TWO YEARS' WAGE PRICE FOR HOME

We have reached a period of the year when the thoughts of many are given to owning a home. To own one's home is a good way to practice thrift for most persons. The problem, however, is one not easy of solution. The question with most prospective home owners is "How much can I afford to pay for my home?"

As in all other problems relating to individual or family administration, each case presents certain special aspects. Only broad, general suggestions can be offered. Manifestly, a young man whose prospects are for a continually rising income can afford to pay more for a home than a man who, through one circumstance or another can look into the future years with no assurance of greater earnings.

One of the most interesting contributions to this subject was made recently by Mr. Henry M. Stegman, writing in the Thrift Magazine. He points out that "most homes are bought on partial payments. Here the need for caution is even greater than if all the money needed were in hand. The monthly installments are not all savings. Especially in the beginning, they will go chiefly toward meeting the interest. As the debt is gradually reduced, this factor will decline. But the initial bargain should be based as closely as possible on one hundred times the weekly wage."

One hundred times the weekly wage would be approximately two years' wage which, Mr. Stegman concluded, is a good basis for determining what one should pay for one's own home.

RADIOS IN AUTOS

Massachusetts has started a row and police authorities in various state throughout the rest of the country have taken it up locally. The row concerns the introduction of radio receivers in automobiles.

From the official viewpoint, the conglomerated squawking that might be imagined as coming from future automobiles equipped with radio sets is feared as a menace to traffic, a public nuisance and a source of increased accidents. To this viewpoint there may be some truth, but whatever right it has on its side it could easily be overwhelmed by the good that would arise from the use of radios in automobiles.

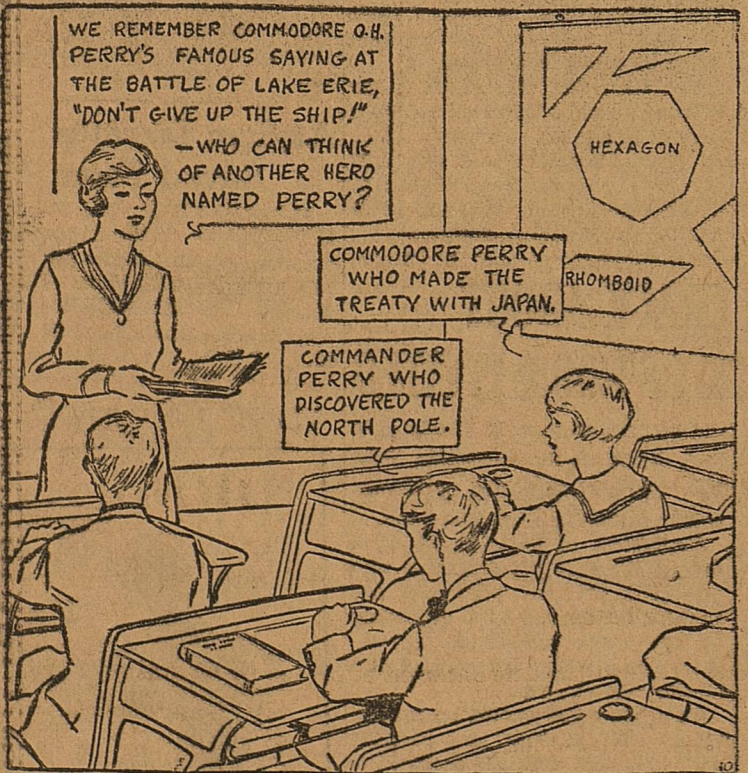

Radios in autos, of course, have never been intended for use while motorists are driving through heavy traffic. It is mostly designed for use on long journeys or while the car is parked beside a camp and the occupants are enjoying the country.

But let us grant radio's use in the midst of heavy traffic. What of it? While the police contend the radio might disconcert motorists from their chief occupation of driving, we might on the other hand imagine an otherwise grouchy and troublesome driver moving along safely and at peace with his fellow drivers, thanks to the happy feeling in him by the music he is hearing over his auto radio.

While there's music in the air, there's happiness and contentment. And while there's such good feeling among motorists, there can be no dangerous cross-cutting, no hateful and noisy banter, no delay by spiteful drivers coming into needless contact with each other.

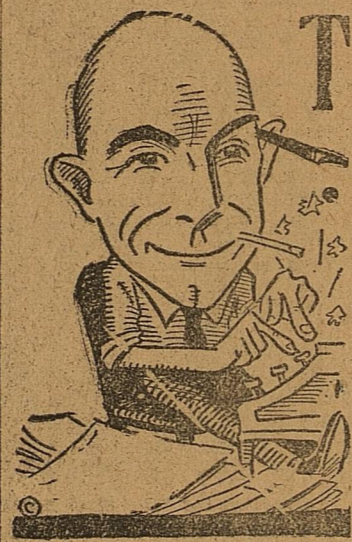

Perhaps radio while driving would be a boon.

The Town Quack

Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.

Dewey Stokes will leave in a few days for the tall timbers. (News item).

Ripley, in his "Believe it or not" cartoon, asks the question, "Can a man legally marry the sister of his widow?" Well, it might depend largely on how his widow became a widow. If a sod-widow, the man would hardly be in line for re-marriage, being far from this world. If a grass-widow, it isn't likely that many cases would arise where the question would come up, because if he got loose from one member of the family he would probably look to different territory the second time.

One of our home boys said, "That week I worked, my pool game fell off 40 per cent."

The board believes that the recent conditions have had a marked tendency to drive farmers into the co-operatives and regards that as a cause for jubilation because the idea of the Farm act is to assist agriculture through encouragement and development of co-operative marketing.

No one knows how much wheat is really in the hands of the farmers, but the board still insists the co-operative farmer must get his $1.18, even though it later appears that the loan value should have been fixed at a lower figure. The $1.18 loan value was set after the stock market crash had threatened commodity prices and the board, by law, had to decide what a reasonably safe loan value was. Its estimate appeared to be approximately correct up to the first of February.

When the price of wheat started to go down the grain co-operatives, on recommendation of the Wheat Advisory Committee and the Farm Board, organized the Grain Stabilization Corporation, which finally waded into the market and bought futures as well as cash wheat after being advanced $10,000,000 by the board. Private traders attempted to shove off their wheat as cooperative wheat on the corporation, but the board quickly developed a policy of buying nothing but co-operative wheat. The board has to approve all purchases, having lent the money, and has a veto power over the corporation.

Holds a Huge Quantity At last reports the corporation had about 10,000,000 bushels of cash wheat—most of it bought at the loan value—upwards of 7,000,000 bushels of futures and more than 8,000,000 bushels which the co-operatives bought previously and are holding. The total is about 25,000,000 and something like 18,000,000 bushels of it was bought at $1.18.

One opinion is that the government will eventually have to stand a net loss on that wheat bought at $1.18. But the board believes its policy of buying both cash wheat and futures has been justified by the subsequent strengthening of prices and says it isn't worried about the future.

Demonstration Of Hydrator Announced

Arrangements for a 10-day demonstration of Frigidaires, to begin Thursday, March 13, have been announced by George D. McCormick, manager of the Midland Hardware company. The new hydrator, and its preservation of foods for long periods of time, will be shown to the public.

The demonstration will be held daily from eight o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night. Salads will be prepared from vegetables which have been freshened in the hydrator. Desserts, frozen with the aid of the famous Frigidaire cold control, will be served to visitors.

REVIVE PONY EXPRESS

SAN ANGELO, Tex., March 10. (P) —Tate Moss has announced plans to revive memories of the early day Express Pony to visitors at the cattlemen's convention at which he expects a 24-hour horseback jaunt by riding into the lobby of a hotel on one of three paint ponies he will use.

Moss owns a ranch in Llano and Gillespie counties in which is located the famous Enchanted Rock, a red granite mountain 525 feet high and covering an entire section. The rock is eight miles west of the Fredericksburg-Llano highway.

He said he would start his 175-mile ride to San Angelo from the base of the rock at 8 o'clock on the morning of March 17, and remain in the saddle until he reaches this city. He will send two ponies ahead by motor truck making one change at Brady and another 8 or 10 miles out of San Angelo.

Murder Backstairs

By ANNE AUSTIN
AUTHOR OF "THE AVENGING PARROT" "THE BLACK PIGEON" ETC.
©1930 by NEA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

THE CRIME: Doris Matthews, lady's maid, murdered Friday night in summerhouse by blow with heavy perfume flask; body rock-weighted, dumped into lake on estate of millionaire Berkeleys.

DETECTIVES: Bonnie Dundee, guest at time of crime and discoverer of body; Captain Strawn of the Homicide Squad.

MEMBERS OF HOUSEHOLD: Mrs. George BERKELEY, social climber; George Berkeley, opposed to his daughter CLORINDA'S engagement to SEYMOUR CROSEY, New York society widower and a close friend of Mrs. Berkeley's social secretary, MRS. LETITIA LAMBERT; CLORINDA Berkeley, engaged to Crosey; GIGI Berkeley; DICK Berkeley, drunk Friday night, and so infatuated with Doris that he had forced her to agree to meet him later, although she was engaged to EUGENE ARNOLD, chauffeur; WICKETT, butler, formerly in employ of both Mrs. Lambert and Crosey.

While detectives scour the estate for Dick Berkeley, missing from his room all night, Dundee reconstructs crime, which he believes was impromptu, and committed by a member of the household, because of the perfume flask used as a weapon. Strawn announces his intention of searching for garments smelling of the perfume, but Dundee tells him that every person in the drawing room Friday night had been splashed with it by Gigi—including the butler.

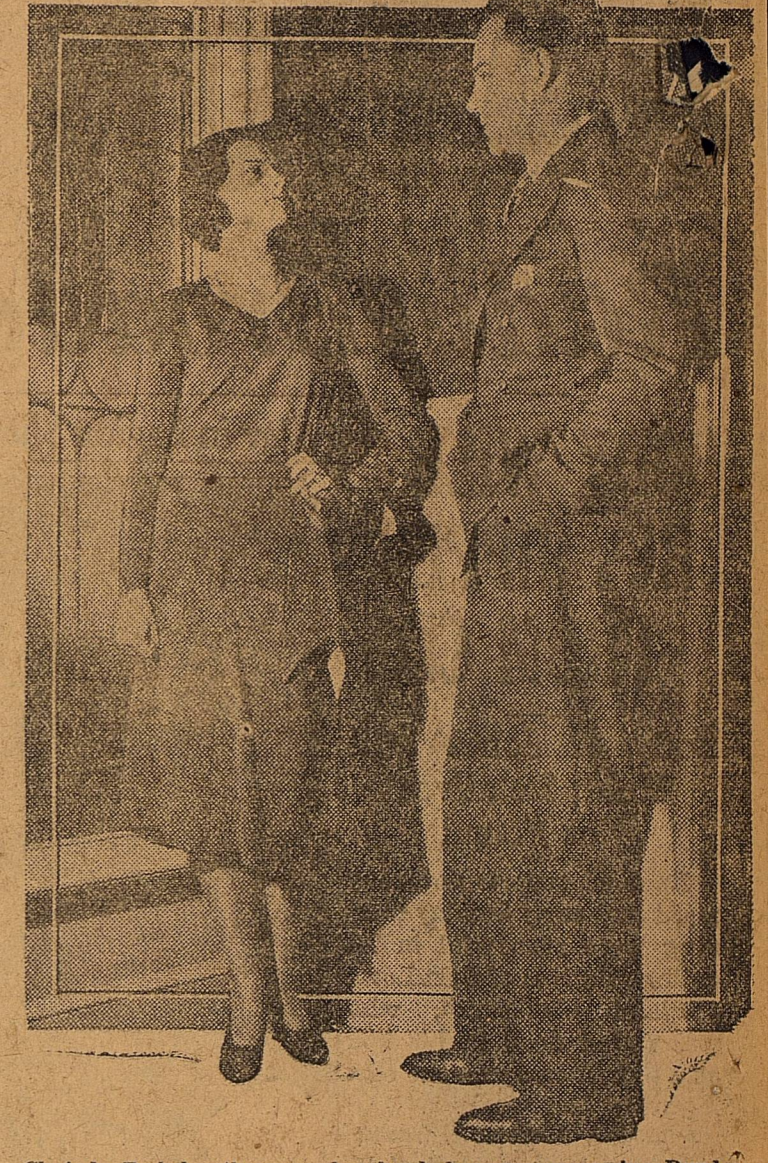

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

"To the devil with that kid!" Strawn exclaimed disgustedly, when Dundee told him Gigi Berkeley had seized the perfume flask and gone dancing madly from one to another in the drawing room the night before, lavishly sprinkling perfume upon dinner coats and evening gowns. "If your crazy Gigi and that damned perfume don't quit bobbing into this case I'll go nuts. Now I suppose all we've got to go on is blood stain—ah yes! . . . Would that woman have bled much, Doc?" He turned to the coroner hopefully. "Very little," Dr. Price answered. "There wouldn't have been any splashing of blood, if that's what you mean. Not from a scalp wound like that. As you can see from the remains of the stain"—and he pointed to the brownish spot on the floor—"there was a small pool of blood, which collected while the body lay there, during the time the murderer was gathering the stones and binding the skirt. But I should say it is entirely possible that the murderer got none on his clothes. Probably the wound and the hair was swabbed off with the same cloth used to wipe up the floor."

"Damn!" Strawn growled. Then he brightened. "Shoes! I don't suppose that little pest, Gigi, announced everyone's shoes, as well as dinner coats and evening gowns, did she? . . . Well, then, if I can find a pair of shoes stinking with this stuff, their owner's going to have a lot of explaining to do."

"Of course, there is a bare possibility that the murderer was an outsider—some intruder who found the girl waiting here for her sweetheart, not knowing he couldn't meet her," Dundee offered dubiously. "Any evidence of an attack upon the girl, Dr. Price?" "None whatever," the coroner answered. "As I expected," Dundee nodded. "We couldn't hope this case would be as simple as that. Furthermore, a chance intruder would scarcely have taken the time and the trouble to dispose of the body. He would simply have beat it as quickly as possible, fairly sure of many hours to escape before the hue and cry was raised. And still furthermore, such an explanation would entirely fail to account for the flask of perfume. . . . No, it seems to me that it's fairly obvious our murderer is a member of the Berkeley household, which includes all servants and guests, of course. . . . By the way, where is Crosey?"

your report as soon as possible, Carraway," he added to the fingerprint expert. "Be sure to include the fingerprints of the corpse, too." The chief of the homicide squad hesitated for a moment, frowningly rubbing the grayish stubble on his massive jaw. Then: "Barnes, you and Peters are detailed to go over this section of the lawn and the lake's edge with a fine tooth comb. Bring anything and everything you find that shows people have been here—cigar or cigarette stubs, burnt matches, handkerchiefs, and so on. . . . You, Clements, and he addressed the only remaining plainclothesman, "come along to the house with us."

Strawn, Dundee, Collins and Clements were setting off for the big stone mansion when a hallo stopped them. It was Detective Payne, followed at some distance by the two men he had chosen to help him search for Dick Berkeley. "Sorry, Chief!" he panted. "But no luck. We've been through every building on the estate, except the big house itself, and beat the shrubbery till a rabbit couldn't have escaped us."

Strawn frowned and shrugged. "Guess he's got away, all right, but he'll be a marked man, unless he's managed to change his clothes. See anybody at all?" "A deaf old man who said he was the gardener, and a boy of 17 or 18, who was helping him in the far east corner of the estate," Payne answered. "The boy told me they both live in town, and come to work at eight o'clock."

"All right! Come along!" Strawn growled. And the cortege was augmented by three somewhat disheveled and sweating detectives. The chief halted it again, however, on the steps leading to the front veranda. "Dundee," he ordered, "you both into the house and get your bathing suit for Collins. I'm going to strip the lay of things from the outside a bit—get an idea of the thing," he explained lamely, and Dundee's heart swelled with gratitude. The "old man" wanted him by his side when the storm broke inside, wanted him to hear every word that was said, see the expression on every face when the hideous news was told. Wickett, the butler, looking haggard and harassed, opened the big front door for him and Collins. "Everyone—that is, everyone out Mr. Dick and Mrs. Berkeley, sir—is in what we call the 'little parlor,' sir, the first room on your right," he said in a low voice. "The other servants are in our own sitting room downstairs, sir. As I was instructed sir, I have not given out any facts at all, but I am a 'said boys!' he called to the three plainclothesmen and a uniformed policeman who still awaited orders. Which one of you can swim?"

The man in uniform stepped forward and saluted. "All right, Collins. Come along with us. Detective Dundee will lend you his bathing suit. I want you to bring up a pile of five stones you'll find on the bottom of the lake about five or six feet from this summerhouse, and then dive until you find a little white apron tied about some broken glass. . . . You can remove the body now, Dr. Price. I see the morgue ambulance has come. . . . And let me have

BOXER FROM LAND OF WEINERS TO FACE SHARKEY FOR CROWN

GERMAN DEMPSEY TOO LAZY TO TRAIN FOR FIGHT

By SPARROW M'GANN
(Copyright, 1930, by The Star-Telegram.)

NEW YORK, March 10.—The next match of major importance on the fistic calendar will be the heavyweight championship bout between Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling. It is painfully apparent that the fans are not highly keyed up over the prospect as a result of the unsatisfactory ending of the Sharkey-Scott fiasco at Miami.

Unless the German heavyweight shows some real class in training, the fans are not likely to take kindly to him and the gate will suffer. In that event the Madison Square Garden Corporation will take it on the chin for the second time this year. The gate receipts at the Sharkey-Scott show were below expectations and there is not great certainty that the Sharkey-Schmeling affair will go over the top.

William Muldoon, chairman of the New York Boxing Commission and one of the trustees of the Muldoon-Tunney trophy, says he will recognize the winner of the Sharkey-Schmeling fight as the heavyweight title holder. Whether or not the fans will agree with him is a question. One thing is certain—If the bout winds up in a manner smacking of a technicality, a lot of folks will refuse to accept the winner as the champion. It has been done before.

Tommy Burns won the heavyweight title in a match with Marvin Hart. It was quite some time before Tommy was accepted as champion and he had to tour Europe beating the champions of England, Ireland and Australia before his claim to the title was generally recognized. Even to this day some fans deny that Burns ever held the title. The trustees of the Muldoon-Tunney trophy debated long and seriously before Tommy's name was added to the list of those who bore the title.

German Lazy
The doubtful factor in the Sharkey-Schmeling match is the reluctance of the German to settle down to hard training. He has delayed coming to this country to give the fans an opportunity to learn whether the reports concerning his broken ankle and injured thumb are true. It is strange for a big fellow who has done no work since the Paolina encounter last summer to idle about and await the day to purchase in a major boxing contest. Schmeling either has too much confidence or he holds Sharkey in contempt. Schmeling will find it difficult to settle down to work and whip himself into shape for a hard match in two months. If he has any idea Sharkey is an easy mark Schmeling will see the error of his judgment before many rounds have passed. Jack Sharkey is the best man the "German Jack Dempsey" has faced in the ring and unless he is right

Schmeling will taste defeat early in the fight.

Max Good Prospects
Schmeling's career has been a short one but he is by far the likeliest prospect in the heavyweight class to show up in years. Max has had pretty much his own way about things and has been woefully managed. This is not alone the fault of those who wanted to share in the money Schmeling was bound to make. Max has as much to do with causing arguments among those who had managed him as the managers themselves. Arthur Bulow, Max's manager of record, still has a contract which does not expire until October. If Schmeling returns here to fight and Bulow ties up the fighter with a series of annoying injunctions the German will be unable to do himself justice in training.

WOOL GROWERS ON WEDNESDAY MEET IN SAN ANGELO

SAN ANGELO, March 10.—(UP)—The Texas Wool and Mohair association's board of directors will meet here March 12 to seek a marketing plan whereby the association can compete with the National Wool Marketing association which is making a bid for the clip of Texas producers.

The move was decided at a meeting at Junction recently when representatives of 20 Texas warehouses were present, according to Miles O'Daniel of San Angelo, president of the warehousemen. Although no action was taken at the meeting, the decision to seek a marketing plan virtually eliminated the possibility of the warehouses affiliating with the national co-operative association.

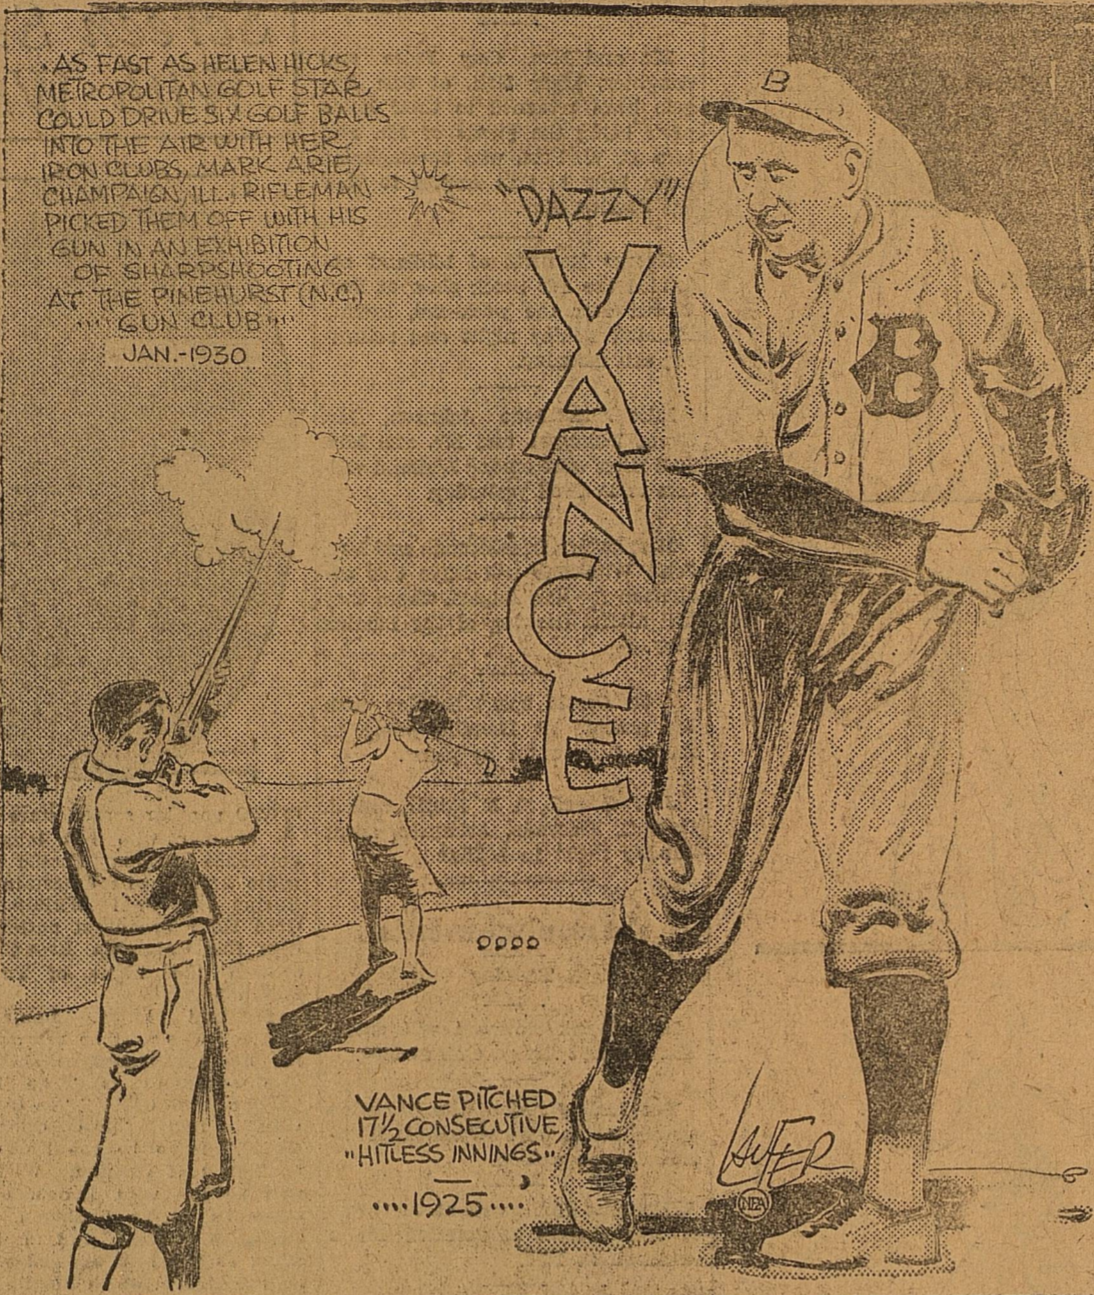

The warehouse association has adopted resolutions setting the minimum price to be entertained for the coming spring clips of short wool at 65 cents clean, and the low-end to be considered for adult spring mohair is 40 cents and the kid hair at 50 cents f. o. b. Texas points.

On the other hand, the basis set by the National Wool Marketing corporation for advances on wool and mohair is exactly 5 cents higher than that of the warehousemen.

R. J. Hagenbarth, president of the National Wool Growers association and owner of a flock of more than 100,000 head of sheep, hopes the warehousemen will not compete with the national organization. He expects an agreement within 60 days. The warehouses, he says, will not suffer, but will grow and prosper with the co-operatives, and will be able to continue their banking business as at present. He sees a tendency for wool prices to rise from the present day level due to the prospective increase in the tariff and wool efforts of the National Wool Marketing corporation to affect orderly marketing of the product.

"I would hate to contemplate what the grower of wool and mohair would have to face this spring if it were not for the work and influence of the co-operative," he said. Hagenbarth recently returned here from Chicago, where he conferred with other officials of the co-operative.

My Trip to Atlantic City

W. W. Lackey.

At the request of the Reporter-Telegram, together with similar requests from a number of friends, and especially in the interest of the young people of our city, I am pleased to give a more or less brief account of my trip to Atlantic City and the meeting of the N. E. A. from February 23rd to the 28th. Those who have taken similar trips will realize that an account of this nature must be limited to mere mention of many of the places visited and of the themes and the nature of the association.

The Special Train

Our special train was routed over the T&P to New Orleans, the L&N to Cincinnati and the Pennsylvania to Atlantic City. This routing carried us through fourteen states and the District of Columbia. The states passed through were: Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, West Virginia, the District of Columbia, Virginia and Georgia. Sight-seeing trips were taken in New Orleans, Philadelphia, Washington and Atlanta. The association with these hundred or more leading educators of the state to and from Atlantic City was equivalent to a summer course, or an institute, on the best modern educational practice. It proved to be a clearing house for the superintendents on the best that is happening in our schools today. We had one conference with the State Superintendent on recent and proposed school legislation and on such other topics as were of interest to our schools. Being on the trip all one Sunday we conducted a regular Sunday School, the lesson being taught by Dr. T. D. Brooks of Baylor University. We held two banquets on the train, one honoring Dr. Norman R. Coxier of Dallas, who had been elected President of the Association, the greatest educational recognition that can come to a man in the South, the other celebrating March 2nd, Texas Independence Day, at which thirty or forty Texas Exes were present. This is not to speak of the good fellowship we enjoyed throughout the trip and of the college songs we sang together at fairly regular intervals.

In New Orleans
We arrived in New Orleans about day light. Our first experience there was that of crossing the Mississippi by ferry boat, which boat accommodated something like a dozen coaches on three tracks. "The Great Father of Waters" appeared to be well named, since at this point it more resembles an ocean than a river. Those who have been in New Orleans will recall that the level of the river there is twelve feet above that of the streets of the city. Our sight-seeing in New Orleans lasted until one o'clock. We visited the old French Quarters where La Fitte and his men were imprisoned, Esplanade Avenue, Jackson Square, City Park, a two-thousand-cow dairy, the Metairie Cemetery, and the St. Louis Cathedral, next to the oldest in the United States. The canals of the city, which are now being covered for streets that are regularly paved, and the cemetery, were among the unique things we saw. Those who have visited New Orleans will recall that the tombs are all above the ground, an entire family being buried in one vault. At Pass Christian we took buses to Biloxi, a distance of twenty-two miles along the Old Spanish Trail, viewing the beautiful summer-resort homes along the highway facing the Gulf of Mexico. Among these were: the summer home of Roosevelt, the summer home of Wilson, called the "White House of the South," and the home and Confederate Hospital of Jefferson Davis.

In Philadelphia
We arrived in Philadelphia, also one of the most historical cities in the country, in time for breakfast. We visited Independence Hall, saw the Liberty Bell, the room, the chairs, and the table where the Declaration of Independence was signed, and Congress Hall where Washington and Adams were both inaugurated. We visited Valley Forge, saw Franklin's grave, William Penn's house, and the Betsy Ross House where the famous American flag was made for the nation. I went through the world-famous Wanamaker store, one of the two largest retail stores and possibly the most famous, in the world, covering a city block and extending about eight stories high. This store contains the largest pipe organ in the world, which was bought by Wanamaker at the St. Louis Exposition in 1894. It weighs over three hundred thousand pounds; twenty-five freight cars would be required to transport it as it is today. Regular brief recitals are given at the hour of opening the store at eleven a. m., and shortly before the store closes. I was in the store at eleven o'clock and heard part of the program at that time. Literally thousands of people had come into the store to hear the program. I secured a copy of the Five Pioneer Principles upon which the Wanamaker's Store was built more than sixty years ago.

In Atlantic City
Atlantic City has a population of about sixty-five thousand, fifteen thousand of which are colored. It is on an island and faces the Atlantic Ocean. The Board Walk is from thirty to sixty feet wide, about five or six feet above the beach, and extends eight or ten miles along the ocean. This city has been called the Play Ground of the Nation. It is estimated that one hundred fifty thousand visitors were in Atlantic City the week end of February the 22nd. It contains the largest and most complete auditorium in the world, which was erected at a cost of fifteen million dollars, the main auditorium having a seating capacity of forty thousand, while one hundred thousand can be accommodated in the building by using the small auditoriums and conference rooms.

The Association
The Department of Superintendence of the National Educational Association is the largest gathering of educators and the most important educational conference held in the world. The attendance at this meeting was estimated at twenty thousand. General sessions were held in the mornings and in the evenings, the sectional meetings being held in the afternoons. We heard about ten speakers per day for five days. The theme of the program was the Spirit of Life. We heard the leading University men as well as the ablest public school superintendents in America. Almost every phase of school life, school administration, school efficiency, the school equipment was treated in these lectures. Those of us who heard them regarded them of more value than a course on the same subject in the best universities. The National High School Orchestra, consisting of three or four hundred high school musicians from the high schools of the nation, a choir from one of the State Teachers Colleges of New Jersey, a Boys' Chorus from a consolidated Junior High School, an All-State High School Band from New Jersey, and an educational pageant with three thousand participants, were among the features of entertainment with which each session was opened. Many of these programs were broadcasted, and some of the Midland people tell me that they tuned in on them. The Educational exhibits shown at the association illustrated every phase of the latest and best in school equipment the world over. Announcement has already been made that Dr. N. R. Crozier, Superintendent of the Dallas Public Schools, was elected President of the Association. This is the only time that this honor has ever come to a southern man and it is regarded as the greatest educational recognition in the nation.

In Washington
We spent one day in Washington, regarded by many as the most beautiful city in the world. We went through the capitol, saw the Senate and the Supreme Court in session, and spent some time in the Library of Congress, which some of our party called the most beautiful building in the world. We were in the offices of both of our Senators, Hon. Morris Sheppard and Hon. Tom Connally, saw the White House, and the State House. We drove across the Potomac into Virginia, spent some time at Arlington, formerly the home of General Lee, and now the national cemetery. We were told

DENTON HIGH SCHOOL WADES THROUGH COMPETITION TO BECOME CHAMPIONS OF INTERSCHOLASTIC CAPS

AUSTIN, March 10. (P)—Denton school basketball championship here Saturday night, winning easily over Estelline, 30 to 11.

Denton outplayed at every turn the boys from Hall County—way up in the Panhandle—who traveled probably the greatest distance to participate in the two-day tournament, which opened Friday with 13 teams competing for the supreme honors. The score was 9 to 1 at the end of the first period, 19 to 5 at the half and 28 to 8 when the third period ended. Denton eliminated the fast Athens five, which carried away state honors last year and then brought to Texas the national scholastic championship.

Regan High of Houston defeated Breckenridge, 48 to 19. In a contest preliminary to the championship, battle and was placed third in the tournament.

Denton Too Big
The Denton boys were just too big for the youngsters from Estelline to cope with. Both teams played a fast type of game but the brand of the new state champions was played far over the heads of their opponents.

The combination of Smyers and Zeretke at forwards for Denton proved too much for the Estelline hopefuls. Smyers accounted for 15 of his team's total while Zeretke scored right on four field goals. Estelline was at a great disadvantage due to the superior height of their opponents and the weight and ability of the opposing guards. Time after time the Estelline boys started their fast breaking attack only to have it broken up practically before it got a good start. What few shots they did get at the basket rolled around the rim and off, the five from the Panhandle scoring only three goals from the field.

Estelline Swept
Denton brought the full force of its much vaunted and highly touted attack into the fray and swept the Estelline opposition before it as the winds scatter chaff. With Smyers and Zeretke playing the corners and breaking fast into the basket, the small Estelline guards had little chance to intercept Denton passes while the superior height of the Dentonians made it practically impossible for the Estelline five to work within easy shooting distance spot of which had material of which were designated in his will. When one visits the city of Washington, which he laid out, the capitol, the corner stone of which he laid, and Mount Vernon where he lived, he does not wonder that George Washington is America's greatest hero.

In Atlanta
On our return we stopped a few hours in Atlanta, Georgia, where we drove out to Stone Mountain to see the Confederate monument, went through the grounds of Georgia Tech and Emory University, and saw the thirty-seven-thousand-dollar painting of the Battle of Atlanta.

Schools Visited
Practically every member of the delegation visited some school system on the trip. I visited one grammar school and was impressed with the training which the pupils manifested in physical education. Many of them displayed the skill and ability of an expert. This is the course that will be introduced in our schools next year, and the need of a Physical Education building will be almost imperative. The other school I visited was the three-million-dollar high school in Atlantic City. Here I visited a class in Public School Music where the director was conducting the study of an Oratorio as difficult as the Messiah. The skill with which he and the members of the class attacked this difficult music was very impressive.

We returned to Texas feeling that this meeting and the trip to and from it were among the best in the history of the organization. While this is true, I returned to Midland thinking that I had seen no place as fine as Midland and no people as good as here.

JOHN VALLS MARCH
LAREDO.—(P)—The John A. Valls March, latest musical composition by Professor Carlos A. Ayala, of San Antonio, is dedicated to District Attorney John A. Valls of Laredo. The cover page of the composition carries a striking photographic likeness of Mr. Valls. It is a snappy march.

EINSTEIN ON BILL

BERLIN. (UP)—A surprise greeted the audience at a recent benefit concert in a Berlin synagogue. The program announced that the famous singer Herman Jadowker and "the well known violinist Albert Einstein" would appear.

The audience was somewhat surprised to see that the "well known violinist" was none other than the founder of the theory of relativity, Professor Albert Einstein. Einstein plays the violin very well and he also appears from time to time on concert platforms for beneficent purposes.

NEW TOWNSITE ANNALS CHANGING INTO BOOK OF REVELATIONS

IDENTITY OF PENWELL THREE WEEKS AGO LOST IN PRESENT TOWN, WHICH IS LAID OUT IN ORDERLY FASHION

Interesting "Fight" Between Streets Seen As Healthful Business Indication

The newest boom town in the West Texas Permian basin is not suffering its greatest competition from other towns...

A city divided within itself cannot stand, the old adage relates, but Penwell is too dynamic to keep its feet under its abnormally growing body...

The situation may now be summed up thus: Main street is more crowded with buildings and demands higher price for lots...

The fight goes on through various channels. Streets are being oiled. More grubbing for new streets is underway...

Steady streams went into or came out of the townsite office. Every class of humanity seemed jostled in the assembly...

Persons in the town said Sunday afternoon may be taken as an example of what is going on steadily at the new townsite...

Artist's conception of the Field of the Cloth of Gold, as shown by the old lithographs. Change Noted. They have their street hawkers there, noisily shouting their wares...

At night, too, there is a change to be seen over three weeks back. Instead of "wandering" on the dark prairie and wondering what is to be struck next...

Where three weeks ago you had to "borrow" a cigarette off a driller when your pack drained empty, you can now shut your eyes and start walking...

You can even get a haircut in the place. There is a shop which stands out from the other buildings, not because of its size...

All in all, there is diversity found in visiting the place on a Sunday afternoon, especially if one likes to see something new.

To the east, exactly one mile away, there is Hilton. It sits in a maze of rocks and boulders and rough ground. It has a few sturdy buildings fronting the highway...

Odessa is getting a big play out of the exciting game. Restaurants are full, rooming houses are crowded and boarding places are paying more and more to the butcher, the baker and the candle-stick-maker.
