ROMANTIC BUSINESS

It may be drab to balance ledgers, arrange stock, dust counters, trim windows or look after files, but there the other side of trade which, though little known, is as romantic and picturesque as a Marco Polo could wish for.

It's more exciting than a bloodand-thunder novel, this business of scouting for rare rugs, says C. A. Bigelow, a Chicago business man back in the United States after eighteen months in the out-of-the-way places in the Orient. During this period, as the representative of Marshallfi Field & Company, wholesale interested in rug research, he covered 40,000 miles by camel, donkey and automobile.

In India, where nomads turn from the driving of their flocks and weaving of rugs to banditry at night, this trade pioneer was in constant peril of shots from the snipers' guns. Even the soldiers, he says, were not safe from the bandits. The soldiers have their guns handcuffed to them but when taking a respite from their vigil, the bandits creep upon them and steal the guns by deftly removing the handcuffs. In crossing the Sind desert, Bigelow was in constant danger, not only of the bandits' bullets but the stings of scorpions and tarantellas as well. For weeks at a time, during his travels among the Hindus, he went without water, quenching his thirst only by the juice of fruits. Only a few days before his coming, he was told in one place, a convoy had been attacked by bandits and an Englishman slain.

It was in Persia that Bigelow had to comply with the peculiar customs of the people to keep in their good graces. At Ghourveh he was invited to take luncheon with Amir Afghan, a relative of the Shah and ruler sian fashion, he ate a fifty course never use knives, forks or spoons, he was told, because they believe that it is just as important to "feel" the food as to taste it.

On another occasion the Sardar Sephah, premier of Persia, took tea with Bigelow in his tent outside of Sultanbad. To comply with the customs of the people. Bigelow slaughtered a dozen lambs upon the arrival of the distinguished guest and scattered the blood over the ground. Before entering the tent Sardar Sephah touched the tip of his boot in the blood to indicate that he was bringing with him peace and happiness. The slain lambs were given to the poor.

long time to do such a little job. If we could find some way to do this garden work in half the time it has been taking, then we could easily work a garden double the size of the one we have, or we could do the work in one-half the time required | for getting over the garden we now have. Not only this, but we could do the work more promptly and when it is most in need of being done, and we could do it before the weeds start or a crust is formed.

things, a way that we have found to double the pleasure of working in the garden and reducing the labor by half, some times even three-fourths. Of course, we refer to the garden wheel hoe or garden push plow, as some of us call it. This implement will do the work it is intended to do do it better than any way we know of where horsepower is not used. In actual trials in which we noted the time required, it was found that four rows can be worked with the garden wheel hoe while one is being worked with the old cotton hoe. Of course, some hand weeding will be necessary at times, but even this can be so reduced when we make our rows parallel and narrow, that it is only a small item.—The Progressive Farm-

MARRIED TUESDAY

Miss Venna Crowley, well known nd popular young daughter of Mr. nd Mrs. C. W. Crowley, was maried Tuesday afternoon to Mr. H. L. Klennert, of Toyah.

Miss Crowley has been living in loyah for several months, holding position with the T. & P. Railway company's offices; and came home last Saturday.

Mr. Klennert is a prominent man in Toyah, and bears an envitable reputation.

The wedding was held at five o'clock, at the C. W. Crowley home, with the family and a few friends present.

The young couple departed immediately for a trip to East Texas points, after which they will go to Toyah to make their home.

R. W. Cowden, who has been in Mineral Wells for the last few months, was in Midland the first of the week, en route to high ranch near Jal, N. M.

George Harris was a business visitor to Midland Monday from Pecos.

If all farmers co-operate in this poisoning promptly and if all hatching places are found and poisoned, it is believed that one or perhaps two such local applications will protect the cultivated crops for the remainder of the season.

Poison bran mash is advised in the control of the hoppers. In spite of some reports to the contrary, this gave excellent results last year where properly mixed and applied. Failures were found due to the departure from directions in some particu-

Experience last year indicated that amyl acetate used in place of the lemons, gave better results, and it is advised this year if it can be obtained. The formula recommended is: Wheat bran (avoid shorts) ____25 lbs. White arsenic (or Paris Green) 1 lb. Amyl acetate Cane molasses (avoid cane syrup)

2 quarts. Water in quantity as suggested be-

Thoroughly mix the poison and bran dry. Dilute the molasses and amyl acetate with about two gallons of water and thoroughly mix with the bran. Add more water and mix, until a thoroughly wet mash has been obtained, yet not sloppy. It should fall apart easily when sowing, so that it breaks up into particles not larger than the small finger nail at the largest. A good test is to squeeze a handful tightly; if of the proper con- property. sistency the water will ooze out between the fingers, but should not run out in streams.

It is important to thoroughly mix after each addition of water, to secure an even distribution of all the materials. After one or two batches have been mixed, the farmer will learn how much water to use, so that lenorance as to Waste.

fulness is due largely to indifference about saving and not to a destructive spirit. Teach the child that it is as necessary to conserve as to make, and he will grow up to practice conservation. When I was a child I was allowed, in fact was encouraged, to eat all the food I wanted, but if I took more on my plate than I could eat, the plate of uneaten food was carefully put away for the next meal, and I had to eat that before getting anything else. To this day I never leave any food on my plate. Lessons like that have to be taught early, before wasteful habits are formed. The place for such teaching is in the home and in the school. The teaching should not only be against personal waste, but it should be extended to the protection of the property of other people and to the safeguarding of public

Courses in Conservation.

There is a tendency to make all education practical. Why not extend it to include, in the grade schools, courses in conservation? Children should be impressed that to waste even the food that the birds might eat is sinful: that water waste is wrong; that destruction of, or injury to, school property is an injustice to the public; that to break street lights is criminal; that saving is just as commendable as making; that loss to any individual or to the community is an injury to all. Such lessons well taught in every school in the land would result in the ed, use six lemons or oranges with saving of millions of dollars annually.

Looking for a Big Texan.

The board of governors of the Texas Centennial at its last meeting appointed a committee to find the best man kn Texas, measured by the requirements of the position, to be permanent president of the movement which will commemorate the history of the state, reflect its present greatness, and build for a future commensurate with the state's great resources. The board decided to go about this selection carefully and to find a man of the financial strength to be able to devote his time and his means to the accomplishment of the purposes of the exposition; of the influence to get the ear of congress and of the legislature effort to the great work. In other words Texas is looking for a leader with qualifications commensurate with the great undertaking before it. * * *

Exigencies Develop Leadership.

In studying the immensity of the the night, and one sowing should be ments, but more careful consideration convinced the governors that Texas has citizens big enough to accomplish found in great numbers for two or anything that people anywhere can do. The history of the world shows that there has never been an exigency, however great, that some person has not been discovered to meet it: and Texif any danger, to poultry and wild ans may feel sure that in this case ever, and of course great care should proud. The governors of the Cenbe used to keep batches that have tennial have gone about their selection in a way to insure that no mistake shall be made, which reminds me to say that the board has also shown much wisdom in planning a great educational campaign to "Texanize Texas" as a preliminary step. Get Texas thoroughly enthused, and the Centennial will be put over in a splendid way.

Criticising the Newspapers.

Criticising the press appears to be a fad. Even at the Parent-Teachers meeting recently held at Austin, the newspapers came in for some trouncing because some one thinks they are threatening to usurp the functions of but are ender ling to help them, just as the Parent-Teachers are try-ing to help. FEEDING STEERS IN

THE SUGAR-CANE BELT

As a result of feeding experiments carried on at Jeanerette, La., by the Jnited States Department of Agriculture and the Louisiana Agricultural Experiment Station, it has been shown that so far as available feeds are concerned cattle feeding can be made an important enterprise in the sugar-cane belt. Results of the work have been published in Department Bulletin 1318, Steer Feeding in the Sugar-Cane Belt, by J. R. Quesen

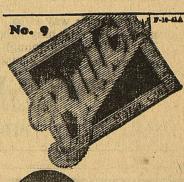

The experiments showed that sorgo ilage compares favorably with corn silage and that silage made from ugar cane can be used to advantage, although it is not so palatable as that made from corn, soybeans, sorgo, or cowpeas. The addition of soybeans to either corn ro sorghum in creased the value of the silage. Cane-top silage and that made from Japanese cane were found to have about the same feeding value. In making 100 pounds gain, steers fed cane-top silage required 28 per cent more silage and 40 per cent more cottonseed meal than those fed corn
