AUSTIN, June 7, (UP)—Penalty suits against East Texas operators for alleged violations of the railroad commission prorations orders were planned in conferences here today.

At the request of John E. Taylor, county attorney of Gregg county, the commission agreed to aid in assembling evidence, the attorney general's office to assist in prosecution.

Sunday Rains Cause Trains to Be Late

Terrific downpour of rain in the Ranger area Sunday afternoon and night, flooding the Texas & Pacific railroad track, halted traffic for several hours yesterday and accounted for delayed trains and buses on westbound schedules. Rainfall at Ranger gauged 7.5 inches.

A section of the track near Strawn, east of Ranger, was under water and it was found necessary to strengthen weakened piling before trains could proceed into Ranger, where two freight and one passenger train were held up Monday morning. Three miles west of Ranger flood waters of Colony creek submerged the tracks and halted all traffic until midday.

Both branches of the Leon river near Eastland were reported at flood stage. In spite of the heavy downpour at Ranger, there was no general rise.

Rain amounting to 4.4 inches fell at Lake Abilene dam and on the watershed Sunday night, bringing an immediate three-inch rise in the water level. At Buffalo Gap the fall was nearly an inch.

Abilene's rainfall amounted to only .13 inch, but that brought the year's total to 18.77, which is more than twice that for the same period last year—8.77 inches.

Roscoe reported one half inch, accompanied by heavy wind, and the Champion community a few miles southwest of there received one inch.

A check showed Cisco, Putnam, Throckmorton and Stamford each got an inch of rain; Childress, Clarendon, Wellington, Shamrock and Memphis, one and a half inches; Camey three inches and a heavy hail that did slight damage to property. Haskell, one quarter inch; Sonora and Elk Lake, a sprinkling.

West bound trains and buses were late at Midland as a result of the rains east.

Two Killed in Cisco Plane Crash

CISCO, June 7.—Elmer E. Mosley and George A. Fox of Fort Worth were killed instantly Monday afternoon when the airplane in which they were flying crashed in the residential section here.

Mosley, who held a department of commerce commercial license, was piloting the plane. The accident occurred about 2:30.

Witnesses to the mishap said the ship, while flying at an altitude of 500 feet, attempted to gain altitude when it went into a stall and nosed-dived to the ground. It did not catch fire.

Bodies of both men were badly mangled. Mosley was completely decapitated, his left foot cut off and his legs crushed.

The plane barely missed the home of D. Hazel, falling in the front yard. Shade trees and shrubs were torn down, but the house was undamaged. The home is located in a popular residential section of Cisco.

Cards and bank books found in their clothes indicated Mosley was connected with the Santa Fe railroad yards at Fort Worth, while Fox was a professional wrestler there. The latter lived in Dallas before going to Fort Worth.

PRODUCTION OF CRUDE IN THE U. S. UNCHANGED

TULSA, June 7, (UP)—Crude production remained unchanged in a report issued today by the Oil and Gas Journal.

There had been considerable fluctuations in various regions, striking a balance with the increase in Oklahoma and Texas by a decline in California and the Rocky mountain states.

The Journal estimated the decline at 1,580 barrels, to 2,169,905 barrels. Texas rose 12,893 barrels to a total of 891,288.

The east Texas field reported a daily average increase of 15,257 barrels to a total of 349,922.

Members Religious Order Pass Through

Traveling by special buses from Canada and the extreme eastern section of the United States to the far west for their annual conference, 47 members of the Church of Brethren in Christ stopped in Midland briefly Friday to re-fuel the buses.

Each man in the party had a long flowing Van Dyke beard and the women wore black, silken bonnets and broad prayer veils.

The movement from the east to the west started in Canada, explained Bishop J. T. Giner of Manheim, Penn., who was at the head of the group. Others were added at Pennsylvania and Naperville, Ind., where two modern buses were chartered for the remainder of the trip.

"We are not a large church," said Bishop Giner, "but we are very devout. We believe in the baptism of believers by immersion, in the ordinance of washing the saints' feet, in modest, uniform, non-conformity to the world in dress, in non-resistance in a qualified sense—and are against war, duelling, suicide or murder, as well as other forms of life-taking."

"Yes, we believe in the wearing of beards," said the bishop, "but like all churches, there has been some breaking away. The women all wear bonnets and the black veiling."

Headquarters of the congregation are at Farrisburg, Penn., at the Messiah Rescue and Benevolent Home. There are about 6,000 members in the United States, 9,000 in the Arian mission field, 200 or more in India.

DAN JACKSON ENTERS RACE FOR CONGRESS

Dan M. Jackson, 56, Monday announced he will be a candidate for United States representative from the 16th district on a platform of submitting prohibition to a vote of the people and returning control of liquor traffic to the states, according to a letter received here by Homer W. Rowe, county democratic chairman.

Jackson will oppose U. S. Rep. R. E. Thomason, who is a candidate for reelection.

In announcing his candidacy, Jackson said he is resigning as special assistant to the United States attorney general, which position he has held since 1923.

Jackson said that he favors a referendum on the question of repeal of the 18th amendment.

"I advocate abiding by the results of such a referendum," he said, "I believe in local self-government and in relegating control of the liquor traffic to the states."

Jackson said that if he is elected he will work for river reclamation and other projects that will benefit the 16th congressional district.

He favors "doing everything possible for disabled American veterans."

Jackson was born in Falls county, Texas. He has been a resident of El Paso for 23 years. Although he has lived recently in Washington he never has voted anywhere except in El Paso. His family lives there.

Jackson is an attorney under Mayor Charles Davis, and judge of the 34th district court for six years. He was commissioned a major in the army in 1919 and made a member of the Judge Advocate General Corps by Secretary of War Newton D. Baker.

He was a member of a sub-committee which investigated Mexican affairs.

Jackson will visit every county in the district during his campaign, he wrote.

Czarist Regime Is Cause Fort Worth Director's Success

FORT WORTH, Tex., (UP)—Stripped of his wealth by czarist absolutism and forced to start out for himself, a young Polish-Jew came to the United States, by chance, and found success in American musical spheres.

He is now a highly prized orchestral conductor for a nationally known theatre company at a Fort Worth theatre.

Like many of his race, Hyman, Hyman Maurice, was deprived of vast wealth by the Russian czarist government when the attempt in 1908 to overthrow the monarchy was blamed on the Jews. Thrown on the world he turned to his favorite pursuit, music.

His musical career goes back to the Polish city of Lodz, where one of a family of four children, he became a favorite of a wealthy grandfather. When Hyman was four he begged for a violin. The grandfather, a violin lover, purchased one for him.

Hyman studied several years under a concert master. Then at nine his grandfather sent him to a Conservatory in Warsaw.

He returned to his native city and had won two scholarships.

Came 1908 and the Jewish persecution. His grandfather's estate was seized and Hyman's wealth-to-be was gone. As opportunities presented he played in cheap cafes and on the streets to earn food and shelter. Many days he combed the few railway tracks for stray coal to keep warm.

This life he endured for 10 years. In 1918 he was able to join the Russian Symphony orchestra, touring Europe and which brought him to America. The American tour was not successful, financially, and in Detroit he had to get a job as substitute in a theatre orchestra.

One night the orchestra was scheduled to play the difficult "Wil-cadets" and enlisted men. The regular director unexpectedly was stricken with pneumonia. The substitute was not present. More as a job to do, he took the baton into his hand and told him to direct.

Someone shoved a box under the dimly lit Maurice to make him blind. He saw a green light. He was confident. Hadn't he won a scholarship for conducting in the Royal Conservatory at Warsaw?

He became a touring musical director in the Public Theatre company, the Rialto, New York, and other large theatres where his work-shops. In 1928 he came to Fort Worth to open a new theatre. He has lived here since, except for a few engagements, and he calls Texas his home.

"I guess I'm a full-fledged American," he said. "Next to music, I had rather watch a baseball game than do anything else."

WESNER CEMENTS TOOLS

J. D. Wesner of San Angelo has made financial arrangements to run cement in his No. 1 W. R. Nicks, Schleicher county wildcat 1 3-4 miles northeast of Eldorado, to sidetrack tools last Jan. 25 and to complete his 6,200-foot contract unless production is obtained at a lesser depth.

At present Wesner is cementing the bottoms of two water tanks which were damaged Wednesday night when apparently an effort was made to steal them. Four locks on tool boxes were broken and the tanks were moved after their contents were dumped. The bottoms of the tanks were found to be leaky the attempt to truck them off evidently was abandoned. Wesner reported the loss of a number of screw drivers, wrenches and over 60 gallons of gasoline.

Tools lost in No. 1 Nicks at one time were raised 1,700 feet off bottom up in the casing but the line broke and the string dropped to within 175 feet of the bottom. Whenever clearing out progressed to the point where fishing could be resumed the hole would cave. Credited with having obtained a good showing of oil and gas at 4,000-06 feet around 180 feet higher than a corresponding smaller showing in Phillips-Interstate's No. 1 J. A. Whitten, No. 1 Nicks is expected to test the horizon from which No. 1 Whitten headed oil for three days from 4,912-35 feet.

The Wesner test has an elevation of 2,406 feet compared to the Phillips-Interstate's 2,333. It is four miles east and two miles south of No. 1 Whitten and 2,310 feet from the north line and 2,362 feet from the east line of section 77, block LL, T. C. Ry. Co. survey.

WILL GUARD BONUS VETS TREK ROUTE

Unit Reported Ready To Combat Police During Parade

WASHINGTON, June 7, (UP)—Police leaves were cancelled and forces were strengthened today for supervision of the bonus army as authorities disclosed an alleged communist plot to foment rioting during a parade this afternoon of veterans to the capitol.

Police Chief Pelham Glassford said he had learned that communists were organizing a unit of 100 to combat police along the parade route which had been changed to miss the White House.

The route was being roped to prevent disorders. The chief said he was not anticipating an outbreak from veterans, but only from communists.

Although the food supply was expected to be exhausted by Thursday, the army still was growing today. One thousand joined yesterday and last night.

Texarkana Allows Vets to Board Ferry

TEXARKANA, June 7, (UP)—Five hundred veterans boarded a fast freight at 4:45 this morning for Little Rock, after a delay of from twelve to thirty-six hours. City, county and railroad officials met last night, vowing to allow the veterans to move.

Communist Plot Discovered Monday

WASHINGTON, June 7.—With the bonus army of nearly 4,000 split sharply over leadership, Brigadier General P. D. Glassford, superintendent of police, announced last night the uncovering of a communist plot to interfere with force with the veterans' parade today.

Failing to gain a foothold in the army demanding cash payment of the soldiers' bonus, Glassford laid out a plan for "an organization of 100 men into a compact fighting unit to combat the police."

His statement said:

"Reliable information concerning communist plans discussed at three recent meetings at 1105 New Hampshire avenue, N. W., indicated that communists might attempt to interfere for 'an organization of 100 men into a compact fighting unit to combat the police.'"

"At a recent meeting one of the communist speakers said that there could be no gain lobbying; that what was needed was force by bloodshed or otherwise. Plans were then laid for an organization of 100 men into a compact fighting unit to combat the police."

"Pennsylvania avenue will be roped off in order that the situation may be handled by the police should there be any interference with the veterans' parade."

"No difficulty whatsoever is anticipated with the veterans who will participate in the parade. The police department will do everything possible to prevent any interference with the march by outside agencies."

In a quorum of the legislative committee of the bonus army gathered at one of the encampments, formally declared George Alman, Portland, Ore., to be commander-in-chief.

Late in the day a quorum of the committee met, unseated Alman and gave the commander-in-chiefship to W. C. Cox, Portland, Ore. Alman took office in the morning for his first few hours as commander after the resignation of Walter W. Waters, originator of the "on to Washington" movement for the bonus seekers.

More conservative elements among the veterans objected to Alman's radical tendencies, especially to an assertion by him that he expected to give communism "a thought" after the bonus question was settled.

Alman's friends, by bringing outsiders into the committee, forced (See BONUS MARCH page 4)

AN ENCOURAGING STAGE

The argument between President Hoover and Speaker Garner over the latter's proposal for federal unemployment relief marks a new stage in the discussion of the problem.

Until comparatively recently, the main issue at Washington was, Shall the federal government spend money to relieve the situation or shall it leave the entire problem up to the states, the cities and private charity?

Now it seems to be taken for granted that federal funds are to be used. We are witnessing, now, not an argument about whether the job is to be done, but an argument about how it is to be done. This is encouraging. Details of the different plans may vary profoundly; but at least all hands seem to be agreed that some sort of plan must be passed.

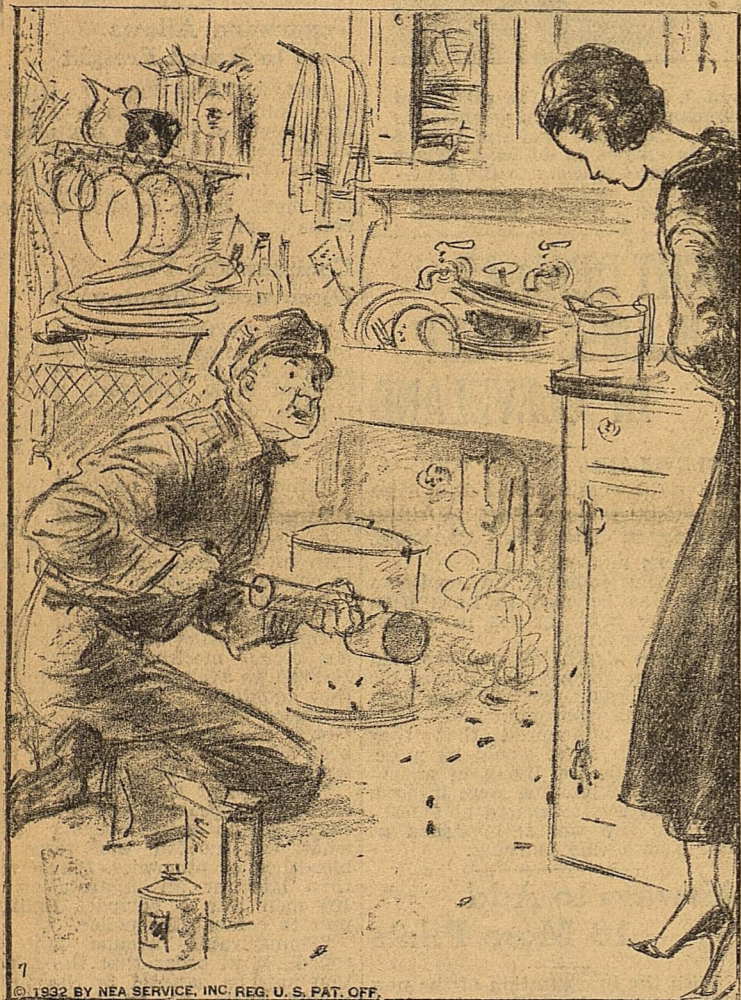

THE PENALTY OF HIGH OFFICE

Now that Mayor Walker's examination by Judge Seabury has receded into the background a bit, it is possible to see that regardless of any questions as to the man's fitness for the office of mayor the whole business has re-emphasized one old but often forgotten fact—that a public official must keep his financial and business affairs above even a hint of suspicion.

What would be proper for a private citizen to do can be highly unwise for a public official. He must not only avoid corruption; he must avoid anything that remotely looks like corruption. It is not enough for him to be upright; he must see to it that no one has the slightest reason for implying that he isn't upright.

The mayor of a great city can have no "private life." That is one of the penalties of holding high office.

CHAPTER XII Lawyer Thomas H. Haskins listened with the closest attention to the story Mike Thomas was telling him, and as he listened his hand reached unobtrusively towards Mike and covered the front of a souvenir program upon which was printed: 'BANQUET GIVEN BY THOMAS H. HASKINS AND ASSOCIATES IN HONOR OF JUDGE ANDREW J. MOFFETT.' After a time the attorney withdrew his hand, still unobtrusively, without taking his eyes off his visitor, and dropped the program into a drawer. "That's the whole lay-out," said Mike, ending his story of his wife's imprisonment, her own account of her experience, and his suspicions of Lil Baker's connection with the matter. "I know it sounds crazy, Mr. Haskins, but there must be some connection between Judge Moffett and this dame, and I'm going to find out what it is."

"It does sound incredible," agreed Mr. Haskins, a middle-aged, florid, heavy-set Irishman with just a trace of brogue in his voice. "It is almost unbelievable. If your suspicions are correct, it's the most outrageous thing I've ever heard of." He thought intently for a moment and then spoke with frank heartiness. "I'm going to help you get to the bottom of this, my boy." "Thanks. They told me you were a square guy." "I promise you one thing: if I put my hands to this I'll stay with it to the end. We'll get Moffett! He sent your wife to prison. I'll send him there!" "That's fine!" said Mike, holding out his hands, which Haskins shook warmly. "Thanks." "Of course, you understand that what your wife told you makes good circumstantial evidence, but it's not legal proof. That's what we've got to get." Mr. Haskins got up and strode thoughtfully up and down his office. He stole several covert glances at his client as he paced. "I'll tell you," he said at length. "You wait here for me for a moment while I consult my partner. Two heads are better than one, you know." "Sure," agreed Mike. Haskins went into an inner office, closed the door tight and sat down at a desk and dialed a telephone number which he did not have to look up in the directory. Grogan put the telephone receiver down on the table in Judge Moffett's home. The Judge was stretched lazily out on the sofa, smoking a cigar and reading a newspaper. "It's Haskins, Judge, and he says it's very important." Moffett slid into the chair by the telephone desk. "Hello, Haskins. This is Moffett. What's up?" As he listened to Haskins' communication, Moffett's face was a study in incredulity, followed by fear and then a consuming anger. "The kid's almost crazy, you say? Yes, yes, I understand. We've got to do some fast thinking. . . . Hold on to the wire. . . . All right now; get this, and it's up to you to see that he does exactly what I say. . . . You just tell him to get back to Lil's apartment to get some proof—to get her to talk. That's all. . . . I'll take care of the lad from then on." He hung up and his face was still pale from fear and anger. "Grogan, I want two or three rough boys—very rough boys who don't get sick at their stomach very easily. Can you get them at once?" "Sure. I can lay my hands on just the guys you want. I'll phone 'em now." Haskins, after consulting with his partner, went back to his client. Mike stood up, an anxious, pleading look on his face. "I've just been talking over your story with my partner," said Haskins. "According to your story this woman—this Lil Baker—seems to like you pretty well, eh?" Mike nodded shortly. "Well, we think—my partner and I—that this is the way to go about it; you go over and see her at her apartment. See if you can get some admission out of her. Maybe she'll talk."

out the next step. We've got to be sure of our ground." Mike drove up to Lil's new apartment in his cab, revolving in his mind how he should go about getting the information from her he wanted without making love to her. The idea of the kisses they had exchanged, now that he had seen Mary and his faith in her had been restored, disgusted him. But he'd do even that, if it was necessary to get Mary out.

He left his cab in front of the steps and went slowly into the building. As he passed the first door three tough-looking young fellows stepped up and seized him by the arms. "Come on, buddy. We gotta talk to you. Make it nice and easy now and nobody'll get hurt."

Mike struggled to free his arm to defend himself as the third gangster hauled off and let him have a blow on the chin. He sank back into the arms of the other two, who half-carried, half-dragged him out to his own taxi, put him in and sat on either side of him while the third jumped into the driver's seat and started the engine.

Mike Thomas lay unconscious on the floor of what was apparently a deserted warehouse. A rough pine table, a chair or two—there was nothing else in the large room the windows of which were covered thick with grime and cobwebs.

Mike began to recover consciousness with a movement of the hands as though swimming. He opened his eyes and tried to raise his head only to have another douche of cold water thrown into his face. He spluttered, raised himself to a sitting position, and was at once yanked up to his feet by two of the gangsters and pushed roughly down into one of the chairs by the table.

"Listen, guy," one of the men was saying, "you got the wrong idea about a pal of ours. We want you to know that."

"What are you talking about?" asked Mike, his head clearing. "You've been going around shooting off your mouth about Judge Moffett," said another of the men. "He's a swell guy and you got him wrong. Now here's a little paper—sayin' you ain't got no complaint against the Judge—everything you said was wrong, and you know all the time your wife was 'ickin' up guys on the street."

"We're not asking you —we're telling you!"

7 out of 10 smokers inhale knowingly —the other 3 inhale unknowingly!

Do you inhale? Lucky Strike can meet the issue fairly and squarely. For it has solved the problem. Luckies' famous purifying process removes certain impurities that are concealed in even the choicest, mildest tobacco leaves. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it! Do you inhale? Of course you do. Every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette. And since you do inhale, make sure—make absolutely sure—your cigarette smoke is pure—is clean—that certain impurities have been removed, protect those delicate membranes!

40-MINUTE, 2-1 GAME PLAYED BY NAIL SACKERS AND NEWSIES; LOYD BURRIS DRIVES IN 4 WITH HOMER

Midland Hardware and The Reporter-Telegram played a 2-1 game last night in record time for the season, the Nail Sackers drawing out for a win in an affair enlivened by exactly 40 minutes good play despite a total of seven errors charged the two teams.

Both pitchers were right, Gemmill for the Newsies and Pyron for the winners. Pyron would have had a shut-out but for bobbies behind him. The Hardware led 2-0 until the seventh, when two errors coupled with one hit led to the only run. The newspapermen outfit the winners, 4 to 2, but the Hardware made four errors.

Hokus Pokus had the Texas Electric down 5-1 until the fourth, when the Electricians got to Miller for three hits, one a home run with the sacks loaded. This blow came from the bat of Mr. Loyd Burris, who used to create kindred excitement while wearing molekins for the high school. In this inning the Electricians scored 8 runs. Ten errors were made in the game, which was slow throughout.

Tonight's games bring Bell Telephone against Southern Ice at 7 and Cowden-Epley against the Petroleum Drug company at 8.

A permanent commander-in-chief will be elected later in the week by a special committee of six members, one each from the six "regiments" of veterans in the city.

The arrival of 50 trucks carrying western points in late afternoon swelled the number in Washington to nearly 4,000.

The veterans now are consuming the last food purchased with police funds, now exhausted. Glassford announced late in the day that today he would turn over to veteran leaders all moneys remaining from the receipts of a benefit sporting performance Wednesday night and would tell the men they must henceforth "shift for themselves."

Large groups were dispatched early in the day to the capitol in a continuation of the policy of firm persuasion to secure support for the bonus when it comes on the floor of the house June 13.

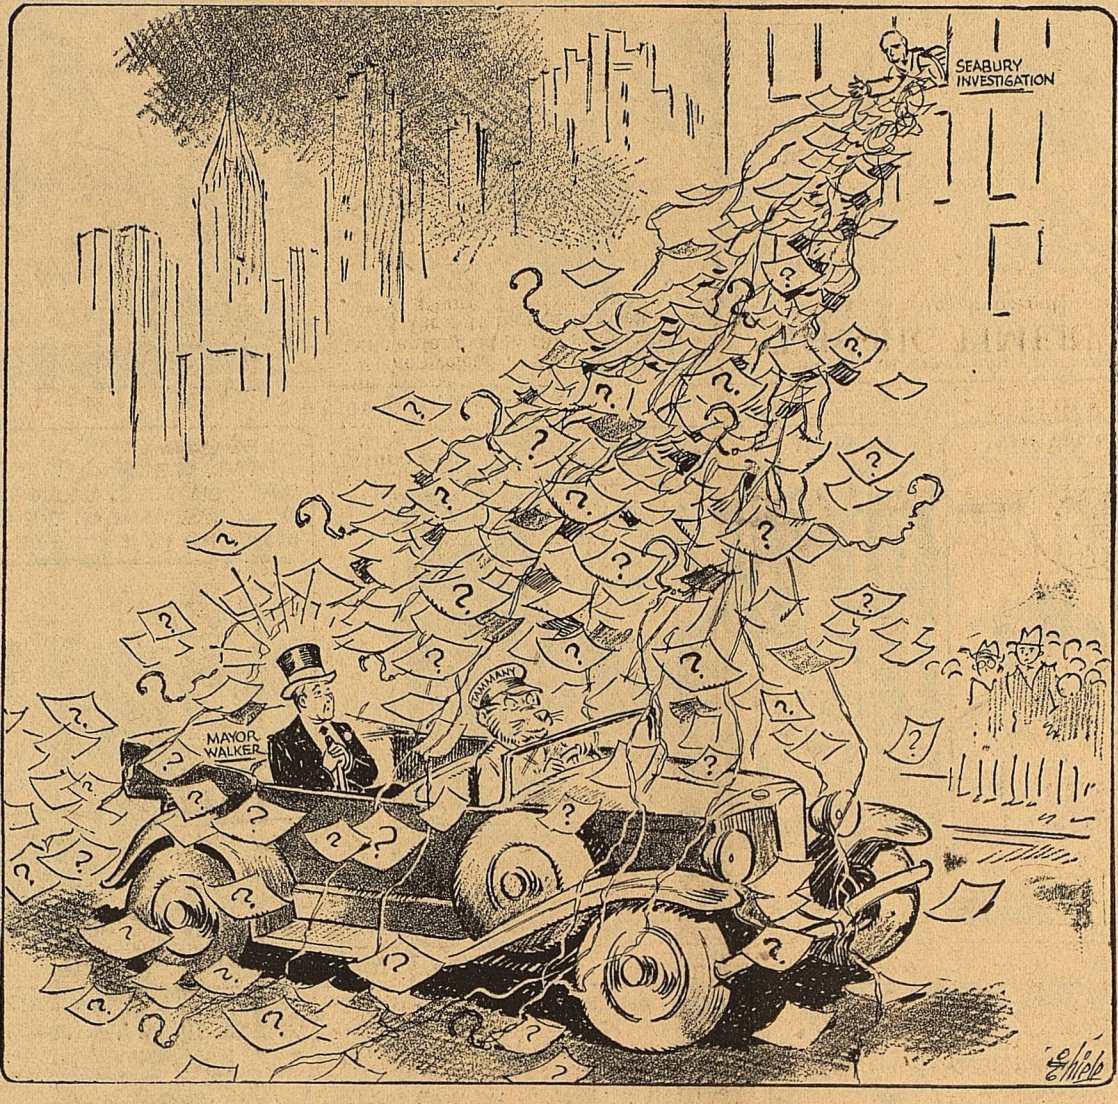

Speaker Garner threatened to clear the galleries when one group present cheered remarks complimentary to the veterans by Representative Blanton (Dem. Texas).

"We're going all the way something," she said. "I'm not afraid at all. All the boys are swell."

The bearded, overalled boys immediately showed their swiftness by taking up a collection to buy her queen a pair of overalls to replace the neat lavender dress in which she arrived.

Her husband, C. S. Arnold, Atlanta, Ga., was a dispatch rider in the 16th field artillery of the 31st division. He was wounded three times in the Argonne fighting.

"We had been placed near Phoenix, Ariz., but didn't have much luck," said Arnold. "We started walking on the highway and somebody gave us a lift to Lordsburg."

"A freight came along there with an empty refrigerator car. We rode it all the way to Ft. Worth. The trainmen didn't say a thing to us," added the wife. "The only thing I'm worried about is my mother. She's sick. If she knew I rode in a box car she'd probably die."

"When we get our money we're going home to her but we don't want her to know about it until then," said Arnold.

Lou Wiegall, a 16-year-old navy bugler during the war, became official bugler of the outfit when he arrived from El Paso in what he called his "side door special."

Wiegall was wounded when the battleship Wisconsin struck a mine during the war and for a time was bugler with Sousa's band.

Other notables in the array included Ike Berner, Dallas, five times wounded in the war and wearer of the distinguished service cross; the croix de guerre and a British decoration.

F. L. Hawkins, Austin, filed for judge of the court of criminal appeals.

J. H. Walker, Covington, is the only candidate listed for commissioner of the general land office.

A number of requests for "the inside story" of the mobbing of Umpire George Moriarty have been made of this department.

Several have written to ask how a group of ball players, in whom there is supposed to exist a spirit of fair play, could so forget themselves as to pick on one man.

But there is no inside story, unless it be that the White Sox for some time have looked upon George as their special enemy. It is common knowledge that George several times has cast aspersions at the managerial ability of Lew Fonseca, who was one of those fined for his part in the attack.

Lu Blue, White Sox first baseman, who had no part in the affair, has regarded Mr. Moriarty with an unkindly eye ever since he played under George's management in Detroit and was traded down the river to the Browns by the man who now is umpiring.

Why, Milton! But one of the funniest statements growing out of the fracas under the Cleveland grandstand was that of Milt Gaston, the pitcher who was the first to accept Moriarty's challenge. Gaston now is modestly willing to bet that he was really winning the bout when it was stopped.

If that is true Phil Scott ought to come back to this country and clean up with a demonstration of how a man can win a fight after he has been knocked out.

Our own idea of the bout between Moriarty and Gaston is that if it had not been stopped just when it was, Big Ed Morris would not be the only pitcher slain in combat this year.

From the Old Days H. G. Salsinger, Detroit newspaper man, kicks in with two amusing incidents of Moriarty's old hurly-burly days as third baseman.

One day Hope Ferris of the Browns came sliding into third, spikes high, and cut Moriarty.

Another day Ferris was on second again, and had to sprint for his life as Moriarty's bat was set for the throw. As Ferris slid into the bag Moriarty's throwing arm completed a full arc, and Moriarty's fist gripped the ball.

The Carriagan Bout Moriarty was a great fellow for stealing home. His record of stealing home twice in one inning still stands. In a certain game with Boston the score was 1 to 0 in favor of the Red Sox in the last half of the ninth. Moriarty was on third and two were out. Bill Carriagan was catching for Boston.

Then Came The Riot George jumped up, pulled Carriagan's mask off and swung on his jaw. Bill went down and several days were pulled Moriarty off. The crowd swelled into the field.

Carriagan got up and ran for the visitor's dugout. With the mob in pursuit he climbed to the top of the dugout, where he was joined by Uncle Frank Navin, owner of the Tigers. Navin pleaded for Carriagan's life, and hid the attention of the crowd until Moriarty arrived and escorted Carriagan to the clubhouse.

A mob waited for hours for Carriagan to emerge from the clubhouse. Finally he escaped in a groundkeeper's disguise, with raincoat, hip boots and an old slouch hat, walking through the mob unrecognized.

TO ALPINE MEETING

DALLAS, (UP)—A motordade bound for the fifth annual meeting of the U. S. Highway 67 association at Alpine, will leave the Dallas chamber of commerce building at 7:30 o'clock on the morning of June 16, it has been announced here by E. C. Wallis, secretary of the highway committee of the Dallas chamber of commerce.

The procession will travel thru Midlothian, Cleburne, and Glen Rose, to Brownwood, where it will stop during the luncheon hour. The afternoon trip will end for the night in San Angelo. Early the following morning, the motordade will start for Alpine.

A total of $2,942,343 worth of contracts including those completed and now under construction have been let on Highway 67 since May 25, 1928, the committee reported. This does not include engineering and extra expense normally estimated at 10 per cent of contract prices, which when added will make a total of $3,236,557. This work has been done over a stretch of 362 miles, and includes all bridges, underpasses, overpasses, and paving.

DEDICATE VOLUME AUSTIN—Editors of the 1932 edition of the Cactus, $25,000 yearbook of the University of Texas, dedicated the volume to Dr. John William Calhoun, comptroller of the university since 1926.

Through costly color plates and division pages the book traces development of the university from the solitary building that stood in a cow-pasture to the modern institution soon to see the completion of nine new buildings.

William Kay Miller of San Antonio was invited to give the address. He was assisted by Joe Riley, Greenville, associate editor, and Burt Drake, Austin, business manager.

INDEPENDENT MAGAZINE The second issue of "The Texas Independent," a magazine published by the independent Petroleum association of Texas, came from the press this week. It will be issued monthly.

The inside cover of the first issue carries the following statement: "Dedicated to the principles of individualism and of independent opportunity, devoted to the maintenance of a fair competition in the oil industry."

The publication will serve both as a house organ for the association and as an oil magazine for the public at large, in the interests of the independent operator.

STEER KICK FATAL SAN ANGELO—John David Reynolds, 24, of a prominent ranch family in Schleicher county, died Friday morning at a local hospital from a liver-injury of the abdomen sustained when he was doctoring cattle. An autopsy had not definitely determined the cause, though Reynolds was said to have been kicked or hooked by a steer.

BROTHERS DIFFERENT LAMESA—The White brothers of Lamesa, have a rather different opinion when it comes to sports.

Sheriff Gus White is taking to polo like a duck does to water. Bill White ranks with the best of them in golf while Louie is recognized as one of the brilliant performers in this part of the country on the tennis court. Another brother, Bailey, is playing big league baseball in Akron, Ohio.

Two other brothers are on the farm in this section, their particular trend of liking in sports not having become particularly apparent to have been sustained when he was doctoring cattle. An autopsy had not definitely determined the cause, though Reynolds was said to have been kicked or hooked by a steer.

Rice Growers Fight Mud Hens in Air WILLOWS, Cal. (UP)—Rice growers of this district have been forced to adopt modern methods of warfare in their battle against the increasing number of mud hens.

An airplane carrying a man skilled in the use of a shotgun has been employed and the plans so far has been a huge success.

Some such method was necessary, as the mud hens were destroying many of the rice crops in Glenn and Colusa counties.

New Serum Has Greater Effect

ST. LOUIS, (UP)—An immunity serum, with strength sufficient to kill at least 30 times its own volume in infantile paralysis virus, has been developed at Washington University Medical School after three years of research.

According to Dr. E. V. Cowdry, in charge of the research, few, if any, other available serums are so powerful in the treatment of the disease. Convalescent serum taken from persons who have recovered from the disease is the only known remedy, and it must be administered in the earliest stages.

University officials predicted that their discovery would allow sufficient serum to be collected on short notice to satisfy the demands of a serious outbreak.

Girl Beats Boys In Marble Shoot CLEVELAND (UP)—Girls may be poor marble shooters, but Betty Butler, 13, was good enough to capture a district championship from a large field of boys.

She "shot" more marbles from the ring than nine boys and three other girls, who represented other schools as champions. The Cleveland Press will send Betty to Cedar Point, O., next month to compete in the district finals, preliminary to the national finals in Atlantic City.

Swift Injured in Rushing Collision SONORA, Cal. (UP)—There must be something in a name, at that. C. S. Swift, furniture dealer, was rushing down a mountain road when Mrs. Roy Rushing came swiftly from the opposite direction. Swift is recovering in a hospital.

Magnolia Test Fleet Leaves Here

On a 9,500-mile tour of the southwest, designated to test the performance of Magnolia fuels and lubricants under actual griving conditions, a test fleet of the Magnolia Petroleum company left Midland yesterday.

The cars—there are three—are a new Ford eight, Chevrolet and Plymouth sedan, piloted by E. D. Krueger, John A. Rowlett and W. T. Ashcraft, respectively. The machines, painted white with red wire wheels and lettered with blue signs are equipped with testing instruments which show the performance of the cars and of the fuel and lubricants under various climatic and speed driving conditions.

B. D. Duzigan, Magnolia company representative, and local motor company officials welcomed the pilots upon their visit here.

Fairbanks, Brian At Yucca Theatre

The large cast of "It's Tough to Be Famous," the first National picture now at the Yucca theatre for today and Wednesday, is distinguished by the variety of dramatic experience possessed by the players.

Headed by Douglas Fairbanks Jr., the cast embraces stage and screen experience, both performing and directing. Young Fairbanks has appeared on both stage and screen and is almost equally famous as an artist and writer.

Mary Brian has devoted her career almost exclusively to pictures, being the only major cast member who has not also appeared on the legitimate stage.

Walter Catlett has appeared on legitimate stages and has been in motion pictures for the past few years, as both writer and actor. Emma Dunn is famous on the Broadway stage and has been appearing on the screen with great success.

Midland children, even to the babies, will be shown on the Yucca screen Friday, June 10, at the matinee and evening shows. Pictures are taken complimentary and the photographer asks that Midland people leave names at the Yucca box office and he will see that all are included in the picture.
