Complete Record New Mexico Well In Monument Pool

By FRANK GARDNER
The Monument pool of Lea county, New Mexico, was credited with the largest oil well ever drilled in the state when Barnsdall Oil Co. No. 4 Cooper showed for natural production conservatively estimated at 4,000 to 1,500 barrels an hour. Before being gauged, the well was allowed to flow into the pits for an hour. Still flowing into the pits through open 3-inch line, the valve on the 4-inch line to the separator was half-opened, and the flow into tanks was gauged at 74 barrels in ten minutes, the equivalent of 444 barrels an hour. Since the flow into the pits must be figured at two or three times that into tanks, the aggregate production is probably well in excess of 1,500 barrels hourly.

BRITAIN, FRANCE AND U. S. SIGN A NEW NAVAL PACT

Restrictions Over Size Of Forces Are Removed
LONDON, Mar. 25. (P)—The United States, Britain, and France today signed a new international naval treaty. The pact removes restrictions on the size of navies but the United States and Britain agreed separately to maintain their navies at the same size.

The Anglo-American agreement was disclosed in an exchange of letters between Norman Davis, head of the American delegation and the British foreign secretary, Anthony Eden. Japan was not represented at the treaty signing, since the Japanese had quit the conference when its equality demands had been refused.

Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador to London, attended but did not sign. He attacked the British naval activities in the Mediterranean and warned "A potential naval menace exists there."

The treaty provides, however, for a later signature by Italy and Japan.

STUDIES WHETHER SANCTIONS ARE TO BE INAUGURATED

Drop Negotiations After Hitler Is Adamant

NO ACTION SOON Counter Proposals of Germany Are Awaited

PARIS, Mar. 25. (P)—France today is standing firmly on its position that Adolf Hitler's rejection yesterday of the four-power Locarno proposals closed the door for further Rhineland crisis negotiations, a semi-official source reported.

The nation was reported to be trying to decide whether or not to apply economic sanctions against Germany or to retain Britain's military backing through further negotiations with Britain.

Belgium and the three nations having pledged to act together in the event of a German hostile move, learned that France planned no immediate action pending the receipt in London next Tuesday of Hitler's promised counter proposals.

Europe's crisis was thrown into a new and more complicated muddle Tuesday when Adolf Hitler refused outright to take his troops out of the Rhineland and rejected the Hague court as a tribunal.

DeFuehrer's answer to the Locarno program, made public a few hours after the council of the league of nations suddenly adjourned, left the Rhineland dispute unsettled and with a long drawn out stalemate in prospect.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By RODNEY DUTCHER
 Reporter-Telegram Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The next big political date is April 14, when Senator William E. Borah and Col. Frank Knox compete in the Republican preferential primaries in Illinois.

If Borah defeats Knox in the latter's home state, a result Borah's friends confidently predict, that will be the end of the Knox candidacy for all serious purposes, and a very big boost for the senator from Idaho.

Illinois is the only state where it is certain that the names of two major candidates will go before Republican voters in such way that the electors will be able to make a choice between them.

Its primary is divided into a preference vote and a vote for individual convention delegates. There is no particular connection between the votes, and even if one candidate wins a tremendous preferential victory, the delegation is likely to be split.

Presidential primaries as a national institution have come to be something of a farce. In most states, the delegates are elected by political conventions and the candidate who wins the most primary victories is more likely than not to lose the nomination if he has any strong opposition.

Nevertheless, Borah will be in a strong psychological position if he obtains popular endorsement in Illinois, Ohio, Nebraska, and Pennsylvania—states where he already has filed—and in other states where he may file later.

don to enter preferential primaries against Borah has been attributed to the Kansan's desire not to antagonize the senator and his friends, but Borah is understood to be bitter because he can't meet Landon on the battlefield of ballots.

Build-up of the Borah candidacy in the primaries fits in nicely with the theme argument of his followers that he is the only Republican candidate who is experienced in national affairs, has a large national following, and can meet Roosevelt in the election campaign on equal terms.

The popular vote the senator receives in primaries will indicate the importance of a possible Borah bolt from the party ticket. Although anti-Borah politicians profess not to believe in that possibility, some men who have known and observed Borah for a long time insist that they wouldn't be surprised if he should bolt this year as a crowning act in a long career of political insurgency and independence, assuming that he is neither nominated nor given a voice in framing the party platform.

Primary Means Little

In 1920 Hiram Johnson received the most primary votes, and Warren G. Harding, who carried only his own Ohio, the least. In 1924 the Democrats nominated John W. Davis, who had not been entered in any primary. Politicians prefer to nominate their own candidates without any help from the party rank and file.

In many states they have arranged primaries so that they can send uncommitted or favorite son delegations and this year, for instance, it is practically certain that unpledged delegations will control the Republican convention.

The number of presidential primary states has steadily declined in the last 20 years—at least seven states having repealed their primary laws. Until Senator Borah started speaking up recently, it appeared there wasn't anyone left with even a good word for the primary idea.

(Copyright, 1936; NEA Service, Inc.)

captured 10 state primaries and President Taft won only Massachusetts, by a tiny margin. Taft was nominated by the Old Guard steamroller which operated by virtue of the patronage-bound southern delegates.

T. R. subsequently bolted and led the Bull Moose party. That was the biggest year the presidential primaries had, and they have been declining as an influence ever since. People soon got the point that they were in no sense decisive.

May Soothe Idahoan
 Regular Republicans, now largely counting on Landon's nomination, are prepared to make some concessions to Borah as to the platform. The question would remain whether the concessions would be enough to satisfy Borah, who insists the party must be rescued from Wall Street and the Old Guard.

 We have good roads and can go places quicker.

 That's where the west is at.

Where the boys and girls are full of pep,
 And sometimes tip the fantastic step,
 Out where the west is at.

Here when we have no work to do,
 We don't sit around and fuss and stew,
 Just pick up our hat and here we go.
 To the Ritz or Yucca picture show.
 And there you can rest and pass away.
 Your leisure time just as you may,
 Out where the west is at.

So when you're tired and have the gout,
 And hardly know what it's all about,
 When your wife is blue,
 There's nothing better you can do,
 But crank up the ford and turn it west,
 And when you've traveled all o'er the land,
 You'll find none better than good old Midland, Tex.

NO FOOLING.
 By Oscar F. Burris

Business men should never be knocked, but should be pitied. They have to buy tickets to everything.

I well remember an absent minded professor who left Midland 30-odd years ago. He forgot to pay his bills.

One reason boys are more happy than girls is that they don't give a hang if they have freckles on their noses.

That Lions club beauty revue last night was something to look at. I've never seen a greater mass of "it" on one frame than Stink Dorsey packed. "Prof" Williams, who won first place, did it with his girlish modesty. He positively refused to over-act. "Doc" Bailey is so far ahead of a lot of radio announcers I have heard that he was in a class by himself. I don't know who wrote his lines, but he read them without fear.

A man said his boy was working like a charm. It developed that the youth was working on the end of a chain.

 Out where the air purer and lighter,

SPILZNIK INTERNATIONAL Presents Little Lord Fauntleroy Starring FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW DOLORES COSTELLO BARRYMORE

What Has Gone Before The death of Cedric Errol, the youngest son of the Earl of Dorincourt but disinherited by his father for marrying an American girl, leaves his widow and son in humble circumstances. A mysterious visitor from England arrives at their home and greets the lad as "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

Chapter Two The tall, thin visitor in the humble home of Mrs. Errol is Mr. Havisham, the solicitor for the Earl of Dorincourt in England. He has been dispatched by the elderly Earl to bring Ceddie back to England, where he is to inherit the titles and estates of his grandfather. Ceddie's manly appearance, good looks, and flawless manners greatly impress Mr. Havisham. Following his instructions from the Earl, he supplies Ceddie plentifully with money so that the boy may have some realization of the importance of the position that awaits him in England.

Ceddie immediately goes to the rescue of Bridget, who is the sister of Mary, servant in the Errol household. Bridget's husband is ill and they have no money to pay the rent. Ceddie also gives presents to the apple-woman, to his chum Dick, and to Mr. Hobbs. The latter gentleman is so astonished by news of the extraordinary fate that has befallen Ceddie that he can scarcely believe it. Ceddie solemnly promises Mr. Hobbs to be a good Earl, whereupon Mr. Hobbs becomes somewhat reconciled to his going away.

Ceddie's journey across the ocean is a lively experience. He endears himself to all the passengers. The arrival at the imposing castle of the Earl of Dorincourt provides a fitting climax. Ceddie is heart-broken to learn he is to be parted from his mother, Dearest, to whom the Earl has assigned the handsome residence of Court Lodge, outside the extensive grounds of the Dorincourt estate.

Next day, Cedric Errol, Lord Fauntleroy, is escorted by Mr. Havisham into the presence of his grandfather, the Earl. The Earl is greatly impressed by his manliness, his quiet confidence and his utter lack of fear. Ceddie betrays no qualms when the huge dog, Dougal, approaches him. He places his hand on Dougal's head and pets him. Thenceforth he and the dog are friends.

The Earl and Ceddie have a long conversation in the course of which the crusty temper of the old nobleman gradually melts. They dine together. Ceddie assisting the elder man who is suffering severely from the gout. In spite of himself, the Earl is favorably impressed when Havisham tells him that Dearest has refused to accept the allowance that he has settled upon her.

Ceddie is thoroughly delighted with everything he sees but cannot get the thought of his mother out of his mind.

"Fauntleroy, what are you thinking of?" the Earl asks. "I was thinking about Dearest," the boy admits.

"Who is Dearest?" sharply. "She is my mother."

And then the lad paces the room to hold back the tears. The Earl puts an affectionate arm around him—the first gesture of love he has made toward any human being for years. Ceddie shows him Dearest's picture, explaining that when he grows to manhood he will work to support her.

"What do you think of doing?" the Earl inquires.

"I did think of going into business with Mr. Hobbs. But I should like to be president."

"We'll send you to the House of Lords instead."

"If that's a good business I should not mind. The grocery business is dull sometimes."

"So is the House of Lords," says the Earl, "but it's the business every Earl of Dorincourt goes into."

Ceddie grows sleepy and finally nods drowsily.

In a darkened room at Court Lodge, Dearest is thinking of her son. She places a lighted candle at the window facing Dorincourt castle. Peering out at the huge mass of the castle in the distance, she says: "Good night, God keep you all the night."

Havisham enters the library where Ceddie has fallen asleep. The Earl holds up a warning hand. Both stare at the sleeping boy. The Earl fixes him more comfortably where he is lying with an arm around the huge dog's neck.

Thus Ceddie's first day in the ancestral seat of the Earls of Dorincourt comes to a most auspicious close.

The Sports Horn By JESS RODGERS

Friday and Saturday will be busy days for Dutch Baumgarten. Friday he will officiate at the rural school track meet here and Saturday will have a team in competition with Odessa. Crane, McCamey, Rankin, Stanton, Wink, Kermit and possibly Big Lake in an invitation meet on Lackey field. . . Midland finished behind Robert Lee and San Angelo in the Barnhart invitation meet last Saturday. . . Sam Midkiff took first in the 220 and fourth in the 100. Wafford took first in the discus, third in the shot put and tied for third in the high jump. Lawson took third place in the half-mile. Adams got a fourth in the shot put.

Midland was not represented in a meeting of Sand Belt golfers held in Big Spring Sunday. . . Jake Merritt of Colorado was elected president of the league and J. J. Billingsley, also of Colorado, was elected secretary of the league. . . Odessa was made a member when Hobbs dropped out.

Big Spring, champion in '35, is not positive it will enter a team in the league this season. Golfers there are objecting to Sand Belters crowding the course on Sunday afternoons. . . League play will open April fifth.

Long shot backers can find a couple in the Kentucky Derby entries that will pay off plenty if they win. . . Judge Kavanagh and Lawyer Bridge are both quoted at 400 to 1 to win, 200 to 1 to place and 100 to one to show. . . Brevity is 3 to 1 to those seeking favorites.

This paper Monday carried a picture of Kay Hemphill, one of the leading young female golf players of the country. . . She is a sister of Bert Hemphill, geologist for the Magnolia company here, and no duffer at the game. . . Get Jack Hit to tell you how the wind affects tennis players. . . Paint bunnings heard of a tennis tournament here soon.

Baily (Boots) White, one of the flashiest defensive first basemen in this part of the country was in Tuesday looking for a job in a town that has a baseball team. . . At our suggestion he headed out for Wink. . . Cecil Smith has temporarily retired from polo since he figured in the accident that cost the life of Prince Midvian. . . Other towns are already playing softball. . . Interest in the game here is at an all-time low. . . Blame it on the way the league was run last year.

CAMDEN, Ark. (U.P.)—A corner's verdict probably would read "accidental suicide." "Tag," a 14-year-old monkey belonging to Arthur Rhodes, accidentally hanged itself when chained to a perch over the laundry boiler.

Foster, pool opener, found its first pay from 4,000 to 4,104, while the Stanolind No. 1 J. E. Witcher, the south offset to the discovery, logged top of pay at 4,192. The No. 1 Frank Foster is 600 feet out of the southwest corner of section 18, block 42, township 2 south, T. & P. survey.

Little change is reported on the two important northern wildcats, the W. T. Walsh and Harry Adams Corp. No. 1 Averitt near Seminole in Gaines county and the Honolulu and Cascade No. 1 Bennett in southeastern Yoakum. The Averitt test is still fishing for ring-socket lost in the hole while pulling out drilling-bit. It is bottomed at 4,910 feet in lime and blowing wet gas gauged at more than 12,000,000 cubic feet daily.

Farther north, the Yoakum pool opener, Honolulu and Cascade No. 1 Bennett, is drilling hard lime at 5,150 feet with no increases reported. The only oil section so far encountered by the well was from 5,094 to 5,096, but no great increase in production was obtained after a 2,000 gallon acid treatment. The well is in section 678, block D, John H. Gibson survey, about 11 miles southeast of Plains.

With only six days left in which to secure operators licenses and to register automobiles, the task has been about half completed here, 875 passenger car licenses, 162 trucks and 30 farm trucks being registered. Approximately 3,500 operators licenses have been called for and 80 chauffeurs licenses.

Every motor vehicle must have a 1936 tag on it not later than April first, and officers have been instructed to file complaints against persons without either drivers license or a 1936 tag after that date.

Tax Collector A. C. Francis has requested all persons wanting car licenses for cars registered in some other county for the 1935 licenses to bring their license receipts with them.

30,000 Mile Flight Is Memorial Project To Will Rogers, Post

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. Mar. 25. (U.P.)—A 30,000-mile flight was projected Tuesday night by two Oklahoma City fliers as a memorial to the late Will Rogers and Wiley Post. Claiming they already had financial backing, Lewis F. Green and Burrell Tibbs said they would hop off in July on a fifty-six day trip which would carry them twice across the Atlantic and into thirty-eight nations.

Green, a former stunt flier, would act as radio operator and navigator and Tibbs would pilot the plane. Green said they had not decided from what airport they would start their long flight, but that several Middle Western cities already had made them offers.
