THE DEMAND FOR GRAFT

Politics being what it is, public servants land in criminal court every now and then. And once in a while such an event carries with it some very instructive information for the ordinary citizen.

Chicago recently convicted Daniel A. Serritella, former city sealer, and Harry Hochstein, formerly his deputy, of conspiring to cheat Chicago consumers out of some

The two men had a very nice racket, and it worked

Their job was to inspect scales, measures and the like used by grocers and butchers. Evidence presented at their trial showed that a lot of these merchants had the two officials on their payroll—and, in return, were permitted to use scales and measures that gypped the consumer.

The housewife who bought a pound of meat at the corner store really got only about 14 ounces. If she bought a peck of vegetables, the measure that was used had a phony bottom, so that she got less than she paid for.

It was done on a pretty extensive scale, too. Of 9000 shortweight complaints filed with Serritella during his term of office, only 1000 ever reached the city prosecutor. The rest were quietly smothered.

Now all of this is water over the dam, and the two officials have been laid by the heels so that they can't do any more harm. But the story is illuminating for the light that it throws on the source of rackets.

This particular bit of crookedness wasn't something that grew up from the underworld. It was bought and paid for by respectable citizens—by solid business men, who probably never dreamed that they were undermining the foundations of city government. In their idle moments these merchants probably complained because politicians were such a crooked lot.

And that is the way it is with a great deal of graft. Graft exists in answer ta a demand; and the demand often comes from people who are supposed to be pillars of society. The racketeer and the crooked politician have their being because the rest of the community not only tolerates them but uses them. To root them out we shall have to remake a whole series of social attitudes.

A HEALTHY SIGN

'A Washington correspondent, discussing developments in the Democratic pre-convention campaign the other day, remarked that there is in Washington "a growing feeling that the Chicago meeting will involve a fight over party principles as well as the struggle over the presidential nomination.'

This is interesting, not so much for what it says as for the fact that its author found it worth saying at all. It implies quite clearly, you see, that party principles do not ordinarily come up for much discussion at the great party nominating conventions. They stay in the background, ignored by common consent, and today one who has not studied political history a bit can hardly tell the difference between the two parties.

The correspondent's forecast, then, is rather encouraging. If both parties would have "a struggle over party principles" every so often, our political life would be a whole lot healthier.

UNIFORM DIVORCE LAWS

The proposal for uniform divorce laws in all the states of the Union, revived the other day at the Methodist Episcopal General Conference, seems to be one of those ideas that are fine in theory but very hard to put into practice. Considering the wide differences that exist between the various state divorce laws, one wonders how all of the states could ever be got to agree on a uniform code. Should such a code follow New York's law, for instance, recognizing only one ground for divorce? Or should it follow Ohio's and grant divorces for everything from desertion to "cruelty"? Or should it go even further and copy the laws of Arkansas and Nevada?

The practical difficulties in the way of such a scheme seem very great. Uniformity may be desirable, but it might prove uncommonly difficult to obtain.

After he was graduated in 1904 he was married the following March while attending Columbia University law school. At the close of the school year he and his bride went to Europe on a belated honeymoon.

In 1910, Roosevelt gave up the practice of law to run for the state senate in his home district. He campaigned in an automobile, a novelty in those days, won the farmers on a platform that called, among other things, for standardized apple barrels, and was elected.

Roosevelt had hardly entered the legislature when he began his fa-

Defying Tammany, he organized a filibuster which held out for many weeks and finally defeated Sheehan. In the legislature, Roosevelt met Al Smith, who had come up from New York as an assemblyman and the long friendship between them heren.

Josephus Daniels.

He held this post throughout the World war, handling most of the navy's huge purchases of supplies. He is given credit for the idea that brought the North Sea mine barrage, a chain of mines 240 miles long laid to stop German submarines.

In 1920, Roosevelt was nominated as the Democratic vice presidential candidate, made the campaign with Cox and went down to defeat in the Harding landslide.

Less than a year later—in August, 1921—Roosevelt suffered the great tragedy of his life. He was spending his vacation at his summer home near Campobello, Me, and had gone for a swim. Returning, he sat down in his wet bathing suit to read his mail.

That night he was taken ill. By morning he was paralyzed from the hips down. Doctors pronounced it infantile paralysis. From that day to this he has been a cripple.

He spent weary months as an invalid before he regained even the partial use of his limbs. Gradually, however, improvement came. He began to walk with the aid of leg braces and crutches, then a pair of canes. Today, he uses only one cane.

Except for leaving him a cripple, the malady has not affected him. He is in excellent health today and as the result of a great deal of swimming—an exercise that the docas the result of a great deal of swimming—an exercise that the doctors prescribe—he has a chest expansion greater than that of Jack Dempsey. Two years ago, life insurance companies issued him $560,000 insurance at the regular rate.

In 1924, Roosevelt appeared on crutches at Madison Square Garden and made the speech that placed Al Smith's name in nomination as demoratic candidate for president.

Four years later, leaning heavily on two canes, he did the same thing for his old friend at Houston.

In 1920, he had seconded Smith and Smith had seconded him for the vice presidential nomination at San Francisco.

In 1928, when Smith was running for the presidency, he drafted Roosevelt to run for governor of New York. After hesitating because of his physical condition, Roosevelt finally consented.

He won and two years later he was elected for his second term. His term will expire Jan. 1, 1933.

So ends the story of the strange friendship of 20 years standing between the governor who came up from the sidewalks of New York via the Fulton fish market, and the govthe Fulton fish market, and the governor who was born of one of the state's first families and came up

Bob tried patiently to explain. "You do! You're very optimistic. "There are hundreds of stevedores and truckmen walking the streets looking for work. They can't find it. What makes you think you can?" "I suppose you don't know your own mind, hey? I must say, young man, I think you're behaving in devilish bad fashion. First you give us to understand that you want to marry Denise. Then you come here with a cock and bull story about a girl nobody knows. Someone you picked up God knows where."

Bob gripped his hands against the back of the chair until the knuckstees stood out. "I'll have to ask you to take that back," he said with deadly quiet. "I've told you all about ther. There's nothing the matter with her family. She happens to be poor—that's all."

The two men continued to stare as a cach other. The younger moved toward the door.

His father detained him. "Where do you think you're going?"

"Back to my desk, of course."

Mr. Dunbar stood up, emphasizing his words with a shaking fore-finger. "You're to do nothing of the kind," he announced. "Until this affair is settled, you're persona non grata in this office. Do you understand?"

It was a blow but the boy gave no sign other than the darkening of his eyes.

"Very well, sir, if that's the way you feel about it." He turned again out his father's bellowing voice arrested him.

telephone directory. He had a good memory and there flashed into his mind the name Bob had dropped earlier in the conversation. The girl's name was Carey. She lived with her aunt Jessie, Bob had said, on the west side. His spatulate thumb ran down the list of telephone subscribers. Sure enough, there was the name. In his smail, neat, copperplate script, Dunbar wrote the street number in his pocket address book. It might be handy to have during the next few days.

To his father's surprise and irritation, Bob did not come around. The servants reported that he had returned home about noon, had packed a bag and departed without leaving any word. Mrs. Dunbar was at Hot Springs. She was one of those fretful, chronic invalids. Her husband was relieved that there was no necessity of explaining the situation to her.

After a day of waiting during which his digestion was annoyingly impaired the older man mapped out a course of action. Hard-shelled aristocrat that he was, he loved his son dearly. This open break with Robert disturbed him. Mr. Dunbar decided to see the girl and talk a little sense to her.

He frowned with distaste as his taxi, bumping along the shabby side street, came to a stop. It was just as he had expected—a house in a row of brave, run-down dwellings badly needing paint.

It seems the commission is called on to make a fine distinction between silver foxes and dogs as the matter of taxation applies to each. The dispute started when for the first time in history silver foxes were entered on the tax rolls of Rooks county. Alys Clayton, the deputy county clerk, entered them as personal property, valued at $100.

From the owners came a roar of disapproval. They contended that in the neighboring State of Colorado the animals were assessed as dogs, not personal property. In Kansas the canine evaluation is $1 for the male and $2 for the female. And—herein lay the controversial issue—the Kansas taxation of dogs listed them as personal property. On this latter basis the commission decided the owners could be taxed on their $100 values as well.

NEW YORK.—For years there have been whisperings in Wall street that Ivar Kreuger, Swedish "match king" and reputedly one of the richest men in the world, was not making his money from the manufacture or sale of matches.

Wall street little dreamed how true that legend was. But it remained complacently satisfied. As long as Kreuger companies continued to show big profits, and to pay fat dividends which invited additional investments what did it matter how those profits were made?
Besides, everyone knew that Kreuger was the financial mentor of kings and presidents, a manipulator of millions, a savior of small countries verging on bankruptcy, an industrialist whose organization and influence were felt throughout the civilized world, a money-lender whose deals were so vast that they alone might account for the gains credited the various match companies.

Altogether, such a romantic and fabulous figure was Kreuger that concessions were not very valuable, but that Kreuger made them appear so by altering his financial statements of hard-headed business scarcely could be applied to him.

And that is precisely the reason why today, stunned investors are reclosely, he did not need sight to aid him. The plane broke through scudding clouds in those last moments in the air—and Stultz, for all practical purposes, had reached his goal as unerringly as a carrier pigeon. From all angles it was a perfect flight.

Take, for example, his earliest case so far discovered of his fraudulent tactics—a monopoly contract, artifulty fallsified, with Poland in 1925. The Duth Garanta Company, a Kreuger subsidiary, was assigned the control of match sales, and its balance sheets that year showed profits now known to have been purely imaginary. Polish officials report that no sales were made.

He boldly suggested, however, that this should not be necessary because three Swedish firms of auditors had the data ready to submit. The American bankers were taken in by balance sheets now shown to have been "grossly wrong."

Kreuger placed an ample amount of collateral behind one large issue of "secured" debenture bonds here. But he had pleaded successfully for the right to make substitutions in this collateral. And so, after the debentures had been sold and Kreuger had the money, he proceeded to substitute poor securities for good securities, until he had drained the collateral to less than a third of the value it should have today.

Never until now has an outside audit been made of Kreuger's entire organization. That is an amazing commentary on the position of trust he enjoyed. It also is evidence that he laid an early ground work for his wily dealings, for his Dutch Kreuger and Toll and his Garanta Company were established in Holland, where an annual audit of corporations is not required.

He made his biggest mistake in

Famous Attorney To Address Bar

MINERAL WELLS, (UP)—Martin W. Littleton, who as a youth walked the Texas & Pacific tracks near here, will return Thursday night as one of the most famous attorneys of the country to address the 51st annual convention of the Texas Bar association.

Littleton, attorney for the defense on the Harry Thaw, Harry Sinclair, and other celebrated cases, will speak on the subject "What Price Progress." Many of his boyhood acquaintances from Weatherford are expected to hear him.

Littleton began his rise to fame by self-education and the reading of law in the county attorney's office at Weatherford. He went from there to Dallas in 1894 and became an assistant county attorney.

With only $100 and a letter of introduction Littleton left Dallas for New York with his wife, the former Miss Maude Wilson of Beaumont. Four years later he was elected president of Brocklyn borough and later was a member of congress.

His securing of a verdcit of inand later was a member of congress.

His securing of a verdeit of insanity for Harry K. Thaw and a resulting acquittal after an array of more famous attorneys failed established Littleton's national fame as a criminal lawyer. Thaw had killed Stanford White, famous architect, in the presence of Thaw's wife, the beautiful Evelyn Nesbit.

Guy A. Thompson, St. Louis, president of the American Bar association, will be another notable on the program. He will speak at the Saturday morning session.

Other speakers will include: Chief Justice R. W. Hall, Amarillo court of civil appeals; Sidney Samuels,

His own explanation is that the $25,000 was to be deposited in the names of all three intermediaries (himself, Curtis and Rear Admiral Burrag, retired) and was not to be withdrawn until after the baby was returned, and then only on the signatures of all three.

Colonel Schwarzkopf, head of the state police, expressed disappointment over Dean Dobson-Peacock's refusal to come to Hopewell for questioning.

"Under these circumstances," he said, "it will not be possible to consultation."

Robbery Charges

But the dean's offer to undergo questioning in his home town made it appear likely an official explanation of what part he played in the bizarre hoax would be obtained.

Governor A. Harry Moore said he favored "sending someone to Norfolk to see what he has to say."

He indicated that some one would be named by Schwarzkonf to make ODESSA, May 20.—Indicted by a grand jury Thursday morning, tried before a jury Thursday afternoon, J. R. "Red" Shepherd, and O. T. Stevenson, both of Ranger, were sentenced to two years in the state penitentiary.

Stevenson and Shepherd, according to the evidence, broke into a warehouse belonging to the Phillips Petroleum company at their Badger station 14 miles west of Odessa, and were caught in the attempt to steal oil and gasoline. Doyle Miller, of Odessa, the third one indicted for the same charges, turned state's evidence and his trial was moved held over until next term of court in October.

Then he explained that it was the request of Colonel Lindbergh for actual proof Curtis was in contact with the kidnapers that led to his asking the Virginia shipbuilder to bring some written message from these he was dealing with.

Colonel Schwarzkopf in one of his Coloner schwarzkopi in one of his bulletins said:

"No significance is based on the fact that Curtis in his confession spells Colonel Lindbergh's name
