Repatriation Aided By Officers of Border

Justin T. Bennett, immigration officer of Maria and border patrolmen were in Midland Saturday to assist in repatriating Mexican citizens.

Speaks to Youths In Sermon Today

"How Can the Modern Boy and Girl Believe in Jesus?" This is the subject to be spoken at the morning hour by Rev. Edwin C. Cramer, pastor of the First Methodist church.

The minister will speak from a background of several years spent at Southwestern university, and the University of Chicago. He understands the problems of students singularly well, but looks at a perspective and through having spent eight years in the ministry, on July 1.

The minister is now serving his third appointment. He spent 18 months at L. P. Yrizar, a five-point circuit, two years at Pearsall and is serving his second year here.

"A young minister who has just been turned out of school is glad of anything for his first appointment," he says. His first promotion, he feels, comes when the parsonage he draws has a bath tub, and the next when he gets a church with a pipe organ.

He is one of only three ministers in this conference who have qualified himself to teach a course recommended by the general board of education of the Methodist church for Sunday school teachers and is in constant demand for that work.

Recently, he has taught at Brady, Sonora, San Angelo, Ozona and nearby places. Qualification is through taking a correspondence course and regular quizzes, combined with lecture work taken for a short time during the summer.

At his morning address, college students will sit in a reserved section.

Hoover to Make "A Few" Speeches

WASHINGTON, June 18. (UP)—A formal Hoover statement today declared Chicago and New York as campaign headquarters.

The president said he would not take an active part in the campaign, although he would "make a few major addresses, expounding policies of the administration."

He said he would not be able to go to California for the Olympic games in July.

Fuhrman Boner Unchanged

Fuhrman Petroleum corporation's No. 1 Fuhrman and others, Andrews county's latest and sixth oil well, is reported unchanged, still making four barrels of salt water hourly with probably 100 barrels of oil daily.

The water is believed to be coming from 3,840 feet through a split joint of 6 5/8-inch casing. That string was cemented at 4,034 feet. Two inch tubing was run to 4,520 feet and a packer set one point above the bottom of the tubing about three weeks ago.

The packer failed to shut off the water. Gas has been estimated from one and one-half to two million cubic feet daily.

No. 1 Boner is 4,541 feet deep. It was shot May 12 with 390 quarts from 4,220 to 4,330 feet and began heading. Location is in section 24, block A-33, public school land.

Miss Laura Jesse of Midland has been employed as assistant district and county clerk of Andrews. She is an experienced office worker.

How Texas Editors See Resubmission Question

DALLAS, Tex., June 18. (UP)—Texas editors view the decision of the state democratic executive committee to allow a vote on the primary on resubmission of the 18th amendment as "a ruse to draw voters to the polls."

Few newspapers opposed the idea of a referendum but several questioned holding it in connection with the primary as a matter of policy. Some of the common objections are: Dallas News: The News believes that the action is ill advised in point of policy, whether of party or public policy, but it cannot say that the committee has exceeded the scope of its apparent authority.

Houston Chronicle—No opinion-minded person can longer doubt that there exists today a very wide and far-reaching interest with respect to our prohibition laws. In the course of 12 years since the 18th amendment was enacted, the annual percentage of voters who each year have come of age, now, without any question whatever, represent the balance of power. They had no voice in the enactment of those laws under which they now live. They are entitled to express themselves about their government.

Dallas Times-Herald—Obviously the main purpose of the committee is to lure the voters to the polls at the first primary. Prohibition seems to be the only issue strong enough to induce a certain portion of the electorate to cast ballots.

San Angelo Standard—Possibly there is some astute politics in placing the issue on the ballot. Possibly the return of Fergusonism to power dictates the move, for all on the committee must know that a light vote will mean restoration of the Ferguson while a heavy vote will give Ross Sterling the power to come back.

El Paso Herald-Post—It won't be an expansion of the whole people. Only those participating in the democratic primary will be permitted to vote. And, if and when the 18th amendment is resubmitted, the voting will have to be done all over again—with republicans, as well as democrats, participating in the selection of wet or dry congressional electors.

Austin American—Now resubmission is on the way. Well, the voters are the masters and the democratic men and women of Texas will return their verdict as to repeal or non-repeal in the very near future. On with the battle.

Denton Record-Chronicle—Four years ago submission would have been branded as a rank anti-prohibition victory but now there are many staunch prohibitionists who firmly believe that such a course is the only democratic way of handling the situation.

Dallas Dispatch—Doubtless many drys will welcome it (the referendum) as a showdown of Texas sentiment. The result will have nothing to do with enforcement. However, it will be awaited with more widespread interest than the winner of the gubernatorial nomination.

Dallas Journal—Injection of the issue will prevent sober and intentional course of 12 years of governmental questions and qualifications of candidates. The better interests of Texas will suffer as a result.

Wichita Falls Times—We are sorry to see the question at this time when economics should be the only issue. However, many democrats, wet and dry, will argue that the people have a right to vote at any time on anything. Those who hope for legal intoxicants in Texas are doomed to dry throats for many years to come.

Wichita Falls Times—This paper believes that the democratic voters of Texas should vote approval of the proposal for a referendum on the 18th amendment. The question is not one of being a wet or a dry, or of undertaking to answer whether federal prohibition has succeeded or failed. The question is whether prohibition is desired by the people.

Galveston Tribune—Texas democrats who think national prohibition was a mistake will think the state executive committee for providing resubmission referendum in the July primary, and probably the majority of drys don't have any serious objections to letting the voters record their wishes in the matter.

Sulphur Springs News-Telegram—We love all our wet friends and regret to part company with them, but party to company, unless they come over into our camp, we will not pair with some of them and not vote, provided we can get a good deal, say something like 16 to 1.

CLEM CALHOUN TO SPEAK HERE MONDAY NIGHT

Clem Calhoun, described as a dynamic speaker and even more dynamic as an officer in pursuit of his duties, will speak on the court house lawn at 8 o'clock Monday evening.

He will speak in behalf of his candidacy for the office of attorney general in the fall.

Calhoun is remembered by the wide newspaper following for his work in helping to clean up Berger during a particularly difficult crime wave when the oil field was booming there.

His indictment of Allred, incumbent, has made columns of copy in the Texas press recently. Those in charge of preparations for Calhoun's visit ask that a large crowd be at the court house for the address.

SEARCH IS MADE FOR SUSPECTS

Robbed Kansas Bank Of $30,000 on Friday

NEVADA, MO., June 18. (UP)—Officers were searching today for two of five bandits who yesterday robbed the Citizens National bank of Ft. Scott, Kas., of $30,000.

Jack Martin, of Biggs, Okla., Bob Morgan, of Cleveland, and George Mullen, unknown, were arrested last night. They were carrying rifles, sawed off shot guns and a half dozen pistols.

Martin did not fight after a farmer had called attention of officers to their car which was parked by the roadside. All three were identified. Belief that the victim of the robbery was one of the two still at large spurred officers in the search.

Ma Ferguson Said Victim Fallacies; She Is Ambitious

BY GORDON K. SHEARER United Press Staff Correspondent AUSTIN, (UP)—Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, candidate for governor, has been the victim of many popular fallacies.

She was not the first woman governor of this state though she was the first woman elected governor. Mrs. Nettie Taylor Ross of Wyoming actually took office before Mrs. Ferguson becoming governor of Wyoming on January 5, 1925. Mrs. Ferguson was inaugurated a few days later.

Mrs. Ferguson was not a suffragette. In fact it has never made the women who worked for suffrage in Texas very happy to have had the first high honors go to one who was not a woman.

Being governor was not Mrs. Ferguson's idea. Some day the story of who originated the plan to become known as "Ma" will admit it only in confidence.

On the other hand, the idea Mrs. Ferguson was merely a figure head as she is also a great deal of the mark. To those who were about the capitol in her administration it was made very apparent she could speak for herself.

Mrs. Ferguson suffered from an over eager press-agenting in the early days of her governorship. She was notably convention at Houston four years ago, and probably the majority of drys don't have any serious objections to letting the voters record their wishes in the matter.

Sulphur Springs News-Telegram—We love all our wet friends and regret to part company with them, but party to company, unless they come over into our camp, we will not pair with some of them and not vote, provided we can get a good deal, say something like 16 to 1.

Maryland Presidential Candidate Is "Bounced"

The effort of Ex-Senator Joseph I. France, of Maryland, sole opponent of Herbert Hoover for the Republican nomination, to mount the convention platform at Chicago and throw his support to Coolidge, ended disastrously for him. Here is France (left) telling how he was "bounced" from the platform, after a tussle, when the chairman ruled he had no business there because he was not a convention delegate.

SULPHUR SPRINGS FARMERS JAILED FOR EXTORTION

SULPHUR SPRINGS, June 18. (UP)—J. V. Webb, 50, and Henry Wilson, 25, farmers, were jailed here today on charges of attempted extortion after a futile attempt to obtain $3,000 from Mrs. Sid Groves, 65, wealthy widow living at Cumby, ten miles west of here.

The men were captured while hiding in a culvert where Mrs. Groves and daughter placed a dummy package complying with a note which threatened disappearance of her two adult sons, Jack and Ashley, unless the money was paid.

Arrangements for selecting the two all-candidates ball clubs for a special 7:30 game on the night of July 4 have been tentatively completed.

A disinterested committee will arbitrarily name the two rival managers and these will choose their respective clubs by drawing for names of candidates placed in a hat.

Women candidates will be conceded a substitute, but men must show cause why a substitute is needed.

B. C. Girdley has been made chairman of preparations and will be assisted by Scotty Gemmill. There will likely be more interest in this game than any played this season, fans say. It is expected that 1,500 people will see the game.

A hero, who was not a veteran, said he could identify the man who shot Chisapetta and named Banks.

Chisapetta was wounded in the chest to camp here, awaiting action against Banks.

Annex Is Leased By Sunday School

This will be used as a Sunday school educational annex, and will be used by a class of women who will organize Sunday at being a merger of the Co-Worshipers class with the Martha Fildes group, and the upstairs space will be devoted to the intermediate department, which has lately been crowded into the main auditorium of the church. Social functions may also be held in the annex.

Mrs. Paul T. Vickers is superintendent of the intermediate department, which now has eight classes, four of boys and four of girls—one for each grade from 13 to 18 years, and one for the young ladies.

Claude Watley's two year old filly, Silver, was ridden in ahead of the other mounts in a three eighths mile race, matched just as the crowd started to leave the park. Odell Ponder's Cherry was second, Ponder up.

VETS VOTE TO REMAIN IN CAPITAL

Police Circulating In Ranks Feel Anger Rise

WASHINGTON, June 18. (UP)—Unrest stirred the ranks of the bonus army today as dreams of cash bonus for the veterans was shattered. They began a struggle to impress their plight upon the nation.

Answering summons of Commander Waters, the veterans staged a huge rally, strengthening the morale which was shaken by the unfavorable vote of the senate on the bonus bill last night.

Waters, it a rally, demanded that the men pledge themselves to stay at Washington until the bonus was paid. Veterans raised their hands and shouted. Their attitude was peaceful, but as thousands swarmed the capitol during the debate by the senate, tenseness developed among their ranks.

An incident illustrating the charged attitude occurred when Police Chief Glassford, acting on authorization of the treasury, ordered 450 veterans to leave a vacant government building which was being used as barracks.

"To hell with the treasury," Glassford was told. "All we want from it is the bonus."

Senate Kills Chance Of Bonus Passage

WASHINGTON, June 18.—An avalanche of senate votes buried all hopes of several thousand war veterans massed at the capitol for immediate payment of $2,400,000,000 on their bonus certificates.

By a 62 to 18 vote the senate Friday night rejected the Patman bill which had swept through the house on the wave of a 211 to 176 majority. Only 10 democrats, seven republicans and one farmer-labor senator voted for the legislation which had brought 20,000 former service men to Washington.

As the result was announced outside, boos from the vast throng of veterans mingled with cheers at a statement from one of their leaders that "we will stay here until the bonus is paid."

A crowd remained orderly and hundreds started away from the capitol immediately.

A few minutes after rejecting the measure, the senate administered the final death blow by tabling a motion to reconsider its action. Only one motion was carried.

This move was engineered by two administration stalwarts, Reed (R., Pa.) and Moses (R., N. H.), the former moved reconsideration and the latter that the motion be tabled. By a 44 to 26 vote, the senate rejected the motion.

President Hoover would have no opportunity of exercising the veto he had promised the legislation if it reached him. Only 10 democrats, seven republicans had been given earlier by Senators Bankhead (D., Ala.) and Thomas (D., Okla.), but the parliamentary maneuver thwarted their plan. They only one such motion can be made.

INSULL'S CASE

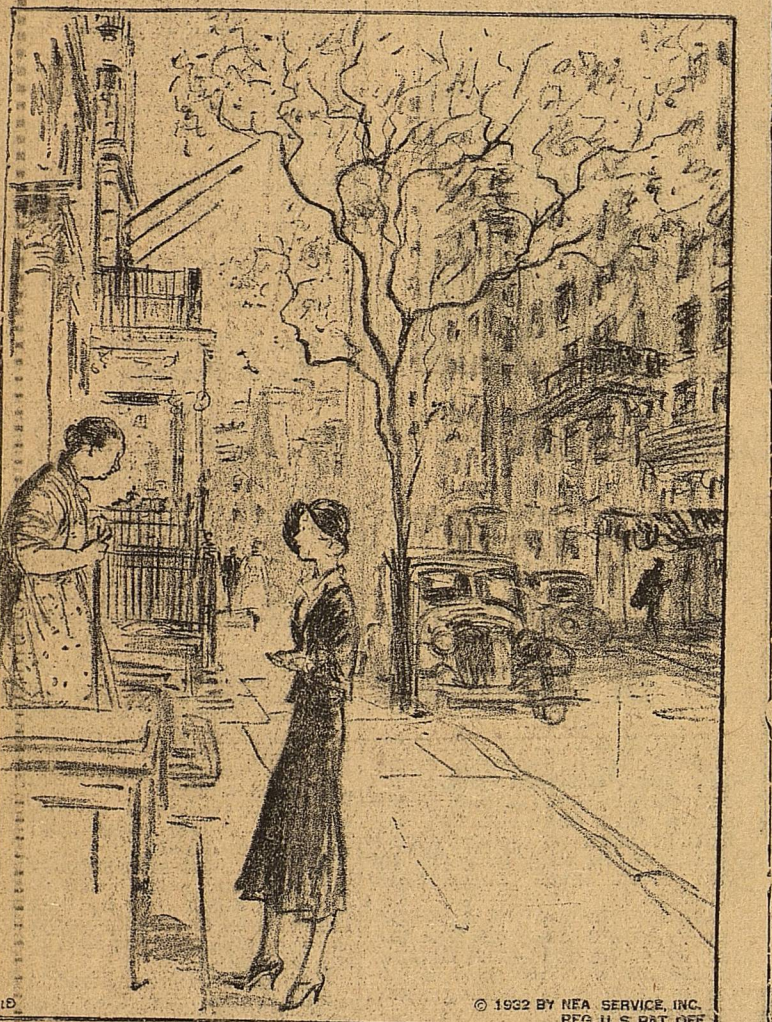

One of the news stories telling of Samuel Insull's retirement from guidance of his vast industrial empire contained the following highly significant paragraph: "In the years following 1924, according to observers, he himself became imbued with a belief that a new and everlasting era of prosperity had arrived—a belief said to have been largely responsible for the present financial affairs in his utility system."

About all one can say to that is that Mr. Insull wasn't alone in his delusion. A lot of the rest of us used to feel the same way, too; and what happened to us is just about what happened to Mr. Insull. The whole country, in short, was deluded, and the country now is paying for its delusion. Mr. Insull simply typifies what befell the nation as a whole.

Oklahoma Governor Ran off From Home, Made Own Way

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of stories on "favorite sons" in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination which soon will be decided at Chicago.

By ROBERT TALLEY, NEA Service Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 18.—"Alfalfa Bill" Murray told me the story of his colorful life in a long interview held in his bedroom in the executive mansion adjoining Oklahoma's state capitol here.

It was evening. Governor Murray seemed tired after a hard day. He lay upon the bed, completely dressed, his shoes on the white bedspread. Occasionally, during the four hours that we talked, he changed his position for greater comfort; when he did, he lay with his shoes at the other end of the bed.

His bedroom seemed in chronic disorder. Obviously, he was a man who demanded that housekeepers leave his things alone. Books, old magazines, old newspapers, old documents were stacked and piled in every corner.

He was a lean, grizzled man of 63 with heavy gray hair, bushy gray eyebrows, keen blue eyes and a walrus-like gray mustache. He spoke in a deep, resonant voice and, being a little hard of hearing, he frequently cupped his ear with his hand when a question was asked.

Here, Oklahoma's "favorite son" candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, the political champion of the man with the empty pocketbook and the patch on the seal of his state, the boy product of the depression and perhaps a dangerous contender in a year of unemployment and breadlines.

Oklahoma opinion is sharply divided on Murray. To the state's rich oil men and others of the wealthy, he is a political charlatan, faker and sycophant of the first water. To the backwoods farmers in the red clay hills who are struggling to pay their taxes, Murray is the greatest champion of the common people since Abraham Lincoln. The latter have the most votes; that explains why Murray is governor today.

Here, recumbent on the bed, was the man who hopes to ride to the White House on his campaign slogan of "Butter and Bread, Peas and Beans" in this depression year 1932. Here was the boy who ran away from home and became a cotton picker, who educated himself when he didn't have money to buy shoes, who studied law while running a country newspaper in the back end of a negro barber shop, who wrote the Constitution that made Oklahoma a state, who led a colony of farmers to the South American wilderness, who returned home broke after five years, campaigned for governor on cheese and crackers, and now seeks the nation's highest office.

"I was born," said Governor Murray, "in East Texas on Nov. 21, 1868, in a small box house, which had a sandstone chimney and strips of board nailed over the cracks to keep out the wind and rain. My grandfather owned a nearby mill that was powered by 16 yoke oxen on a tread wheel. My father was U. D. T. Murray, a minister of the gospel."

defeated for re-election. Beaten, Murray toured South America for several years. He traveled almost the length of the Amazon, swapping 10-cent store mirrors and to the jungle Indians who paddled his canoe. He made six trips to South America between 1919 and 1923.

In 1923, I came back from one of these trips. I could see the United States slipping more and more, Murray said. "I saw the approach of the present depression far ahead of the millions of unemployed we have today. Unless we meet this, our nation will break up into little bands like Rome did in the seventh century, these unorganized bands will take what they can get; in the congested centers disease will wipe them out; the people in the remote regions will be those who will survive."

Thus was born Murray's Bolivian colony idea. He made a contract with the Bolivian government for 75,000 acres of rich prairie land near the foot of the Andes, interested 18 Oklahoma farm families in his plan and set out with them for South America in May, 1924.

By Oklahoma's rich and upper classes Murray is bitterly assailed. But his strength lies with voters like a grizzled old farmer—in hickory shirt and tattered pants—who expressed his views to me in this manner: "Sure, I'm for Bill Murray—because he's just like me. Bill ain't got nothing, and I ain't got nothing either."

No, I never sawed medicine, but I picked up a little knowledge of it by listening to doctors testify before the Pensions Committee in Congress and by reading books on anatomy."

The details of Murray's campaign in which he lived largely on cheese and crackers are too well known for repetition here. However, he denies that he hitch-hiked, insisting that these rides were provided by friendly farmers who hauled him over the state in their Ford's. Keenly away from the unfriendly big cities until the last, he made his appeal to the farmers and won handsomely.

As governor, his actions often have been drastic and equally picturesque. Several times he has called out state troops to enforce his executive orders.

ATTORNEY for the DEFENSE with EDMUND LOWE EVELYN BRENT - CONSTANCE CUMMINGS novelization by arrangement with COLUMBIA PICTURES

WHAT HAS HAPPENED? Bill Burton, prominent defense lawyer and formerly District Attorney, is on trial for the murder of Valaska Lorraine. He is handling his case with a skill for a time has gone against him. During the opening days it appears as though he needs conviction. Suddenly he changes his tactics and makes a desperate fight for acquittal.

"I'm about to propose marriage to the grandest girl in the world." (Based on Constance Cummings and Edmund Lowe.)

covered the woman's body. Burton had been ransacking her desk. This testimony helped to support the State's contention that Burton had done for the crime.

These three witnesses—Dr. Strong, the medical examiner; Nick Quinn, underworld figure, and Jeff—closed the State's case.

Now it was up to Burton to offer his defense.

"What are you going to do, Bill?" Ruth Barry pleaded with him. "Haven't you some defense?"

"There's only one chance," he said, slowly. "I hate to do it, but I've got to."

He arose, and called, "Paul Wallace! Take the stand!"

Surprised at this unexpected development, the youth walked to the witness chair, and Burton, for the first time during the trial, began his cross-examining.

"Did you on the evening of April 15th open the safe in my office and steal certain papers and records?" he asked.

"I did."

"What did you do with those papers and records?"

"I took them to the apartment of Valaska Lorraine."

"Tell us, in your own words, Paul, why you stole those records and why you happened when you brought them to Miss Lorraine's apartment?"

"The boy gulped. Could it be possible that Burton now was trying to take the blame on the crime?"

"I was engaged to be married to Miss Lorraine—at least, I thought I was. I took the papers to her apartment. I had been drinking. She pleaded with me. I grabbed her by the throat. I don't know what happened then. I don't remember."

Thus, Burton cleverly brought into evidence the fact that the dead woman sought certain incriminating papers in his home and set a trap for the District Attorney into which he now plunged pell-mell.

In cross-questioning Paul, the District Attorney gave voice to the theory of the crime which had just occurred to Burton.

"Now, my boy, while you were unconscious from liquor, it was possible, was it not, for someone to enter the room, to do away with Miss Lorraine, and leave you there to take the blame for the crime?" the prosecutor asked.

Burton watched Nick Quinn narrowly, as this question was submitted, and thought he saw him tremble with nervousness.

He decided to recall Jeff to the stand.

And then the courtroom saw such a mastery cross-examination as only Burton, at his best, could put across. Burton knew from the negro's nervous manner that he had guilty knowledge which he was concealing. What Burton was determined to elicit from him was the name of the other man, or men, who had visited Valaska's apartment between the time Paul Wallace and he himself had gone there.

For an hour he used every trick, every resource at his command, fortified by the desperate understanding that he must break down this witness' stubbornly maintained story.

And finally his perseverance prevailed. Stammering, shamed, and badly frightened by the threat of being jailed for perjury, the witness admitted that he had taken Nick Quinn to the woman's apartment soon after Paul Wallace had gone there. And under Burton's relentless questioning, he testified that Nick had been a frequent visitor to the Lorraine suite—but never, he added, while Paul Wallace was there.

Now, like a tiger pouncing for the kill, Burton wheeled upon Quinn. "Get on that stand, Quinn," he told him grimly.

The gangster was sworn and tried to affect an unconcerned pose. Burton scrutinized him contemptuously, but the brazen witness was not the type who is easily intimidated.

"Did you pay Jeff some money to keep him from testifying that you went to Miss Lorraine's apartment the night she was killed?"

"No."

"You went to that apartment to get those records that were stolen from my office, didn't you?"

"No, sir."

"You knew those records involved you and would have sent you to prison for a good many years, didn't you?"

"I don't know what you're talking about."

"You heard the District Attorney explain his theory of the murder—how somebody came up, strangled the woman, and left the apartment, figuring that the blame would come to Paul Wallace. You know that Mr. Crowell is right; you know that's exactly what happened?"

"I don't know what you're talking about."

Burton paused for a moment. He bent over the witness and glanced sharply at his right hand.

Jeff testified that when he had walked into the apartment and dis-

Pear now showed plainly in the dark eyes of the gang chief.

Slowly, he slipped the large odd-shaped ring from his finger.

Burton took it from him, not failing to note the worried look which had covered his face.

He slipped the ring on one of the fingers of his own right hand, dramatizing every move for the benefit of the jury. His mind was working like lightning, now.

"Come here, Mugg!" he called in a soft, just before a juror stood.

Mugg Malone was a husky man, six feet tall and weighing more than 200 pounds. He might have been taken for a wrestler or a former college football star, except that his tough looks never could have come from any college.

Mugg walked through the railing of a gallery just before a juror stood.

"Yes, Sir, Boss," he reported.

Burton said not a word, but drew back his right arm and let go a powerful punch which found a mark on Mugg's lower jaw and sent the burly fellow senseless to the floor.

There was a gasp of awed astonishment throughout the courtroom and then a shuffle as the spectators rose to their feet.

The unexpected action had taken everybody by surprise.

"Dr. Strong! Dr. Strong! Come here!" Burton called to the Medical Examiner.

Swiftly the lawyer grabbed the enlarged photograph showing the peculiar bruise on the dead woman's jaw.

"Take a look at the bruise on this man's jaw, Doctor, and tell us if it isn't identical with the one found on the dead woman!"

The medical examiner bent over the unconscious figure, looking intently at the imprint made by Nick Quinn's ring.

Then, he slowly rose to his feet, and exclaimed, "Why, it's the very same mark!"

"I thought so," Burton commented. "Thank you, doctor."

"There's the man who killed Valaska Lorraine!" shouted Burton, pointing to Quinn.

Under the circumstances, the case against Burton was speedily thrown out and Nick Quinn was taken into custody and lodged, without a trial, in the cell in the Tombs which he had recently occupied.

When they returned to the law offices of William J. Burton, he sat down quietly in his office. Then he called into the dictagraph, "Come here, Barry!"

Obediently, book in hand, she sat down by his desk.

"Take a letter!"

She poised her pencil expectantly. Wickersham, Wilberforce, Wilkes, Winters, and Wilkins. Gentlemen! In the matter of Radzinski versus the Argus Connecting Mills—according to the Connecticut Code, affecting torts and stoppages in fee simple, there is no relief except in a writ of Habeas Corpus, except if extenuating circumstances involving trespass—therefore, your respondent present—

The girl had stopped making noise and was looking at him curiously.

"This doesn't make sense," she said.

"Who are you to tell me what to say?" he demanded.

"If this doesn't make sense, it's because I'm goofy. This morning, I'm about to propose marriage to the grandest girl in the world—name Barry. What about it, Honey? Will you take dictation forever? Yours very truly, William J. Burton."

"Per RB," wrote the girl.

WEEK LIKELY TO SEE SHAKEUP, WITH TOP CLUBS TAKING SHIFT

HARDWARE, TESCO AND UNITED PLAY IMPORTANT GAMES; NEWSIES, BELLS PLAY TWO GAMES; TRIPLE TIE SEEN

This week in the playground ball league offers to further embarrass the league leader, Midland Hardware.

That club, out a game ahead of United Dry Goods and of Texas Electric Service company, must meet the Texas Electric Monday night. This game is something of a toss-up, fans believe, as both clubs are strong both offensively and defensively, though the Electricians barely won Friday night over Cowden-Epley, a club that has yet to break into the win column.

In case the Hardware boys lost, thereby allowing the Electricians to climb into a tie for first position, they would have little chance of drawing away from the Meter Readers during the week, inasmuch as both have strong division clubs to play, the Hardware playing Hokus-Pokus Friday night and the Electricians meeting Petroleum Drug Thursday.

TWO BALL GAMES TO BE PLAYED IN MIDLAND TODAY

Lenorah's Mexicans, assisted by two or three members of the Stanton club, handed the Mexican Colts their worst drubbing of the year Friday, 9-4.

The same clubs play again this afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock. The Bushers and the Ice-men are billed to start a game at 4. Joe Pyron likely will pitch for the Bushers.

Sports Scribes Wonder How Sharkey Will Lose Battle

By WILLIAM BRAUCHER
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK.—It is not so much a matter of picking a winner in the fight here on the night of June 21 between Max Schmeling and Jack Sharkey. This is one of those occasions when it is more advisable to pick the loser.

That's my bet—Jack Sharkey to lose. He always does. You can depend on him. What could be simpler?

Mr. Sharkey will lose the fight in any one of a number of original and ingenious ways. Here are a few possibilities:

- 1—That he will do an Immelman turn from a convenient chandelier.
- 2—That he will break out into the fight and break out into the touching strains of that sweet anthem affected by the Alpine boatmen.
- 3—That he will sprinkle resin in his hair and go into a Morgan dance.
- 4—That he will kick himself in a cadence, eleven times on the chin.
- 5—That he will throw water buckets at the radio announcers (and, come to think of it, that wouldn't be a bad way to lose, at that).
- 6—That he will enact the soliloquy from Hamlet.
- 7—That he will reproduce with all-talkie continuity the Cremation of Sam McGee, Casey at the Bat or a Betelgeuse medicine show.

In substantiation of the above assumptions, look back upon the mat's antics, if you still have the heart. Against Scott, he was a gibbering fishwife, casting imprecations at that ol' dabbil sea. After smacking Phil soundly about the ankles he rushed over to his corner and bared his manly bosom with the invitation, "Hit me low, then too, you—!" Against Carnera, he tried to jump out of the ring, and was halted only by the fat paunch of his manager, Johnny Buckley.

He wept after he had knocked out Jack Delaney. He dropped his paws and turned to remark to the referee while Dempsey was still here in the same ring with him. He cried whimsically, like some sweet girl graduate whose flowers didn't arrive in time for the commencement exercises, after Willis had lost to him on a foul. And two years ago he fouled Schmeling into the world's heavyweight championship.

What are you going to do with a fighter like that? The answer is, the man should be stuffed and sent to the Smithsonian Institute.

Schmeling's imperturbable calm will drive him mad. It drove him wild before—why not now? The German will go along, taking a few belts here and there during the first few rounds. He will not be disturbed a great deal, but will keep coming in, watching for his chance to land sly and important counter-punches, many of which will find their way to the sensitive Sharkey midriff.

Finally, Sharkey will become frantic. Then you will see him going into his dance. Or, he may just explode, and go right up into the starry Long Island skies in a wisp of acrid smoke.

And that will be all of that.

ALL-STAR AGGREGATIONS CONTINUE TO BE TURNED IN BY THE SIDELINE

All-star choices of an aggregation being chosen by the public for a special night game to be played on the night of July 4 continue to come in.

Dr. David M. Ellis, skipper of the Busher baseball club and manager of the Petroleum Drug company team in the night ball league, explained that his list was selected after much thought as to the offensive and defensive value of players, with more emphasis given to their offensive ability. Not only does he pick his team by positions, but presents them in the batting lineup he believes most effective, starting three hard-hitting left handers and "cleaning up" with Lindy Hiett, a former Texas leaguer who not only is regular with the war club but "positively dangerous." Hiett has connected more than once just recently for home runs just when they were necessary. And men on the bases ahead of him.

Ellis' team follows:

- L. F. R. Morgan, Hardware
- S. J. Woody, Pet. Drug
- I. B. Girdley, Telephone
- R. F. Hiett, Ford
- U. F. Burris, Tesco
- G. F. Hankins, Newsies
- C. F. Bones Wyatt, Pet. Drug
- C. B. Stevens, Telephone
- C. Bayless, Hardware
- P. Gemmill, Newsies

Miss Lotie Williams wouldn't miss a game if the league played through Christmas. She has her own idea about an all-star club, saying if the following isn't the best, it at least is "good enough":

- C. A. Estes, Tesco
- P. Gemmill, Newsies
- I. B. Hankins, Newsies
- B. Branch, Hardware
- S. B. Mills, Hardware
- S. S. Pyron, Hardware
- U. F. Warren, Newsies
- R. F. E. Morgan, Hardware
- C. F. Wyatt, Pet. Drug
- L. F. E. Estes, Tesco
- C. B. Girdley was asked by the "casting committee" to pick out a club, but declined to say his choice was the "best." "This group, to my belief, is well balanced and could play anybody a good game," he said. "Anyway, it could play some jam up good ball." His selection, which he doesn't assign to positions, follows:

- E. Estes, Dr. D. K. Ratliff, Bill Conner, Sam Warren, Andy Northington, Scotty Gemmill, R. C. Hankins, Joe Pyron, Dib Hurst and Joe Chambers, the latter being manager.

J. P. French, called one of the best first basemen in the circuit, submits the following:

- C. A. Estes, Tesco
- P. Adamson, United
- I. B. Hiett, Ford
- B. Rogers (Ironhead) United
- S. B. Mills, Hardware
- S. S. Hurst, Hardware
- U. F. Warren, Newsies
- R. F. Austin, Tesco
- C. F. Woods, Hokus-Pokus
- L. F. Parrott, Hokus-Pokus

OLYMPIAD FUND SADLY LOW SAYS CALIFORNIA MAN

DETROIT.—Confronted with the possibility that the American team at the games of the Xth Olympiad at Los Angeles next month will be reduced to skeleton size, George W. Graves, chairman of the American Olympic finance committee, today appealed to every American sportsman—and sportswoman—for aid.

Receipts of the committee until Friday night, June 10, were less than 15 per cent of the amount needed for the American team. The committee is charged with complete responsibility for transporting the athletes to the games and back to their homes, equipping them, and feeding and lodging them while at the games and en route to Los Angeles.

"Unless the American public increases contribution, there is little doubt that the personnel of the American team must be reduced," Graves said. "No contribution is too small. Almost one-half of the money received so far is from donations of ten cents and up by the army, navy and marine corps, the National Collegiate Athletic association and police departments of cities such as Washington, Detroit and New York."

Although personal appeals have been made to 25 of the nation's millionaires—or men rated as millionaires—not one of these men has contributed to the fund, Graves revealed. Over one million pieces of mail have been sent from the committee's headquarters in Detroit, but receipts have been less than five million pennies for the total contributions up until the night of June 10, amounted to $45,857.94.

Scores of yacht clubs have been requested for aid, but contributions from the clubs or their members have been small with the largest contribution $10. Yet the yacht races are an important part of the Olympic program.

Friendly suggestions have come to the committee outlining plans for raising money, but many of these must be discarded because they smacked of commercialism.

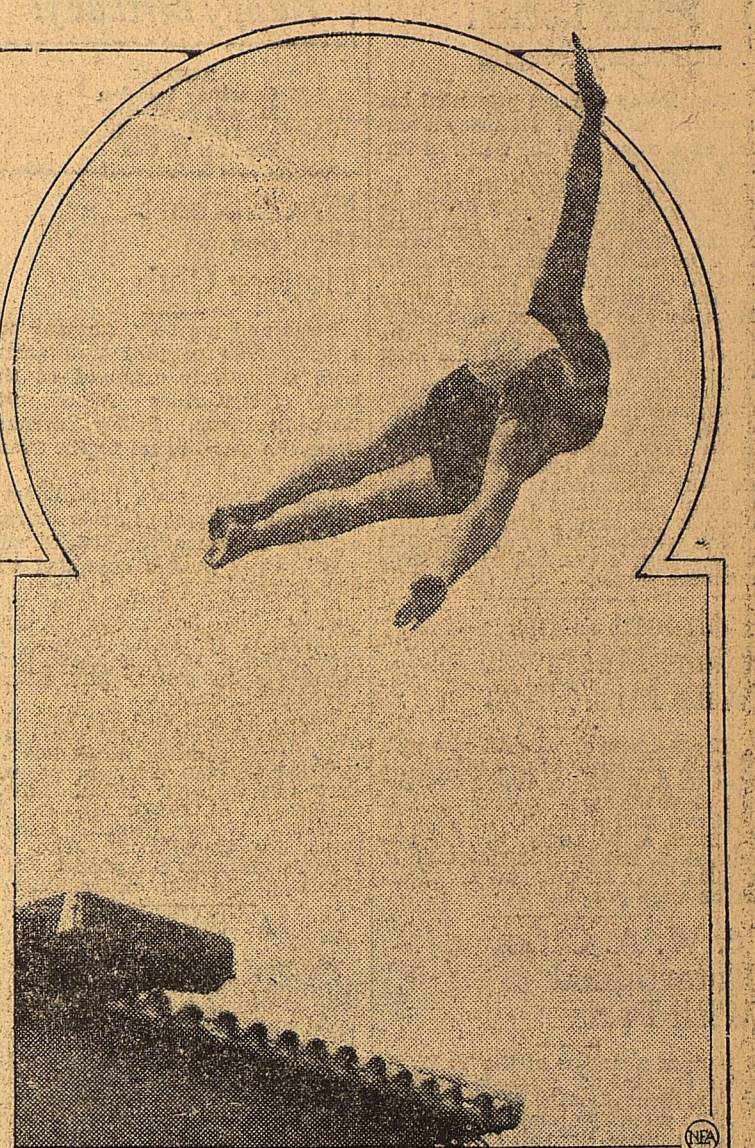

"If the committee had accepted and encouraged offers from organizations and manufacturers wishing to use the American Olympic committee name, there would be little need to appeal to the public," Graves declared. On one offer alone the committee lost $5,000 and possibly $10,000. This was in the case of a well known national advertiser who had prepared an advertising campaign linked with the games.

Other advertising schemes included royalties on songs, cigar lighters and novelty dolls.

In contrast to many other nations the United States team has never received money from the government, but several foreign nations directly—and others indirectly—aid their teams to the extent of underwriting two-thirds of their expenses.

Los Angeles and the state of California through legislative grants have spent more than one and one-half millions to prepare for the quadrennial meetings of the world's best athletes.

Californians have contributed liberally to the finance committee and universities of that state have also donated funds. California's quota for the committee will be oversubscribed according to reports from the coast, but Graves pointed out support of the team is not the duty of any certain district but of the entire nation.

Discussing the financial crisis confronting the committee, Babe Ruth in Detroit last week declared it was almost unbelievable that money shortage may cut down American representation.

"Participation in the Olympics is the goal of hundreds of young athletes and it seems lamentable that lack of finances should keep any worthy representative of American sports from competing for his country," the "Babe" said.

Contributions to the fund can be made direct to Detroit or through local committees.

FILLING THE COFFERS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—John Amaker, negro, has helped fill the city coffers quite a bit. Amaker, prohibition law violator, has admitted that he has spent more than $13,000 in fines and court costs during the past three years. He has been arrested and fined 25 times for selling liquor.

GOVERNOR STERLING CAN TAKE IT ON CHIN; HAS REMARKABLE TRAITS

By Gordon K. Shearer
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, (UP)—Governor Ross S. Sterling's most remarkable trait is his ability to "take it." The smile has not left his broad face in spite of depression's hardest knocks.

He seems the person least interested in the frequent newspaper announcements of "another Sterling Building sold." For him the depression is here. There is no use in getting hysterical about it. There is cure-all for it. It will not end until its causes are removed by a return to old-fashioned economy and a division of the available work among the workers. Texas is better off than the rest of the country. It has resources so no one need go hungry. Solid plugging away is the best course. That sums up his reaction to the unusual conditions that have been encountered in his first term of office.

"I have not lost my friends" is the way he explains his calmness in the face of loss of money and property. "I make no appeal for sympathy. I have lots of company." How much he could have saved if he had not been elected governor is speculative. Creditors might have been more insistent against one who was not governor.

At all events Governor Sterling is not howling about his losses. High lights of his administration so far have been:

An unsuccessful effort to submit a $300,000,000 state road bond issue. A clash with "Kingfish" Huey Long over a cotton holiday and passage of a compromise cotton acreage reduction law, held invalid by the courts.

Martial law for the East Texas oil field.

A systematic effort to cut down state expense, "balancing the budget."

Leasing of the Sabine river bed in the heart of the East Texas oil field.

The last two are the outstanding successes of his first term as Governor. Regardless of the distribution of credit among the senate finance committeemen, the state auditor, the house economy committee and Travis county grand jurors, many state leaks have been stopped. The governor claims credit for starting others on the trail with a refusal to approve appropriations.

for judicial expense ending in round figures.

Ultimate return to the state from leasing the Sabine river bed remains to be determined. The state mineral board estimates it will be more than $3,000,000.

Main points of attack against him have been:

That he lets former Governor W. P. Hobby advise too much.

That he lets former Governor Dan Moody advise too much.

That he lets Jacob F. Wolters, legislative attorney for the Texas company, advise too much.

That he vetoed the Brooks bill to authorize part use of the gasoline tax to pay off county and district road bond issues, thus relieving local taxation.

That he called a cotton session of the legislature that passed an invalid law.

That he "held down" production of the East Texas oil field.

That he has spent too much time away from the governor's office.

Farm boy, skipper of a Gulf schooner, country storekeeper, banker, oil venturer, rancher, publisher, and former president of the Humble Oil & Refining company, the 57-year old, 200 pound governor of the biggest state, wants the traditional democratic second term. Then he may attempt again to build up a fortune or he may retire to his Bayshore home.

"State's Attorney" Stars Barrymore

Echoing one of the country's most sensational murder trials, which splashed lurid headlines across the country's newspapers for months, John Barrymore comes to the screen of the Grand theatre today and Monday in RKO Radio Pictures' "State's Attorney," a vivid drama of courtroom battles and politics.

All the tense suspense of a grim fight with a human life at stake is crowded into this court room sequence. Step by step, the battle is traced, to reach its emotional climax when Miss Duncan takes the stand in a final desperate effort to save her neck from the noose.

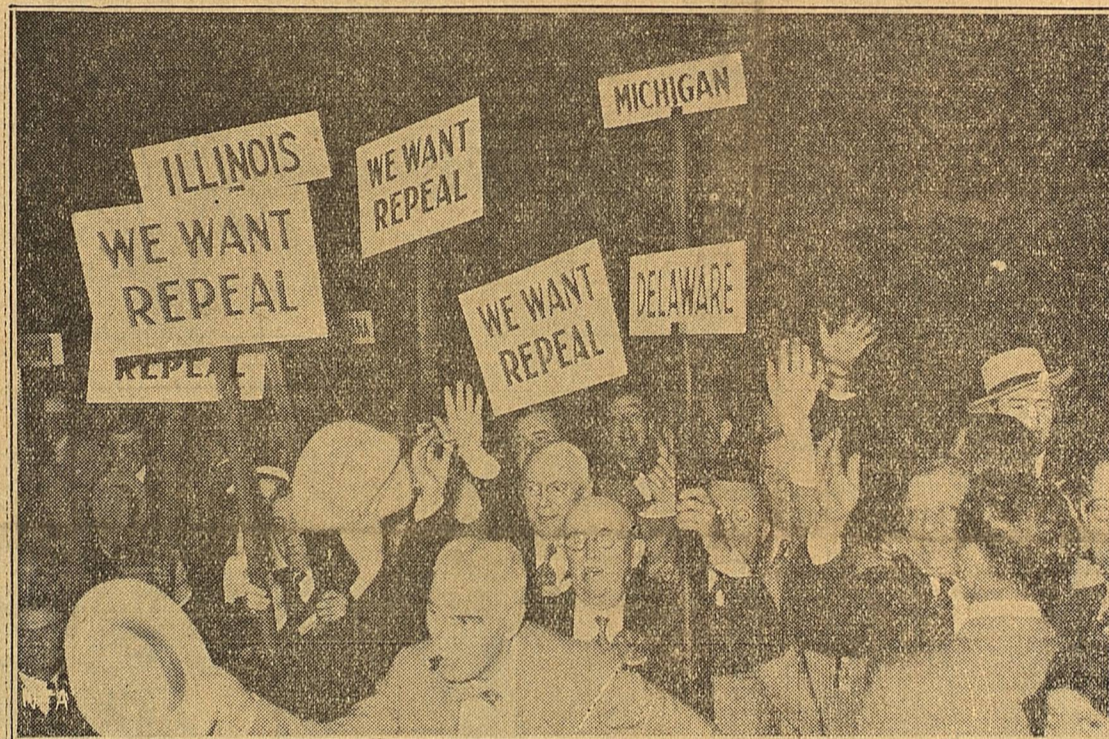

In "State's Attorney," the dashing Barrymore plays a brilliant attorney who is fearless and merciless in the courtroom and gallant in love. Miss Twelvetrees portrays a girl who stumbles into happiness through misfortune and wages a dramatic fight to hold it.

Others in the cast are William (Stage) Boyd, Jill Esmond, Mary Duncan, Ralph Ince, Walker Walker, Fileen Perry, Nat Pendleton and Frederick Burton. George Archambaud directed.

Demonstrating The New Amphibian

Start of Riotous Repeal Demonstration

Wet delegates to the Chicago Republican National Convention came to the night session on platform debate well armed with banners demanding repeal, and plenty of enthusiasm for the minority report wet plank drafted by Senator Bingham of Connecticut. At the beginning of the night session the wet delegates began to demonstrate, as shown in the above photo taken on the convention floor.

Bonus Army--

thousands planned to march on the capitol and police raised a draw bridge over the Anacostia river to prevent the egress from the nearby encampment. Later, it was lowered when the veterans promised to maintain order.

Other approaches to the city from the camp also were guarded by police, who refused to permit the veterans to go toward the city. This caused traffic tangles which elicited many protests to officials.

A large group of police filtered through the ranks of the veterans at the capitol to maintain order but they had no serious difficulty.

VACATION PLANS

What a good time the whole family is going to have on vacation—brother's yard-watching, sister's wholesale dish washing, mother's sewing and mending, and dad's office work will all be left behind. On vacations the work-that-has-to-be-done has a way of turning into play.

Change of scene and of companionship give a new outlook on life. Even a day's trip is beneficial, if the family cannot have a longer outing.

Mother should watch carefully that the children do not overdo—stay in the sunshine until they are badly sunburned—swim until they are exhausted—eat too many wild berries—or most important of all, drink any water that they do not know is free from pollution.

The discomfort of sunburn is well-known but many people do not seem to know that if burns are bad to the point of blistering, they are quite as dangerous as those produced by chemicals or fire. Severe, dangerous, and lasting constitutional effects may result from deep sunburn. Grow-ups and children determined upon tan had better get it gradually in safety and comfort.

Unless care is taken to see that they have suitable meals at regular intervals, an abundance of sleep, and do not become over-tired, children will suffer rather than benefit from the family vacation.

A family who is making vacation plans should give heed to healthful living quarters or camping places and proper water supply and should study well what to do in case of accidents in the water, ivy poisoning and snake bites.

Snake bites is such a real danger in West Texas that a later article will be devoted to its symptoms and care.

Here to Coast for $31.46 on Train

A new cheap rate arranged by the Texas & Pacific Railway company for a period running from July 2 to 12 allows one to go to El Paso and return for $5, with stopover privileges, to Fort Worth and return $6.70, Dallas and return $7.40.

The rate from El Paso to Los Angeles and return is only $36.46, which added to the Midland-El Paso price would mean only $31.46 here to the coast and back.

There will be other cheap combination rates, says Station Agent J. J. Hamlett.

Knight of Road Hoarded a Roll

NORTH KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(UP)—John Eastman, bearded, over-cast, sunbaked tramp, mooned a sandwich at a back door. He put it in his pocket, and went to a neighbor's, where the process was repeated. A third request for food also was successful, and John's pockets were getting about full. A thrifty soul was John.

At the police station, where the tramp was taken by an officer who didn't like to see such hoarding, a search was made of his clothes. Police pulled out the sandwiches, then they found a roll of bills.

The money was counted—$2,117.84.

MAHATAMA GOT VOTES

OROVILLE, Cal. (UP)—Mahatma Gandhi was a "write-in" candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, as opposed to President Hoover, in the recent preferential elections here. The Mahatma received votes in two precincts.

About 107 national and international unions are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Missing Corpse Frees Miss. Man

CALHOUN CITY, Miss. (UP)—Like a character from fiction, Roy Edward Smith has emerged from the veiled past to return here and insist he murdered a man, whose death never has been recorded.

But despite valiant efforts of officers and Smith, no corpus delicti could be found and authorities refused to hold him.

"Well, I'll stay round these parts for awhile in case you find the body and want to indict me," Smith said and he went back to a farm near Driver, Ark., where he had been working.

Prodded by a guilty conscience, Smith surrendered to officers at Osceola, Ark., with the story that he murdered Fred Davis, an itinerant worker, near here, in April, 1929, because Davis threatened to kidnap the daughter of a friend.

The body of Davis never was recovered, nor did anyone ever hear of any such murder. And, despite his ready confession, Smith will remain a free man, according to Sheriff Zach Powell, because of the obvious—a corpus delicti has not been established.

It appears hopeless that it will be established after three long years, during which time Smith claims to have served a term for desertion from the army.

Veteran Is Home After 14 Years

CAMBRIDGE, O. (UP)—After an "exile" of 14 years, Homer Tedrick, 42, World war veteran, returned to his home here.

At the time war was declared, Tedrick was in San Francisco. He enlisted, went overseas, and served until the declaration of peace. Seeking domestic comfort, he married a German girl. A son was born. The economic depression seized Germany. He lost a position in a mine near Luxemburg. His wife deserted him.

Accompanied by his small son, Tedrick sought work on an ocean liner to pay transportation to the United States, with no success.

Recently through Probate Judge Samuel Schlup of Cambridge, who made arrangements through Washington and the consulate at Luxemburg, Tedrick was given work on the S. S. Coahoma County, bound for New York Upon arriving in America, his sister sent him money to return to Cambridge.

Texas Woman Is "Carrie Nation"

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UP)—Mrs. Lela May Speer, self-styled "Carrie Nation of Walker County," claims she is the only sheriff in Texas who does not wear a badge, or who has a former sheriff for a husband.

Mrs. Speer, mother of three children, has been sheriff since last February by appointment of the county commissioners after her husband had been convicted of taking excess fees.

Though badgeless, she is definitely not gunless. She carries a .45 automatic pistol, and says she would not hesitate to use it.

She hates bootleggers worse than any other law violators, and has made a hobby of raiding stills and speakeasies.

On a recent raid, single-handed, she seized 14 gallons of whiskey and several hundred bottles of beer.

Feet Tell Fortune, Feet Surgeons Say

CHICAGO, (UP)—Orthopedic surgeons now tell fortunes by studying feet. In the case of a woman, Short, thick toes denote lethargy and lack of imagination. Long toes and long feet mean temperament. High arches mean the subject is aristocratic; low ones that she works for a living.

The bigger the feet, the prettier the woman.

Announcing A change of Policy

Effective Wednesday morning, June 22, we will begin a change in business policy which we believe will result in better service to our customers and will reduce our cost of doing business, making possible greater values.

All accounts not paid by the tenth of the month following purchase will be delinquent and extension of credit accommodations cannot be continued. This move is made necessary because the wholesale houses have placed the retail stores on this basis. To pay promptly, we must receive payment of accounts promptly.

Present economic conditions make it impossible to carry past due accounts without great cost to the merchant. By receiving payments promptly we can do business more cheaply, passing on the savings to our customers. If your account is past due at present, your early attention will be appreciated.

Those who are now paying on a 30-day basis are entitled to consideration, and their accounts will continue to be honored and appreciated.
