State Crime Chief Places Men In Hunt

SEMINOLE, Okla., July 6 (P)—State and county officers in all parts of Oklahoma conducted an intensive search Sunday night for a Shawnee ex-convict and his companion, wanted for questioning in the brutal slaying of Chris Whitson, 52, Seminole policeman, shot to death at a tavern near here last Saturday.

Col. Charles Daley, head of the State Crime Bureau assigned four state operatives to the case, declaring the killing "the most cold-blooded murder in the recent history of Oklahoma."

Governor Marland offered a reward of $500 for arrest and conviction of the slayers. They were to be turned over to the State Bureau or Seminole police if captured, the reward proclamation provided.

An additional $100 reward was offered by Chief of Police Jake Sims of Seminole.

"If necessary I will turn the entire State's force loose on this case," Daley said. "The men we seek lives in Shawnee and is a three-time convict. We do not know who his companion is yet."

Whitson was shot five times as he approached two men in an automobile stolen at Shawnee Thursday night. The driver of the car stepped out at Whitson's order. Whitson opened the door on the other side of the car and the driver's companion began firing.

Daley said the desperadoes still were believed to be driving the stolen automobile, a newly-painted 1936 sedan. The license number, 385-610, was believed to have been changed to 385-611 by beating the "O" into a "1," Daley said.

Midland Sponsor Second at Cowboy Reunion, Stamford

Cowden's "cutting" horse, Cricket, she gave excellent exhibitions of riding upon every occasion. Last year she won fourth place in the same contest.

Midland citizens attending the Stamford rodeo were told that Miss Cowden easily was in the lead for first place until her last ride when the horse bumped one of the barrels around which the figure-eight galloping was done, knocking it over. The one misfortune apparently prevented her winning the prize saddle. Miss Louise Purdom, Stephenville sponsor, won first place.

After a brief shutdown while drilling another water well, operations are scheduled to be resumed tonight on the Hargrave test. Present total depth is 1,340 feet in red sand.

Second Highest List Ever Recorded in The Nation

(By Associated Press)

The nation's dead for the July fourth holiday today was listed at 441, the largest independence day fatality list since 1921 when 483 died. Texas had 20 dead in motor accidents and four from drowning.

The effectiveness of safe and sane precautions was shown particularly in New York City, where hospitals treated 300 persons for fireworks burns, compared with 2,500 last year.

The automobile also appears to have been a less efficient engine of death than in other years. The National Safety council, basing its expectations on records of past holidays, had anticipated 600 fatalities from all causes, with motor vehicles accounting for at least half.

The low death toll from traffic was attributed in great part to a wide-spread campaign, featured in newspapers throughout the country, to warn the traveling public and pedestrians of holiday danger.

While the fatality toll was low, injuries from all causes were numerous. Holiday liquor consumption sent many to hospitals and killed three in New York. Shootings and stabbings were common.

Four persons were killed in an automobile collision at De Kalb, Ill., one machine wrecked so completely, it had to be cut apart to extricate the bodies.

Thousands saw two men trapped aboard a fireworks barge which caught fire at Lexington, Mich., burn to death. A boy tossed a giant firecracker into the lap of Marie Dunn, 6, at Chicago and she died of burns. Another large firecracker killed a boy at Washington.

PRECIPITATION IN CITY 2.38 SINCE LATE YESTERDAY

Amounts Range From Downpours To Showers

1:52 AT AIRPORT

Entire County Gets Much Needed Moisture

With a total of 2.38 inches of rain having fallen in Midland since Sunday afternoon, crops for the county were practically "made," it was reported by agriculturists today.

The rains fell at a most opportune time, although, some of the feed crops had already been lost. Cotton and other crops were expected to be able to go ahead and mature regardless of whether more moisture is had or not.

The rains were general over the county, all sections reporting precipitation ranging from showers to downpours. The airport, nine miles west of town reported 1.52 inches. Country between there and town reported a noticeable increase all the way into town.

The downpour in the city limits Sunday and today brought the year's total to 7.32 inches, according to the government gauge at the Southern Ice and Utilities Co.

Rainfall by the month in Midland is as follows:

January	1.10
February	None.
March	4.40
April	.90
May	2.54
June	1.00
July	2.38

Most reports received today were based on Sunday afternoon's down-pour, some of the sections receiving further precipitation during the night and this morning.

Rain fell all the way from Dallas in a north-easterly direction, tourists said. Rain fell from Sterling City southward to the flood district in south Texas. It was lighter from Sterling City to Big Spring, covering all the distance to Midland, however. Ranchmen south and south east of Midland reported the rain lighter than was recorded in town.

To the northeast, ranches twenty miles from Midland reported good rains. However, due north and northwest the rain was lighter, especially on the Andrews road about ten or twelve miles out. Some rain fell from Seminole to Andrews and a few miles toward Odessa Sunday night.

Motorists reported rain from 15 miles south of Odessa on into Midland.

Farmers had lost approximately twenty per cent of the feed crop which had been up to a stand, the surveying agricultural agents reported, before the rain fell. Sunday's rains, covering practically all of the farming territory, were expected to revive much of the feed also making it possible to plant late crops of cane, sudan and milo.

Crops were recommended as the surest crop for the short growing season left, however.

Midland streets ran like rivers for more than two hours Sunday afternoon, following a downpour in which 1.38 inches of rain fell between 4:30 and 5:30 clock. Drainage taxed the capacity of barrow pits and ditches along the highway leading eastward from the city, causing Front street, also a section of Wall and Texas to be under water which was over the running boards of automobiles. Several cars were drowned out, some from the rain and others from driving thru the deepest portions.

Several streets, while water reached the tops of curbs, were level with water on the pavement.

Following closely on the heels of a sandstorm from the north, the rain quickly relieved the dusty air.

NATIONAL LEAGUE CLUB WILL HOLD ADVANTAGE IN PITCHING WHEN BIG GAME OF YEAR IS OPENED TUESDAY "Dizzy," Hubbell, Mungo, Warneke And Curt Davis Give Grimm's Team Advantage on Mound

(This is the second of two stories on the major leagues' all-star game at National League Park, Boston, July 7.)

BY HARRY GRAYSON Sports Editor, NEA Service BOSTON—Pitching is 75 per cent of baseball, which is why the Nationals must be given an edge over the Americans in the 1936 edition of the majors' all-star game at National League Park, here July 7.

With a different attitude toward the contest after three consecutive defeats, the Nationals plans to have their five finest flingers ready. As though the fans did not give him a sufficient advantage in electing Dizzy Dean, Hubbell, Mungo, and Warneke, Manager Grimm made it certain that there would be no shortage of pitching effectiveness by adding the right-hander who came to the rescue of his Chicago Cubs, Curtis Davis.

While the Americans' chucking corps sounds impressive, it does not at this time compare with the blow 'em down boys named to churn for the elder wheel. Bob Grove is to open for the junior leaguers against Dean, Lonacning Lefty came back like a bad check in 1935 and launched the current campaign auspiciously, but has been little more than a big name recently.

American League Pitchers Just Big Names

Vernon Gomez did not permit the Nationals to become frisky in Cleveland a year ago, and Mel Harder was equally efficient when he stepped in for the last three rounds. But Gomez, who started all three previous all-star engagements hasn't had too much luck this season, either in the sunlight or moonlight when with the trunk offices trailing him and one thing or another, Harder hasn't been nearly as handy with the handcuffs as he has in the past.

Schoolboy Rowe's arm has been a mystery running to extremes. While Mel Pearson already has won more games for the Yankees than he bugged for the Indians during the entire 1935 season, the California remains a very definite risk in an important assignment.

With Gomez having yet to demonstrate that he packs all of his former weariness, little Tommy Bridges, rated off his present form, is the best money pitcher at the beck and call of Manager McCarthy, who so wisely chose him.

Foxx Again Likely To Switch To Far Turn

With Gabby Hartnett catching the entire game, as Charley Grimm says he will, the Nationals have the jump back of the plate, too.

The chances are that McCarthy will employ Bill Dickey for no more than three innings, inasmuch as the tall Yankee receiver is so susceptible to injury. McCarthy, acting for the incapacitated Mickey Cochran, drafted Rick Ferrell to work with Grove and also has Rolly Hensley, who took care of the complete chore a year ago, but who this season has had his old trouble with discipline.

The Nationals require this superiority in pitching and catching, for their team batting average is .307 against .334 for the Americans.

Young Stuart Martin and Joe Medwick of the Cardinals are the only Nationals with batting marks comparable to those of the members of the murderers row assembled by the American League—Gehrig, 338; Radcliff, 373; DiMaggio, 364; Appling, 364; Gehringer, 364; and Foxx and Averill, 343 each.

With Foxx again likely to play third base, the Americans' infield will be the smoother defensively, if anything, and pack vastly more power, with Gehrig at first, Gehringer at second, and Appling and Crossetti at shortstop.

THE STORY OF Emperior The King Steps Out FRANCHOT TONE Adapted from the German version by arrangement with Columbia Pictures What Has Happened Cissy, Princess Elizabeth, in an effort to rescue her sister, Helena from having to marry Emperor Francis Joseph, ruler of Austria, whom they never have seen, goes to Hellbrunn, seat of the summer palace, with Duke Max' her ineffectual, beer-drinking father, Max is afraid of his sister-in-law, the Dowager Empress, who rules her son, the Emperor, with an iron hand. It was she and Max's wife who engineered the betrothal, which is to take place on the Emperor's twenty-sixth birthday, the following day. Cissy, in the guise of a dress-maker, comes to the attention of the Emperor, who falls in love with her. Dressed as a second lieutenant, the Emperor, in answer to Cissy's taunts that he's tied to his mother's apron strings, steals out of the palace and escorts Cissy to the carnival the village is giving in honor of his birthday. Mingling with the crowd, the Emperor is suddenly rudely shoved by a rowdy fellow, whom Francis is now ready to fight.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER FOUR Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria did not get the chance to sock the troublesome roughneck. For in a flash the fellow was whisked into the mob that had gathered around in anticipation of the impending hostilities. Francis looked around in amazement. What had happened to his opponent? He was nowhere to be seen. Secret service men, who had closely followed the incognito Emperor, had sent the rowdy on his way in short order.

Cissy laughed, and told the disappointed Francis that he would just have to find someone else to express his new-found manhood on. At a shooting gallery, Francis made an almost perfect score, and was awarded with a tiny statue of himself. He proudly handed the prize to Cissy.

"Not bad," she admitted, "considering." "Considering what?" asked the Emperor. "I thought I did pretty well."

The shooting gallery attendant learned over the counter. "Now what about letting the lady shoot?" Cissy timidly picked up the rifle, aimed, and fired rapidly. "A perfect score!" cheered the Barker. "The lady should join the army! Here you are—first prize."

"What's that?" asked Cissy. "The Emperor's mother," replied the Barker. Francis and Cissy exchanged amused glances.

They went from one concession to another, having a merry time and revelling in each other's company. They darted hither and thither, in an effort to shake off Francis' bodyguard. Finally, they succeeded, just as Francis came face to face once more with the roughneck he was about to fight a while back.

"Well, well," said the Emperor cheerily, "my long lost friend!" The rowdy jammed an elbow into Francis' stomach. The young ruler reeled. In a moment he recovered, stepped up to the bruiser and shot a terrific right hook to his jaw. The man went down like a bag of salt. Francis grinned triumphantly as he and Cissy slipped off into the crowd, leaving the "nerf" form of the roughneck to be found by several startled secret service men.

Cissy and Francis were waltzing rapturously in the dance hall as midnight approached. Suddenly, as the hour struck, the music stopped, and a trumpet blared commandingly. A man climbed onto the dais at the end of the dance floor, holding aloft a mug of beer.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he shouted, "it is twelve o'clock! It's the Emperor's birthday!"

All the dancers cheered mightily, and the band swung into the national anthem, "God Preserve Our Noble Emperor." Tears started in Cissy's eyes as she joined in singing the sentimental song.

As the singing ended, the man on the dais shouted: "And tomorrow he chooses his bride! Three cheers for the future Empress!" Cheers, applause, and shouts greeted the announcement; then the band began playing waltz music once again.

"Think how disappointed they're going to be," mused Francis, half aloud, as he waltzed off with Cissy.

The following morning, the anniversary of the Emperor's birthday, found the Dowager Empress Sofia in a happy frame of mind. She was standing at the window of her sitting room as Baron Herlicka entered.

"Good morning. Your Imperial Highness," said Herlicka. "Let me congratulate you on your son's birthday—a day that will forever do you honor."

Sofia was pleased. "Charming of you, Herlicka." The tolling of bells came through the window. "I hope the bells won't waken my son. I want him to sleep a little longer today."

A roll of drums stormed into their ears, followed by the Imperial fanfare. The Empress very much distressed, looked out of the window to see what all the disturbance was about.

"What's that?" she exclaimed. "They'll awaken him. Who are they saluting at this time of the morning?" Suddenly she screamed, "Herlicka!"

The Baron jumped to the window and stared out. What he saw was the Imperial Guard turned out to greet a young second lieutenant, slumped sleepily in the back seat of a ramshackle cab.

"Do I see correctly?" asked Sofia, "Is that the Emperor?" Herlicka wet his lips before replying. "Beyond a shadow of a doubt."

Rain guessers were hard to get together yesterday. Two boys in our office put up a cup of coffee a piece, one guessing 2.25 and the other .87. The Sunday total was 1.83, so it looks like both of them were pretty far off. However, the high man was in a fair way of reaching his total, it looked like when I was writing this paragraph.

I hope it rains so much that mosquitoes will be generated. Not that I like mosquitoes, but we sure do need the rain. Up in Kansas they have quit putting screens on the

Thunderbolts Deal Strange Havoc, One Stroke Sets Off A Buried War Shell

VIENNA, July 6. (U.P.)—Lightning strokes have their caprices as shown by the following recent events in southeast Europe:

In Lysinoff, near Karthaus, upper Austria, during a thunderstorm, a bolt entered the house of a farmer through the chimney, passed between the legs of a 12-year-old daughter, without hurting the child, and then destroyed a linden tree in the yard.

When lightning struck an oak tree under which the wife of a farmer had sought shelter near Semendria, Yugoslavia, a terrible explosion ensued. The woman was seriously injured. Investigation showed that the bolt had exploded a shell, buried under the tree since the World War.

The gun of a Hungarian hunter who was caught by a sudden thunderstorm while walking across an open field was melted by lightning and the man's clothes burned, but the hunter himself, who had, with an admirable presence of mind, thrown himself into a ditch full of water, was unhurt.

When a farm woman near Salzburg, Austria, stuck her arm out of the window to ascertain whether it was raining, a lightning bolt detached and destroyed her wrist watch; the woman herself fainted, but was not otherwise hurt.

Alcatraz Shut-Ins Barely Miss Lessons On How To Swim As Gift Of Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON, (U.P.)—Inmates of Alcatraz prison might be surprised to learn that the federal government which sent them there, came close to showing them how to escape. Prisoners sent there know that the only way to escape would be to swim to shore through a particularly treacherous stretch of water.

Only the vigilance of an official in the federal bureau of prisons prevented the government from sending to Alcatraz, as part of a list of approved books, a useful tome entitled: "How to Swim, in 10 Easy Lessons."

Inquiry into general reading matter approved for inmates of 20 federal prisons revealed a wide choice of subjects which the government believes might add to their knowledge and culture. A regular list of book titles is made up in the main office here every month, and librarians of the prisons allow inmates to choose from the list.

One of the favorite selections is entitled "Why Be a Mud Turtle?" Calculated to soothe shattered nerves during the long stretch is "Hoy To Live on 24—Hours a Day." Two other consoling treatises are on "Why Men Fail" and "Nerves and the Man."

There is also a gentle reminder called "Life's Little Pitfalls" and a volume analyzing an art, at which many of this select group of readers already are quite proficient, entitled "Breaking Into Print."

Probably of the most interest to kidnapers is "On the Track of the Great," and a series of practical studies also includes authoritative statements on "How To Get What You Want," "Freedom of Life" and "Brass Check."

The largest number of titles in any classification on a recent list were of volumes of poetry. Edgar Guest is the most popular bard, followed by Kipling and Tennyson.

Air Traffic System Inaugurated July 6

An airways traffic control system, to assure adequate spacing between airplanes flying along established air routes and to prevent congestion at airports, went into operation under the direction of the Bureau of Air Commerce, Department of Commerce, on July 6, Eugene L. Vidal, director of air commerce, announced today.

Three airways traffic control stations, previously established at Newark, N. J., Chicago, Ill., and Cleveland, Ohio, on a cooperative basis by the bureau of air commerce and the air lines, and now functioning with personnel supplied by the lines, will become the responsibilities of the bureau of air commerce on July 6. In the near future stations will be established at Detroit, Mich., Washington, D. C., Pittsburgh, Pa., and Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Traffic control is most urgently needed when the aircraft along the airway are flying in or above fog or clouds and are being navigated by instruments and radio. At such times it is especially necessary that aircraft be kept adequately separated, either horizontally or vertically or both, so that there can be no possibility of a collision. Also it is necessary that the air craft proceed in an orderly sequence and not be bunched together on arrival at the airport, and at the same time, aircraft schedule be unreasonably delayed. However, the airways traffic control stations activities are not confined to periods of unfavorable weather. They operate continuously from early morning to midnight or later, and it is probable that they eventually will function on a 24-hour basis.

Working in close cooperation with the air lines operating at the airport upon which it is based, and with the municipally operated airport traffic control tower which supervises actual take-offs and landings, an Airways Traffic Control station receives departure, arrival and position reports on all aircraft in its area.

A pilot flying in or above the clouds, and unable to see the ground reports his passage over "radio fixes," or check points, that is when he passes over a radio marker beacon, transmitter or crosses a radio range course which intersects the one he is flying.

Privately owned aircraft and airplanes of the army, navy, marine corps and coast guard, when operating along airways, also furnish flight plans and when so equipped report by radio so that they can be accounted for in connection with traffic control.

For an outbound airplane, an airways traffic control station receives advance information concerning the flight plan, including altitude and approximate time when the airplane will arrive over the first radio check point, cruising altitude to be maintained, estimated flying time to destination, type of airplane and any necessary information. If this plan will involve any conflict with other traffic already in the air, the pilot is so advised and a new flight plan worked out. This is the plane's clearance.

As soon as it has taken off, word is flashed to the control room and an operator there puts an airplane marker on a map to indicate its location. The marker is moved every 15 minutes to indicate the progress that the airplane should be making at its previously calculated cruising speed, allowances for wind weather and other factors having previously been made. As position reports are received from the pilot the position shown by the marker is checked against these reports and corrected if necessary.

In the case of an incoming airplane, reports of departure and progress along the airway are watched in the same careful manner, and in addition its movements are coordinated with other craft approaching on the same or other airways.

When the first report on the incoming airplane is received, the airways traffic control station at the destination computes its probable arrival time and compares this with expected arrival times of other airplanes. As the minutes pass, the station may discover that some other airplane which took off later, is overtaking the first one. If this occurs when visibility is limited, traffic control will assign a lower flight altitude to the first airplane.

If the possible conflict arises because two or more different airplanes are due to arrive at approximately the same time on different airways, airways traffic control assigns precedence for approaching the airport. The ship which is first given clearance comes in for a landing, and others are required to hold back by reducing speed or circling over specified check points. When the first plane has established contact with the control tower and landed, the second is brought in, and so on until all are down on the ground.

An airways traffic control crew at present is composed of five members: A manager, assistant manager and three controllers. These men overlapping shifts—with one man on duty at periods of least flying activity and two or three working together during rush periods.

Areas controlled by the three present airways traffic control stations are as follows:

Newark—Airways connecting Newark with Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Buffalo, Albany and Boston.

Chicago—Airways connecting Chicago with Minneapolis, St. Paul, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha.

Cleveland—Airways connecting Cleveland with Pittsburgh, Washington, Camden, Newark, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago and Columbus.

The traffic control system is under the direct supervision of Earl F. Ward, airways traffic control supervisor for the bureau of air commerce since March of this year.

Indian Lore Galore For Rail Travelers

CHICAGO, Ill.—Having been assured that the American West is now quite calm and settled, a timid European traveler was nearly frightened out of his wits when he saw a band of whooping Indians in war bonnets bearing down upon him during a short stop at one of the Western stations. He was speedily reassured by a railway employee and then watched with amazed delight the colorful war dance presented by the Indians for the entertainment of passing travelers.

The European was not much more ignorant than many Americans. He, and a great many Americans, feel that the United States is so thoroughly standardized that everybody is alike. "We have none of the quaint and picturesque customs that are preserved in European countries," is a common opinion.

That we do have hundreds of such customs and that they are being carefully preserved and carried on is discovered by anyone who travels almost any line of the Western Railroads during the summer. While the American celebrations are different from the folk dances, the Passion Plays, the medieval pageant presented for tourists in Europe, the U. S. brand is just as authentic and interesting in its own fashion.

The Indians are anything but a "vanishing race." Census figures show that our Indian population is increasing, and enlightened effort by the government and by railroad and travel organizations are now carried on to preserve the best of the old tribal customs, dances and songs. Cowboys still ride the western plains, and the high spot of many a western vacation is a taste of ranch life or an exciting day at one of the whirl-wind rodeos which are presented at many vacation spots in the west.

Fiestas and historic celebrations also recall vividly the days of the pioneers, thrilling frontier times and gold-rushes, stately Spanish per-

Hindu Code Balks Extermination of Plague Carrying Rats In Ancient City of Bombay

BOMBAY, (U.P.)—Extermination of plague-carrying rats in the big industrial center of Ahmedabad has been voted down by Hindu municipal councillors in the name of "ahimsa," a religious tenet of preventing cruelty to animals. Ahmedabad has acquired notoriety for allowing Hindu religious beliefs to interfere with civic administration.

The Jain sect practices "ahimsa," to extreme degrees. Orthodox Jains do not use oil lamps at night lest insects should fall into the flame and perish. They therefore finish their dinners before sunset and do not even walk about at night for fear of trampling on a stray worm.

According to Hindu belief, it is ordained that the weaker animals are meant to be a prey to the stronger and man should not deprive the stronger of food by his interference. Thus, the city fathers of Ahmedabad argued that rats were created as a portent of plagues and, if rats were effaced, none would come to know of the prevalence of the epidemic.

Furthermore, cats were created to kill rats and so man had no business to kill rats. And so, the extermination question was shelved.

Throughout the city, children were wading the streets which flowed with water. By nightfall frogs were keeping up a steady singing heard for miles. Lawn sprinklers, called into service prior to the rain, had been dragged from the yards, giving city pumps at Cloverdale a rest after an average of one million gallons had been used by Midland citizens for several days.

'14-Day Fever' Still Appearing In State

AUSTIN, July 6—Typhus fever or "Fourteen Day Fever" continues to make its appearance in various counties in Texas. Like typhoid most of the cases occur in the hot months of summer and early fall, according to records of the State Health Department.

"The symptoms of typhus fever are similar to those of typhoid fever, except the course of typhus is generally two weeks while typhoid fever may extend over many weeks," said Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer.

"Although there are two types of typhus fever, it is the endemic type, (known as Brill's Disease) which presents itself in Texas.

"The onset of typhus fever is usually sudden and accompanied by chills, fever, headache, and general body pains. Nausea and vomiting may be present. Headache is an outstanding symptom, and often persists to such a degree that it does not readily yield to drugs or local applications.

"The fever rises rapidly, often reaching a maximum of 105 degrees in the fifth or sixth day, and generally declining about the tenth to fourteenth day. A reddish mottling of the skin also appears, which may subside soon or continue through the crisis. A hacking cough is often present.

"The mode of transmission of typhus fever is known to be from the rat-flea, and the disease could be prevented by the eradication of rats and mice. A campaign to rid your community of rodents would also be of great economic value as rats and mice destroy millions of dollars worth of food every year."
