, saw Ellen. Molly and Myra got their things together. Ellen looked at Symes and he looked at her. The lawyer cleared his throat. "The police have satisfied themselves about Fergus' suicide," he told her. "I can't forget his face!" Ellen whispered. "I can't forget the way he looked when he saw the men down in the street." Symes nodded. "I didn't dream my bluff would have such tragic consequences. I got your message and this afternoon I determined to give Fergus a good scare. I picked up a couple of men from the office to be on hand in case he turned nasty. I intended to threaten him with jail if he wouldn't agree to leave town and let you alone. But I didn't dream he had a reason, a terrible reason, for fearing jail. "The police believe he had been wanted in Pennsylvania for five years on a charge of murder." Symes went on. "It's a matter of checking the fingerprints before they'll be sure but his suicide when he thought he'd been trapped bears out the story. Yesterday the police here had a tip to pick up Fergus on suspicion of homicide. They were going to Mrs. Harrowgate's place last night—did go in fact—but he had disappeared. Somebody must have got the information to him." "He knew—he knew," Ellen whispered. "He knew when he came through the door that he was a hunted man." "He was a wicked man as well," Symes said sternly. "Not worthy of your sympathy." "I know." Tears were in Ellen's eyes. The man spoke quickly. "The police will be here to talk to you tomorrow," he said in a matter-of-fact tone. "They'll want verification of what I told them." "What did you say?" "I told them you'd seen Fergus only twice in your life," Symes stated firmly. "Once as the guest of Mr. Barclay, his former employer, entertainment that you will hear and see. I hear a lot of people say we still ought to back up and have a barbecue and general celebration July fourth. And some of them are cowards who say they would rather give calves this year than when stock is worth more money. A year ago we had a barbecue to let the country know Midland was one town that hadn't crawled in its shell. Maybe it wasn't a good idea, folks, but I wonder. A lot of people around here are watching L. H. Tiffin, typewriter repair expert, to see how old a fellow has to be before you can break him out of sucking eggs. You know he's the boy who swallowed 52 one night right after supper and then ordered a ham sandwich for a chaser. A customer went to a music store here and asked the girl in charge for an E string. She set the tray out on the counter and said, "You pick it out. I don't know the 'es from the shes." Abe: "Do you play golf vit knickerbockers?" Levi: "No, vit white people."

Boys' and Girls' World club at the Methodist church at 3:30.

As the guest of Mrs. Harrowgate, I told them that Fergus sought you out as the last desperate impulse of a desperate man, hoping you'd lend him enough money to get away.

When they needn't know why he thought I'd let him have the money?" Ellen faltered.

"They needn't know anything," Symes assured her in relief. "Fergus is dead and the case is closed. I'll admit I had to pull a few strings to make my own appearance on the scene plausible—but I pulled them and the thing is ended. You have nothing to be afraid of, Ellen—nothing."

"Nothing except my own conscience," Ellen reminded him. Then she added in a slow, halting voice, "Will you mail this note as you go out, please? It's to Larry."

Three days passed. Three wretched days for Ellen. Fergus was buried, and his suicide was written down as another victory for the law. Police and reporters came no more to the street. On the third morning Molly and Myra and Ellen were gathered in the kitchen where Fergus had spent the last desperate moments of his life. It was a different room today, warm, cheerful and pulsing with life and domestic activity.

Ellen sat at the scarred porcelain table, gazing through checked gingham curtains at the white world outside. Myra, busily shelling peas, was sitting on a low stool beside her. The elder sister's head rested against the younger girl's knee. Molly was at the stove, trying her expert hand at a new dish of tomatoes, eggs and rice.

It was a peaceful scene with no hint of grief except the cloud on Molly Rossiter's brow and the moody listlessness of Ellen's pose.

Woman's Place Is in the News

Women's clubs, church and civic organizations, health departments and medical societies are joining to make Mother's Day, May 8th, the beginning of a nation-wide drive to obtain better maternity care for the expectant mother.

To London Town!

Frances Smith, Bernard college, has just won a scholarship for a year's study at the University of London—the highest honor accorded by student vote. She will study international law.

Miss Smith OF 20 CENTENARY IN COLLEGE OF COLUMBIA, 26 ARE WOMEN AND ONLY 12 ARE MEN.

Dr. Maria Yank, member of the German judiciary and the first woman in Germany to be admitted to law practice, is the president of German Business and Professional Women's club.

MAE LIVINGSTON, BLIND OLD, IS SOCIETY EDITOR OF THE BELLEVILLE, N. J. TIMES.

Club women's favorite reading is about other women's activities, particularly the successful woman in the world of business, the theatre, the literary world, according to Miss Helen Bramble, founder and head of the Women's Club Bureau, that has worked out programs for clubs in every state in the Union and even sent material by dog team into Alaska.

Miss Bramble said: "I think the real reason for their interest in women who have made a place for themselves outside the realm of domesticity is because of the vicarious pleasure each small town woman gets from saying to herself, 'Had I not chosen domesticity, I might have been running that business, writing that novel, been acclaimed on the stage or discovered that scientific fact.'"

NEW KITCHENS

How long has it been since you put your kitchen into its present color scheme? Why not change it this spring? Gray-white, with peacock blue trim, is new and goes magnificently with gray tiled linoleum and checked curtains in blue. Cream white, with a dash of red along the moldings, and dark blue furniture that almost looks black, makes a nice version of the bi-centennial color scheme.

Miss Bramble

Next Easter you will wonder just how your baby looked this Easter. Your snapshots will keep him as he is today. Profloro's. (Adv.)

Many Children Attend Easter Egg Hunts

Easter egg hunts brought delight to many small groups of children Saturday afternoon when practically every church entertained.

One of the largest hunts was on the lawn of the Presbyterian church where 30 children were guests of the primary department teachers, Mrs. E. W. Anguish, Mrs. J. L. Greene, Mrs. R. C. Crabb and Miss Evelyn Heard.

On Sunday afternoon the same hostesses held open house in the primary room for mothers of the children. Work of the department was displayed and refreshments were served.

For children of the First Christian church, three separate hunts were given, Mrs. E. C. Adams and Miss Catherine Dunaway entertained their classes at the Adams home. Mrs. Lynn Butler and Mrs. Susie G. Noble were hostesses to the Beginners at the Butler home. Mrs. S. P. Hall and Mrs. W. G. Fiddle entertained their classes at Cloverdale.

A large group of children of the Baptist church were given a hunt on the lawn of the church. Mrs. R. O. Walker, superintendent of the Beginners, was in charge of the event.

Minuet Club Dance At Hotel Scharbauer Saturday Evening

One of the most successful dances of the Minuet club was held Saturday evening in the ballroom of Hotel Scharbauer when more than thirty attended the regular monthly affair.

The climax of the evening was reached when each woman placed a shoe in a grab bag in the center of the floor. Men matched the shoes to find their partners for the next dance.

Frenchie's orchestra furnished the music for the dancing.

Attending were Messrs. and Misses Preston Bridgewater, Clyde Cowden, Frank Cowden, George Glass, Leon Goodman, O. B. Holt, Arthur Jury, George Klingaman, A. S. Legg, Bob Martin, Foy Proctor, Homer Rowe, L. C. Waterman, Joe Youngblood, Warren Babb of Lubbock and Mr. H. J. Phillips.

To Launch Big April Program

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors Corporation, today announced that on April 2 the Corporation will launch perhaps the most gigantic program ever attempted by an industrial enterprise to stimulate business when it opens simultaneously national exhibits of its many products in 55 leading cities.

In each of the 55 cities the corporation has engaged the largest available auditorium for the exhibit. These halls have an aggregate floor space of more than 1,000,000 square feet. The theme of these exhibits will be symbolized by two mammoth hands flanking the entrances.

"This program was conceived and has been developed as a direct and aggressive attack upon existing psychology—the prevailing attitude of mind of waiting for something to happen before anything is done.

As long as this attitude of mind prevails we are bound to go downward. When it changes, we are bound to start upward.

There are too many who can afford to buy but who lack confidence or believe it to be the thing not to do.

There are also too many who have in mind doing something constructive but are waiting to do it some time later.

To my mind the automotive industry as a whole has shown great aggressiveness and courage in investing tens of millions of dollars in new and progressive products, resulting in by far the greatest values ever offered, and probably greater relative values than can be offered for many years to come.

If this fact could only be appreciated and capitalized by those who are in a position to do so by purchasing, this industry—the greatest in the country—would broadcast a wave of increased industrial activity which through its accumulative effect would exert a far-flung influence toward reaching the necessary objective.

General Motors makes its contribution toward this objective in the form of these nation-wide exhibitions with the firm belief that a better appreciation of the above facts is bound to be a forward step in the direction that we must go.

The exhibit will consist of a representative line of the more than 150 different models of General Motors cars; various automobile accessories; household appliances manufactured by the corporation, such as vacuum cleaners, electric fans, and iceless refrigeration units; and water and lighting systems for farms.

During 1931 China imported more raw cotton from the United States than at any other time since the trade was started.

silly in my life. Molly declared spiritedly. "Why should you put Larry off now and the greatest in the country when that miserable man's death seems to have settled everything is beyond me. Simply beyond me!"

"Exactly what did you say in that note to Larry?" Molly demanded, turning her flushed face to Ellen.

"I've told you a thousand times, the girl answered lifelessly. "I told him that for a month I'd rather not see him, that there was something I wanted to decide first in my own mind. You know what I want to decide. The fact that Fergus is dead has nothing to do with anything."

"As I was saying," Molly resumed, energetically stirring the mixture on the stove, "I can't see that there's anything to decide. The whole thing's ended. Symes told you so and we've all told you so. By writing that letter you've probably succeeded in making Larry think you're plain crazy."

"Oh, let Ellen alone, mother," Myra intervened.

She set the bowl upon the floor, reached for Ellen's hand and cried it beneath her chin. The younger girl's face shadowed with memory.

"Poor Fergus," she whispered. "I don't feel sorry for him," Molly said sharply. "A murderer, a blackmailer and heaven knows what else."

"It's not that I feel really sorry for Fergus himself," Ellen said. "It's just the idea of their being people in the world like Fergus—people who have to live and die so meanly."

"I can't be so impersonal," Myra declared. "It's you I'm worried about here. Mother and I want you to be happy. You've earned the right to your share of happiness, and ever since this thing happened you've been like one of the dead yourself."

"It's no use—Ellen began thickly. Tears filled her eyes. She arose suddenly and walked from the room. Myra and Molly exchanged glances but they didn't follow.

Dietrich Plays Glamorous Role

"Shanghai Express," Marlene Dietrich's first starring picture since she returned from Europe is at the Ritz today.

Josef von Sternberg, maker of "Morocco" and "Dishonored," also directed "Shanghai Express." The supporting cast is headed by Clive Brook, who recently played the leading role in "24 Hours," and Anna May Wong, Oriental heroine of the picture "Daughter of the Dragon."

Miss Dietrich plays the part of a notorious and glamorous woman of the world, while Brook portrays a British officer who meets her, after years of separation, aboard the Shanghai Express, which is held up by a Chinese bandit general, played by Warner Oland.

Opera Stars Will Appear at Ritz

Opera will be brought to the stage of the Ritz theatre Tuesday evening when Florence and Charles Hinton appear in a special presentation.

Florence Hinton, the "Little Fanny" was prima donna and star of Victor Herbert's "The Only Girl," and formerly was prima donna of the Aborn Opera company and the Italian Opera company of New York.

Charles Hinton was a leading dramatic actor and played opposite DeWolf Hopper, Grace George, Frank Bacon, George Hassard, Amelia Bingham and others. He is a baritone. More recently he had his own dramatic company.

Opposes Sales Tax

He would allow widows to inherit the full estate, on the theory that wives contribute to their husbands' success. He also would protect the rights of adult heirs who actually have aided in creating fortunes.

He wants income taxes greatly increased in the upper brackets, and "the regulation rather than the abolition of stock exchanges." He is opposed to the sales tax.

He would outlaw the chain store, and the chain-store system in other kinds of business.

"I believe in big business," he declared, "and I don't care how great a fortune any man is able to pile up for himself. The basic principles of capitalism, as I see it, is the reward of individual initiative. But that principle is violated by any system that permits huge fortunes to pass into the hands of heirs who haven't earned them."

City Planning Death Chamber

VATICAN CITY. (UP)—A death chamber and an incinerating plant are to be built here.

This decision was made by the health department following the recent death of a Paval citizen from an infectious disease. The death chamber will be used for the temporary laying of bodies of Vatican City citizens, who have died from infectious diseases and the incinerator will destroy their clothing and belongings.

It is considered likely that a convention will be drawn up and approved between the city of Rome and the Vatican City providing for the burial of infected dead in the burial ground of Rome instead of in the Vatican City's cemetery. The latter is now located underneath the church. Bodies are placed in vaults in the berth system.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Reality" was the lesson-sermon subject in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, March 27.

Isaiah 64:4 furnished the golden text. "Since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him."

The lesson-sermon embraced the following verse from the Bible (Genesis 1:31): "And God saw every thing that he had made, and behold, it was very good."

Included in the services were the following citations from pages 207, 505 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy.

"There is but one primal cause, and there can be no reality in aught which does not proceed from this great and only cause. Spiritual sense is the discernment of spiritual good."

ROOTED GRAVES BERLIN, Md. (UP)—The quaintest cemetery in the United States is located on the Mason-Dixon line at Bethel Church, northwest of Whiteville, near here. Peaked shingle built rooms, instead of imposing marble monuments mark the graves. This unique cemetery is thought to be about 200 years old.

As if to protect those buried there some one, decades ago, constructed peaked shingle roofs over the graves. These shelters are about three feet high in the middle, the sides touching the ground. Built of cypress wood and shingles these roofs run the length of the graves forming their only location, as no mounds are visible. Some of the lumber has rotted by this time, but the form and general shape of this "village of the dead" still remain.

More than 500,000 acres of land in 19 states were added to national forests in the United States during the past fiscal year. Purchase of this land was made at an average cost of $3.50 per acre.

Peculiar Winter Causes Milk War

AUSTIN. (UP)—An unusual winter is blamed by J. E. McDonald, state commissioner of agriculture, for the "milk war" that has broken out in Texas.

McDonald explained the system of marketing milk, which he believes is the immediate cause.

Before this winter, local consumption has equalled the winter supply. Dairymen accordingly made contracts with the distributors under which their entire supply of winter milk was taken at a given price.

A farmer who produces 100 gallons a day in winter, along in the spring will be able to deliver 125 gallons. The practice then has been to still pay the producer the full price for the 100 gallons and a lower price for the surplus. Where 20 cents was being paid for the winter supply, 12 cents was paid for the surplus.

Along in summer the surplus becomes still more. Distributors then classified this excess as "super-surplus" and it was bought at as low as six cents.

It is all the same quality of milk. When they refused to deliver, producers assert that while consumers got a cut of only a cent in price, producers were cut more than three times that.

When they refused to deliver, gave away their surplus milk and in instances even poured it into the gutters, Houston distributors began to ship in milk. McDonald says the low price milk was being sold.

McDonald expressed hope of a satisfactory adjustment. Without that he predicted the state dairy industry which has been encouraged by the state and federal departments, bankers, lecturers and the press, will be damaged.

NON-SKID STREETS

PARIS. (UP)—When Paris is fully equipped with her new concrete streets and roadways, covered with odd little grooves and artistic patterns, there will be no skidding.

The new preparation will not require any digging up of old roadways, but simply a re-coating of them with non-skid surfacing. In some cases the top asphalt will be removed and concrete substituted, specially grooved and prepared to retard the progress of vehicles in rainy weather.

Among the materials that have been tried are rubber, a mixture of cork and asphalt, which worked fairly well, brick, and pottery clay. Wooden blocks are used in some important streets, but this is expensive due to the fact that, to be kept in good condition, they must be well aired, exposed and slightly sloping.

BARK FOR ELEVATOR

SANTA BARBARA. (UP)—Peggy, the seal pup, has become an elevator seal.

Deserted by her mother, Peggy swam about the waterfront here for several weeks until fishermen lowered a wooden platform on which she was drawn to the dock floor and there feasted on fish.

After several weeks, Peggy disappeared, to return with another seal pup, which she promptly initiated into the mysteries of barking for the elevator.

Electric furnaces in Switzerland and France are making thousands of synthetic rubies and sapphires every year.

Bear Killer Is Now Hog Herder

CONROE, Texas. (UP)—Once known as Montgomery county's champion bear annihilator, Jim Casey of New Caney now has the reputation of being the county's No. 1 herder of razorback hogs.

For more than 50 years Casey, now 69 years old, has roamed the San Jacinto river bottoms. He slew bears by the score; in fact, he slew them until there were none left.

He is reluctant to say how many bears he killed but admits they number in the thousands. One year, he says, he killed 38, and his claim that he killed the last bear in Montgomery county has gone unchallenged.

The bears have been replaced by thousands of free-range razorbacks, many of which are as wild and ferocious as any bear that ever lived, according to Casey. Casey and his five sons now keep tabs on the hogs which run wild in the snake-infested palmetto swamps and live almost entirely on roots, pine mast and acorns.

Casey and his boys ride through the woods every week and throw corn to the hogs, which form groups of as many as 35 or 40. In this manner the Casseys "ride herd" on the hogs. Every once in a while a slaughter is held and the hams and other edible parts, said to possess an unusually fine flavor, are prepared for market.

For hunting "maverick" razorbacks, Casey has his special pack of hounds. On fine days, when the air is cool and the ground firm underfoot, the Casey clan gallops to the chase in as royal a fashion as any medieval king. Jim says the excitement of chasing wild hogs is almost equal to that of shooting a bear.

FOR AIR CODE

SAN ANTONIO. (UP)—State enforcement of its air traffic code will be considered by representatives from nearly 100 Texas towns and cities at a conference here May 4.

Houston delegates have announced an intention to sponsor a greater financial outlay by the state to enforce the air code. At present Rex Dunning, Ranger, is the only enforcement agent stationed in Texas, according to Jack W. Beretta, chairman of the aviation committee here.

POETS' FLOOD TEXAS

SAN ANTONIO. (UP)—Spring has converted every tree pond around San Antonio into a Perian spring, every sand dune into a Parnassus as entries in the fifth annual young people's poetry contest here begin work on their "poems."

The flood of poetry into the San Antonio public library will continue until April 15, when the contest ends, according to Mrs. Leah C. Johnson, librarian.

The young poets are divided into four classes according to age. Those over 18 years can not compete. Those whose poems are selected by judges for publication will be awarded copies of "Young Pegasus" published each year by the library.
