CUT-OFF TO ROAD WILL BE STARTED

Texas Governor Has Ready Reply to Midland Note

PALO PINTO, June 10.—Preparations for building the Bankhead highway cut-off from Weatherford to a point three miles south of Strawn will be resumed immediately, Chairman W. R. Eby of the state highway commission said here after Judge Sam Russell had denied an injunction to restrain the road construction.

The injunction hearing began morning and was concluded at noon Thursday. Plaintiffs were residents of Palo Pinto county road district No. 1, who contended that the building of the highway would damage the present Bankhead highway through loss of traffic.

Ely said that the new road will be highway 89 and will not be designated as a branch of the Bankhead and that no efforts will be made to redesignate the Bankhead course. He also said that plans will go forward for the building of highway 66 which will extend from the Rio Grande valley to Mineral Wells and on to Wichita Falls and eventually other parts north.

He and W. K. Martin, another commission member who was here for the injunction hearing, said they believed highway No. 66 will be of great benefit to Mineral Wells. Attorneys for the plaintiffs said that an appeal will be taken from Judge Russell's decision.

Gibb Gilchrist, state highway engineer, said after the ruling that all field work for the project has been completed and that plans which were being worked on in the state engineers' district office at Fort Worth will be resumed. During the trial he said that it was planned to begin construction probably about August and that the road should be completed about January 1, 1934. Contracts may be advertised for soon.

It is likely that the road will be of gravel foundation with an asphalt topping. Ely testified he did not think the road would be built of cement. He contends it will be a shortening of about 14 miles in the highway from Weatherford to Ranger, eastward to Cisco and other cities in that section.

Sterling Announces Plea from Midland

AUSTIN, June 10.—Governor R. S. Sterling wired the Midland chamber of commerce that he had "never gone on record as saying" that the Weatherford cut-off of the Bankhead highway should not be built "and that the state will not be bound by the commission act as it sees fit."

Considerable controversy between towns in the community affected has arisen over a proposal of the Texas highway department to construct a cut-off from the Bankhead highway from Weatherford to Ranger, a distance of 46 miles. It was claimed the new construction would save 14 miles travel from Fort Worth to points in West Texas. The Midland chamber telegraphed Governor Sterling that his friends there were "surprised at your attitude on Ranger-Weatherford cut-off."

"More people favor road than oppose," the message said. "No desire to hurt Mineral Wells but we are fighting for self-preservation, not asking your support but asking you remain neutral and let highway commission act as it sees fit."

Governor Sterling replied he had "repeatedly said and do so now that I am opposed to the spending of any money either by the county, state or national governments that is not absolutely necessary."

"I feel that at this time it is not right, proper or just to the taxpayers of this state to spend money for unnecessary improvements," Governor Sterling said. "I believe in straightening out our highways but I feel that it is best to get a connected, all-weather system of roads before we begin to spend millions of dollars for the purpose of shortening roads. Knowing the financial situation of the counties, our state and our nation, I am firmly of the opinion that we must curtail the expenditures of public money if for no other reason than that the people have not the funds with which to pay taxes. I am indeed sorry if my attitude has displeased my friends at Midland, though I would not be fair to myself or to you if I did not express my candid opinion regarding all questions."

"Where were you the night of the Lindbergh kidnaping?" questioned Detroit police Lieut. Flannagan. "How long have you known me?" was his reply. "Ten years at least." "Then you know kidnaping is not my racket," said Fleischer.

WASHINGTON, June 10. (UP)—Prosecution of Gaston B. Means rested its case this afternoon following testimony of Captain Emory C. Land, first cousin of Col. Lindbergh's mother. Radio Advertising To Help Midland

Four months free publicity in which Midland will share will be given the Broadway of America Highway association by a large Pacific coast radio station.

The Broadway of America Highway association is arranging this national advertising for 120 days. The Midland chamber of commerce maintains membership in the Broadway association for Midland.

Inquiries received at the chamber indicate an increasing interest in highway travel and particularly in route selection. Each inquirer is furnished with detailed information about accommodations furnished by Midland hotels, tourist camps and other institutions affiliated with the Midland chamber. The office also routes many travelers making local inquiries to its member places of business.

Killing Frost 55 Years Ago

Thermometers at Midland stood at 98 degrees this afternoon at 1:20. Yesterday, however, the mercury stood at 98, the record for the season.

Contrast this heat with a date exactly 55 years ago, when June 10 brought a widespread killing frost in West Texas.

Few people here remember the frost, as there was not much vestige of a population center here. However, a few hardy survivors can recall that the frost visited a wide section and, as far south as Brownwood, where corn was in silk and tassel, the kernels were shriveled in their sheaths. But Midland escaped from damage, for the simple reason that there was no agriculture here and, as mentioned, little that could be called Midland.

RANCH HAND IS CHARGED WITH A BANK ROBBERY

EL PASO—Charged with robbing the First National bank at Hatch, N. M., June 1, a man booked as G. Redding, 32, of Big Lake, Texas, was arrested Thursday at the Burris ranch, four miles east of Cambary, N. M.

A posse consisting of sheriffs and deputies from Las Vegas, Deming and Silver City arrested Redding as he was milking a cow in the ranch corral at 6 a. m. He offered no resistance and refused to discuss the holdup.

Coke Johnson, bank cashier, and Bert Landrie, a patron who was in the bank at the time of the hold-up, said Redding was the man who helped up the bank and escaped with $2000.

Elsie Jarnigan, waitress at the Comex Hotel, said she served pie and milk to Redding shortly before the holdup. J. A. Harris, Hatch Mercantile Co., said he sold cookies to Redding.

In Redding's papers was a civil airplane pilot's license No. 6695, of officers said.

The Hatch bank bandit rode out of town on a black horse. Members of the posse said they found a black horse at the ranch.

Redding has been working at the ranch for several months. Members of the posse who arrested the suspect are Sheriff Dick Triviz of Las Cruces and Deputies Jack Robertson and Joe Gonzalez; Sheriff Jesse Thorne, Deming, and Deputies John Casey, Silver City and Deputy H. A. Harrington.

Excited Voice Tells Over Phone of Lost Bonds

PHILADELPHIA, June 10. (UP)—Two thieves used a clever ruse in robbing the Girard Trust company of $200,000 in negotiable bonds today.

The bonds were received from a Pennsylvania company for insuring lives and granting annuities, and were turned over to Erwin Siero, administrative clerk, for checking. A telephone rang and an excited voice said "Ruse" and "Rounds" had been left on the counter in another room.

Siero dashed out and upon returning found the bonds for a try. The method was similar to that which mulched New York banking houses of a million dollars.

JAPANESE LANTERNS

The people of Japan have made about as thoroughgoing a use of modern inventions, in the past generation, as anyone else. Recent events in Manchuria and Shanghai have shown that their army and navy are as up-to-date as any on earth; and the Japanese cities have about as much to show in the way of modern equipment as any cities in Europe and America.

Just the same, some of the old customs evidently die hard.

A news photograph appeared the other day showing Japanese police on guard outside the residence of the late Premier Inukai just after his recent assassination. They looked precisely like any policemen—except that each one carried, along with his weapons, a typical, lawn-festival Japanese lantern!

To most of us, Japanese lanterns are just things you hang up at garden parties. But apparently they're still regulation equipment for the ultra-modern and efficient Tokyo police force.

Coolidge and Tunney Quit ---What Will La Garbo Do?

Here is the gallery of those who "quit while they had it," topped by a picture of Greta Garbo, now considering retirement from movie stardom at 27. Calvin Coolidge, upper right, turned down another chance at the presidency and retired to Northampton, Mass. Gene Tunney, lower right, made a million and quit when heavyweight champion of the world. Marion Talley, lower left, made a fortune in a few years as a Metropolitan star and at 24 retired to a Kansas wheat farm. John W. Gates, in circle, made $100,000,000, then walked out of New York in 1904 while in his prime as a market master.

They say that Greta wants to go back home to star in Hamlet under a European director. Charlie Chaplin always has wanted to be filmed as the Prince of Denmark.

Chaplin wants a chance to show his real dramatic talent as a relief from comedy. Greta wants to highlight her career with a role that does not depend on the ineffable lure of her distinctive beauty.

She has made few friends. She has been admirably handled by her press representatives. An aura of mysticism surrounds her. Yet she is human enough to have labored like a slave to perfect her part in "Grand Hotel."

The fact is admitted that Crawford outdraws Garbo at the box office. Does the canny girl from Sweden desire to retire before time strips her the legend of fame?

When Marion Talley announced that she would rather listen to the music of the combines and reapers on her Kansas wheat farm the world doubted her. She had had a remarkable career. At 24 she had climbed from obscure girlhood to star roles on the Metropolitan stage. Then she said, "I do not care for wealth and fame. I would rather be happy on my own farm." Inside of six months she was out of the picture.

At the age of 30 Tunney was heavyweight champion. He avowed his intention of knocking the world loose from a million. In a moment of juvenile laxness he said he never would marry.

Within a year he had his million and also a bride out of the social register. The political savants spent nearly a year trying to interpret the Delphian statement of Calvin Coolidge. Most of them thought he would run again. But he seeped out of politics and closed the door behind him.

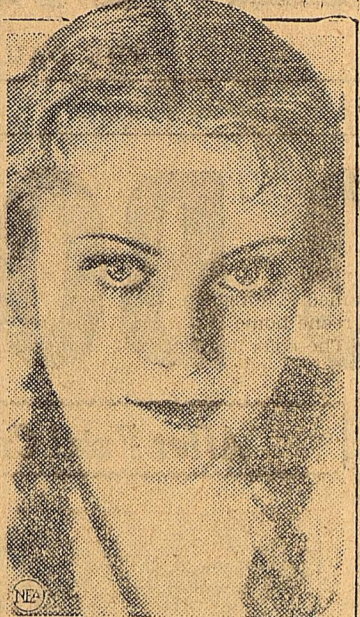

Hollywood has known for years that Greta Garbo longs for Stockholm and a new fame there in her homeland. But it is hard for them to believe that she would abandon the business of making money in job-lot quantities. She is known to be frugal and simple in her life and affairs. She has a liking for money because of what it will mean to her back home.

Unprejudiced observers believe, however, that her very simplicity insures the sincerity of her intention to quit. Asked for details of her life, Greta Garbo once said, "I was born in a house. I grew up like everybody else. I didn't like to go to school."

At 27 she apparently does not choose to run along any further on the precarious path of movie stardom. She will add lustre to the group of those who "quit while they had it."

Greatest users of perfume were probably the Greeks, Romans and Egyptians several centuries B. C. They used it on their fingers, furniture, clothes, and had special scents for every part of their bodies. Lions in captivity are said to grow better manes than those living in a wild state.

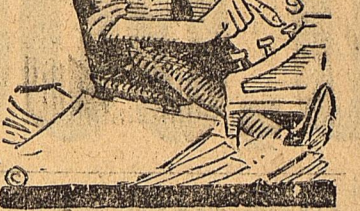

Makes Movies

If Greta Garbo should make good her threat, "I've said, I go home," blond Anna-Lisa Ericsson, above, may be one of the candidates to succeed her. She is a great favorite in Sweden, where La Garbo used to clerk in a department store.

"Give us this day our daily (corn) bread (which Coolidge tried to make us eat for four years, and Hoover had us eat in three months). And lead us not into temptation to vote for another republican. President Hoover has all the power, Mellon all the money, Rockefeller all the oil, and the farmer the patched pants. Forever and ever. Amen!"

I heard of one man with the right idea. When his daughter announced that she was going to get married, he invited the prospective husband over for a month to see if he could afford to board him.

They tell it on Al Luskamp that he came down the day after his baby boy arrived, declaring that the boy was healthy and that the neighbors said he was the very image of Al. Whereupon another geologist said: "Well, why worry about his looks as long as he's healthy?"

"I get a lot of kick out of bridge when playing opposite my wife," said Arthur Yeager, rubbing his shins.

Beauty Grilled in Death

Facing Scotland Yard questioners, Mrs. Elvia Dolores Barney, daughter of Sir John Ashley Mullins, told her story of the shooting of Michael Scott Stephen, son of a banker, who was found slain in her fashionable London apartment after what she termed an all-night cocktail party. Mrs. Barney said she struggled with Stephen for possession of a revolver. An accidental discharge killed him, she said. Mrs. Barney, whose marriage to an American singer recently was dissolved, was released in custody of her father.

CHAPTER XV
When the District Attorney, accompanied by two assistants, walked down the aisle of the police court, the room was crowded. News of the arrest of Moffett had spread like wildfire. Every seat was taken, men stood up against the walls, as they gathered together as they could jam.

Moffett's hand brushed his face nervously.
'I'd forgotten—I'd forgotten that part of it. I did go there, but, but—'
'But what?' asked the District Attorney.

'I have nothing more to say,' Moffett said, his lips obstinately set.
'You had at that time!' said Mr. Grant, and lifted the lid of the humidor. From it came Osgood's voice, asking 'Cigar?' And then Moffett's voice replying, 'I don't want anything from you.'

"It's a tie," he shouted. "Cooked up! Part of it's my voice, the rest was taken."

'Where is he?' Erskine called to an attendant. 'Bring him here.'
Moffett, bedraggled, face swollen, traces of blood still on it, strutted up in front of the police judge, who leaned down towards him.
'Moffett, do you want an attorney to represent you?'
'Not in a case as flimsy as this,' replied the accused in a loud voice. 'Your Honor, why go on with the hearing at this time?' asked the District Attorney.

'I demand an immediate hearing,' said Moffett as loudly as he could.
'All right,' said Erskine brusquely, 'and you're going to get it. And draw J. Moffett, you are accused of the murder of Judge William Osgood. What have you got to say? Guilty or not guilty?'
'Not guilty. Why I haven't seen Osgood in weeks.'
'Well, Mr. Grant,' said Judge Erskine turning to the District Attorney.

'Mr. Grant addressed himself to the defendant. 'You say you haven't seen Osgood in weeks?' He swung sharply towards the presiding judge. 'Your Honor, we will establish the fact that two nights ago Moffett went to Osgood's house that the men quarreled and that Moffett, in a fit of rage, beat him to death with this—' the District Attorney paused, and then with dramatic suddenness produced from his bag the black ebony ruler with which Moffett had actually threatened Osgood—'with this stick.' He brought the ruler down with a crash on the judge's desk, and let it stay there. 'That, briefly is our case. I ask that the prisoner be held for the action of the grand jury.'

'A flutter of movement, a low hum of voices was heard in the court room.
Judge Moffett took up the challenge thrown to him by the District Attorney.
'The District Attorney says I went to Osgood's house. Who saw me? Where are his witnesses?' He says I killed Osgood. Who saw that?' He turned abruptly to Erskine. 'Judge, I ask my immediate discharge.'
The Police Judge looked at the District Attorney. 'Well, Mr. Grant?'
'Your Honor, the evidence in this case is so extraordinary that it would be beyond belief if we did not have to believe it.'

Morning worship at 11 o'clock. Sermon theme: 'Never Man Spake Like This Man.'

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH
Winston Borum, Pastor

'The End of the World' will be the subject of the pastor Sunday morning at 11:00. We all know its coming—but mighty little about it. That's something the history or experience of man cannot reveal, as there has never been anything like it before. But what does the Bible say? If you are interested in a discussion of the Second Coming of Christ, the Judgement of the Great White Throne, and the final winding up of the affairs of this world, then be on hand promptly.

Woman's Place Is in the News
Woman Creates New Job
In order that he dogs won't bark nights and disturb the neighbors, Mrs. Dorothy Eagles, of Chicago, has hired a 'dog soother,' a man who stays with the dogs nights and pats them and quiets them if they get noisy.

Makes Life-like Dolls
The art of producing perfectly life-like dolls has been carried to new heights by the German artist, Kaethe Kruse whose elaborate exhibit at the Leipzig Fair attracted international attention. Mrs. Kruse, who is a sculptress, takes her work very seriously believing that the dolls has a great mission in awakening the mother instinct in children and hence its importance. The bodies of her dolls consist of an ingenious framework of flexible and rigid parts forming the "skeleton," which in turn is covered with soft substances producing a warm, loosely jointed body.

Unbroken Record
No woman athlete has ever broken the 1924 record of Mary K. Browne. In that year she was a finalist in both the national golf and tennis championships, a distinction no other woman has ever shared.

Out of 237 girls graduating from Vassar College, 98 have achieved a record.

First Christian church, Sunday School at 9:45. Communion service 10:45. All members urged to be present Sunday morning for discussion of special matters of vital importance to the church.

New York Giants Meet Their New Boss—Bill Terry

Dog Braves Blaze to Rescue Children, Joins Fire Force

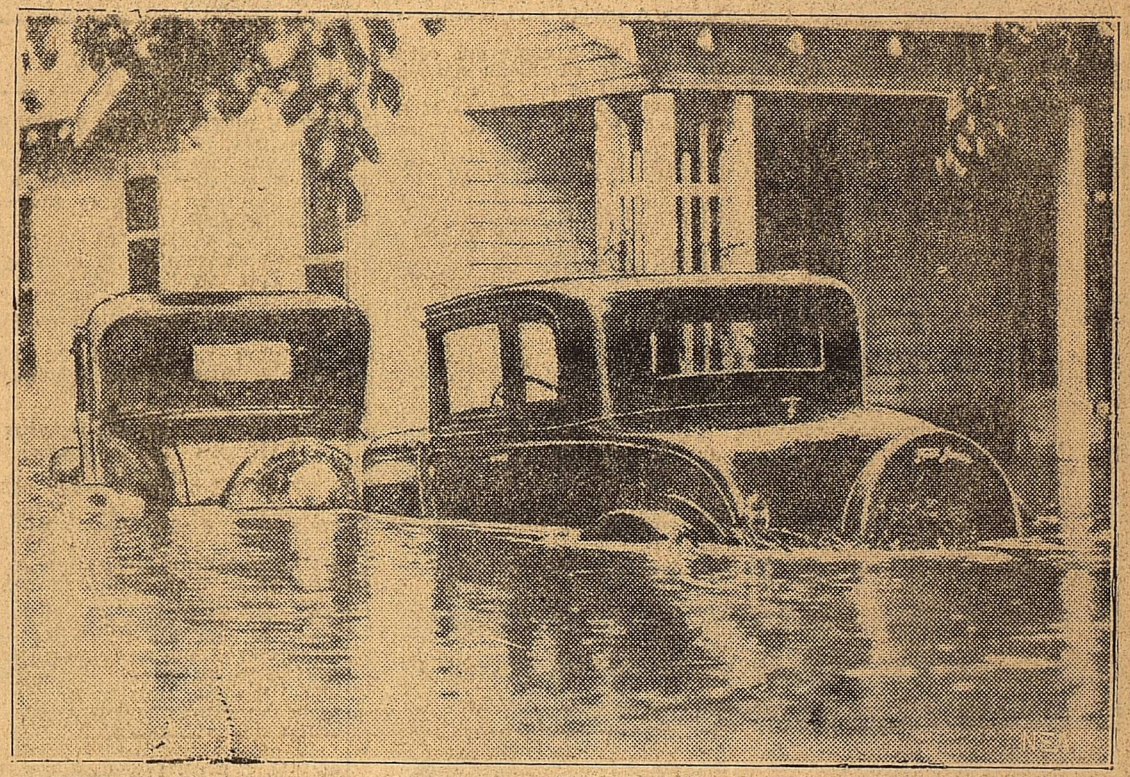

When flames swept the frame dormitory of the Tulsa (Okla.) Boys' Home, "Mike," the home's mascot, plunged into the building and awakened the caretaker and 15 youthful charges, all of whom escaped injury. Here you see "Mike" being rewarded for his valor. A. P. Bowles, Tulsa fire and police commissioner, gives him a hearty handshake while making him an honorary member of Engine Company 5. Miss Lorraine Simmons, the commissioner's secretary, pins the fireman's badge on "Mike's" collar.

Last Shot of Ill Fated Airplane

In Oklahoma Flood Tragedy

A thousand oil workers were made homeless, five persons were drowned and hundreds of homes engulfed when the North Canadian river went on a rampage and flooded the southern section of Oklahoma City and the surrounding country for ten miles. The photo shows an Oklahoma City home caught in the flood, the water rising above the wheels of the automobiles in the foreground.

Sheepskin Business Is Booming

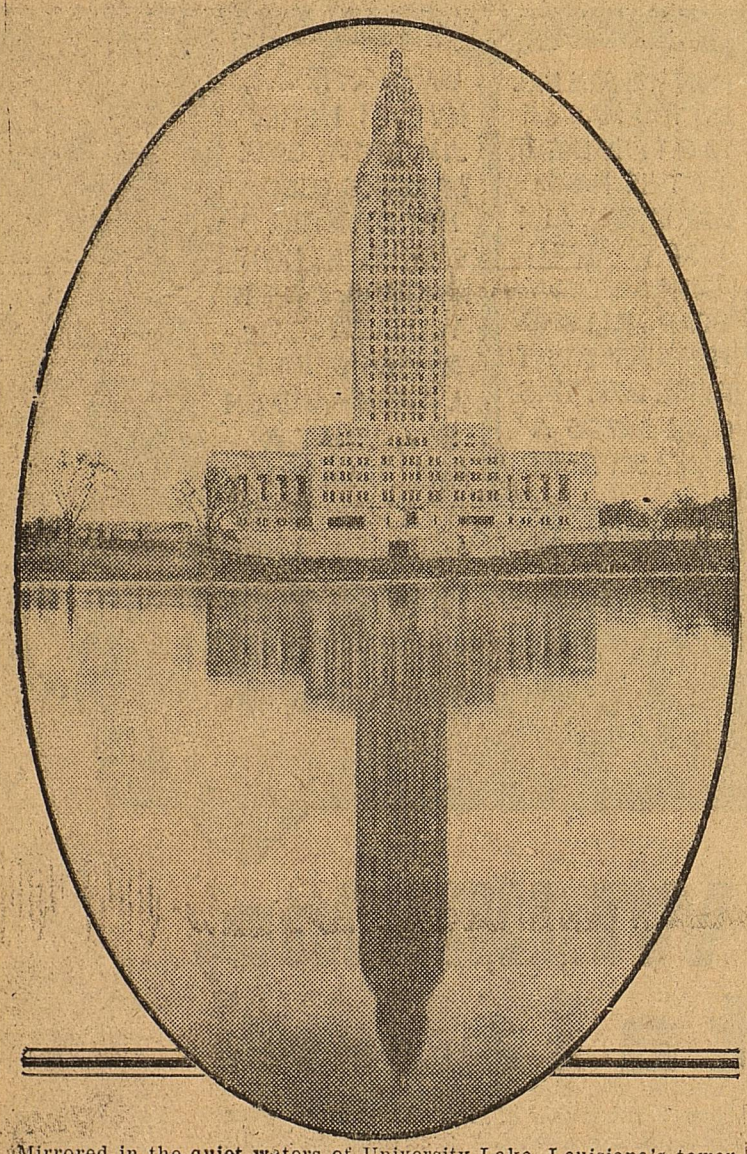

Here's the impressive scene as the nation's largest university graduated its 5227 senior students. While Columbia's cap-and-gown graduates (in foreground) listened to the commencement address of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, university president, 20,000 spectators looked on.

Wants 'Family'

Having flown the Atlantic twice, "there's nothing left for me to do but raise a family," Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, above, told reporters when she arrived at Paris from Cherbourg with her husband, George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher. "I've been so busy since my marriage," she said, "that I haven't had time to think of children. But I'll doubtless get around to that pretty soon."

Louisiana's Skyscraper-Capitol Awaits New Chief Executive

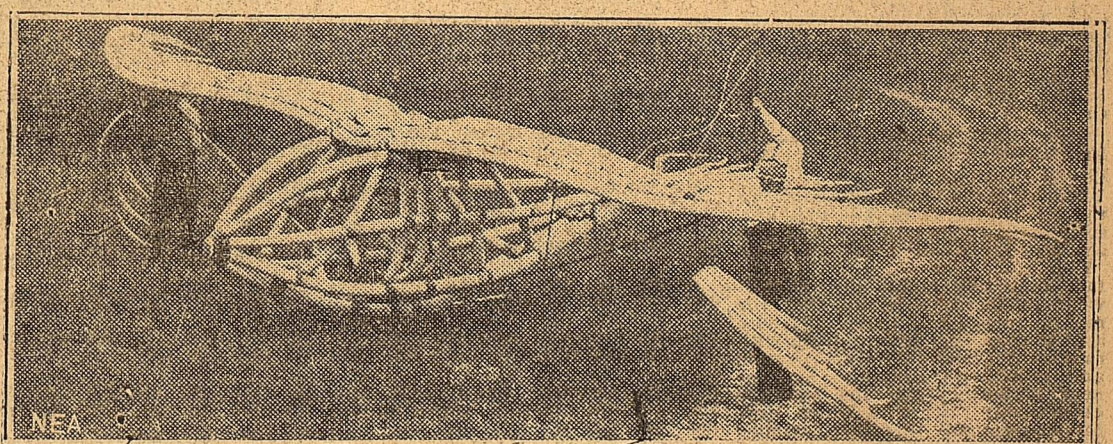

Mirrored in the quiet waters of University Lake, Louisiana's towering new capitol building at Baton Rouge is pictured here as it awaits formal dedication May 16 when Governor-elect O. K. Allen is inaugurated into office. The capitol, built at a cost of $5,000,000, is said to be the tallest building in the south. It is 33 stories in height, its topmost part being 439 feet from the ground. The lake reflecting the rear of the building in this striking photo, once was a bayou upon which, tradition says, stood a red stick from which Baton Rouge derived its name. The stick divided the hunting grounds of two Indian tribes.

"And Now You're a Real Officer—"

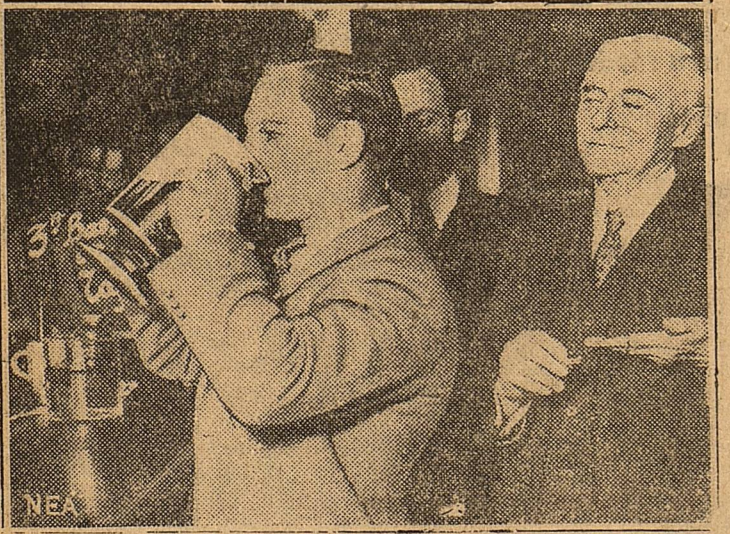

Envy of his fellow graduates of the U. S. Naval Academy was Midshipman Richard Mendlehorn, honor student of his class. For, as you see here, it was pretty Mabel Dyer of Baltimore, Md., who pinned on his shoulders the epaulettes designating his new rank of ensign in the navy. Four hundred and twelve midshipmen received diplomas in exercises at Annapolis, Md.

It's a Bird of an Idea for a Glider

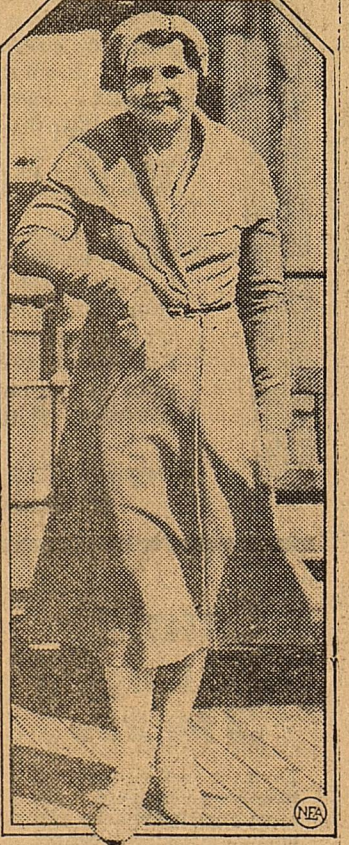

There's a shock in store for Washington bird-lovers when they see this strange "creature" winging over the capital. It's a glider, patterned in shape after a goose. The maze of rubber tubes that form the body have been inflated, automobile-tire hardness. The machine will be covered with fabric and the clay-like flappers hanging beneath the wings will be used in an effort to maintain flight by man-power.

Bottoms Up—in 13 Seconds!

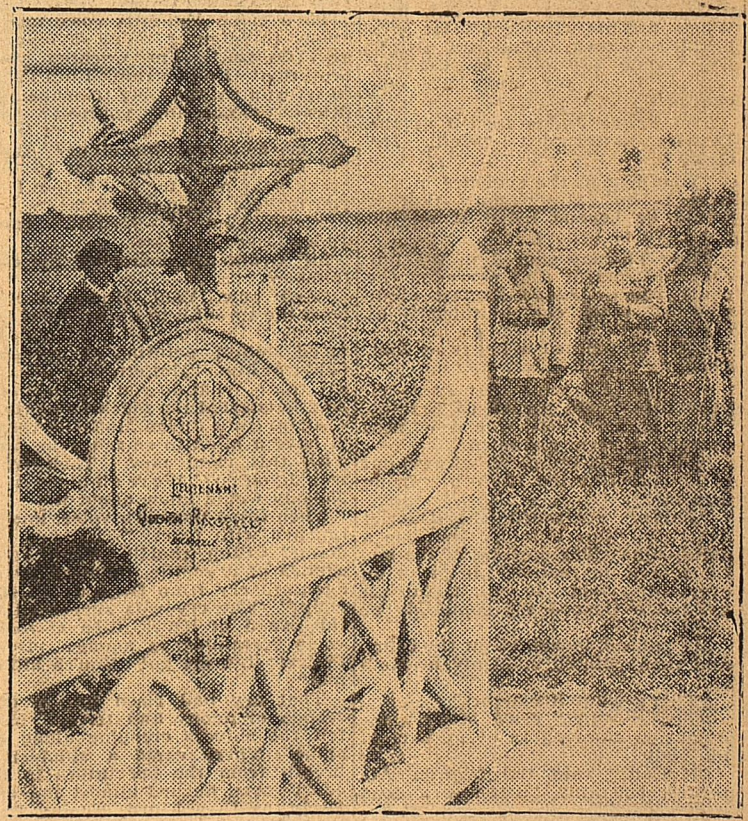

Only thirteen seconds and gulps were required for Jack Robbins, a Heidelberg University student from Bridgeport, Conn., to empty this half-gallon stein in a Paris beer-drinking contest. The best previous record was 17 seconds.

Honor Memory of Quentin Roosevelt

Memorial Day ceremonies in France included this simple ceremony at the grave of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt. The flyer was killed in action July 14, 1918, and was buried at the spot where he fell. Here you see Major Clifford Church reading a prayer at the grave. At extreme right is Mrs. Alice Green Hoffmann, an aunt of Quentin Roosevelt, who was a son of President Theodore Roosevelt.

'Sweet Charity'

Society's loss is charity's gain when Miss Helen Robbins, pretty and popular debutante of Washington and New York, pens her regrets to hostesses. For Miss Robbins (pictured above), the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, gives much of her time to charity. Her father is chief of the division of protocol in the Department of State.

FEAR FEEL

LONDON, (UP) Many Londoners seem to be in constant fear that St. Paul's Cathedral will either crash to earth some day soon, or sink away into the ground on which it rests. The newspapers recently have carried long stories about both possibilities. There is a far more logical basis for the sinking theory than for the more disastrous one. Gigantic St. Paul's together with most of the City of London is only cunningly balanced on wet sand, with its foundations no deeper at any point than four and a half feet below the crypt floor. As long as the sand remains wet, there is no peril, but during droughts the Cathedral already sings several thousandths of an inch. If the underground springs and streams which keep the sand moist were dammed by excavations for any huge modern building nearby, St. Paul's then would be doomed.

Citizens of New Orleans, the world-famous home of good cooking, crossing busy Canal Street during a downpour of rain.

Wherever good cooking is the rule, there Morton's Iodized Salt is the favorite. For good cooks appreciate not only its savor but the fact that it never cakes or hardens. Made with cube-shaped crystals, which tumble off one another instead of sticking together like the flake crystals of inferior salts, it pours just as freely on rainy days as on dry! And it also saves children from simple goiter, a cause of loss of appetite, lack of vigor and backwardness at school. Yet it costs but 10c a month!
