Brush Fires Ravage Vast Coast Area

Flames, topped by immense billows of smoke licked down mountainsides and through canyons, as pictured here at Correll canyon, to drive back fire fighters and take toll of more than $7,000,000 in California's latest devastating brush fires. A 150-square mile area was damaged, the series of fires at one time extending from San Juan Capistrano, 60 miles south of Los Angeles, to Malibu Beach, 25 miles north. Homes of a number of movie notables were among the buildings in the path of the conflagration. More than 2,000 men fought the flames, which destroyed crops, killed livestock, burned out powerlines, and blackened thousands of acres of woodland.

COURT DISPELS DOUBT IN HAUPTMANN CASE

The decision handed down by the New Jersey court of errors and appeals in the case of Bruno Hauptmann is worth a little study.

Hauptmann was convicted of a murder which, for the depth of public horror and anger which it aroused, was probably the most shocking ever committed in America. His trial was inevitably the center of nation-wide interest. The verdict was received with nation-wide satisfaction.

But because the conviction was based entirely on circumstantial evidence—which a popular misunderstanding somehow conceives to be of less value than direct evidence—and because he has had vocal defenders who have insisted that he was a victim of prejudice, there has grown up here and there a feeling that the cumbersome processes of the law managed to lay hold of the wrong man.

Anyone who has such a feeling should glance briefly at the appellate court's findings.

"Our conclusion," says the court, "is that the verdict is not only not contrary to the weight of the evidence, but one to which the evidence inescapably led."

Why? Because, first and foremost, Hauptmann was caught with the goods. He had the ransom money in his possession; and the court points out that Hauptmann's own story of how he got the cash is simply unbelievable, adding that his method of handling it "makes clear his guilty connection with the enterprise."

Secondly, it was proved to the hilt that the ransom notes were all written by Hauptmann. They were in his handwriting and they used peculiarities of spelling and language which he habitually used.

It is an inescapable inference, says the court, that the man who wrote these notes entered the Lindbergh nursery and took the child.

Lastly, there is the fact that some of the wood used to make the ladder by which the kidnaper entered the house was traced to Hauptmann's own home, and that on a board in his home there was written, by his hand, Dr. Condon's telephone number.

Adding these facts together, the court concludes that this "was a circumstantial case with the evidence pointing to guilt from so many directions as to leave no room for a reasonable doubt."

All this is worth keeping in mind. No criminal trial in our generation has held American attention as did Hauptmann's.

Those who have the notion that Hauptmann, after all, might have been guilty of a monstrous miscarriage of justice should reflect on the points raised by the appellate court.

WE DRIVERS
 A Series of Brief Discussions on Driving, Dedicated to the Safety, Comfort and Pleasure of the Motoring Public, Prepared by General Motors

No. 7—SLIPPERY WEATHER

ICE AND SNOW always bring problems for drivers. These problems are the result of less friction. And that is interesting, because usually we are trying to reduce friction all we can. We use ball and roller bearings to overcome friction. We smooth and polish parts to reduce friction. We put oil in our cars to avoid friction. But we can't get along without friction, just the same.

For, after all, we couldn't start a car, we couldn't stop a car, we couldn't turn a corner, if it weren't for friction. The friction between the road and our rubber tires is what gives us traction.

Most of the time we have plenty of traction. But in certain climates every year, winter comes blowing and blustering down from the North, and the first thing we know he has spread ice and snow over our roads, and our whole traction condition is changed.

But automobiles are pretty well prepared these days to meet any conditions. All we have to do is adjust ourselves to these changed circumstances.

For instance, many skillful drivers start their cars in high gear on very slippery, icy streets. Ordinarily this would be a bad thing to do. But when our tires have to start us going on slippery ice and snow, starting in second or "high" is harmless and it does help to avoid spinning wheels, side slipping and difficulty in getting under way. If you haven't tried this after stopping at intersections, you may be surprised to find out how much more quickly you get started again. Only remember to engage the clutch very slowly.

This business of starting in slippery weather can be quite a problem. But stopping is even more so. However, most good drivers agree on one method that they find quite satisfactory. First of all they begin to slow their cars down at quite a distance from where they want to stop. They press the brake lightly at first and release it almost at once. Then they press again and release it quickly. By a series of brief, moderate brake actions, instead of one continuous pressure, they gradually reduce speed and can usually stop without skidding.

Many of the best drivers always make it a point not to disengage the clutch as soon as they apply their brakes, but to wait until the car has almost stopped. While this is their general practice, they say it is especially important on slippery roads, as they claim it reduces the chances of skidding. But if we use this method there is one thing we must look out for. We have to remember that on a slippery surface it is very easy to stall our engine by using our brakes when the clutch is still engaged.

Outside of starting and stopping, most winter skidding is at turns and curves. Many good drivers tell us that they treat every slippery curve or turn as though it were going to be a stop. In other words, they approach curves using the very same system of short, moderate brake actions. The result is that when they reach the curve they are going so slowly that they can actually give the engine a little gas and put some power in the wheels. With power turning the wheels, we are not so likely to skid.

After all, the main thing to do about driving in slippery weather is just what we do about walking in slippery weather. We are all pretty careful about that. The first thing most of us do when we go out on a slippery morning is to put out one foot cautiously and get the feel of the surface to see how careful we have to be. The best drivers we know do practically the same thing with their cars. The first thing they do after they get started, is to test the surface.

They make sure that there are no cars too near, and then they gently apply the brakes. If they don't skid they resume speed and apply the brakes again—this time a little more firmly. In this way they determine the surface and know the degree of caution they must exercise to be safe. This seems like a very sensible idea.

Soybean Meal Good For Use During Winter

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. (AP)—The Department of Agriculture has recommended the inclusion of protein concentrates such as soybean meal in winter rations for beef cattle when straw, stover, non-legume hay or silage make up the roughage.

It declared also that if the cattle owner had a large supply of legume hay such as clover, alfalfa or soybean hay, it might not be necessary to supply extra feeds rich in protein.

The department said in a statement: "Either ground soybeans or soybean meal used as a protein supplement on dairy farms compares favorably with linseed meal and cottonseed meal for milk production."

"A mixture of 400 pounds of ground oats or wheat bran and 100 pounds of ground soybean meal is a very satisfactory winter feed when given with legume hay and silage. When mixed grass hay cut at maturity is fed instead of legume hay the proportion of ground soybeans or soybean meal should be doubled. While the cows are on good pasture the corn and oats in the ration may be increased about 25 per cent, although the 4-2-1 mixture is very satisfactory even on pasture."

"Each cow's daily allowance of concentrates should be determined by her daily milk flow. Experiments by the bureau of dairy industry indicate that when fed good legume hay and silage along with grain at the customary rate, Jersey cows will consume enough nutrients in the roughage for maintenance and a daily milk production of 10 pounds, and Holstein cows enough for 16 pounds.

For each pound of milk in excess of ten pounds, Jerseys and Guernseys should have from 5 to 6 of a pound of concentrates daily; and Holsteins, Ayrshires and other breeds that produce milk testing around 4 per cent fat should have 4 of a pound concentrates for each pound of milk in excess of 16 pounds.

"With an extra good quality of green, leafy hay the roughage consumed may be sufficient for maintenance and the production of more than 10 to 16 pounds of milk, and less grain will be required."

"With poor quality hay, the roughage consumed may not be sufficient for the production of as much as 10 or 16 pounds of milk in addition to maintenance, and heavier grain feeding will be required."

$10 Fire Costs City $50
QUINCY, Mass. (U.P.)—It costs the city of Quincy $50 to fight a $10 fire. A city truck collecting street repair lanterns on Squantum Causeway, fronting Quincy Bay, caught fire. Six pieces of apparatus responded. Damage to the truck was only $10.

Sun Glass Fires Home
ORLEANS, Mass. (U.P.)—Sun rays, concentrated by a glass jug filled with water, fired the summer home of Dale Crosby. Damage was estimated at $250. Firemen said the jug acted as a magnifying glass.

Thieves Display Humor
CINCINNATI, O. (U.P.)—An ironic sense of humor was displayed by the thieves who robbed the New Thought Temple. Before leaving, they took the church's burglary insurance policy and left it carefully caught in the safe door.

Sheep Thief Turns Sheepy
TIFFIN, O. (U.P.)—A sheep thief with half a conscience is being sought by Sheriff Verne F. Deans. He stole 23 ewes and lambs from the Frank Gray farm and later returned 12 of them.

Portuguese sailors brought the ukelele to Hawaii in 1880. Ukelele means "little flea" in Hawaiian.
