THE BELL COUNTY ATTITUDE

County Attorney Walter R. Smith of Bell county, Kentucky, unwittingly did the nation a service the other day in his letter to Arthur Garfield Hayes of the Civil Liberties Union. Declaring that the Union was Communistic, Mr. Smith remarked that Bell county authorities don't believe that "any such organization or any group of persons representing it have any constitutional rights in Bell county that any person is bound to respect."

It was a public service to express so baldly and bluntly a doctrine that finds fairly wide acceptance in many parts of the country today; the doctrine that free speech is guaranteed only to those who will talk the way the authorities want them to, and that the guarantee can be revoked by any office-holder at his own discretion.

It is an un-American doctrine as could possibly be imagined. We are indebted to Mr. Smith for bringing it out into the open and expressing it in a way that enables friends of liberty to grapple with it.

the man HUNTER BY MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Susan Carey, an orphan, lives with her aunt on Chicago's west side and broken Ben Ackroyd, a miserly, miserly architect, Ben Lappman, a moody young admirer, takes her to a studio party where she meets Arnold and Sonia Strinsky and Denis Ackroyd, a society girl. Later, lunching with Bob Dunbar, young millionaire whom she met at business school, she sees Denis again, Jack Waring, health's assistant, tries to flirt and is rebuffed. Lonely when her aunt is away, Susan goes on a party with Waring and he kisses her. Ben asks her to marry him and she temporizes. Her employer's wife snubs her. Susan hears Bob Dunbar is to be married and is heart broken. Denis Ackroyd comes to a week-end party at her country home. Rose Milton, Susan's friend, lends her a party frock.

CHAPTER XXIII
If Susan had known her aunt's plans she would have been furiously angry. As it was she met Ben gaily the following afternoon. He came through the coach looking rather more sulky than usual but almost pathetically brushed and tidy.

"Hello," she said. "We're bound for the same place."
Ben threw a shabby black bag into the rack overhead and sat down. Modestly his gaze took her in from the top of her new hair to the tip of her blunt oxford.

"You look nice," was all he could find to say, that rather grudgingly. Susan thanked him reflecting sardonically that he was scarcely the perfect pattern of an ardent admirer. Poor Ben! On a piano keyboard his fingers spoke the only language that he knew. Otherwise he was inarticulate.

"I don't know why I said I'd come to this racket," Ben grumbled. "Sonia forced me into it—said it would be good for my work."
"Maybe it will," Susan told him, determined to look on the bright side of things this glorious fall day. With the morning her misgivings had dissolved, leaving her confident and happy.

Ben stared at her. "You know why we're asked, don't you?" he demanded. "That kid thinks we're a bunch of freaks. When she comes to Sonia's she believes she's slumming and goes a terrible kick out of it. She told Sonia it reminded her of the Left Bank."

"I don't think that sounds so bad," Susan said. "What she means is you are all artists and artists have always been taken up by rich people. That's not new."
Ben snorted. "Where do you come in, Ben? You don't fit the class!"

The instant he had said the words he regretted them. Susan winced as if she had been struck and truly the blow had gone home. The question was one she had asked herself many times but this morning she had determined to put it aside and be as happy as possible. She felt a surge of hatred for Ben who, observing the darkening of her eyes and trembling of her lip, cursed himself for the clumsy fool he was.

Susan turned and stared out the window. They were slipping past little houses now, their backyards running down to the railroad tracks. It was all very suburban and sunny but it looked black to the girl.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)
Not to be a pig country, Midland had its share of hog legs in evidence today, and it wasn't a sheriff's convention either.
Just because Arch Thomas doesn't perch on top of the ladder all the week is no sign that he is going to drop any matches when a golf tournament is held. They paired him with one of Texon's best Sunday and Arch proceeded to give the boys a demonstration, winning handsily. "You would pair me with one of those tough guys," he said as he finished the 18th.

The census bureau finds that both marriages and divorces are on the decline. That's simple enough because a lot of people won't marry for fear they will want to be divorced, and it's a cinch you can't have divorces unless you have marriages.

I wonder what columnists like Colonel Tack at Amarillo will find to fuss about this summer, now that all of us are used to going without stockings. This was the subject of reams of comment by him for about two summers, but he was playing a losing game. Public opinion was against him and so were the girls.

Jim Noland is reported to have applied at the library for the book How to Become a Millionaire in Three Months on approval for three months.

"So, you want to marry my daughter?" said the father to the anxious youth. "Have you seen her mother?"
"Yes! But daughters don't always grow to look like their mothers."

Ben and Arnold lingered below. Susan was shown into a high-ceilinged room crowded with delicate French furniture. The great low bed had a gilded headpiece and the coverlet was of faded peach brocade. It was all subtly elegant. Through an open door she glimpsed a bath room done in apple pie. The glass shelves were crowded with heavy towels and scented soaps. After the maid had left Susan went to the window and stared out. The lake rushed and tumbled below.

What now, she wondered? She had a grave sense of foreboding and unreality. Faithful to Rose's instructions, she snatched for the lake and down and disposed it carefully on his hanger. Then, having brushed her hair and washed her hands at the gargantuan basin, she shyly went down.

The group was animated now. Denise, vivid in a bright green frock, greeted her ravenly.

"Hello, there! Finding everything you want?"
Susan said she had.
"It's early for cocktails," Denise announced, "but we're having them anyway." She turned on a radio concealed in an 18th century desk and had a glass of wine. Susan had a faint, not altogether agreeable sensation of surprise as she watched them together. Ben danced amazingly well. The music gave him release. Self-consciousness flowed away from him and there was grace in his tall, rangy form. Over her shoulder Denise threw this remark to Susan:

"The others will be along in a moment. They've been playing golf and stopped to change."
Susan glanced down at her blue serge. Well, she had nothing to change to so this would have to be all right. She danced with Arnold, snatching it. Arnold must have had an ancient pipe tucked away somewhere.

Adams' "Epic of America" Is Answer to Many Americans' Question; at Library

By KATHLEEN EILAND
Why are we Americans the kind of people we are? That is the question that "The Epic of America" was written to answer.
Three things stand out among the many interesting ones brought forth by James Truslow Adams in this "history of influences": that the frontier moulded American character; that "Old Man River" and the Mississippi valley really wrote the history of our country; and that through all our national sinning and strife, the American dream has persisted as the core of American spirit—the belief in the common man and equality of opportunity for all.
Mr. Adams does not spare American faults either as a nation or sectionally. On the other hands he is not a pessimistic or a destructive critic. His criticisms are as blunt and straight to the point as those of the Puritans, but his judgments are tempered with the humaneness of the Gospel.

"Brothers' Blood," the chapter on the Civil War will appeal to most Southerners, for with no apparent effort, Mr. Adams gives the South the better stand in the controversy. He neither glorifies nor condemns her but seems exceptionally just in his decisions.
Mr. Adams' thoughtful and thought-provoking facts and ideas are scattered throughout the book. Typical of these are the explanation of the emotional orgies of the old camp meetings and the proposition that if the West had not been linked with the North by railroads, it would have succeeded with the South which held the commercial outlet of the Mississippi and had destroyed the Union in the Civil war.

A most unusual book is this "Epic of America" and a worthy one to read along with the histories and dates and statesmen, for this book gives us an idea of the emotions of the men and women who made and are still making America. And only by knowing their emotions can we understand them.
We recommend the book to those who think the moderns are the only Americans who have had feet of clay; those who like to study humanity as a mixture of good and bad; those who like to think seriously; and to all high school teachers.

"The Epic of America" is now on the rent shelf of the county library. An outline of Monnier's Training Service will be followed in a chronological study of the Bible by the class.
Membership drives will start soon, it was announced.

AUSTIN—A geological study of the area extending from the Orient line of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe on the south to the Canadian river on the north, a distance of more than 275 miles, will be made by the Bureau of Economic Geology of the University of Texas, as a means of obtaining additional data on the potash resources of West Texas.

FACTS WE CAN PROVE

If you are using good gasoline, let us save you several cents on every gallon. If you are using a cheap grade of gasoline, let us sell you the best at a very little more than you are paying. The extra mileage and satisfaction is well worth the small difference in cost, and as we all know, good fuel will save you unnecessary repair bills on your motor.

Think it over and let us prove this saving to you.

MIDLAND GOLFERS STRONG; TAKE TEXON TOURNAMENT SUNDAY 24-20

C. L. Jackson, top man on the golf ladder at the Midland country club, defeated Pat Kelly of Texon one up Sunday afternoon, Billy Moran beat Thompson 6-5 and other Midland golfers handed their Texon opponents sufficiently well to annex the Sand Belt association match 24-20.

Ellis Cowden, always counted on by Midland in a serious encounter of this nature, was ill and did not participate.

Arch Thomas, out of the city a great deal of the time and who had not climbed to the top rungs of the ladder, showed up among the best for Midland, turning in a win over Folk of Texon, Frank Day and DeLo Douglas also contributed to the defeat of the visitors.

Fair weather prevailed and the tournament was witnessed by scores of fans who enjoyed thrill after thrill as the Midland players took the difficult match.

Pairings and scores were as follows:

Midland	Texon
C. L. Jackson 81	Pat Kelly 82

Billy Moran 87
DeLo Douglas 85
Frank Day 85

"Tarzan" Aims at Maximum Thrills

Liberal patronage Sunday indicated a strong public interest in the type of picture portrayed in "Tarzan, the Ape Man," showing at the Ritz again today. A well known religious magazine made the following comment on the film:

(Johnny Weissmuller) (M-G-M) One of the most fantastic and sensational thrillers yet made, laid amid striking African scenery, with notable animal photography. Bizarre masterpiece of technique, with trick shots and faked effects faultlessly done. Disregards probability and scientific truth to get maximum thrills. Unusual, interesting, but educational value very doubtful.

The Derby Parade

TICK ON

By MAX RIDDLE
(Copyright 1932, NEA Service)

Tick On, Mrs. L. G. Kaufman's mighty son of On Watch, is the main hope of the Loma Stable in the Kentucky Derby. The brown, almost black, son of On Watch proved himself superior to any juvenile on the American turf by gaining victories over every good horse he faced except Top Flight.

Tick On did not start out as a sensation as did Top Flight, but continued to improve during the summer and fall until, in the Pimlico Futurity, he was able to run the marvelous Whitney filly to a head. Reports from spring training camps say that the son of On Watch has continued to improve and fill out during the winter and spring, so that he should prove a mighty hard horse to beat.

"Girl of the Rio" Good Entertainment

"The Dove" flew gracefully into town yesterday—not with the symbolic olive branch of Biblical lore, but with the magnificent Dolores Del Rio cast in a role more brilliant than any in her colorful career.

This screen dramatization of the successful Willard Mack stage success, now titled "Girl of the Rio" opened at the Grand yesterday before an enthusiastic audience.

Dolores Del Rio is a resplendent woman. From the reaction of the spectators it was obvious that the Latin star had scored sensationally, perhaps with the best role of her career.

Carillo's portrayal is as effective on the screen as was Bennett's and Blinn's on the stage. Nothing more could be said for any actor.

The romantic role opposite the star is played by Norman Foster, and it is extremely well done. Others who give splendid performances are Stanley Fields, Edna Murphy, Lucille Gleason, Ralph Ince and Frank Campeau.

SS Robert Booked For Amarillo Trip

AMARILLO, April 25.—A slight change in the dates of the Amarillo Globe-News good will June vacation trip to Alaska has been announced by Wilbur C. Hawk, sponsor, and Sable Frame of the Saparito railroad after recent conferences in Chicago with officials of the Canadian National Steamship company.

The schedule or itinerary remains the same except that the excursionists will leave Amarillo the evening of June 4 instead of June 1 and return June 21 instead of June 13.

By making this change, the newest and finest steamer cruising the Alaskan waters, the SS Robert, has been obtained and the deadline for reservations which was originally set for April 1, has been moved up to May 15, approximately two and a half weeks before the start.

The SS Robert is the newest ship in the Canadian Line, being only two years old and accommodates 400 passengers with all outside state-rooms. Under the revised schedule it sails from Vancouver, B. C. at 10 a. m. instead of 3 p. m. and it will be on June 9.

The same points will be visited in Alaska and along the railroad route and the same hours spent at each point. The SS Robert will be the first steamer out for Alaska on the summer vacation cruises and regularly makes Sitka, Skagway, Juneau, Prince Rupert, Ketchikan and other points included on the original tour map.

By using the SS Robert the steam ship company allowed reservations to be made almost up to the time to start instead of two months ahead of the date of departure from Amarillo as originally demanded by the line and the railroads over which the special train will travel. The long land swing is northeast to Kansas City, Des Moines and into Canada, and then west to Banff, Lake Louise and across the Canadian Rockies to the Pacific coast.

The return railroad route remains the same, through Seattle, Portland, up the Columbia river gorge and through the Rocky Mountain states home by way of Denver.

While a large number of the party already have been signed up and deposits made, Mr. Hawk warns that the time is short of the all-inclusive round trip fare of $300 must be made at the earliest possible date and cannot be accepted after May 15. The remainder need not be paid until the date of departure.

All reservations and checks should be mailed to Wilbur C. Hawk, general manager, of the News-Globe, Amarillo, or, if additional information is sought, call or write Mason King at the Amarillo chamber of commerce.

Yearbook to Give History of Fields

HOUSTON, Tex. (UP)—A complete history of the East Texas field, storm center of the petroleum industry during the past year, will feature the year book to be distributed at the eighth annual convention of the National Oil Scouts association here May 15, 16 and 17.

The book also will contain papers on all phases of recent petroleum developments, with special emphasis on the problems which arose during 1931, one of the industry's most eventful years.

Plans have been completed for entertainment of the 200 or more delegates and visitors expected here for the convention.
