Bundle those old cloths and take them to the Lions club's 'depot' in the Settles hotel building.

Big Spring's participation in the West Texas Chamber of Commerce's study of government costs should be started as quickly as possible.

A choice article, wherein a retired farmer who signs himself 'Uncle Walt' is herewith reprinted from The Texas Weekly.

You say your readers like my letter about small industries in East Texas so I'll write another one.

As for solutions, I've listened to enough hairbrained ways of ending the depression and putting up the price of cotton and wheat to last me the rest of my life.

My grown boy, meet me at the station when I get back. As soon as we sat down he told me about the business situation.

After we had talked about Texas and conditions hereabout, John agreed that few people are going hungry and about the same number dying as usual.

Enforcement - Not Repeal

In Other Words, You Have to Hunt For Boozes in the City of New York

New York city is not as wet as some newspapers would have us believe. Intoxicated persons are rarely found and visitors to New York can transact business or enjoy their pleasures without being brought into contact with intoxicating liquor. It is the testimony of Frank L. Ross, of Denver, Colorado, Mr. Ross is connected with the Gas, Electric Light and Power Corporations of Denver. He made the following statement to the Anti-Saloon League of New York after spending two months in New York:

"I have been in New York city two months doing business with various parties and living in various sections of the city during that time, making it a point to observe the general situation carefully and especially with reference to appearance of violation of the prohibition law. I have been up and down Broadway, its entire length at various times of day and night. I have seen only one intoxicated person during that time and no one has offered to sell me or anybody with whom I have happened to be any intoxicating liquor or intimated where it could be purchased. No sales or offer of sales had been made that I could see. Various cordial and soft drink establishments referred to as speakeasies by casual observers of these places showed very little trade or activity and as I have noticed have been strictly soft drink products. My own experience in such places has been that they sold soft drink products and made no reference or intimation that they had any other lines of merchandise. In the various hotels and rooming houses that I have stayed no effort has been made by anyone connected with them to offer or sell intoxicating liquor. I have visited some of the recreation resorts and parks, finding the same condition there.

"So I feel New York is to be congratulated on its showing and the fact that it does conduct its city and business affairs in such a manner that visitors and business men can follow their lines of business or pleasure without being brought into contact with intoxicating liquors. That is about all that the government owes individuals anyhow. It has been said that in the alleys and at various locations and hidden-away from casual observation liquor could be secured, but neither myself nor anybody attending to their regular business or amusement is called upon to go into the alleys or try to enter into such places.

"I feel the citizens of New York interested in temperance should make an effort through their press, by conversation between each other and with strangers, in their pulpits and lectures to call the attention of the public to the fact that under prohibition people can and do live, work and enjoy pleasures without coming in contact with intoxicating liquors or its effects. The law does not contemplate forcing a man to be good, but simply assures him of the privilege of living in a community where he can be sober, safe and industrious without being brought into contact with intoxicating liquors and this result is already achieved in New York city, as well as in Chicago, Washington and the other large cities of the nation.

"While enforcement is not perfect, yet I feel that the enforcement already achieved is so much of an improvement over the old conditions that the fact of this improvement should be given more general attention and publicity, especially in the larger cities."

Bishop Wade's Testimony On Drunkenness

Bishop Raymond J. Wade of the Methodist Episcopal Church, whose episcopal residence is at Stockholm, Sweden, recently stated, in an address before the New York Methodist Conference, "I have frequently seen more drunkenness in Stockholm on Saturday or Sunday than I have seen in all the seven months since I returned to this country." The Civic Bulletin comments that Bishop Wade's testimony corroborates well with an article published some time ago in Current History Magazine which gave the arrests for drunkenness per 100,000 population in various cities of the

Helps Women Avoid Pains

MORE than half a century of successful use has shown that Cardui helps women to avoid much that they formerly suffered—misery from minor functional disturbances, monthly suffering due to a weakened condition. Cardui acts as a tonic for the system, and tends to improve the general health. It is of especial value to weak, nervous, run-down women, needing just such a strengthening medicine. Those who suffer every month should build up their strength to assist in the natural correction of the painful condition. When you need Cardui, buy a bottle and take it regularly and persistently. Perhaps several bottles will be needed. Finally, may you share the enthusiasm of the thousands of women who have said: "Cardui helped me!"

Travis County Jurors Resume Probe of Fees

BY RAYMOND BROOKS
Resuming work Monday morning, a Travis county grand jury this week will be busy in the study of far-flung waste of public money and carelessly or wrongfully-handled claims of local officers.

So extensive has its investigation grown, from the start of accounts of three Central Texas sheriffs, whose approval brought on impeachment charges against District Judge J. B. Price, Bastrop, that it may be several days or weeks before this grand jury finishes its study of the fee claims.

The senate fee committee is auditing all claims covered by the recent deficiency appropriation to pay off sheriffs' and witnesses' claims. In this work, numerous matters were passed on to the grand jury for review.

Several tax collectors' failure to get in remittances of state money within the legal time limit was promised official scrutiny.

The grand jury will report to District W. F. Robertson in the new court created to handle state business.

The fee committee found itself buried in a far more comprehensive mass of work than was expected when Sen. J. W. E. H. Beck proposed an inquiry into specific abuses which had been reported by the state auditor's department and Compt. George H. Sheppard. The audit alone of the deficiency claims has required work every day since the regular session adjourned last spring.

More than $200,000 of fraudulent claims and falsified claims, in only a few instances of misdoings that have been traced down, were discovered as a result of the committee's work. Many of the matters under review of the fee system has involved official wrong doing or fraudulent or questionable claims.

The committee has been assisting in sorting out the proper claims from those requiring fuller investigation or disapproval.

New disclosures have been promulgated by officials at work on the claim questions. Further light upon abuses of the fee system has been promised for this session of the legislature. Members have demanded, by house resolution, that the whole subject of straightening out the fee system, be opened up for legislative action.

State Labor Commr. R. B. Graze, secretary of Governor Steiwer's state employment committee, is inviting the cooperation of all chamber of commerce, labor organizations, local employment committees, city officials and service organizations, in carrying out the program of the state committee, recently adopted.

The recommendations included: Cutting schedule in oil industry to eight hours, six days a week.

Five-day week, where possible, on the same hourly wage or day-wage basis as at present, to spread employment.

Married men and single women be employed, where possible, instead of married women whose husbands have jobs.

That all committees give preference to local people, and first preference to men of family.

Not less than 90 per cent of native labor on all public work.

That the state and its political units, as far as possible, leave home towns to see to employment in other communities.

That all communities discourage donations without service rendered.

That during December, January and February, each service club arrange to give extra employment to three men one day per month.

Glasgow, Scotland, is to have air mail collection boxes.

Big Business Wars Against Chi Rackets

Col. Handolph Reports Far Reaching Organization Of Criminals

CHICAGO, Sept. 15 (UP).—Big business declared war against crime today in a "death struggle" ultimatum. The "secret six" disclosed its principal secret, that "Al Capone's brand of crime is about the biggest business in all Chicago," in a supposedly "secret" report. Col. Roert Laham Randolph, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce and moving figure in that body's war against organized crime, last night gave an inkling of how the multimillionaire body has grappled with the gangster. Col. Randolph summarized an attack against the multi-millionaire criminal syndicate in terms of "country-wide super-criminals," "national monopoly," "148 killers," and "nationally organized gangs."

No one, unless he is on the "inside," knows who Randolph's five associates on the "secret six" are. Under the cover of business' own millions, the committee for the prevention and punishment of crime of the association of commerce has ferreted out the secrets of gangdom and racketeering. The secret committee has cleared the way for federal or state prosecution of 51 criminal groups, including Al Capone's, has investigated 21 other situations, and is now ready to push 34 cases against the "crime ring" in court, according to the report. The secret service force of the committee has found that practically all of the crimes against business are being conducted by nationally-organized gangs. Col. Randolph said, "In one recent case we traced operations of culprits into 19 states. "In our work with the banks, it has been shown conclusively that approximately 25 per cent of the daylight robberies at the United States, particularly those involving shootings and large thefts from financial institutions, are being conducted by one large country-wide body of super-criminals. "This gang is said to include as many as 148 killers, located all over the United States, and for a long time was directed by Killer Burke, recently sentenced to life imprisonment in Michigan."

Home Town

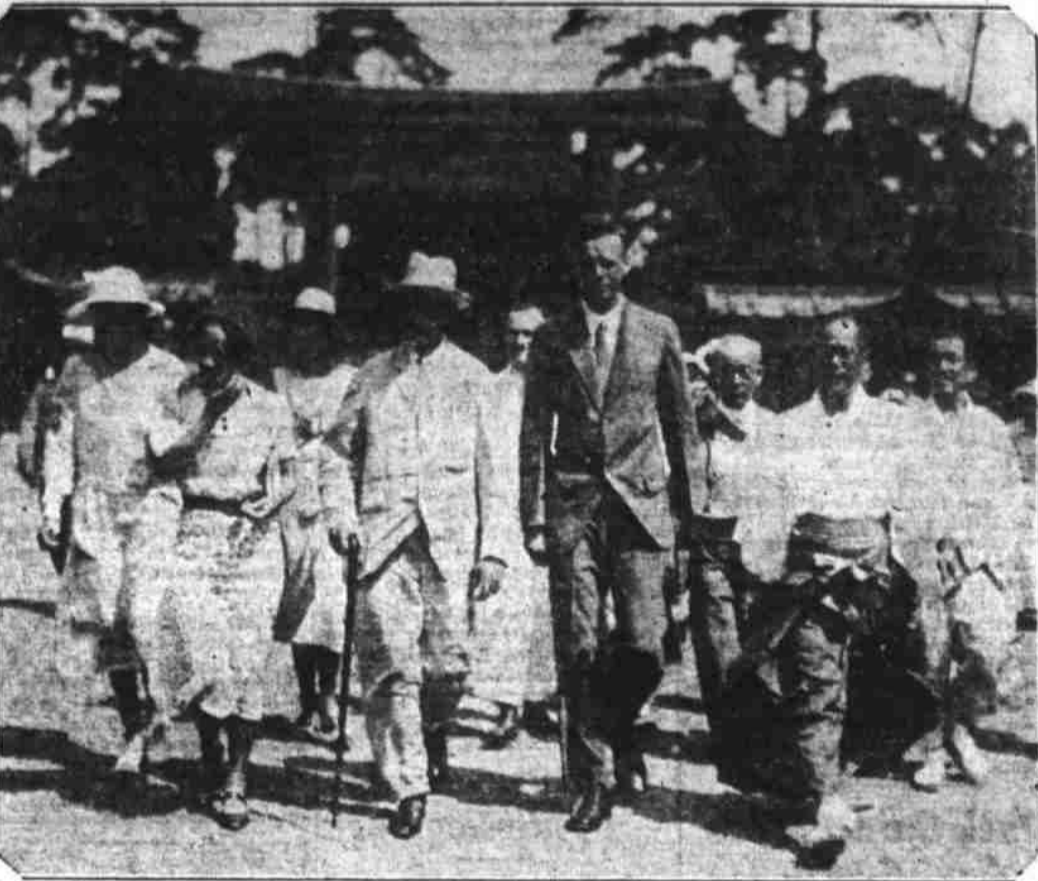

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) doctors in the last two years have mainly helped to prolong the depression. For if it had been allowed to run its course folks would likely be working again now and able to buy, and buying is what it takes to put prices up. Of course I realize there are some things we can do to help out. Most of us know that cotton farmers and their families, for the last few years, have got less than $50 in cash for their year's work, and there is little doubt but that they can make as much again by keeping a cow, some pigs and chickens, and raising other stuff to sell along with cotton and by cutting down their cotton acreage. Likewise I'm convinced that some of our mills can be made to turn this winter if the owners, the workers, and business men in the locality will get behind the job of marketing them turn and pay less attention to dividends and wage scales for a while. Before I end I want to say that John worked six days this week, to my knowledge, and he is now reading the funny paper and laughing out loud like he used to. It looks like he is getting over his depression.

WOMAN IN PARIS IS NEW STYLE RACKETEER

PARIS, Sept. 14. (INS) — The "racketeer" has hit Paris, but in a slightly different form from the popular American variety. Since this city is primarily a "women's town" catering to the whims of the fair sex, it was only natural that the "racketeer" should appear in skirts, with fashionable frocks as her weapon. The fashion racketeer moves in smart circles, dresses with much chic and is well-known in the capital. She goes to a big dressmaker and asks for, say, ten per cent discount on all her frocks. This dressmaker agrees, so she moves on to another and tells him that Mr. So-and-so gives her 20 per cent off for the publicity she brings him and wonders if customer No. 2 would like to outbid dressmaker No. 1. Invariably, she walks out with a very large-sized discount promised, for if she doesn't the dressmaker is threatened with ruin among friends and smart buyers. A number of the larger dressmaking firms are now making war against this business and only the future will tell if the French racketeer will arrive.

Pitching Duel Won By Cosden

Winning their third straight off the Mexican Tigers, Cosden Refineries diamondmen ran their total of consecutive wins to nine games Monday afternoon on the refinery field. The score terminated 5-3 after Crouch had bested Payne in a brisk hurlers' duel. Both sides marked up a quartet of hits, but Cosden was able to capitalize on Mexican bobbles and hit when it counted. The Mexicans jumped into the lead in the first inning only to see it vanish before a three-run onslaught by Cosden. However, they knotted it once more in the fourth and it remained tied until the last half of the final inning. With two on and the game deadlocked at 3-3, Harris poled out a scorching double through second base to win the game by a two-run margin. Batteries—Cosden, Cronch and Johnson; Tigers, Payne and Lopez. (CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) Rep. J. C. Kennedy of Rome would replace the one-third percentage clause with one restricting cotton planting in 1932 to fifty per cent of next year's cultivated acreage. He declared only in such a clause would the "little farmer" find salvation. "What's the little man gon' to raise if you hold his cotton crop for one third or one fourth of his farm?" demanded the pugnacious legislator. Attack Clause. The sub-committee bill was attacked because of its clause which forbids cultivation of cotton "or other soil exhausting plants," in excess of 33 1/3 per cent of the land. Constitutionality of the clause was doubtful, members of the house objected.

Chow Recipes Of Camp Cook To Be Related

For here is Doughy's record. And beat it if you can. He cooked for us twenty years. And never lost a man!

The song of the cowboy on the trail to the camp cook that imitates the Keeper of the chuck wagon that rocked down many a weary trail in the dust of departed Longhorns. In spite of the fact that modern servants rule the average family with a regal air, no cook has ever languished in such an atmosphere of worship as did the old-time camp cook—the autocrat of the cow trail. His chuck wagon was literally a royal chamber on wheels for the worn out, hungry cowboys at the end of a long day's ride—and the "call of the west" was never stronger than when the camp cook sounded "chow."

Beans Still Favorite Some of these crude, hearty dishes of the camp and trail still yield a tempting aroma for moderns—particularly, beans, declares Myra Oliver Dougan who is to conduct a free cooking school for women readers of the Daily Herald during week of Sept. 29 at the Settles Hotel. The camp cook of the Old West who let his pork and beans simmer all night over the hot coals knew the secret of a delicious dish, she says, which in this particular instance was slow and gentle cooking.

The chuck wagon generally carried beans, bacon and few canned goods. The cook's one delicacy was pie, always of canned or dried apples enclosed in a crust that only he, in his regal role as camp cook, dared to make. To beans and bacon he sometimes added Spanish onions and canned tomatoes. A stray yearling furnished fresh meat; coffee was swallowed scalding hot, usually without sugar and always without cream.

Lucky, indeed, was the cow outfit who carried a highly-prized cook—ono who really took seriously the man-sized job of feeding cowboys. A cowboy's letter tells of such a camp cook who followed a widely known range outfit in 1871, and the luxurious menus he turned out of his trail kitchen for his cowboys: His meat was usually from a fat heifer, often ribs broiled before the campfire and an oven of loins; with this he cooked sweet breads and hearts, mixed in gravy, with corn bread, molasses and black coffee; and for breakfast, the aromatic pot of pork and beans which had simmered over hot coals all night.

Lonc Trail Fare Not always did the cowboys have even the pleasure of chuck wagon "chow." Often, with only his cayuse pony and six-shooter for company he rode range over a lonesome trail for miles, camping along at night by his solitary campfire. His main dish in such cases was the historic "frying pan" bread. The cowboy spread a trick batter over the bottom of his pan, the latter laid upon hot coals for a moment until a lower crust commenced to form. The dexterous cowboy then tipped the pan and held it far enough from the fire for a little heat to reach it until the loaf was raised. Then pan was then pushed to within baking distance of the coals until the bread was thoroughly cooked.

The bread then vacated the pan, and into it went the cowboy's handful of coffee and sufficient water, which was allowed to boil to a strong, bitter-black stage. Whereupon the lone cowboy consumed his campfire supper, unrolled his blanket and went soundly to sleep with his after-dinner music like long drawn howls of the coyote.

School Children To Be Fed With Benefit Money

Several bridge clubs have already announced their intention of attending the Junior High P.T.A. tournament in a body, announces Mrs. Victor Mellinger, chairman of the ways and means committee for the tournament.

The party is being given for the express purpose of raising funds to furnish lunch and school supplies for needy Junior High pupils. Last year the P.T.A. fed about 20 children, who would have gone hungry, or could not have bought even the necessary school supplies without aid. The cases were investigated first and will be this year. The public is assured that the money will not be wasted and that the party funds will go for this use only. It is the belief of the P.T.A. that many women who are not members of the association will be glad to help with the lunch fund in this manner.

The tournament will include tables for auction and contract bridge players and 42 players. The place will be the Settles Hotel; the day Friday and the hour, 4 o'clock. It is hoped that many of the teachers will take advantage of the late hour to attend.
