British Cabinet for Their Presence At Parley
HOUSE ASSURED
Baldwin Says Staff Not to Commit Country

By Associated Press
The British cabinet today invited German militarists to confer with the general staffs of Britain, France and Belgium if Hitler wishes to accept the powers of the Reichstag. The Reichstag is drafting counter proposals for presentation Tuesday.
Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin assured the House of Commons that the British general staff would not be allowed to involve the government by any commitments with the French and Belgium army commands concerning a mutual defense against a possible German aggression.
His statement followed a wave of suspicion and distrust which has been sweeping parliament.

POLO STAR'S WIFE TAKES OWN LIFE IN SAN ANTONIO

Mrs. Duke Coulter Is Discovered Dead By Maid

SAN ANTONIO, Mar. 30. (AP)—Mrs. Alice Margaret Coulter, wife of Harold "Duke" Coulter, former army captain and polo star, was found shot to death in their apartment here early Saturday.
She had been shot through the head and a .38 caliber revolver was found on the floor nearby. She was wearing a nightgown and was found by a maid who notified Mrs. J. H. Ruppel, operator of the apartment house, who in turn called deputy sheriffs.
Justice of the Peace P. L. Wiley was called and ordered the body taken to an undertaking parlor where it is being held. Funeral services will be held Tuesday.
Mrs. Coulter came into the public eye when her present husband was court-martialed and ousted from the army for alleged improper conduct with her while he was married to another woman and on duty at Fort Sam Houston. Prior to that time she was the wife of William F. Morgan, Houston and Laredo oil man.
Her former husband then instituted suit for the possession of their son, William J. Morgan Jr. It was during this action that it was revealed that Coulter and Mrs. Morgan had married. The court gave the custody of the child to Morgan.
Since then Mrs. Coulter has been living a large portion of her time at the apartment here, while Coulter has been training polo ponies and playing throughout the country.
Recently she sprained her ankle and Mrs. Ruppel said she was down cast about being confined to her home and over the loss of her boy.
Survivors include her husband, a son, William J. Morgan Jr., of Houston; her mother, Mrs. Bessie Traynor of Laredo, and a sister, Mrs. R. P. Rutherford of Houston.

ALBUQUERQUE, Mar. 30. (AP)—Silt-blackened clouds darkened Eastern New Mexico today, bringing the worst dust storm of the season. From Raton to Clovis visibility was cut to less than two miles by dust carried from the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles.
A 40-mile wind carrying the silt was paralleling highway and street traffic. Motorists were forced to turn on lights, and residential windows and doors were locked.

Continues Hauptmann Clew Hunt

This visit of Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, rear, to the former Bruno Hauptmann home in the Bronx, N. Y., which he is shown leaving with an aide, caused a definite break between the New Jersey chief executive and Attorney General David T. Wilentz. The Governor, ordering a section of attic flooring ripped up, later declared a federal expert's test indicated the Lindbergh kidnap ladder had not been made from lumber in the Hauptmann attic.

GAINES WILDCAT COMPLETED AS A GASSER AT 4,910

Walsh, Adams Well Suspends Drilling Operations

By FRANK GARDNER
Confirming rumors prevalent for the past week that it would be drilled below its present depth but would be completed as a gasser. W. T. Walsh and Harry Adams Corp. No. 1 Avertit, the Gaines county wildcat that has been the chief topic of conversation among West Texas oil men for months, was shut in yesterday and operations have been suspended indefinitely.
Continually harassed by one fish-pier after another caused by gas kicks, operators elected to abandon the well after losing bit, ring-socket and a string of fishing tools, the recovery of which seemed practically impossible. Total depth in the No. 1 Avertit is 4,910 feet, the point where 12,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day halted drilling.
That the gasser will later be drilled deeper is a not too remote possibility. Major companies interested in the area may decide to have it carried below the gas horizon in search of the oil that many think is just a few feet farther into the section. The wetness of its gas is said to indicate a fair chance for oil pay. Should decision be made to drill more, the alternative of setting whipstock and drilling by its open if tools now in the hole can not be recovered.
The drilling of many gas zones by the Walsh and Adams wildcat is said to establish definitely the presence of a structure northwest of Seminole previously mapped by geophysical crews. The indications of the structure were responsible for the drilling of the well in the area which first started over a year ago. Though its oil producing possibilities are still an unknown quantity, it is certain that the Seminole area will be the scene of more drilling exploration.

YOUTH WELLS LOGS INCREASE

The long-looked-for change in the Yoakum county pool opener was encountered while drilling from 5-215 to 5,230 feet, with an undetermined increase in oil logged in that section. The Honolulu and Casade No. 1 Bennett is now drilling ahead by 5,243 feet. The only other barrels per day in the well was from 5,094 to 5,095, but production was barely increased by a 2,000 gallon acid treatment.

Short Course Dates For Farmers Changed

SAN BENITO, Texas. (AP)—Dates of the agricultural short course here under the direction of the San Benito chamber of commerce agricultural committee have been changed to April 7, 8, and 9, Pete H. Smith, secretary states.
The change was made in order not to conflict with schedule of speakers invited here. George L. McCarty, poultry specialist, of the extension service at College Station, and E. R. Eudaly, dairy specialist of the same organization, will be the featured speakers.
A packing company and the state home demonstration department have been asked to send speakers. The program is part of the plans to foster agricultural development in the county.

Directly behind them another line marches, helping bear the armament burden.

Townsend Admits Aids Speculated

Admits Agents Have Dipped Into the Funds
BALTIMORE, Mar. 30. (AP)—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, whose pension movement is under congressional scrutiny, admitted today that some of his workers had, necessarily, "dipped into the main funds" of the organization.
"But there has been no gigantic plan of robbery," he added. He said that some of the workers' guilty of speculation.
A prediction that membership in the Townsend old age pension organization would be doubled as a result of the congressional inquiry into the movement was made by Representative McGroarty, California.
"The movement is growing daily and is so determined that even if some dissatisfaction of administration develops from the inquiry, the movement will continue to spread."
At the same time McGroarty offered his services as an arbitrator of differences between Dr. F. E. Townsend, the California physician who heads the organization, and Robert E. Clements, co-founder who recently resigned as national secretary.

O'Mara said Schenk was armed with an automatic pistol and two rifles when taken into custody.

WAR CORRESPONDENT IS NEPHEW OF LOCAL ATTORNEY, WHITAKER

Returning from the Italo-Ethiopian war front, John Whitaker, nephew of Judge Ed M. Whitaker of Midland, is now at Chattanooga, Tenn., visiting his parents, Lawson S. Whitaker and wife. He is war correspondent for the New York Herald-Tribune.
The correspondent, who is only 30 years old, has made phenomenal progress in his profession. A few years ago, after graduating from Sewanee university, he was employed by the Chattanooga Evening News to write the book review column. Later they sent him to Nashville to cover legislative affairs. He soon was recognized by Metropolitan papers and was engaged by the Herald-Tribune of New York, rapidly going step-by-step until he was given the important post as European correspondent. He was at the Geneva conference when the Italo-Ethiopian trouble broke out.
Young Whitaker flew to Ethiopia with a son-in-law of Premier Mussolini and was with the Italian troops until a recent break-down in health. With Floyd Gibbons and other noted writers, it was necessary for each one to aid in nursing others through illness caused by the extreme temperatures. Days were as hot as 150 degrees and at nights the mercury dropped to the freezing point.
While on leave, the writer will prepare articles for national publications, one reported to be for the Saturday Evening Post.

HOFFMAN FIGHTING FOR COURT ACTION TO AID HAUPTMANN

Pleads Evidence Is Ample That Trial Was Unfair
COURT ADAMANT
Governor Is Doubtful Members Will Save Man

TRENTON, March 30. (AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann desperately begged the court of pardons today to save him from the electric chair tomorrow night.
Governor Harold Hoffman, fighting the chair will leave Hauptmann determined in his behalf, hoped to convince the court of pardons, of which he is a member, that there is sufficient evidence to support his repeated charges that Hauptmann was unfairly and prejudicially tried at Flemington, and that testimony of some of the state witnesses is open to serious questioning.
As the court convened the governor was doubtful of being able to convince other members he should discuss details of the case.
A failure in his fight to escape the chair will leave Hauptmann wholly dependent on Hoffman. The governor has repeatedly said that he was not contemplating a second reprieve.

CROSSING CRASH KILLS 10; KNOCKS TRAIN OFF RAILS

Occupants of Limited Escape Injury In Wreck
BYRON, Ga., Mar. 30. (AP)—Ten persons, including four members of one family, were dead Sunday from the crash of a bus and a section of the Central of Georgia's limited passenger train, the Southland, which left the rails after the impact.
Eight mangled bodies were removed from the wreckage following the accident and two others, including the bus driver, died without regaining consciousness. Three are in hospitals with serious injuries.
Although the entire train, locomotive, three express cars and two coaches, were derailed, railroad officials said none of its crew or passengers was injured.
The dead are Mrs. Sara Sauter, 45, of Americus; W. J. Whitehurst, 45, of Macon; O. H. Looney, 35, bus driver, of Macon; Ely Williams, 80, Negro, of Macon; Lloyd Allen Jones, 25, Negro, of Byron; Emma Law, 55, Negro, of Montezuma, Ga.; her daughter, Henrietta Martin, 30, and the father's two children, Lucy Mae, 9 and a boy, 13 months old, and an unidentified negro man, 45.
Rail authorities said the body of the unidentified Negro was found in the wreckage beneath the train and it was not determined whether he was a bus passenger or a transient riding the blinds on the train.
The bus was demolished and the broken bodies of the passengers were scattered several hundred yards along the right of way. Rails were twisted and cross ties splintered beneath the derailed wheels.

STANTON SCHOOL HEAD QUILTS JOB

Limmer Will Accept New Position as Supt. at Fredericksburg
STANTON, Mar. 30. (Sp.)—A. M. Limmer, under whose administration the Stanton schools have regained their lost accrediting with the state department of education, has resigned his post to accept the superintendency at Fredericksburg.
In a special meeting of the board here last week, Limmer submitted his resignation. He had previously been re-elected for another term.
Limmer said he was accepting the Fredericksburg offer because it gave better professional and financial returns, the town was near several colleges, and it would also place him near his parents.
In a statement to the board, Limmer said: "I wish to express my sincere appreciation to the Stanton board of education for the splendid manner in which it has aided, cooperated and supported the educational program during my service as your superintendent."

BEHIND THE SCENES

-IN-

WASHINGTON

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Reporter-Telegram Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Donald R. Richberg is back on the inside again.

Once known as "assistant president," chief New Deal co-ordinator and head of the National Emergency Council, he disappeared from White House huddles as well as from the public gaze after the U. S. Supreme Court swung at NRA in its famous decision on Richberg's pet Schechter case.

But now he has again become supporting Roosevelt on the constitutional issue and relations between a court favorite—without publicity—that other insiders who don't like Mr. Richberg are beginning to grumble.

Richberg wrote most of the president's relief message to Congress, which called for co-operation by private industry to increase employment.

Don't be surprised if he soon receives an important appointment under the Department of Justice and subsequently appears both before the supreme court on New Deal cases and before the public with pro-New Deal campaign speeches.

Although his friends thought he had been treated shabbily by being dropped after taking many "raps" for the administration, Richberg never became bitter.

He began a series of speeches supporting Roosevelt on the constitutional issue and relations between a court favorite—without publicity—that other insiders who don't like Mr. Richberg are beginning to grumble.

Richberg used to be to conciliate industrialists and business men with the New Deal and he probably will resume that function.

Radical Party Boomed Radicals promoting a national Farmer-Labor party now hope to have their presidential ticket on the ballot next November in about half the states.

Unannounced tentative plans look toward a preliminary conference following a call for a national party by the Minnesota Farmer-Labor party. That conference would plan for a national organization and nomiinating convention on July 4, probably in Chicago.

A LOVE LETTER

To give these freshmen an idea of how it is done we publish a letter that was found in a mailbox of a Junior boy to a Junior girl. Since we are perfectly sure (2) the boy won't mind we will leave his name but will only put the initials of the girl and Senior boy involved.

Dearest M. A.: How are you this fine day—fine I hope. Say, I slept too late to come up to school this A. M.

Darling, I have been doing a lot of thinking since last night and have just about reached the decision that you don't give a hoot about going with me. Although I hope this is not true.

You had really been with O. P. Wednesday night, hadn't you? It just seems that you are going farther and farther away from me. It is hard to take but it has to happen. I am just the man to stand up and take it without a tear. Now, don't get me wrong, I am not mad or anything like that but if you don't care anything about going with me I want to know. If you don't want to go with me please let me have one more date on Saturday night.

Please answer this today. I want to know about this.

Do you remember one time I told you that I couldn't get mad at you for anything you would do and also, you said you would tell me when you got mad at me.

So, if you are mad please tell me what it's all about.

Well, be sweet and answer this today.

Love and Kisses, W. C.

P. S. No matter what happens you will always be the one for me. W. C.

FOODS II CLASSES VISIT GROCERY STORE THURSDAY

The Foods II classes visited the Hokus Pokus grocery store Thursday, March 19th, for the purpose of studying the prices of foods. This visit is preparatory to a series of meal planning and serving. The class is planning meals for different income levels for which a knowledge of cost of foods is necessary.

The study was made by the following students: Margaret Adams, Lillian Armet, Nona Rae Drake, Maxine Hayes, Mona Heidelberg, La Verne McMullan, Louise Plisk, Ann Lee Romans, Glady Webb, Vera Webb, Lorena Dunagan, Louise Elkin, Lucille Guffey, Johnnie Fae Howe, Marcella Strawn, Geraldine Welch, Dora West, Wanda George.

TRY-OUT IN DECLAMATION TO BE HELD HERE

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

Whatever may be said about Governor Jimmy Allred, the boys in this newspaper office have decided he can't be called a "politician".

Whereas most politicians, office will be held at an early date, to be announced later. These students have received special training from Miss Jessie Belle Cummings.

Those entering the junior girls contest are: Joyce Beauchamp, Joyce Heard, Jean Lewis, Julia Mitchell, Gramada Saye, and Freddie Fee Turner.

The senior girls include: Bess Eidson, Mona Heidelberg, Omara Hobbs, Jean Smith, Wanda Ticker, Jessie Lynn Tuttle, Anna Beth Bedford, La Verne McMullan, Adale Reiger, Dorothy Lou Speed, and Paddy Sue Whitcomb.

Those in the contest for junior boys are: John Dublin Jr., Donald Griffin, Billy Noble, Jack Noodles, and Fred Gordon Middleton.

The senior boys include: Ray Bodine, Elton Dozier, Jesse Rhoden, Jack Walton, and Tom Waddell.

All other students in high school have learned declamations, and the majority of them have already recited them in their home room groups.

EASTER PARTY FOR PRE-SCHOOL CHILDREN

A party was given by the third year class of foods March 25. This party represented the problem given to Margaret Hoffman, which was a party for pre-school children with a dollar and a half as the amount to be spent.

The refreshments were rabbits made of pears in lime gelatine nests. Easter eggs, made of fondant, were placed in small baskets. The cookies were cut in the shape of rabbits.

The children that came were: Berneal Pemberton, Bobby Connor, Norman Cornelius, Jane Harbison, and Eloise Pickering.

holders or office seekers want to keep the good will of editors, Governor Jimmy apparently doesn't even answer their letters. And that when 100 or more editors are concerned.

The way I get it, the governor was invited to be the honor guest and the principal speaker at the West Texas Press convention to be held here May 22-23. Although invited by the host editor and the press secretary on or about March 10, the state executive still hadn't replied to the invitation this morning.

If an office holder or seeker can be careless enough to overlook an opportunity to meet with and speak to the majority of the newspaper editors of West Texas and not even answer the letter of invitation, I say he is exceptionally independent, not a politician and unconcerned about the power of the press.

Maybe Governor Jimmy figures he doesn't need the support of the newspapers of West Texas.

However, three other busy big men of Texas, invited to be on programs of the convention, had answered within a week after the invitations were sent out.

Black to Get Free Hand Practically all parties concerned in the dispute over the Senate lobby committee's right to subpoena telegrams are agreed that Chairman Hugo Black of Alabama is a very smart man.

Whatever your opinion of the ethics involved, consensus in Washington is that Black's recent counter-moves have been good as strategic maneuvers. Loaded down with bad publicity by legal and other protests from Liberty Leaguers and William Randolph Hearst—who objected to Black's perusal of their telegrams—Black first diverted public attention and got the spectators all stirred up again by revealing that six congressmen had lived last summer with a "power trust" lobbyist.

Then he achieved his master coup by making available to Rep. John J. McSwain (Dem., S. C.), an alleged copy of a telegram which Hearst by court action had sought to suppress. The results were scarcely less than terrific as the popular McSwain, quivering into the heights of melodrama, read Hearst's description of him in a message to an editorial writer as "a Communist in spirit and a traitor in effect."

The House roared its approval of McSwain, who in 1917, at the age of 42, volunteered to go to war as a private and returned a captain.

He is a member of the Sons of the Revolution, Sons of the Confederacy, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars and pacifists have called him "the worst jingo in the House."

No man suggested that the telegram was "private" and shouldn't have been in McSwain's hands. Nobody cared. One of "the boys" had been attacked! And the reaction of the House spelled out the fact that, insofar as Congress was concerned, Black would have a free hand and all the money he wanted for his investigation.

They are finishing their dresses now in preparation for the contest to be held in San Angelo in April. Mrs. Lee stated, "We're planning to enter the contest and hope to win several places."

What Has Gone Before:
The Earl of Dorincourt sends to America for his grandson, who is to inherit the title. He stubbornly refuses, however, to see the boy's mother, an American woman. The boy's engaging qualities cause the Earl to relent. Distressing news, however, threatens to bring sadness to all. Another claimant to the title appears and apparently establishes his claim.

CHAPTER SIX

Overseas in Brooklyn the news of the momentous events that are happening to Ceddie stir great excitement in the hearts of his old chums, Hobbs and Dick. The doings of the 'ricocrats' as Hobbs calls them, are perennial interest, and both magazines and newspapers are full of accounts of the battle over the Dorincourt succession.

"He can have half of my shoe-shinin' business," Dick says. "I've always had in mind that Ceddie would come in with me some day," says Hobbs.

"Thumbing through the pages of an illustrated weekly, Dick suddenly let out a whoop. "Holy mackerel!" He shows Hobbs a picture over the caption: "LADY FAUNTLEROY, MOTHER OF CLAIMANT."

"She ain't so 'ricocrat!" cries Dick. "She's Minna—Ben's wife!" "You mean it's all some kind of a hocus-pocus?" says Hobbs. "Sure I do!" "Well—I'm—jiggered!"

"I never heard of her havin' no kid but Ben's kid. The one Ben went to Chicago to look for when she run off."

"We oughta do somethin' about this." "I know Alderman Murphy," says Hobbs decisively. "Come along, we'll go right now. . . . Them eatin' they've always had a spite against us ever since the Revolution!"

And they're off to consult the oracle, Alderman Murphy. Some weeks later Minna and Lawyer Snade are quarreling in Minna's quarters at the Dorincourt Arms when Lord Dorincourt calls.

A boy follows Dorincourt into the room. It is Dick. Minna recognizes him as the youngest brother of her husband, Ben, from whom she ran away, and gives a cry in spite of herself.

"Why hello, Dick," she says. "Hello, Minna." Now Ben himself strolls in followed by Mr. Havisham and Mr. Hobbs. Minna gasps but tries to cover up.

"Why, Ben, where have you been all this time?" she says. Ben looks at her in silence. Havisham addresses him.

"Do you know this woman?"

As he nods and looks away, she says: "Funny if he didn't, seen' he was my second husband."

Ben asks for the boy, their son, and Minna tells him the boy died from pneumonia. Dick sidles to the bedroom door and opens it suddenly. The boy falls on the floor. Getting up sheepishly he addresses Dick as "uncle." Then both Minna and the boy realize that the show is over and the exposure complete.

"Well, I'll be jiggered!" says Mr. Hobbs.

Ben speaks to his son. He says: "Hello, Tom."

"This is my son, Lord Fauntleroy," says Minna still trying to carry it off.

"Oh, no, it isn't," says Ben. "It's my boy, Tom."

"Oh, shut up," says Minna in a rage. "I'll have the law on the lot of you for founding a poor, weak woman!"

Lawyer Snade looks at the Earl in a frightened way and says: "I knew nothing of this, my lord. I assure you."

"The sooner the pair of you are out of this country the better," says the Earl, addressing Snade and Minna.

Sobbing loudly, Minna flees into the bedroom.

"We shall have no more trouble with her," says Havisham, and the Earl answers with grim satisfaction: "No, I think not." Then turning to Hobbs and Dick, he adds: "Thank you, my friends, I shall never forget this."

Mr. Hobbs, thus privileged to be one of the instruments by which justice is done to his little friend Ceddie, proceeds promptly to make himself very much at home with a real live earl. Being conducted on a tour of Dorincourt Castle by the Earl, in the course of which he views some portraits of the Dorincourt ancestors, Mr. Hobbs says:

"You know, Earl, I used to have a very poor opinion of your aristocrats but I've changed. You're a pretty good sort even if you are an Earl."

"I'm deeply gratified," says Dorincourt. It is Ceddie's birthday and a party is in progress on the Dorincourt grounds, Ceddie is called upon to make a speech, which he does.

"My grandfather wants everybody to be happy and comfortable and when I grow up I'll want it too. That's all—because I'm not very good at speeches—but I'm very much obliged to you."

A gentleman guest observes: "Rippling little nipper, isn't he?" To which Dick rejoins: "Ain't he a daisy! I'll betcha some day you British boids will elect him KING!"

FEMININE FANCIES

BY KATHLEEN EILAND

Big Spring has been conducting balloting to determine what shrub and flower shall be Big Spring's official Centennial year emblem. As we understand it, the Garden club of the town is sponsoring the move.

We think that is a desirable step on the part of Big Spring and one that Midland would do well to follow.

After all, if Texas has the blue-bonnet which has become nationally known as an emblem of our state, why shouldn't Midland have its own flower? All such symbols tend to build up a spirit of patriotism because they are tangible evidences of the invisible spiritual body which is the real state and the real town.

Now that the city has done its part by citizens with raising the amount of water per minimum charge, citizens should bask in glory reflected from velvety lawns and flower beds.

Spring always brings a desire for cooking so we present herewith two suggestions for the realm of the kitchen:

Seasoning Prunes
Add a small stick of cinnamon and several slices of lemon to your prunes while they are simmering.

Apple Pie Innovation
Try a bit of dry mustard and a grating of cheese in your pie crust the next time you are making apple pies and see if the masculine members of the family don't yell for more.

Baby Paid For Crying

SALT LAKE CITY, (U.P.)—A University of Utah dramatics group recently was swamped with offers when they appealed to mothers for a baby to make off-stage noises for the play "Post Road." They offered 50 cents an hour of crying. A six-weeks old infant won the role on pure lung power.

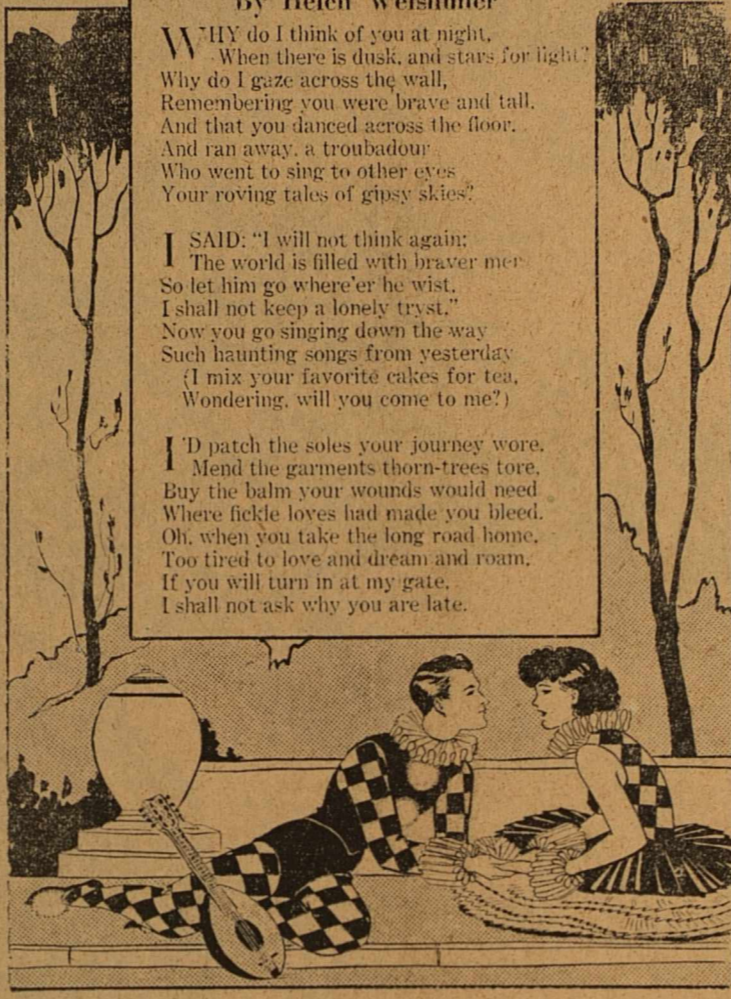

Pierrette Speaks

By Helen Welshimer

Why do I think of you at night,
When there is dusk and stars for light?
Why do I gaze across the wall,
Remembering you were brave and tall,
And that you danced across the floor,
And ran away, a troubadour,
Who went to sing to other eyes
Your roving tales of gypsy skies?

I SAID: "I will not think again:
The world is filled with braver men:
So let him go where'er he wist,
I shall not keep a lonely tryst."
Now you go singing down the way
Such haunting songs from yesterday
(I mix your favorite cakes for tea,
Wondering, will you come to me?)

I'D patch the soles your journey wore,
I Mend the garments thorn-trees tore,
Eyes the balm your wounds would need
Where fickle loves had made you bleed,
Oh, when you take the long road home,
Too tired to love and dream and roam,
If you will turn in at my gate,
I shall not ask why you are late.

"Relief" Haircuts in Dispute

GARDEN GATE GOSSIP

Clear, vivid colors and easy culture make the modern annual phlox popular with all amateur gardeners. This brilliant flower which comes in all colors of the rainbow except orange and the deep yellows, can be used for many purposes. It is excellent for bedding and will flash forth with a dazzling sheet of color. Varieties of the compacta type make fine dwarfs for edging, and all of them can be used for making bouquets.

The blues, reds and purples are particularly vivid and there is a magnificent array of pink and rose shades with eyes, edgings and strips in some of the varieties. Their foliage is subordinate, the whole plant seeming to blaze with tiny blossoms supported by firm stems.

It is one of the easiest annuals to grow, and comes into bloom very quickly. Almost any type of soil will do, but the richer it is the more vigorous the bloom and the longer the season. Sow in the open ground as soon as the soil is warm and thin to 6 inches apart. It is better to sow and thin than to transplant, as it does not stand transplanting as well as some of the other annuals, although it can be handled in this manner if the root system is not disturbed. In this case it is best to water it thoroughly and shade for a day or two.

Phlox is often started indoors for an early display and carefully transplanted. Florists put them up in small paper containers for sale, but it is much cheaper to grow them in a seed box at home.

There is little difference, but size, between the grandiflora and the nana compacta types, the first growing about 12 inches and the smaller ones 8 inches in height. The smaller types are best for bedding and masses of color, and are somewhat more free-flowering.

Because the phlox make such good cutting material, they are often planted in rows in the vegetable garden, making a handsome display there, and furnishing an abundance for bouquets. The grandiflora types make the best showing here.

Some of the perennial varieties of phlox may be grown from seed. They are long in making a start, and are best bought as plants or grown from cuttings.

A FARMER WRITES AN "AD" ABOUT DOUBLE-MELLOW OLD GOLDS!

Scio, New York
November 16, 1935.

P. Lorillard Company, Inc.,
119 West 40th Street,
New York City, N.Y.

Gentlemen:

I am an old man who knows what he likes. A hill farmer is a stubborn cuss, and when he takes to cigarettes when he's well gone by 60 years, he has good reasons for wanting those cigarettes. And for some time now I haven't touched any smoking but OLD GOLDS.

My brother's son got me on cigarettes, but the ones he gave me seemed too quick-burning. One day our general storekeeper stood me one of those Double-Mellow OLD GOLDS, made of prize crop tobaccos. And I had my first cigarette that burnt as slow and cool as my pipe, and that didn't leave a man's tongue stinging and biting like that other cigarette brand.

I've bought Double-Mellow OLD GOLDS ever since, and every pack has been the same. I know, because I'm blind, and we without eyes learn to taste and feel better than you who see.

Yours truly,
Jerry Hurley

P.S. My 16 year old niece, Betty, has typed this for me, just as I told it to her. The snapshot was taken by Betty's father.

Snapshot of Jerry Hurley taken last Fall by his brother John. Jerry's farm is located on a mountainside, 8 miles from Wellsville, N.Y. (Post Office, Scio.)

DOUBLE-MONEY-BACK OFFER

as made to smokers since Oct. 6, 1935

TAKE a sporting chance on a pack of Double-Mellow Old Golds. Smoke ten of the cigarettes. If you don't say they're the finest you've ever tasted, mail the package wrapper and the remaining ten cigarettes to us, any time before May 1st, 1936, and we'll send you double the price you paid for the full package, plus postage.

Task of Harnessing Mighty Columbia at Bonneville Nears End

Great progress already made on the $31,000,000 Bonneville Dam, expected to be completed within a year, is revealed at a glance in this graphic airview of the huge Columbia river project. Already well under construction, as shown, is the main spillway dam, which will back up a huge, slack water lake, make the Columbia navigable as far inland as the Snake river, and provide much-needed water for irrigation. Foundations have been laid for the giant powerhouse, through which diverted Columbia waters will pour to generate power for nearby Oregon and Washington cities. Nearing completion, also, at right, is the world's largest single lift ship lock; and even fish elevators are being added to the main dam, so salmon can continue to leap up the river each year.

'No War,' Vow of Smiling Hirota

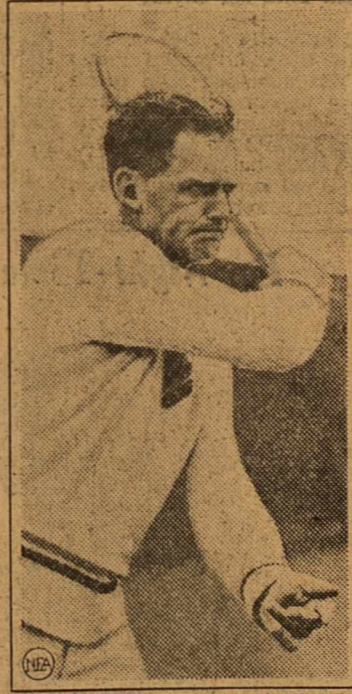

A smiling man of peace is Koki Hirota, Japan's new premier, shown here as he appeared at a window of his official residence. "There will be no war while I am premier," he announced in his first interview. Warned by the fate of other statesmen in the recent revolt, Japan is taking no chances of periling the life of its prime minister, as the armed guards below the window attest.

POYNTON TO WIN OLYMPIC POINTS

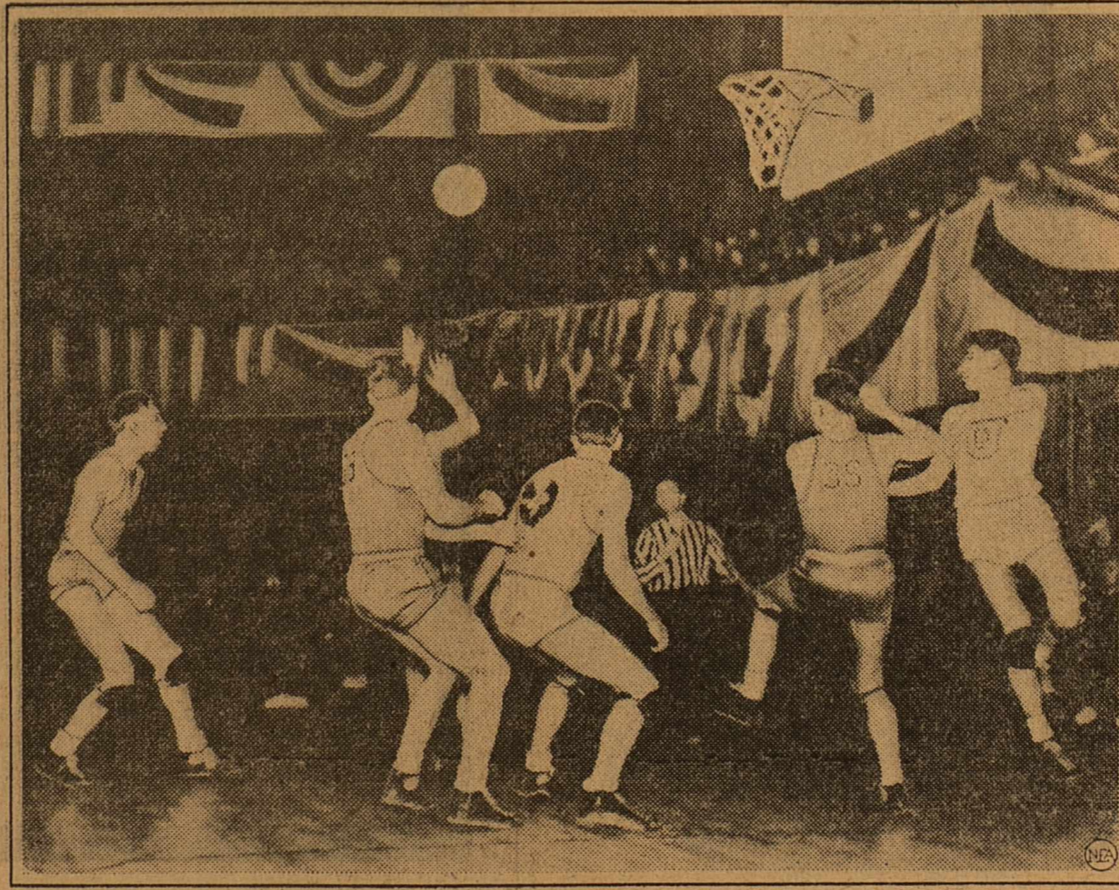

Pointing for the Olympics is Mrs. Dorothy Poynton Hill, who already holds the diving title in those games, having won at Los Angeles in 1932. Judging from a few of the fine points displayed in her diving, as shown above, and in her pulechitude, below, during a training session in Los Angeles, she should have little trouble in repeating.

As Easy as Flying for a Bird

Easy? That isn't the half of it. It's the softest kind of setup for pretty Dorothy Herbert, sitting nonchalantly without a hold on her soaring mount as he clears a 5 1/2-foot jump. Just let some of these fancy society riders try to duplicate the feat. But then that's Dorothy's act, which she's demonstrating before gaping onlookers at circus winter headquarters in Sarasota, Fla.

Here she is shown, at left, in the sprint finish which she made in 8.4; and at right, tossing the shot.

U. S. AND FARMERS REPORT WORK DONE IN DUST BOWL IS PROVING EFFECTIVE

Cooperative Projects Underway in Texas, Kansas and Oklahoma; Winds Not Cause of "Black Blizzards"

LIBERAL, Kas., March 30. (AP)—Forces of nature are triumphing over those of nature in slowly halting dust storms which have scourged three states the past two years.

In southwestern Kansas and the panhandles of Oklahoma and Texas men and machines, directed by the soil conservation service of the Department of Agriculture, are weakening the destructive elements.

Base of Kansas operations are placed near Liberal on a 25,000-acre tract known as Kansas project No. 4. In this area there are 74 farmers and 110 WPA workers directed by Fred J. Sykes of the soil conservation service. Approximately three-fourths of land owners on this tract have signed contracts with the government. They agree to cooperate and to cultivate their land in such a manner to prevent soil erosion.

"Farmers and WPA workers first must level off the land," Sykes explained, "by grading down the dust humps created by the black blizzards. On the level fields furrows, or lists, are plowed at right angles to the direction of the wind.

"Farmers have agreed to plant sudan grass, kafir and other long-stemmed crops in the spaces between terraces. When the crop is cut long stubble is left to catch and stop any dust which might be whipped by a strong wind."

Results Already Apparent

Visitors to southwestern Kansas already can see results of the work. In the fields which have not been treated, strong prairie winds lift the fine dust and loose soil into the air where it is carried distances varying from a few feet to hundreds of miles. In the fields where the tough crops have been planted the winds only move the soil a few inches at the most.

Sam Hayden, foreman of the WPA workers on the Liberal project, believes the work being done ultimately will be the salvation of the middle west's dust bowl.

Sykes believes the situation calls for highly scientific and technical study. He is convinced that the work alone is not responsible for dust storms.

Winds Not High

"The worst dust storms," he said, "occurred when we were in a low barometric pressure area. That seems to have happened almost invariably. I noticed there was no particularly high wind at all times but when the barometer was low the dust would blow harder than during high readings."

Louis Lemert, who owns 800 acres, was one of the first to sign the government contract. He insists all farmers must cooperate if the project is to be successful.

"Last year," he said, "virtually my entire crop was destroyed. The winds took the seed and crops as well as the dust. I can't put in a crop this year. I'm with the government all the way on this dust storm project."

Oklahoma project No. 9 consisting of 25,000 acres is north of Guymon in the Oklahoma panhandle, 43 miles southwest of Liberal, Kas.

241 Farmers Sign Up

It was started later than the Liberal project and numbers 241 farmers. It is in charge of Herbert M. Cabett, soil expert, aided by the agricultural department experimental station at Goodwell, Okla., eight miles below Guymon.

"Conditions here," Cabett said, "are similar to those around Liberal. Farmers are beginning to see results from soil terracing and planting of certain crops to stop dust storms. In another six months we will have the situation fairly under control."

At Dalhart, Tex., 100 miles south of Liberal in the Lone Star panhandle, a project began last year has shown amazing results.

In charge of B. H. Hopkins, this project has been terraced and graded to retain moisture. Farmers planted kafir and realized 15 bushels to the acre.

A stubble from 15 to 18 inches high was left when the crop was cut. This formed a wind breaker which stopped dust from blowing no matter how strong the wind.

Sudan Grass Planted

Several farmers planted sudan grass between the plowed furrows and allowed it to grow wild to act as a wind breaker.

"Down here," Hopkins said, "one can stand in the open spaces and spot the fields where wind breakers haven't been planted. When a dust storm begins to blow the haze is seen only over the open unplanted fields. Across a broad expanse there are clear breaks in the dust haze which means the winds are over ground that has been treated and therefore is falling to lift up dust.

"It's all a simple matter of vegetation and our task is to show the farmers what and how much to plant. When we get vegetation in the entire dust bowl our task will have been completed."

Farmers cooperating in the projects who have their own equipment are paid 20 cents an acre. Those without equipment are paid 40 cents an acre. The money comes from a $2,000,000 fund provided in the new soil conservation act. Approximately 60 per cent of the money was advanced to farmers before work started.

MEXICAN GOVERNMENT ALLOWS CHURCH MEMBERS TO RESUME THEIR PRACTICE

MEXICO CITY. (AP)—Catholics once more are being given opportunity to practice the religious creed professed by more than sixteen of Mexico's eighteen million inhabitants.

The government of President Lazaro Cardenas has decided to permit reopening of the many hundred churches closed early in 1935 at the height of an anti-Catholic campaign sponsored by the then Secretary of Agriculture, Thomas Garrido Canabal.

In the opinion of the Secretariat of Interior there was no legal justification of the action of state governors and local officials in closing the churches. Many of the governors took drastic steps against the church and individual Catholics because they believed Garrido had the full support of Cardenas in his campaign, and sought thus to strengthen their political standing with the president.

It appears, however, if Gen. Cardenas ever supported the anti-Catholic movement he has changed his mind. The president has stated his administration will avoid provoking any troubles with Catholics and promised that the Federal regulations regarding religion will not be exceeded.

In line with this promise churches closed by governors or other officials without a presidential order, are being reopened and turned over to the management by "committees of neighbors," although they remain the property of the nation. The order does not apply to churches which have been taken over for use as schools, libraries, government offices or similar purposes.

By its action the government appears to have brought about a considerable lessening of tension in the century old church-state conflict, but there still are many points of friction and laws strictly limiting religious liberty are in effect in many states.

These laws limit the number of priests allowed to officiate and the number of churches in which religious services can be performed. Federal statutes also prevent the church from owning property or operating schools, and provide for confiscation of property (except churches) where religious services are held or religious instructions given.

It is known that one of the government's motives in deciding to permit the reopening of churches was the hope the action would remove the opposition by Catholics to the official socialistic education program and that Catholics would willingly send their children to government schools.

For this reason several Catholic spokesmen have declared the Government's order was "nothing but a political maneuver."

"It is far worse from a Catholic standpoint to have to educate our children in the official schools than to have the churches closed," a spokesman for this group said pri-sanded perfectly smooth a backing of the nest linen cloth is glued to the surface and then the photograph glued to it. A crew of six men was required to handle each panel while the mural was under construction.

The mural itself tells the story of the progression of raw materials from the farm and the mine through the Rouge plant to form the parts from which Ford cars and trucks are assembled. Views are shown of the ships which bring iron ore, coal and limestone to the Ford docks on the Rouge river slip, blast furnaces, open hearth furnaces, the pouring of molten iron and steel, the rolling of great steel ingots into sheets and bars. Other views show the casting of cylinder block in the foundry, the machining of these blocks and the final assembly of the Ford V-8 engine; the great presses which form car body panels and the welding processes which unite these panels into a welded steel unit; various views of parts manufacture; manufacture of safety glass in the glass plant, and finally the final assembly line of which new Ford V-8 cars are driven under their own power.

The mural is the work of two photographers working in cooperation with Kaufman and Fabry. The enlargements forming the murals were made in their Chicago studios where utmost precautions were taken to prevent the rumbling vibrations of railroad and vehicular traffic from disturbing the huge camera used in the enlarging process.

Mural Will Depict Ford Plant Record

A great photographic mural depicting highlights in the industrial drama of the great Ford Rouge plant will form the central decorative display in the new Ford Rotunda building at Dearborn, Mich.

The Rotunda is the great central section of the Ford Exposition building at the World's Fair, Chicago, in 1934, which has been transferred to Dearborn and re-erected. It will be opened to the public early in May as a gateway through which tens of thousands of visitors will pass each year on tours of the Rouge plant.

The great photographic mural is 600 feet long and 20 feet high, occupying all of the upper half of the circular wall of the Rotunda interior. It is formed of 98 panels, each 30 feet high and six feet wide. The giant photographs, enlarged from surface of the panels is covered by pictures taken in or about the Rouge plant.

Each panel is formed of a welded steel frame to which masonry fibre board is affixed by screws. After the fibre board surface has been
