"Fair Exploitation" Bus Trips Are Tentatively Routed

3 CONSECUTIVE DAYS USED TO GO 1,000 MILES

Midlanders to Visit 20 to 30 Towns On Excursions

Tentative schedules for three bus trips to advertise the Midland Fair were announced today by George Philippus, general chairman of the committee. The trips will be made October 8, 9 and 10, with 20 Midland men making each trip, or a total of 60 persons for the three days.

Tickets for each trip will be $3 per person, the 20 seats assuring a financial success at that price, covering the per day charge and the mileage to and from Abilene where the new bus was contracted from the Pageway lines.

Approximately 1,000 miles will be covered, with from 10 to 30 towns visited. The committee announced a tentative itinerary but will consider any changes to improve the possibilities of advertising the Fair where the greatest potential patronage will be found.

Loud speaking equipment, to serve in making announcements at all stops on the trip, also having connection inside the bus to facilitate in programs and announcements while en route, was being worked out today.

Business men especially were urged to take advantage of from one to three days of the bus excursion, and in making the opportunity to exploit the Fair with that of advertising their own business and making personal contacts with residents of towns and cities of this area. Tickets will be on sale next week, but some reservations had been made at the chamber of commerce and others will be taken any day.

Tentative schedules were as follows:

First trip, Tuesday, October 8, Crane, McComey, Fort Stockton, Pecos, Burstow, Pyote, Monahans, Penwell and Odessa.

Second trip, Wednesday, October 9, Stanton, Big Spring, Knott, Ackery, Sparanburg, and Andrews.

Third trip, Thursday, October 10, Andrews, Seymour, Hillsboro, Wellington, Jal, Eunice, Kermit, Wink, and returning by way of Monahans, Penwell and Odessa.

On optional trips to continue eastward and south from Big Spring was under consideration but was believed to exceed the allotted mileage for one day.

Captains for each day's trip will be announced soon, Philippus said.

ACHING FEET ARE BADGES OF HONOR AFTER 70,000 LEGIONNAIRES PARADE

SAINT LOUIS, Sept. 25. (AP)—The American Legion, in convention here, voted to ask the United States to withdraw its recognition of Soviet Russia.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 25. (AP)—Aching feet were a badge of honor Tuesday as 70,000 American Legionnaires rested after a seven-hour parade and prepared to tackle their perennial national convention parade—payment of the bonus—Wednesday.

Thirty thousand persons jammed the streets along a two-mile line of parade to view the colorful annual parade of drum corps, bands, drill teams and just plain veterans. Scores of women, overcome by unseasonable heat and the pressure of the crowd, fainted.

Members of the crack drill units retained their jaunty air at the end of the parade, but Elmer—the rank and file legion man—did not fare so well. Two men were at least with heat prostrations among the marchers.

Virtually all St. Louis business was suspended for the day.

The No. 1 is about two miles southwest of the 1-A, and drilled to total depth of 1,760 feet.

A possible half mile southwest extension of the Sayre Pool in a northern Winkler county was indicated with the coring of saturated lime in Westbrook No. 1 Mrs. Ida Hendricks, drilling in the northeast corner of the northwest quarter of section 14, block 26, public school land survey. The saturation was encountered at 2,742 feet and the test is now shut down waiting for cement to set.

BALANCED BY RECOVERY

A balanced budget is within sight if the current industrial recovery continues and if federal relief expenditures are carefully shaved. This, at any rate, is the belief of the National Industrial Conference Board, set forth in a report entitled "Federal Finances in the Fiscal Year 1935." The report asserts that if general expenditures for 1937 were held at the same level as for 1935, and if recovery and relief expenditures were held to $1,500,000,000, an increase in the federal revenue of $847,700,000, or 22 per cent more than the actual receipts for 1935, would balance the budget. It believes that such increase in receipts can be expected if business conditions continue to improve. The question, then, would seem to narrow down to whether relief expenditures can be cut to the extent suggested. If the trade improvement reduces unemployment sufficiently, they probably can. Business recovery, then, seems to be the key to federal financial problems.

A "SUPER AMBASSADOR"

It is rumored about London that Ramsay MacDonald, until recently prime minister of Great Britain, will be sent to the United States as a sort of "super ambassador," to help Britain attain a closer co-operation with the United States on important phases of international policy. Whether the report be true or not, it at least emphasizes the growing extent to which England and America are finding co-operation advisable. Neither American policy nor English policy in relation to China, for example, stands by itself. Each nation's course necessarily is conditioned to a large extent by the other nation's course. Regardless of the numerous points of difference between them, these two great English-speaking communities can do a tremendous service to the world at large by joining hands occasionally. These proposals for a "super ambassador" recognize the fact.

HEAVY HAND OF DEPRESSION

You can get some idea of the price paid for the depression in human suffering by noticing Gen. Hugh Johnson's recent statement that one of every six persons receiving relief in New York is unable to work because of physical ailments traceable directly to the depression. Many of these deficiencies, says General Johnson, are due to malnutrition—in plain English, to lack of sufficient food. Nervous afflictions, clearly due to worry caused by joblessness, were also found to be prevalent. Heart disease, similarly born of the strain of long-continued want, was also an important factor. When you remember that 240,000 people are on relief in New York, and then reflect that fully 40,000 of these people couldn't earn their own living even if they had a chance, because of the way their depression sufferings have undermined their health, you begin to get an idea of the tragic cost of a trade collapse.

"Calm Yourself" Is Witty, Hilarious

"Calm Yourself," now showing at the Yucca Theatre, packs all the laughs of the season's best fare, and in addition has outstanding entertainment qualities in a well-knit story that rings the bell for being humanly dramatic. In this newest picture from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, Robert Young and Madge Evans are teamed in a screen narrative that is crammed with action plus merriment. Young is the head of a "confidential service" bureau, and as such accepts whatever jobs come along. Miss Evans is a banker's daughter whose father, unknown to her, wishes the bureau head to "suppress" her—and the resulting complications set up more laughs than one has heard since the last blue moon. There's plenty of excitement, too, especially after Young is hired to take care of a baby and is accused of being its kidnapper. But it all comes out happily, with romance at the end of the road. The supporting cast includes Betty Furness, Ralph Morgan and Nat Pendleton.

Stories in STAMPS

ONE hundred years ago, the Finnish educator, Elias Lönnrot, traveled through the countryside of Finland and collected the legends and songs of his people. After two years of travel he put together these folk songs into one great national epic, called Kalevala, which was published early in 1835. In this lengthy poem lies the tradition of the people of Finland. It includes stories of heroic adventure, of romance and racial ambitions. The music of the great Finnish composer Jean Sibelius was influenced by it. It has been immortalized in many great paintings, and has been translated into 12 languages. Early in 1935 a set of three stamps was issued commemorating the 100th anniversary of the publication of Kalevala. The one shown here illustrates the departure of Kullervo, heroic avenger of the death of his father and the sufferings of his family in a feud.

The Town Quack

Audie Francis got a telegram from Tom Nance who, with A. Knickerbocker, went down to Austin to see the racing commission. "Got what we came after," was the laconic message. Audie said that ought to be good enough if Tom knew what he was after. Someone else said not to worry, Tom would ask for plenty. And then some wisecracker had to bring up the question of whether Tom referred to what he was after from the racing commission. This would be a tough town for anybody to live in if he couldn't stand the gas. FEMININE FANCIES

That courage or whatever the quality may be called is probably one of the essential indications of the divine in man.

Know I Shall Be Lonely

By Helen Welshimer

I KNOW I shall be lonely just at first, Until your step grows fainter on the stair, And I have learned to look without swift tears Across the room at your dear, empty chair. I shall not want to be alone, now you Have said goodbye to me and gone so far. I must be brave, and never call you back, Nor think of you and wonder how you are.

I MUST forget—and that is hard to do, For you are part of all I have become. Yet I must walk as fearlessly as though We still kept step to some high-singing drum. But since the memory of all you were Slays in these rooms, I'll choose a strange, new place To put my books, my cups, in ordered rows, Beyond the ghost of your remembered face.

SOMEBODY else will bring small treasures here, Take up new threads of life, love, hope, joy, pain. Dream by the fire, and maybe say goodbye, Be comforted by shelter from dark rain. And should you ever seek me down the years Whoever hears your knock will have to say That I have packed my trophies long ago, Turned in the key, dear heart, and gone away.

Adjusting of Child's Activities to Time Element in Home and School Life Is Discussed by Speaker Before P T A

Editor's Note: The following paper was given by Mrs. John P. Butler before the North Ward P T A recently.

By MRS. JOHN P. BUTLER
Children come to this world with bodies and minds cut by a general pattern but geared to various speeds. By the time a child arrives in a family some sort of schedule or routine has been worked out for the members to follow, and it is to this schedule we first fit this baby. At first, there are meals, sleeping and health habits that he must adjust himself to, but very soon the system becomes more complex and unless parents conscientiously and sometimes, painstakingly consider the situation, it too often becomes so complex that everyone in the household is exhausted by the constant pressure of "things to be done."

We will not consider the few children who, by some miracle, have been born or immediately fitted to catch on and join in the hustle of this era. There are a few so blessed. The others—the majority—have to be shown what it is all about and even then some cannot get the swing. This does not mean that there is any deficiency in the child. Quite to the contrary, these children often have quicker mental processes than others and these processes are so delicately geared that they are stunted or ruined by the confusion aroused when their physical movements fail to move to an allotted tempo. In such cases, there is a great deal of pain caused both child and parent by judging the young one by adult standards. A child may be termed a slow poke because he takes, what we consider, a great deal too much time to dress, eat, walk to school—in fact, to do anything.

In families where there is such a child—or children—and where there is a family that does not have at least ONE—we soon find members being spent by nerve-racking efforts to speed the slow poke on efforts that end only in exasperation for the parents and either tears, sulks, or seeming inattention from the slow one. By careful observation, wise parents can see that this method has no lasting good effects but rather bad effects for the child soon becomes nervously exhausted and discouraged as he comes to the conclusion that there is something radically wrong with him for everyone seems to fit into a scheme that he cannot master. Small buckles are returning in groups of two and three, or singly, as shoe fastenings. We're glad to see that. Buckles have a certain jaunty, stylish air.

No matter what the scientists or astronomers say, we insist that time has a great quality of elasticity. Sometimes the days can stretch out interminably and at other times the 24 hours contract to the span of less than 12, apparently judging by the work we do. (Of course, our mental attitude may be responsible for the difference but we'll blame it on old Father Time, anyway.)

The leaves of Turkish tobacco are string one by one like beads (see how it is done in the picture). After the leaves are string they are packed in bales (see picture) —sometimes as many as 80,000 leaves to the bale.

We have on hand at all times for CHESTERFIELD cigarettes upwards of 350,000 bales of Turkish tobacco...

The pleasing aroma and flavor of Turkish tobacco is almost necessary if you want a good cigarette.

Turkish tobacco is more costly when you take into account that you have to pay 35c a pound duty, but we have to have it to blend with our mild ripe home-grown tobaccos.

It helps make Chesterfields milder, it helps give them better taste. Just try them.

Outstanding .. for mildness .. for better taste

WITH DREAD WEAPONS OF TODAY'S CHEMICAL WARFARE, ITALIANS CLOSE IN ON THEIR UNDER-TRAINED TRIBAL ENEMIES

Rome's Legions Ready to Fight in Face of Gas

For both offense and defense, the Italian troops go to Africa well prepared. Mussolini's infantrymen wore their gas masks as they took part the other day in realistic war games in the foothills of the Alps.

Too Old to Fight? Not in Ethiopia

While Mussolini girds the pick of Italian youth for battle, young and old men rally to Ethiopia's defense. Note the graybeard (second from right) and lack of uniforms.

Italian Troops Show Proficiency With Liquid Fire

Armed with liquid fire, one of the most terrifying of modern weapons, these well trained, young Italian soldiers demonstrate how they will pour flames on Ethiopian forces if called on to do so.

Off to Front—Ethiopian Style

Often without equipment, usually barefoot, Ethiopia's recruits plod afoot toward their country's frontiers in a desperate effort to halt invasion by Italy. This column is led by an officer on mule back.

Guiding Roman Legions

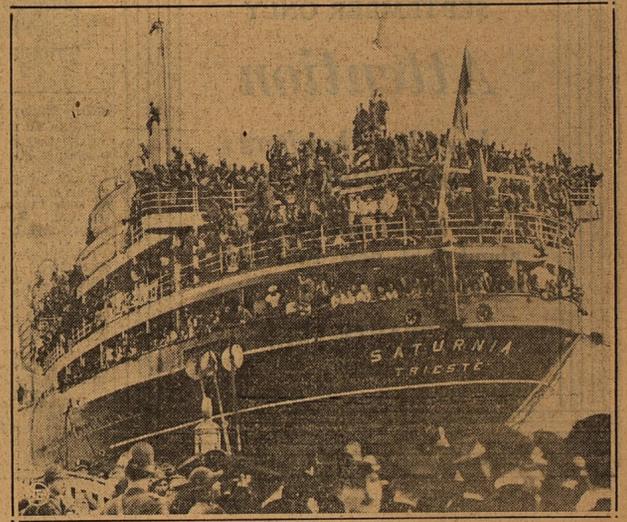

Trained in modern warfare, General Baistrocchi, Under-Secretary for War, photographed during recent war maneuvers, typifies the leadership of Italian forces.

Chief of Ethiopian Warriors

Carrying a lance like his ancestors, Degdaten Habte Mikaele (above), chief of Ethiopia's volunteers enroute to the "front", symbolizes the primitive courage of Italy's foes.

Off to Front—Italian Style

While Ethiopia's defenders straggle to the front in primitive fashion, Italian troops and officers advance on Africa in comparative comfort. Here 4500 jam the liner Saturnia as they sail from Genoa.

PICTURES OF MANEUVERS SHOW HOW OPPOSING TROOPS WOULD LOOK ON BATTLEFIELD

Ethiopia's forces have proved their courage on the attack—at Aowa, for instance. Now they learn to attack in the modern manner, taking advantage of the cover offered by the countryside. Here cadets take an advance on Genet.

In widely dispersed waves, after the manner found most practical in the World War, Italian troops, moving at double quick, charge upon their objective in an attack during maneuvers along the Austro-Italian frontier.

Child Activities--

By facing the cause for a child's slowness and carefully working out a useful plan to fit it, a great deal of peace can be brought to the entire family and relieve the slow child of a great deal of misery. For it is ironical the part of his make-up which causes his slowness, in turn, makes him suffer nervously when the trait is not treated sympathetically. By "sympathetically" is meant, not a hovering, condoling type of sympathy, but a calm, face-to-face treatment.

That child seems hampered by slowness, judging from present day tempo, is really not hampered at all if right adjustments are made. In nearly every such case—barring physical or mental defects—the child is a high-strung individual and very sensitive. One may shake his head and voice the opinion that sensitiveness has no place in this age; however, the hurry and speed of the age tend to develop higher degrees of sensitiveness, so it must be recognized—for it is fundamental in the nature of these children and while we must not become slaves to it, it must be considered.

As we see that constant nagging a slow child to hurry only upsets both sides, another path must be sought if a solution is found. In this limited space you will have to take for granted that the child has been proved slow because of his nervous and emotional make-up. If such a child is not upset and discouraged by repeated admonitions to hurry, he is generally a good student—probably above the average—but if this is maintained his nerves must be kept steady. For this reason the need to do anything in a very short time should be avoided. Plenty of time should be allowed for what is needed to be done—and a careful check made that too many "things to be done" do not collect—for then the question of where enough time can be found in which to do them all will confront you.

It would be better to have plenty of time for the child to really finish one duty well than to hurriedly attempt two duties. This quite often calls for parents to sacrifice some sleep or pleasure so that a schedule that will enable them to start Johnny at things, quite often, a ridiculously long time before the finish is necessary. When this has been done he should be allowed to pursue the course he sees fit and should he fall to deliver the goods on time, tribute should be demanded in a businesslike way—but not critically, for such a child often mis-understands the point of the criticism, taking it that you disapprove of him as an individual and not the error he committed.

We will take as an example, the every-morning problem of probably every home where there is a school child—getting to school on time. Since we are barring all physical drawbacks, we will take it for granted that Johnny has had his necessary hours of sleep. Otherwise he starts the day with a handicap. You can't expect a tired child to do anything but listless, unimpaired things. LOUIS CLEARS THE WAY TO TITLE FIGHT WITH BRADDOCK WITH K.O. OVER BAER

By EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Sept. 25.—A brown tornado, merciless, savage Joe Louis, swept over the magnificent Max Baer Tuesday night, picked him up in the most devastating whirlwind of punches the prize ring has seen since the heyday of Jack Dempsey, smashed him down three times, and finally crushed him in four rounds before the first $1,000,000 crowd of boxing's new era.

Baer was knocked out after two minutes and fifty seconds of the fourth round. In little less than twelve minutes he faced the Chocolate Cyclone. He took a beating so unmerciful, so complete that the crowd of 90,000, nearly filling the huge ball park, gasped at the cruelty of it.

Three times the giant, curly headed Californian, trying to grin to the last through the crimson mask of his torn features, was hammered to the floor under two-fisted blasts that hit him with all the suddenness and deadly accuracy of a tommy gun at point blank range. He was floored three times in all, twice in the third, for counts of nine and four, and was saved by the bell, at the end of the third round, hauled to his corner by his chief second, Jack Dempsey.

When the blast tore into his head again in the fourth, he sank to one knee by the ropes, across the ring from his own corner. So badly had he been beaten, so complete was his thrashing that his eyes were opaque, his knee trembled, as he rushed across the ring, dragged him back to the corner in his arms, in the brief second of silence that always follows the release of so much pent-up emotion.

Then the crowd broke forth again, this time in a hail of boos, as Baer, only three months ago heavyweight champion of the world, raised his battered head, looked around him. Apparently the crowd thought he had choked it, and stayed there on one knee when he might have risen again for more butchering. He buried his head in a towel and staggered down the ring steps out of a prize ring perhaps for the last time, down the aisle, the last trace of clowning and bravado for which he was famous, gone.

ROUND BY ROUND

Round One
Baer came slowly from his corner, hunched in a half crouch, and Louis stabbed his face lightly half a dozen times with lefts. Louis crossed a left hook and the big Baer ripped into him savagely with a right to the head. They locked in a clinch, both cold and deadly. Louis pored carefully at Baer's face never changing. Louis flicked a stream of lefts into Baer's forehead, hooked a hard left to the head then smashed Baer's chin with both hands on the ropes. A right to the head brought blood trickling from Baer's nose and he forged in desperately, raising a long wild right. Baer opened with a savage attack but Louis survived the storm and drove Max into a corner where he hammered his head unmercifully. Baer reeled in the corner. Pinned there and Louis hammered him savagely up to the bell. Blood covering his face, Baer slumped disdainfully at the negro as he walked to his seat. Louis' round.

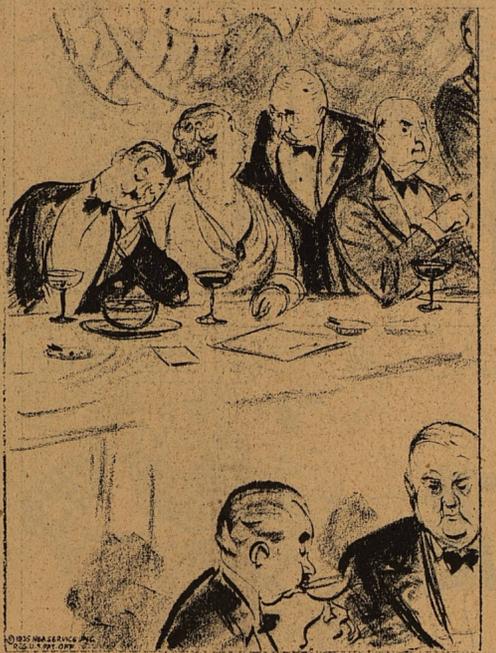

Round Two
Again Baer came up slowly, pawing with his hands, and slipped a left hook into his face. Baer crouched low as the calm negro stalked him and blood was trickling again from Max's nose. He braced carefully to midring and suddenly Louis smashed Baer into a corner with three tremendous rights. Baer faltered for a second on the ropes. Louis' round. Baer's face was crimson from a stream of Louis' left jabs. Joe whipped a left hook into the body, a smooth moving chocolate machine, then belted the big white man into the ropes with another right to the head. They cut-fared at close quarters blood from Baer's crumpling the broom man's shoulders, and just as the bell sounded, Baer whipped a terrific right to the negro's head. The negro faltered for a second on the ropes and Baer lashed him furiously with both hands keeping it up after the bell until Referee Donovan pulled him away. Louis' round.

Round Three

Baer came out haltingly and after stricken game. He stabbed Baer's head with his four lefts, twice hooked Baer's chin with his lefts. He was setting Max up for the kill. A left sank deep in Max's body and he stumbled back. Another left right belted him in the middle. A left and right to the chin rocked Max and as he leaned back against the ropes he threw his first punch of the round, a light right to the head. Max backed into another corner, blood dribbling down his lips, and Referee Donovan warned him for backfading. Louis was coldly deliberate as he flung a left hook into Baer's head, then mashed his mouth up with a biting volley of left jabs.

Louis missed a long right and they fell into a clinch. A long right floored Baer. He sank to his knees. He dropped his hands to the canvas and stayed there helpless, as Referee Donovan counted him out, a knockout victim in two minutes and 50 seconds after the start of the fourth.

Taxes--

which to handle the pensions and by which to relieve property taxes. The position of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce on this matter is well defined as you will note by enclosed copy of our Plainview Convention resolution, which requests our Legislature to inquire into the general sales tax field as a means of broadening our tax base and of raising additional revenue.

In the end the consumer pays nearly all of the taxes any how, and why not now, when the state must have additional revenue, have a square and honest sales tax stripped of subterfuge and evasion. A gross receipts tax is merely an evasion, not supposed to be passed on to the consumer, but which will be passed on to the consumer in a greater percentage than a definite sales tax. The consumer should not be tricked into believing that he is not going to pay this tax when the facts are that he will pay it. It would stagnate and ruin the merchant to absorb a tax which is levied and the welfare of the state demands that merchants be not penalized by an additional tax. Natural resource taxes will not produce enough money and besides we can't tax out of existence our best means of giving employment to people.

The income tax field is already occupied by the Federal Government and will in future years be greatly added to by the Federal Government. There remains only the general sales tax paid by the consumer from which to raise adequate revenues. The income tax field is already occupied by three of our bordering states have adopted it in order to provide for welfare needs and to relieve ad valorem taxes. A two or three per cent sales tax would raise from thirty to sixty million dollars. Here is an ample fund from which to take care of the old age pensions to give property some tax relief and to balance the state's budget. From such a fund the state could abolish the state and school ad valorem tax thereby relieving property from a portion of its unfair tax load. We urge your support of a general sales tax providing at least one-half of the revenue therefrom to be used to supplant ad valorem taxes.

Such a tax program, providing for old age pensions, relieving property taxes and balancing the budget, we believe will secure widespread support. The imposition of new taxes without recognizing the plight of the property owner and without giving him some relief, we believe, will be militantly opposed by our people.

Yours very truly,
Ray H. Nichols, President;
James D. Hamlin, Chairman, Public Expenditure Commission.
H. C. Custard, Vice-Chairman, Public Expenditure Commission.

Advertise Midland Fair in Plains Towns

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Covington returned Tuesday evening from a trip to Lubbock and other North Plains towns on business connected with the Midland Fair. Through consultation with Hal Grady, former Midland man now theatre manager in Lubbock, and the Lubbock chamber of commerce, it was arranged for Grady to announce the Midland Fair over the public address loud speaker hook-up over the Lubbock fair grounds. Enroute to Lubbock, the Covingtons stopped at Lamesa, O'Donnell, and Tanka, distributing Fair advertising material at all three places. They returned home by way of Brownfield, Seminole, Seagraves, Andrews, and Odessa, in all of which towns they advertised the Fair. The world's shortest railroad, one-third of a mile long, is located in Vatican City. The emu lays its eggs only at night and during the winter months.

Our Modern Homes

Once there was an old home that needed repairs, it had stood for years and years and its owner had not done the repairs that the house thought he should have, so the house started to argue the question like this:

"It's been a long hot summer, Mr. Owner, and my hat is wrinkled up a bit and my top coat is not in shape to go through the winter months. What? You spent all your money on the vacation? Well, that is what you told me last year. Now look here, Mr. Owner, let me tell you something, I have hovered over you day and night for all these years, kept you out of the rain and cold (house begins to cry) and this is the thanks I get. Look at this dress—the same one for the last ten years; look at my weather-boarding all caved in; my hips are not even; my gutters are all down; my furnace won't draw for my flue is full of soot; my plumbing won't work this winter for my cutoff is broken. Now I will leave it to the public if I am not entitled to a change. Oh! You are going to leave are you? Well, just don't listen then and next week I will tell you more when you come home again."

So that is all, folks, until next week. Watch this ad and learn whether the house wins its argument or not.

We are willing to lay our bets that the old house wins
