BEHIND THE SCENES

WASHINGTON

By RODNEY DUTCHER Reporter-Telegram Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—After modestly hiding its head under a bushel for many years, one of the great American industries is being dragged out into the light so that credit may be had where credit is due.

This is the business of industrial espionage, which experts of the National Labor Relations Board say has an army of somewhere between 40,000 and 135,000 men and women whose method of earning a living is to spy on and squal on those who ostensibly are their fellow workers.

Anyone who likes to read detective stories ought to get an earful of the hearings being conducted by Senator LaFollette. Day after day they are producing fascinating real life stories.

Amazingly enough, some of the "stool pigeons" themselves, now more or less reformed, have come on the witness stand to tell how reports the names of any he hears talking union organization and they're likely to lose their jobs forthwith.

Sometimes he gets to be a union official and helps double cross his "comrades" from the very inside. The detective agency assigns him a number and gives him elaborate instructions for making daily reports, so he won't be caught. Usually there are other spies to check up on him.

Occasionally the spy is caught and sometimes promises to work for the union and double cross his employer if the union men refrain from beating him up.

Many go into the business because it's the only work they can get.

Judging from the evidence, most employers who engage spies are satisfied if they can learn who the key men are in any movement to unionize their employees and to fire these keymen forthwith, at others, evidence indicates, have the union men beaten by agency thugs as a method of discouragement.

Many Have Crime Records. City officials have joined labor leaders in charging that agencies supplying spies and strikebreakers often deliberately create inflated pictures in the minds of employers. Assistant Solicitor M. Herbert Sime testified that in a recent roundup of strikebreakers in Philadelphia, 49 of 50 arrested were found to have criminal records.

He charged that detective agencies often schemed to keep employers and employees from getting together, let their profits be lost. Numerous attempts to "frame" union organizers by female operatives have been described to LaFollette, who hopes to obtain a full Senate investigation of labor spying.

Explains A. F. of L. Failure. Their stories make it easier to understand why the American Federation of Labor has made such a sorry failure of its attempts to organize workers. The labor spy enters a factory or mine and ingratiates himself with employees. He

What Has Happened Before:

Longfellow Deeds, pride of Mandrake Falls, inherits twenty million dollars, goes to New York and stands the city on its ear with his eccentric behavior. He refused to make up an $180,000 deficit for the opera, he goes on a binge with a famous author, feeds doughnuts to horses to see how long it will take the horse to ask for a cup of coffee, he helps the fire department extinguish a blaze and he orders social leaders who have assembled at his house for a party to get out so that he can keep a date with Babe Bennett, pretty blonde newspaper reporter that he has met. Longfellow does not know Babe is a reporter and has fallen in love with her. He cannot understand where the daily stories of his exploits are coming from. Babe, who has been posing as a stenographer named Mary Dawson to Longfellow, realizes that she has fallen in love with him, too, and is seeking desperately for some way to keep him from learning that she is the reporter who has labelled him the "Cinderella Man" and made him and civil liberties violations. Consumers Win Revolt. Alexandria, Va., where many Washington workers live, is celebrating victory in a consumers' revolt against plans of the Virginia Public Service Co. subsidiary of Associated Gas & Electric—whose head, H. C. Hopson, was chased, caught and made to testify as to his lobbying activities before congressional committees last summer.

New Dealers and newspaper correspondents living in the Virginia town led the fight against enlargement of a power plant which they asserted would seriously increase an already bad, smoke nuisance.

Chief U. S. Forester, F. A. Silcox, arbitrator in the recent New York elevator strike, was chief spokesman. President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, Edwin S. Smith, member of the National Labor Relations Board; Indian Commissioner John Collier, Admiral Percival S. Rosier; R. G. Bolling, brother of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson; and more than 50 others signed a telegram of protest to Hopson.

They invaded a city council meeting and promised to go back to candles and kerosene lamps if they weren't heeded. The company capitulated, submitting new engineering plans which it promised—in writing would eliminate smoke and cinders.

Now the "Kerosene and Candle Committee" as it calls itself, plans a crusade for lower rates. Washington, across the river, pays 3.9 cents a kilowatt hour, whereas Alexandria's rate is said to average around 7 1-2 cents.

"Pack my things, Walter," he said. "I'm going back to Mandrake Falls."

Cobb's face softened. "Gosh, pal, if I knew you were going to take it so hard I'd have kept my trap shut." Longfellow was about to speak when a commotion in the hall distracted them. The door burst open and a wild-eyed man came into the room, struggling with the butler.

"Lemme go!" he cried. "I wanna see him! I wanna see that guy! Lemme go!" He stared at Longfellow.

"There you are! I just wanna see what you look like—a guy that can spend thousands of dollars on a party when people are starving all around him! Cinders! I know how many families you could feed with the money you pay to get on the front page? Feeding doughnuts to a horse! Got a kick out of it, huh? Got a big laugh! Did you ever think about feeding doughnuts to human beings? No!"

"That's enough out of you," Cobb yelled, starting toward the man. He suddenly whipped out a gun and leveled it at Cobb. "Stay where you are, young feller." Cobb backed away and the man turned the gun on Longfellow.

"You're going to get some more publicity, Mr. Deeds. On the front page again, but I don't think you'll like it this time!" His voice rose hysterically. "See how much good your money will do you when you're pushing up daisies! Never thought of that, did you—you money-grabbing hick! Never thought about all the people who are starving—not able to feed their wives and kids. Not able to—"

The man's voice broke. He sobbed, staggered to a chair and, glancing down, saw the gun in his hand. Realizing what he was about to do, he dropped it to the floor where Cobb quickly retrieved it. "Oh, my God!" he cried. No one spoke and Longfellow looked at him pityingly. "Sorry," he mumbled. "I didn't know what I was doing. Losing your farm after twenty years—seeing your kids go hungry—standing in breadlines—I guess I went crazy for a minute." He looked up at Deeds. "You can call the cops now, Mister."

Longfellow continued to stare at him. "A reporter," he said and he went over to stare out the window. For the next week the newspapers in the country carried Deeds' name in bold headlines.

"LONGFELLOW DEEDS TO GIVE FORTUNE AWAY Huge Farming District to Be Divided Into Ten Acre Farms—Fully Equipped at a Cost of Eighteen Million"

"FINANCIERS SHOCKED BY AMAZING PLAN OF DEEDS" "THOUSANDS OF UNEMPLOYED STORM DEEDS HOME TO APPLY FOR FARM LAND"

The drawing room of his home transformed into a noisy, bustling office, Longfellow worked night and day talking to applicants, ordering farm implements, consulting with architects and farming experts. Neither Cobb nor himself had been away from their desks for more than a few hours at a time since Deeds' desperate visitor some days before. Cobb pleaded with Deeds to take his time but Longfellow would not listen. He wanted to finish everything as quickly as possible and get back to Mandrake Falls. Babe Bennett had tried to talk with him by telephone several times but Deeds would not talk with her.

Longfellow was sitting at his desk, munching on a sandwich and interviewing the long line of men waiting to see him. He was unshaven and his shirt collar was open. Three strange men pushed their way to the head of the line and approached Longfellow's desk. One of them spoke.

"Longfellow Deeds?"

"Yes."

"We've got a warrant for your arrest. You'll have to come along with us." Cobb jumped to his feet. "What are you mugs talking about?" he asked.

"I don't know nothin', buddy," one of the men replied. "All I know is the sheriff gimme an insanity warrant to execute."

"Who says he's insane?" Cobb demanded.

"The complaint is a relative of the late Martin Semple. Charges that Deeds is insane and incapable of handling the estate."

Longfellow laughed cynically. "That's marvelous," he said. "That makes everything complete. Just cause I want to give my money to people who need it they think I'm insane."

"Wait a minute," Cobb interrupted. "We want to get a lawyer. I'll call Cedar."

"Don't bother, buddy," he deputy sheriff said. "Cedar swore out the complaint. He represents the complainant. C'mon, Mr. Deeds, let's go."

Longfellow slowly rose and walked out with the sheriff's men, with Cobb trailing along behind them. (To be continued)

Will Rebuild Fort In Limestone County

AUSTIN, Texas.—Bids for reconstruction of old Fort Parker in Limestone County between Mexico and Groesbeck will be received by the board of control through its Centennial division, May 4.

An allocation of $10,000 was provided for the work. John V. Singleton, chief of the board's Centennial division, said the work would reproduce "old Fort Parker absolutely as it was."

Plans for the split-log recreation were prepared by the national and state park services.

The story of how Indians captured Cynthia Ann Parker from the old fort, established privately about the time Texas won its independence, has been widely told. The site is in a state park.

Haight's Dreams

I've told you before that it is impossible to determine where dreams come from. Where they go is equally mysterious. They just fade out. You have a beautiful dream in the night and smile when you wake up but you do not remember what it was about a half hour after you have shaved your whiskers off. Now back in the dark ages there was a four footed animal named Pegasus. That son-of-a-gun was caught by a gal named Minerva and she whaled the life out of him until he began to behave. Now Minerva was the goddess of invention, and she threw in wisdom along with the rest of what she was trying to do. Pegasus was a horse with wings and if you don't believe that just look at the weather vane that adorns Fred Wemple's place across from the Hotel Scharbauer. There whirrs Pegasus, rain or shine, mostly shine, but Peg, instead of pointing the way the wind comes from just whirrs and whirrs and if you can tell from which direction the wind hails you are a wizard, but Peg keeps on just the same so that he, she or it turns out to be an ornament instead of a utility. For a moment I should like to get back to Minerva, the goddess of invention, and refer to a contraption named in her honor that we have in our home and that is a vacuum cleaner. It is a vacuum but no cleaner. Now we'll go on from here. Minerva just does things in a hurry or rather done them in her day and time and she came to our house last Sunday to make her usual weekly clean-up. Sunday is used in our home as a day in which you can roll over and take another half hour in the arms of Morpheus. Well, Minerva came in and whanged things around and made so much noise that I woke up and yelled that she would have to take Pegasus out in the yard and tie him to a tree. Our colored girl says to my missus, "What's dat man o' yours yelling 'bout some kind o' horse? It don't seem to make sense." My missus says, "Don't pay any attention to him; just keep on mopping the floor. He'll come out of it."

What has become of the old-fashioned folks who believed: That if a picture falls from the wall it foretells a misfortune. That if a dog howls at night it means that there will be a death in the neighborhood.

That if your nose itches it's a sign that guests will arrive. That a good-looking child usually grows up plain.

That if you give a knife to a friend you will cut a friendship. That the girl who catches the bride's bouquet will be the next to wed.

That if the palm of your hand itches it is a sign you will receive money. That a man with thin, tightly-drawn lips is likely to be stingy with his money.

That getting out of bed on the wrong side makes a person irritable. That a June wedding is the happiest.

That if you spill salt, you can prevent bad luck by throwing some over your left shoulder.

That sitting at a table with 12 others will result in one of them dying within a year.

That if one accident occurs two others are sure to follow. That a man who does not look you in the face cannot be trusted.

That if you see a pin and pick it up, all the day you'll have good luck. That if two people accidentally say the same thing and then link their fingers together and make a wish, the wish will come true.

FEMININE FANCIES

BY KATHLEEN EILAND

It has come to our ears that we have been severely criticized for the emphatic disapproval we expressed in this column recently of the bringing of Billy Rose to Texas and his injection of the circus theme into the Centennial. We still think that the whole tone of the celebration is lowered thereby.

However, we do not begrudge anyone else the right to hold a diametrically opposite opinion.

The primary purpose of a column is to express those opinions and ideas which cannot be presented to the public otherwise than as personal beliefs, signed by the writer.

To anyone who thinks that we are unjust, carping, or just plain downright contrary in our beliefs, we offer the same privilege we possess of saying what he or she wishes to say in print if he signs his name to the article.

We shall be glad to print others' ideas of the Centennial in this column, if this rule is observed.

Days like Saturday make ice cream, dimity blouses, and toleasant sandals find favor in the public eye.

As a quick consumer of energy, we know of nothing more effective than sudden anger. Psychologists also list hate and other undesirable emotions as destructive forces. We're inclined to think they are right.

We hardly know which makes us feel worse after we've lost our temper—the fatigue brought by used-up energy or the feeling of shame because we lacked the self-control to conquer the anger.

CHICKENS

By "Pinkle" Cowan
 Chickens is animals which has two legs and feathers. They is good to eat if you like them, and you usually do. They have white feathers, red feathers, and black feathers, and some don't hardly have any feathers at all. These is the baby chicks which haven't grown much. Chickens is good to eat both before and after they is hatched. They eat seeds and grain and would eat worms, but the early bird catches them first. They stay in hen houses, that is if you have got a hen house, otherwise they stay in trees on limbs. They is more hens than any other kind of chickens. But they is usually a rooster, which crows.

PROGRAM IN OBSERVANCE OF SAN JACINTO DAY

On Tuesday, April 21, the Senior and Junior High Schools assembled for a joint program to commemorate San Jacinto day.

The entire group united in singing Texas songs. Billy Noble gave a declamation on "The Battle of San Jacinto", and Jack Walton recited "Texas, One and Indivisible".

The principal number on the program was an address by Mr. J. H. Williams on the battle of San Jacinto. He pointed out that this was one of the decisive battles of history, since it determined that the vast territories of Texas should come under the American flag instead of the Spanish flag. This decision is being passed as a model for W. H. Huddle's portrait of Gen. Sam Houston and sak "The Surrender of Santa Anna" in the making. Smythe roomed with Huddle for five years at Austin.

Search by the state historical commission for records to establish the state's title to the historic painting reminded Col. Smythe that Huddle "wanted $5000 for the finished picture."

"My understanding is the price was reduced to $4000," Smythe added.

"Then came another hitch," he explained. "The committee, acting for the state, discovered no likeness of Guy M. Bryan among the prominent Texans represented in the painting. Huddle had some dislike for Bryan and I remember him intimating he was inclined to decline the sale rather than put Bryan in." Smythe stated.

"When I next saw the painting it was in the rotunda of the capitol. The records of the comptroller's and treasurer's offices should show whether the $4000 was paid Huddle. Smythe said he saw many of his artist friends' paintings develop from the sketching of the canvas and several times was pressed into service to model for full-length figures. He "still feels the strain" upon his muscles representing a soldier shot and falling at the foot of the blasted pine tree in Huddle's painting "All quiet on the Potomac tonight."

He posed for Huddle's painting of General Houston representing him sitting in a chair. One hand held a heavy walking stick, the other Huddle's old white hat and a Mexican blanket across his shoulders. Huddle, scrupulous about detail and historical background, went to Matamoros, Mexico to get the correct blanket. The hat was Huddle's and was familiar to all his haunts at Austin, Smythe related.

Smythe said he was impatient sitting for that picture because he gave up his noon hour to aid the artist. It was at his suggestion, however, the painting was offered to the state.

U. S. WIDENS SCIENTIFIC ATTACK ON CRIME WITH SCHOOL TO AID POLICE

WASHINGTON, April 25 (UP).—J. Edgar Hoover, who erects the government army of G-men in pushing back the frontiers of gangland, reported today that America's first scientific police school is progressing successfully.

"I think the federal bureau of investigation training school for police is going to go a long way toward stamping out crime in the United States," Hoover declared. "Already we see the results of the training in the rapidly with which pupils have been advanced in their home states and cities after attending the school here."

It was several years ago that Hoover first thought of forming a municipal police in a federal school, he said. Before long, the idea was being transformed into a reality and now the school is an institution.

"You know, we started them last summer, and the first class graduated in October," he remarked.

First Class Had 23
 "There were 23 men in the class. We've kept in touch with them, since what's happened to them, since they left here, and in many cases, it's really an interesting story."

"Some of them came in as privates of their local police force. Some were lieutenants—sergeants, too. But what has interested me is the way they've gone up in the ranks since they left."

"A few, of course, have stayed in the same positions. But others—well, here's one man who came in as a private, and now he's chief of a police department. Only about six months, too, mind you."

"This particular man is E. W. Savory, who was a patrolman on the Petersburg, Va., police force when he came to the training school. Now, he's chief of the Henrico county, Va., police department. And don't forget Henrico county includes Richmond."

"I've a list of all the men in the school, and what they're doing today."

"The first couple are doing about the same thing as they were when they came in. But Charles R. Blake, who came to the school as a sergeant of the Rhode Island State police, now is in charge of an identification bureau and bureau of criminology for state police that was organized after he got back to his home."

"Then there's James C. Downs, who came here as a lieutenant of the Baltimore police. He's a captain now, in charge of the Baltimore police training school."

"Larry Goodrich, listed as an investigator—meaning plainclothesman—for the State of Florida when he entered the school, now is in charge of the Florida statewide police school. Morgan Naught, a patrolman in Elizabeth, N. J., followed in Mulcahy's footsteps. Now he is an instructor in the state-wide police training school."

Norman Purcell, a lieutenant in the Delaware state police force, became an instructor in the state training school after finishing the school.

C. W. Ray, a sergeant in the West Virginia state police force, advanced to a lieutenant as a result of his training. He is in charge of the identification bureau now.

"Clarence Smith," Hoover said, "was one of our prize pupils. He came in as a patrolman in the police department of Stamford, Conn., and now he's chief of the identification bureau. That's the way it goes. The second class left here a few weeks ago. We've heard that a few of them had been promoted already."

"Five of them—there were 24 in the class—who came in as privates have already been put in charge of local police training schools."

Allred To Make TCU Commencement Talk

PORT WORTH, Texas (AP)—Gov. James V. Allred will deliver the commencement address for the class of 1936 at Texas Christian University, June 1, President E. M. Waits announces. If weather permits the exercise will be held on the campus.

The baccalaureate sermon will be preached May 31 by Rev. F. M. Warren, pastor of the First Christian Church of Abilene. There are 75 candidates for degrees, an unofficial count by S. W. Hutton, registrar, shows.

Johnny Knowles of Houston is president of the graduating class.

The United States is the largest exporter of lumber and lumber products in the world.

beneficiary of bequests. McCurdy paid tribute to the activities of the ex-student council during the past year. This body has functioned more smoothly, efficiently and devotedly than any council the association has ever had, he said. It is significant that these men have attended seven meetings during the past year, paying their own expenses from all corners of the state, in the interests of the university.

Senators Sheppard and Connally, and Representative Milton H. West and John E. Mansfield, have advised the committee in charge they would endeavor to attend.

The Sports Horn

By JESS RODGERS

Seven hundred up, five hundred to go! That is approximately the standing of the committee seeking funds for the baseball club. The response has not been as spontaneous as had been expected in some quarters, in others it has been more so.

That old gag, "I have been hit up for so many donations lately that I simply do not have anything for you," but generally the response has been thoroughly acceptable. Donations have ranged all the way from one dollar to one hundred times that. A detailed list of all donors will be published within the next few days. Working in a public place as we are we wouldn't be allowed to suggest that those firms giving funds be favored then refusing, but...

"HONORABLE INTENTIONS"

The ones soliciting the money should adopt the saying, "Our intentions are strictly honorable," when asked what they are to get out of the organization of a club here. Those donating naturally are interested in knowing just where the money is going and they are not to be blamed for it. However, they can take the word of this department that all any of them want is the opportunity to assist in the starting of a club here. No financial return is being taken in by any of them for their labors. To the contrary, they are putting out money. If one goes into a drug store to ask for a donation he naturally asks for a drink first. It is much easier to talk to a man and get something out of him if he sees that he is getting something out of the one doing the asking. Darn glad they did not furnish me a list of dealers handling new cars. The list I have is hard enough to handle. A copy of will be mailed anyone sending a stamped envelope and a portable press box to use at the various sporting events around here.

GOOD NEWS!
Good News! All arrangements have been completed for the erection of a fence around the ball diamond if the money for a team is forthcoming. No team, no park. But acquisition of a team means that a park will be built, and that means that there will be about 75 per cent more people paying to see the games when they are in the stands hereafter. With no fence there would probably be more people to see the games, but the "take" would be about equal to what the United States collects in war debts from France and England.

More of the same! Once the news was circulated around that Midland was contemplating a team players started inquiring about the possibilities of coming here. Already more than enough men to make up a club (if they have the playing ability) have expressed a desire to come here. Complications might come from this. Two players at present time on another club in the Permian Basin League have sent word that they would come to Midland and play for less money than they are now making in order to be in a good town. READ THAT YOU TIGHTWADS, THEN START DIGGING. We have been trying to tell people here that a good club would add to the reputation of the city. Nothing can be done to prevent the men from coming here and playing if they are able to help the team.

To other towns in this district: The Midland club will not solicit any of your players, but can we help it if they would rather live here? PUBLICITY WHERE DUE

A word about Mrs. Hal Peck, state game commissioner who makes Midland her home, and who, by the way, is the only state department official of Midland. She is about as hard to talk to as a politician seeking office. Would that there were more people like her in the world. Most men would be led like a man on a trial, but not her. She anticipates questions and has the answers all ready. No wonder she got her picture in all the big town papers when she made a visit to Washington not long ago. Not only that but she was interviewed by one of the best, Lowell Thomas. The questions and answers were broadcast on a national hook up.

She has just returned from a meeting of the Game, Fish and Oyster commission held in Corpus Christi, and her report of it makes someone who pounds a typewriter each day really get "itching feet." All six of the commissioners were present, and she, incidentally, is the only young lady on the commission. All others, with the exception, are men with more dollars in their pockets and more years of life behind them than they like to count. The lone exception is an ex- (or maybe so at present) sports writer. The members were wine and dined (pardon, Mrs. Peck, I forgot to leave that "wined" part out) by Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Boyd, Coastal Division manager, in Corpus, and among other things was a session on the deck of the top floor of the Plaza hotel. Sea breezes—and in all probabilities, mosquitoes—were plentiful. More than 200 were in attendance at the meeting and it turned into a free-for-all argument among those present insisting that various methods were the best way to catch fish. Pole and line, commercial and sportsmen fishermen all insisted their way was the best. As it always has, the talks ended in a draw.

Several permits were asked to use nets in fishing along the coast but the buck on any possible ruling was passed to the attorney general's department. Just little cheap net-prices ranging between 10,000 and $30,000.

FINANCES FALTER

Proposed dredging around Corpus was postponed because financial difficulties of the organizations do not permit the buying of a dredge boat. Income of the organizations has taken a downward plunge by the federal government's regulation on waterfowl. In fact, the finances are so low that the commission is going to have to dismiss some employees. However, not more than 10 will be lopped off the more than 2500 now employed. Tom Grammar, game warden here, and so quiet that he makes the sphinx seem like a garrulous old woman, received much praise for his work. It was reported, one buck will get you two that Tom blushes when he reads this.

The next quarterly meeting of the commission will be held in Austin, in July, and at that time all field men will be called in for a school of instruction. Just a little idea of the commission's to let the men out in the wilds all the time know what is going on in the rest of the world.

The commission is also planning on bringing 100,000 quail into the state during the next year from Old Mexico, trapping the birds themselves. (Rather having employees of them trap them.) Here is one for you: The commission has to pay a duty of two peso on each bird brought into the state. Nice overlapping system of government, isn't it, we're having today?

From Corpus the commission visited the famed King ranch, the largest in the world. Santa Gertrudis, (get Mrs. Peck to pronounce it for you) the main headquarters, and a few outlying adjuncts cost the builders a mere two million and one-half, and I don't mean pennies, to build.

From the ranch the commission members went to Aransas for some real fishing. According to Mrs. Peck, the day was right, so was the wind, ditto the water and everything else but all the fish the commissioners were able to get were bought in a canning factory. Who says a fish has no sense of humor?

Only one more thing about Mrs. Peck before starting on something else—I do not like the way that parrot of hers says "Hello, Baby." She really should teach it to speak tenor!

The following was clipped from the "Speaking of Sports" column of Hal Sayles in the Abilene Morning News:

Kinder words for the home team probably would flow from the typewriters of the section's sports writers if athletic directors followed the action of major league clubs in providing comforts for the scribes in the press box.

In Cincinnati, for instance, the press box has been given an added touch of class in 1936 by the installation there of Marguerite, who pleasantly deals out sandwiches, cold drinks and hot coffee to the baseball writers free of charge, before, during and after the game. . . . Heated Races Loom For Harris County HOUSTON (AP).—Heated races for sheriff and district attorney in prospect and a greater number of qualified voters than in any previous year are expected to poll for Harris County a larger vote in the primaries this summer than any Texas County ever has registered.

Final figures compiled by the county tax collector showed the county's voting strength to be approximately 109,000, the largest in the state and an increase of about 25 per cent over 1934. Democratic leaders believe more than 60,000 of these will participate in each of the primaries.

T. A. Binford, sheriff for the past 18 years, is retiring. He and his deputies have started campaigning for Norfleet Hill, who became a deputy when the sheriff first took office.

E. H. Hammond, former Ranger captain and son of Frank Hammond, United States marshal, is another candidate for Binford's post. Police Chief B. W. Payne, George Peyton, veteran peace officer and head of the police homicide squad, and Charles W. McPhail, former police chief, are among others mentioned as possible candidates.

K. S. Barkley, who stated he would accept a third term as district attorney, will face stiff opposition. Kenneth McCalla, aggressive young legislator and former newspaper reporter, also has announced. Police Judge A. C. Winborn is said to be flirting with the idea of entering.

The Harris County vote in the first primary two years ago was almost 50,000 notwithstanding that Barkley had no opposition and the sheriff's race attracted little interest.

Another wide open contest here this year will be that for Congress. Rep. Joe Eagle is retiring to run for the United States Senate against Morris Shepard. Prominently mentioned as likely aspirants for his position are Mayor Oscar F. Holcombe, Albert Thomas, assistant United States attorney, and District Clerk J. W. Hills, veteran county official.

Heavy Drive For All-Sheep Feature Week

SAN ANGELO (AP).—A heavy drive for shorn yearling mutton sheep featured West Texas range livestock trading last week, ranchmen report. Prices ranged from 5-3-4 to 6-1-2 cents a pound for immediate delivery, the higher prices being paid for fat classes. Muttons for future delivery are bringing around 6 cents a pound. Some 10,000 are being taken daily by the large number of buyers in this region.

These sheep will be moved to northern feedlots, fed on corn and moved to markets by June 5 when the 1935 lambs officially become yearlings.

One of the biggest single deals of the year was the sale by Lew Rust of Del Rio of 12,000 shorn mutton yearlings to Dee Finley at 6-1-2 cents a pound. The first lot weighed out at 83 pounds and delivery will be completed by May 1. Rust said he sold them because the range was beginning to dry. Finley has bought about 35,000 mutton yearlings in West Texas for delivery during April, mostly at 6 cents a pound, he said.

Prosser and Martin of Del Rio sold 1,200 lambs they had on feed at 6-1-2 cents a pound. T. L. Benson of San Angelo bought 300 yearling muttons, delivery May 20, at 5-1-2 cents a pound. Ollie Cox of Nolan County sold 470 young ewes to L. A. Watkins of Eden for $4,000. L. D. Brooks of Big Lake sold 2,500 mutton lambs at 7 cents a pound, fall delivery, to a Northern feeder.

There is a demand for three and four year old cattle but no sharp demand for replacement cattle. The Bar-S ranch shipped 34 carloads of two-year-old steers and two-year-old spayed heifers to Wright and Baucus of Richmond, Mo. There were 803 steers and 395 spayed heifers.

P. D. Anderson is shipping out part of the 1,100 steers he has on feed at Quemado. The steers came from Louisiana and Mexico and Texas and are bringing up to 6 and 1-4 cents a pound, he said.

West Texas Turtles Shipped to Calif.

SAN ANGELO (AP).—A California food concern may furnish a market for thousands of turtles trapped in West Texas streams.

Ben Bunyard, who invented a turtle trap adopted by the state game department, has received an order for 100 pounds of Concho turtles as a "sample." The buyer wrote Bunyard he believed turtles here were about the same as those he had been getting in Louisiana. He said he preferred turtles under 10 pounds and few in this section weigh more. Bunyard is investigating the possibilities of making turtle eradication profitable as well as helpful in destroying a pest that kills millions of fish in West Texas yearly.

Walnut Shells Put to Use.

LOS ANGELES (AP).—The California Walnut Growers Association insists it has eliminated every waste in the use of walnuts. While the kernels are eaten the association has developed 15 different commercial uses for shells.

and beverages. In case of rain, there's ample space for typewriter work in the room.

The press room at Wrigley field in Chicago, like everything else about the park, is ultra-modern. There are spacious lockers available for the workers to store their typewriters and any other supplies overnight.

McGuffey Readers Still Held In Loving Memory Complete Century After First Publication

By G. A. PHILLIPS

NEA Service Staff Correspondent
Just 100 years ago, in Cincinnati, appeared the first of a series of little schoolbooks that, in generations to come, were to rank among the world's "best sellers."

These books brought lasting fame to their original author, and molded the minds and morals of more than 100,000,000 Americans.
McGuffey's Eclectic Readers the books were called. They made their debut in 1836, in little red school-houses of the middle-west, after the author, on April 28, 1836, had signed his first contract with Cincinnati publishers, agreeing to prepare four readers.

Into his readers, William Holmes McGuffey, a Miami University professor, had crammed nuggets of knowledge he had mined during years of hard study.
They presented classical gems, re-written proverbs, adapted fables, folklore, and myths, psalms, the cream of oratory and drama, fiction and history, and utterances of sage statesmen, and poets.

Taught Sound Lessons.
In them, too, were combined proper proportions of adventure, love, humor, and pathos; with perhaps an overdose on the subject of death and how properly to prepare for it.
Hardly a text in any of the books failed to emphasize some lessons in patriotism, honesty, politeness, courage, or industry.

From these volumes, frontier children and, later, their children learned that virtue always triumphed; that sin and evil inevitably were punished.

There was, for instance, the harrowing tale of Frank Brown. On his way to school, Frank met a bad boy, who tempted him to go down to the pond. Poor Frank went, fell in, and was drowned.

"Do not stop to play on your way to school," the lesson ended. "Do not play with bad boys."

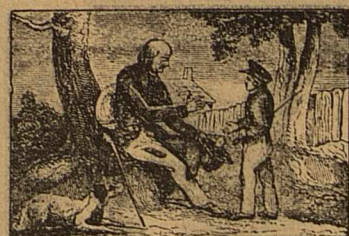

Truth, Patience Stressed.
Children of the McGuffey era knew that it paid to tell the truth. Didn't his honesty help George Washington get away with the cherry tree prank? And the story of the race between The Hare and The Tortoise taught them the value of patience.

This fable ended with the homely moral: "Plain, plodding people, we often shall find, will leave hasty, confident people behind."

As for bravery, there was the story of the Dying Boy who took two whole lessons to die during which he counseled and advised his family and friends. And, too, the tale about the young man who, single-handed, breached the solid Austrian line to let the Swiss break through to victory, then cried: "Make way for Liberty!" and died.

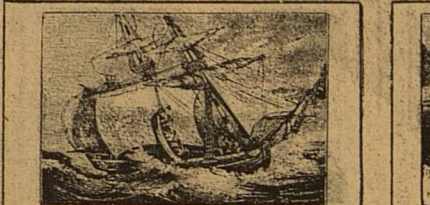

Another selection that began, "The lark is up to meet the sun, the bee is on the wing..." stressed the virtue of early rising. And still others warned against the depravity of robbing birds' nests, breaking girls' gone. Then Billy said, "We will save the rest to eat to-morrow."

12 But soon after, an old blind fiddler came into the yard. He had a little dog, tied with a string to lead him. The dog led him under a tree where the old man sat down. Billy saw that he looked very sad, and asked him what was the matter. The poor old man said he was very hungry, for he had had nothing to eat for a long time, and he could not work, as he was old and blind.

13 Then Billy went, without saying a word, and brought the rest of the cake, and said, "Here, old man—here is some cake for you." and he put it into the old man's hat. The fiddler thanked him, and Billy was happier than if he had eaten ten cakes.

QUESTIONS.—Why did Billy's mother send him a cake? What did he do with it? Why did Billy's mother send him a cake?

14 Take it all in, and a soldier's life is a very hard life. Our young friends owe a debt of gratitude to those whose home is upon the great waters, and who help us in our lessons in our country.

Just a few of the crude woodcut illustrations in one of McGuffey's Eclectic Readers, over which millions of children pored in the nineteenth century.

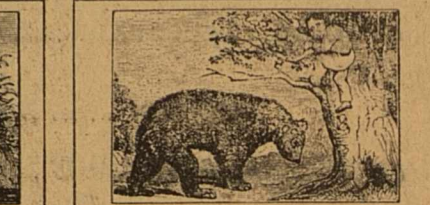

WILLIAM H. MCGUFFEY

OF THE ECLECTIC SERIES. 41
2 One fine summer's day, when they had finished their lessons, they took a walk through the long grass in the meadows. William began to blow the dandelions, and the feathered seeds flew in the wind like arrows.
3 But Edward said, "Let us tie the grass. It will be very good sport to tie the long grass over the path, and to see people tumble upon their noses as they run along, and do not suspect any thing of the matter."
4 So they tied it in several places, and then hid themselves to see who would pass. And presently a farmer's boy came running along, and as he tumbled, and lay sprawling on the ground, however, he had nothing to do but to get up again, so there was not much harm done this time.

5 At length, the bear, which was the most severely bruised, showing no signs of light, the young man rose and fled, leaving his boots and hat behind him.

6 Come, help me eat, I begged he cried. But the sturdy farmer thus replied: "After your tone, my little man, and that you're a bear, I can help you all I can."

of Courtesy, and a Wild Animal Displayed Pic-torially in McGuffey's Sec-ond Reader.

Warn of Rum Evil.
Even the matter of temperance wasn't overlooked. To quote Lesson XLII, McGuffey's First: "No little boy or girl should drink rum or whisky unless they want to become drunkards."
Lending to their effectiveness, early readers were illustrated with simple cuts of girls in pantalets and boys in roundabouts. Later, crude woodcuts depicted characters in the stories.
This was helpful to the youngsters; they then knew, for instance, that F R O G spelled that pop-eyed creature at which R A B, the dog, was looking.
In all, the McGuffey series of school books included a primer, a speller, and six readers. Alexander Hamilton McGuffey, brother of William, is credited with the speller, and the fifth and sixth readers.
The last edition of the readers was issued in 1901 and, within the next two decades, they almost disappeared from schools. Then there began a remarkable revival of interest in them.
Ford Joins Movement.
Moved by sentiment, men and women who had grown up with the readers began to form McGuffey societies and hold reunions, which by now have spread widely throughout the United States.
In recent years, Henry Ford has gathered in his Dearborn museum everything of historical interest he could find in connection with the readers and their authors, even removing from Pennsylvania the ruined log house in which William was born, and making reprints of the books.
In September, 1934, Mr. Ford personally dedicated a monument erected to McGuffey on the site of his birthplace near Clayville, Pa.
Son of a famous Indian scout, William Holmes McGuffey was born in 1800. His mother taught him letters, but had not enough money to send him to school.
Riding past the McGuffey home one day in 1818, a preacher heard a woman earnestly praying for education for her children. Charitably, he entered young William in the Old Stone Academy at Darlington, Pa.
Later, William chored his way through Washington College (now W. & J.), and tutored at a Paris, Ky., private academy.
Ordained by Church
At 26, he was named professor of ancient languages at Miami University, Oxford, O. A year later, he was ordained by the Presbyterians and, three years after that, was given Miami's chair of mental philosophy. It was then he began writing his four famed readers.
Though McGuffey's writings later achieved a total sale of 122,000,000 copies, they did not make him rich. His publishers, Truman & Smith Co., of Cincinnati, paid him 10 per cent royalty on all copies until the sale reached $1000. But the firm later established an annuity for him.
After William McGuffey left Cincinnati, the fifth reader (The Rhetorical Guide) was written by his brother, Alexander. From this material came the fifth and sixth readers.

$1138 Cash Income For Resettlement of Farmers Expected

Living expenses will be less than $20 a month in cash for the family raising one of the fertile, well-equipped farms which have been authorized by the resettlement administration for 5533 landless Texans. But $558 worth of home grown products will be used each month, and the family's living standards will be more satisfactory than those of city families with cash income much higher.

The resettlement family will have running water in its bathroom, and perhaps electric lights, the same as the city family. But it will also have what the city family does not—home grown hams in its pantry, long shelves of home-packed fruits and vegetables, poultry and fresh eggs and butter of its own raising. Meanwhile, it will be acquiring ownership of its own home, at cost no greater than renting a worn-out farm with a tumble-down cabin.

A typical plan as worked out by resettlement is for a 71-acre farm in the Harris County project announced last week. Out of its home-grown products, the family on this farm will eat 20 bushels of potatoes, and garden and orchard products valued at $75. It will use 25 bushels of home-grown cotton seed for planting, and feed to livestock 500 bushels of home-grown corn and seven tons of Sudan. The value of the 15-acre home pasture for livestock is estimated at $70. Livestock products used at home include 200 pounds of butter, one calf, three pigs, 25 hens and 200 dozen eggs. Crop and livestock products used at home have a combined value of $695 per year, or $58 a month.

The family will need to put out only $225 in cash during the year, for living expenses—food $80, clothing $75, supplies $10, furnishings and equipment $20, housing upkeep $30, medical care $15, personal items $15. In addition, cash expenses for operating the farm will be $416. This covers feed $36, fertilizer $35, containers (for home grown food) $30, machinery repair $20, hired labor $75, seed $35, veterinary $10, taxes $60, insurance $15, ginning $35. It will be noted that the item for automobile is charged by the resettlement administration in necessary operating expenses, the administration not voting with those who advise the farmer to "take the tires off his car and put them under the bed."

Adding the $225 a year for cash living, and $416 for cash operating expense, cash outlay of the family buying this 71-acre resettlement farm is estimated at a total of $641. This is more than the average farm family in Texas takes in during the year, but resettlement families are being placed only on the best land, and the farm management program is based on practices which return more income per acre than most farmers have been able to earn in the past.

After figuring what he needs at home it is estimated that the resettlement farmer will sell seven bales of cotton for $350, three tons of cotton seed for $60, two tons of Sudan hay for $18, 90 bushels of peanuts for $85, 200 bushels of potatoes for $150, 12 tons of cabbage for $50, 25 fryers for $10, five hogs for $50, one calf for $10, one colt for $40, 500 pounds of butter for $125, and 700 dozen eggs for $140. It will bring him $1138 cash. Out of this, he will have to pay the $641 cash for living expenses and farm operation. Then he will hand the resettlement administration $315 as annual installment on the farm, which will own it in 40 years. For five years, he will pay $75 a year to clear up the debt for livestock and farm machinery. Even then, he will have left $117 cash in bank.

The projects recently authorized include 200 farms in North Central Texas, 93 in the Wichita River Valley, 120 in Harris County, and 120 (for negroes) in Harrison County.

ents and county advisory committees are being selected as prospective purchasers. Additional projects are under consideration.

Finishing Auto Sheet Steel

GLASS-SMOOTH ROLLS, enormous pressure and accuracy measured in thousandths of an inch are used in the new cold finishing mills of the Ford Motor Company to prepare sheet steel for manufacture into Ford V-8 bodies. This photograph shows the highly finished sheet steel coming out of the last stage of the mills. The workman is watching an automatic gauging device which may be seen at the left of the ribbon of steel. If the gauge shows any variation from the proper thickness of metal he adjusts the rolls to correct it. The enormous energy expended in cold rolling the tough steel generates so much heat that it is necessary to spray a cooling soda fluid over the metal. From the fluid, steam rises as it strikes the moving ribbon of steel. Since the recent start of production in the cold finishing mills, the Ford Rouge plant at Dearborn, Mich., is now manufacturing automobile sheets through all the steps from the iron ore, something done by no other automobile manufacturer.

Bond Regulations Urged By Professor

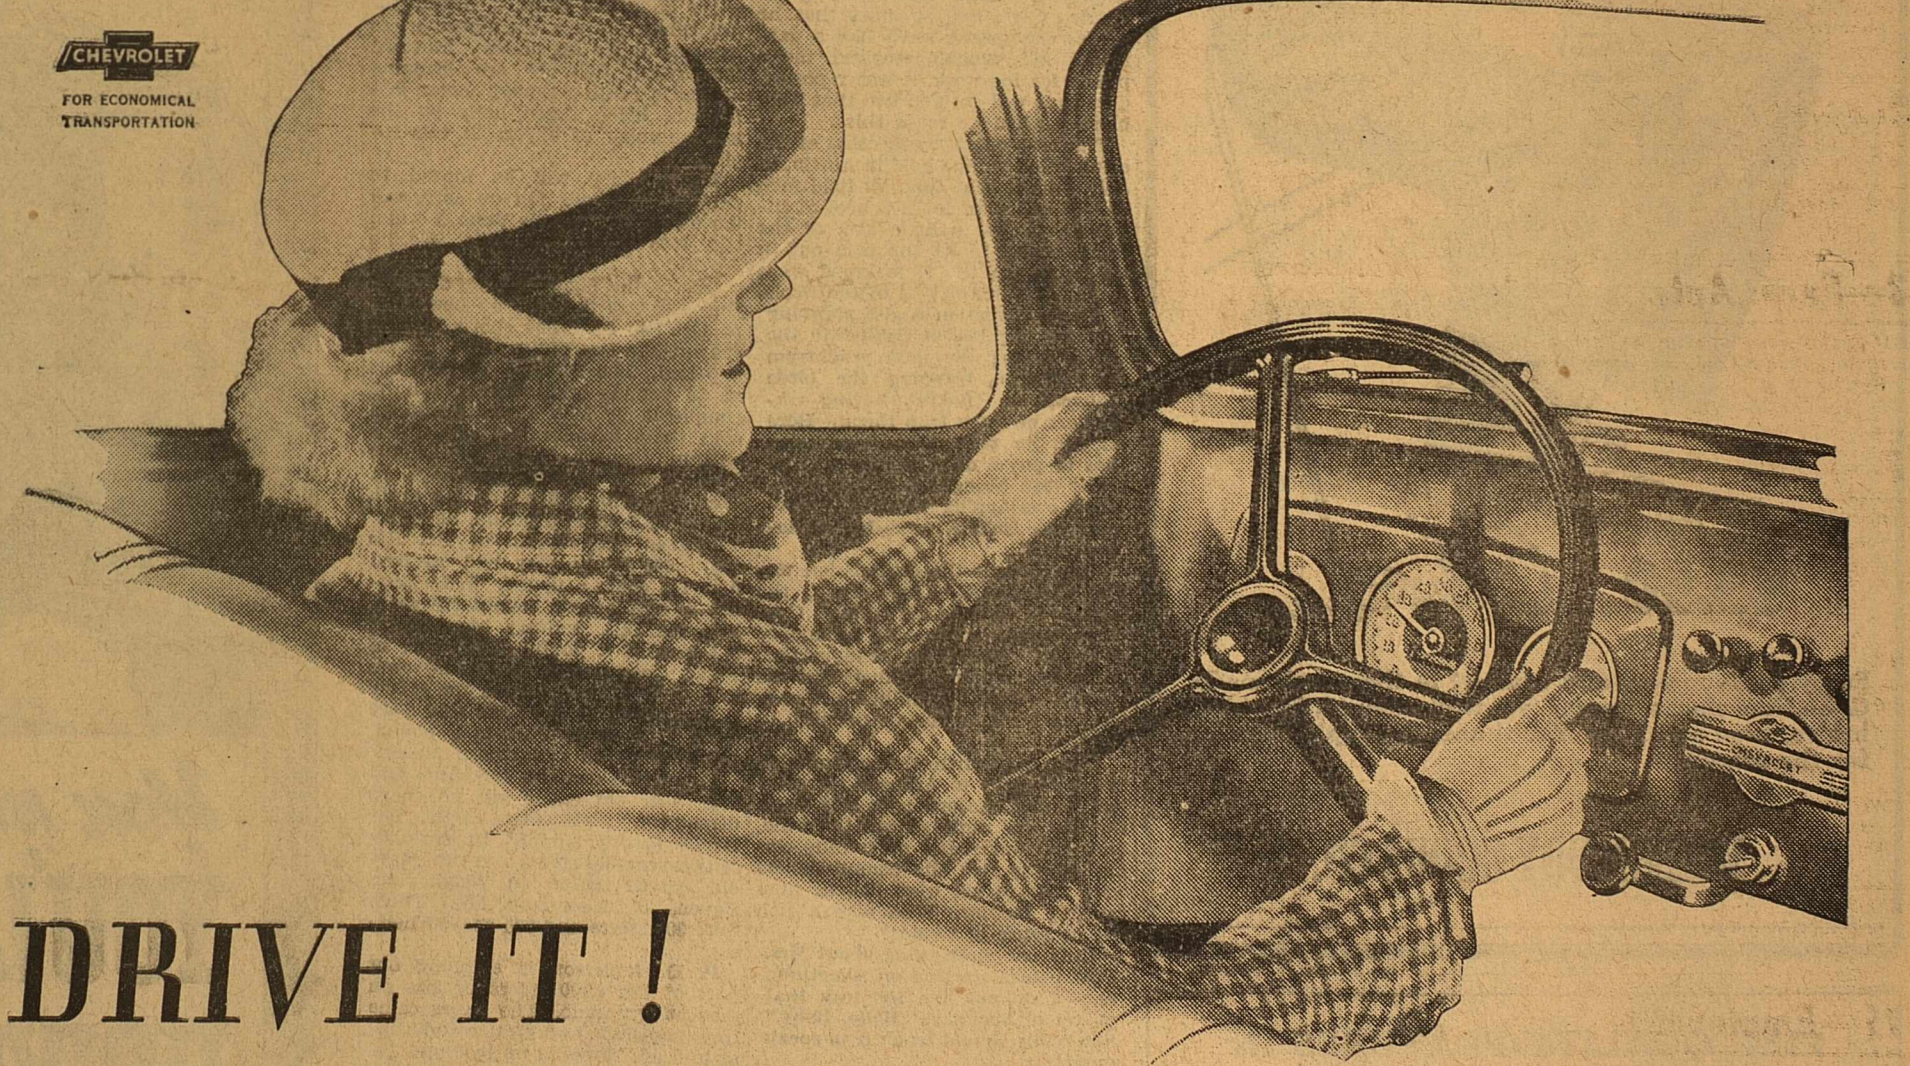

AUSTIN (AP).—J. T. Barton of the University of Texas, bureau of municipal research recommended sharp reforms in Texas municipal bond regulations to protect various interests involved.
Without certain changes said Barton, research assistant in "a debt administration manual for Texas cities," a considerable volume of Texas securities faced ineligibility as investments by New York savings banks.
Conditions arose from a Texas statute limiting a maximum tax rate which may be levied, Barton said, it served "only indirectly to control local indebtedness," and advanced debt limitation as preferable.
Instead of acting to guarantee payment, he said, it served to impair fundamental resources for retirement of general obligation securities. A result was lowered marketability of municipal obligations and increased rate of interest.
New York state statutes governing investments of funds by savings banks were cited as the "most significant example of the effect." A provision specified that no municipal instrument of indebtedness issued after 1933 should be an authorized investment for savings banks unless the municipality held power to levy taxes unlimited in rate or amount on taxable real property.
"In 1933 a considerable volume of Texas securities will become ineligible as investments for New York savings banks," Barton said, "unless a constitutional amendment is enacted which will make it possible for cities to levy unlimited taxes on real property for retirement of valid debt. Such an amendment should, of course, be accompanied by a limit on the amount of municipal indebtedness."
Barton proposed that indebtedness should be limited to a definite proportion of taxable valuations, for "local governments are likely to overbond themselves if no restriction is placed on the amount of debt which may be assumed."
Debt limitation preferably should be based on the average valuation for several years rather than on the valuation of the preceding year. Recommended provisions would limit not only the total amount of funded debt but also would include various special restrictions.

"Texas taxpayers would be benefited greatly," Barton said, "the issuance of time warrants were prohibited except in time of disaster or grave emergency. Further, the refunding of time warrants into bonds should be made illegal in order to stop the increase of bonded debt without official sanction by taxpayers."
Overlapping debt, raising "the most complex" problem of local indebtedness confronting the legislature, he said, arises from too many special districts having been formed "as promotional schemes rather than as jurisdictions to serve the debt interest of the taxpayers." Barton suggested their consolidation.
Administrative control over municipal indebtedness, if adjusted to local needs, Barton said, "has much to commend it." Such control would not be "necessarily either distasteful in kind or oppressive in character." While other states have such regulation, Texas methods "evidence a tenuous and random rather than a closely knit and highly centralized system of control."
He predicted state administrative control would increase and it was "hardly to be questioned" that establishment by a bureau of municipal finance by Texas "would work to the advantage of both the state and the taxpayer."
Barton believed the bureau would serve its purpose best as a division of the comptroller's department.

Ship First Onions From Raymondville

RAYMONDVILLE (AP).—The first water-borne shipment of Willacy County onions was taken out of Port Isabel harbor aboard the steamer Texas Trader recently. It comprised 12,000 fifty-pound sacks for the New York market. With the shipment by water, the first in the history of onion production here, the crop has been handled by four forms of transportation, rail, truck, air and water.

In "Country Doctor" at Yucca

Featured in "The Country Doctor", Fox picture in which the Dionne quintuplets make their dramatic debut as feature-length film stars, are Jean Hersholt and Dorothy Peterson. Darryl F. Zanuck personally supervised the production of this story, which blends drama, comedy and romance in the saga of a backwoods doctor. It is now showing through Tuesday at the Yucca.

False Alarm Shows Police Efficiency

AUSTIN Texas (AP)—The false alarm which sent heavily armed operatives of the public safety department hurrying to protect the state treasury recently recalled what apparently was a real raid of many years ago.

Considerable mystery surrounds the reported robbery of the treasury in Civil War days and the facts never have been established. One story is that the raiders really were not robbers but patriotic citizens seeking to save the state's money from advancing troops of the federal army.

Carefully preserved in the archives is a copy of the Houston Tri-Weekly Telegraph which carries the following account:

"A gentleman from Austin who arrived here yesterday, states that on last Sunday night, some 12 or 15 men broke into the state treasury building at Austin and broke open the safes, robbing them of about $17,000 in gold.

"They discriminated, leaving all silver. They were unable to get into the vaults where most of the treasure is kept.

"As soon as they got in, the alarm was given and citizens assembled under arms and proceeded to the rescue. On their approach the robbers decamped. The citizens fired upon them, mortally wounding one."

The present-day treasury is better fitted to resist depredators than at the time of the Civil War, but it has more reason to be with many more billions of dollars in cash and securities on hand.

It's organization is much like a bank. Employees who handle valuable work behind barred doors and windows. The main vault dates from about the time the capitol was built, but a fine new one is nearing completion. Burglar alarms connect with the public safety department. Down the hall a short distance is the headquarters of the Rangers. At night two watchmen — students at the University of Texas — are on duty within the offices.

Mrs. Hollingsworth Gives Strawberry Preserve Recipe

With strawberry season now in swing, Midland housewives will turn their thoughts and efforts to producing those luscious preserves which make the family heave anticipatory sighs of pleasure when they are brought to the table.

Mrs. Lura Hollingsworth, county home demonstration agent, gives the following recipe for preserves—and backs it up with a sample of such delicious-looking aspect that, one almost calls aloud for hot biscuits and butter to accompany them forth with.

Strawberry Preserves
2 cups sugar
1 cup water
Boll until it spins a thread
Add 2 cups berries. Let come to boil. Boll gently 10 minutes.
Add 2 cups more sugar and 1 cup more berries. Let come to boil and time 10 minutes longer at gentle boil.
Pour in shallow pans and let cool.
Place in sterilized jars and seal.

46 States Interested In Texas Centennial

AUSTIN, (AP)—National advertising in the Texas Centennial, if an initial tabulation of replies was a criterion, attracted most interest in New York state.

Advertising directors of the Centennial commission forwarded the board of control its first list, showing names of about 4600 persons in 46 states, the District of Columbia, Canada and other foreign countries, who asked information concerning Texas birthday party.

Ten pages were required to give the names of persons in New York who responded to the advertisements. Texas replies were not listed. Illinois ranked next with more than seven pages and Pennsylvania next with six.

Other replies came from Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Dakota, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

John V. Singleton, chief of the board's Centennial division said the list was compiled soon after the national campaign was started and the number of replies had been multiplied subsequently many times over.
