City Expectant as Speaking Programs Plans Completed

HUNDREDS EXPECTED AT EVENT

All Candidates Are Expected to Be Present

Twenty-seven speakers are scheduled to make not political talks in Midland tomorrow. But don't get fidgety! You don't have to hear all of 'em.

Five out-of-town speakers are scheduled. They are: Mark McGee for Earle Mayfield; Henry Ansley for Clint C. Small; Judge Jewell P. Lightfoot for Ross Sterling; Pat Murphy, and someone yet to be selected to represent Jim Young.

Midland candidates are getting together their best thunder and funniest jokes. Some of them will merely make bows and others will talk their limit of 5 minutes.

City people are getting the spirit of the occasion and will turn out in big numbers to hear their favorites talk and perhaps lambast, and just to do their part to pep things up.

McKee Will Speak For Hour and Half

The regular program at which county candidates and others will speak comes at 5 o'clock and again at 8 o'clock in the evening. All of the 5 and 8 speeches will be short.

HEAR THE CANDIDATES

After making possible a speaking date and election bargain event, it is to the interest of Midland voters to turn out in large numbers Thursday to hear candidates for office outline their platforms.

To many voters, some or all of the candidates are unknown. Votes will be cast on hearsy evidence. It is fitting that the candidates be given a hearing, and if they can get votes by convincing the voters of their ability, more power to them.

Give the candidates a hearing, then investigate in a systematic way and find out the facts of their records. Vote intelligently and select candidates on a business basis. The candidate crop is large and voters owe it to themselves and to the government to give serious consideration to office seekers.

INTEREST IN SANITATION

The hundreds who visited the demonstration of milk pasteurization at the Snowwhite Creameries plant yesterday bore striking testimony to the interest people have in sanitation and health.

Demonstrations of this character, showing modern methods of purification and of eliminating filth from the handling of food products, are educational. Midland people are to be commended for their interest and for encouraging sanitary measures.

The milk ordinance, passed recently by the city council, and met immediately by several Midland dairies and food handlers, will go a long way toward preventing epidemics, and will save lives.

MONEY WELL SPENT

Midland homesteaders have used probably more water for development of lawns, gardens and flower plots this season than ever before. The results are evident and the money has been well spent.

At the beginning of next spring, some organization or group of civic bodies will do well to sponsor a beautiful yard contest, dividing the entries into various classes, either by valuation of homes or by divisions of those who hire the work done and those who do it by home labor.

Not only would the contest draw people into it that have been only moderate in improving their premises, but it would give satisfaction to those who work at the task so strenuously already. Friendly competition would be a stimulus that would result in making Midland one of the most beautiful cities of the state.

TOOTHBRUSH HEALTH

More than 45,000,000 toothbrushes are used annually in the United States.

But this vast consumption only tells half the story for if every man, woman and child were a regular devotee to the toothbrush the use would be more than twice as great.

It is only in comparatively recent years that prime attention is being given to the care of the teeth.

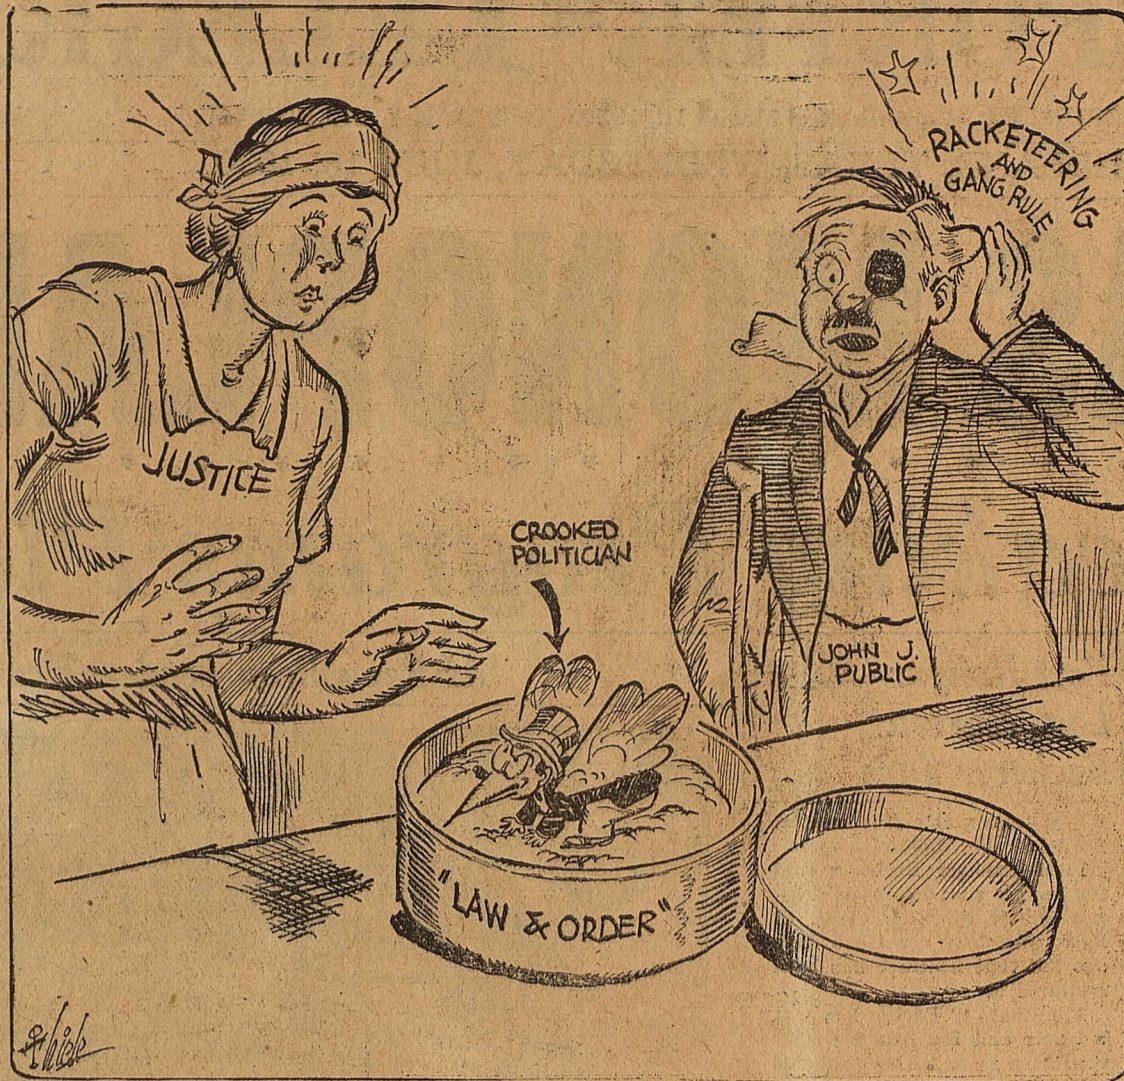

The war gave dental hygiene a decided impetus as the men in the ranks learned the necessity of giving the teeth due consideration.

Many of the ailments whose sources were at one time puzzling have been traced by medical science to dental defects or diseases.

Heart diseases, rheumatism, neuritis, kidney disorders, gastrick ulcers, and some forms of insanity come under this category.

The number of toothbrushes used in America each year indicates that there is a growing desire for tooth preservation but the consumption will have to be greatly increased before the nation can be said to have lined up in a concerted attack upon the evils which are born of dental negligence.—El Paso Herald.

The Fly in the Ointment!

Tennessee Woman Makes $3,000,000 in Ten Years

DALLAS, Texas, July 16.—The small-town boy who went forth to conquer the world and came home rolling in wealth has nothing at all on Miss Ann B. Gordon.

Her story reads like one penned by Horatio Alger only, in this case, the hero is a girl instead of a boy, and it has been fact, not fiction.

Ten years ago Miss Gordon set forth from the diminutive town of Flat Creek, Tenn., to see what she could do in the way of making a fortune.

Today she is president of her own oil company, has a fortune worth at least $3,000,000 and holds oil lands and leases that promise to make a good deal more than that for her in the next few years.

"The Royalty Queen of Texas," as she is called, has just returned from a visit to the old home town, Flat Creek, which has just about 100 inhabitants, turned out en masse to greet her. There was a family reunion, with her father and mother, three brothers and four sisters joining in, and a big time was had by everyone. Now Miss Gordon is back at work, ready to push the job of turning oil leases into cash.

Grew Up as Farm Girl Turned to Realty and Oil

Miss Gordon grew up in Flat Creek as a farm girl, one of the seven children of Colonel and Mrs. R. D. Gordon. Her first venture into the business world was as a real estate dealer.

The real estate game in a town that small is never very exciting, and in 1920 she decided to go farther afield and see what she could do. She came to Texas, and opened a real estate office here. The post-war real estate boom was on and her business prospered.

Then she began to notice the vast sums of money that were being made in the oil fields. She made a careful study of the situation, and finally invested $30,000 that her real estate deals had made her in the great Van oil field.

In a short time this investment was proved a wise one. Ten oil wells have been brought in, producing from 10,000 to 50,000 barrels of oil daily. And there are yet 60 more locations to be drilled on her property in the near future.

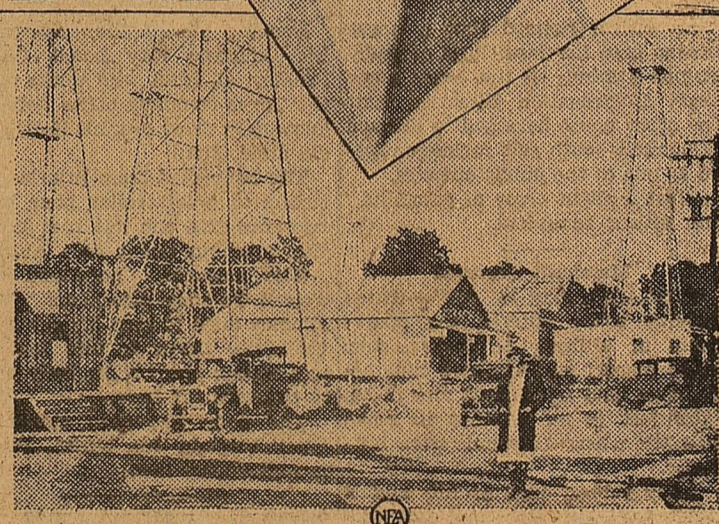

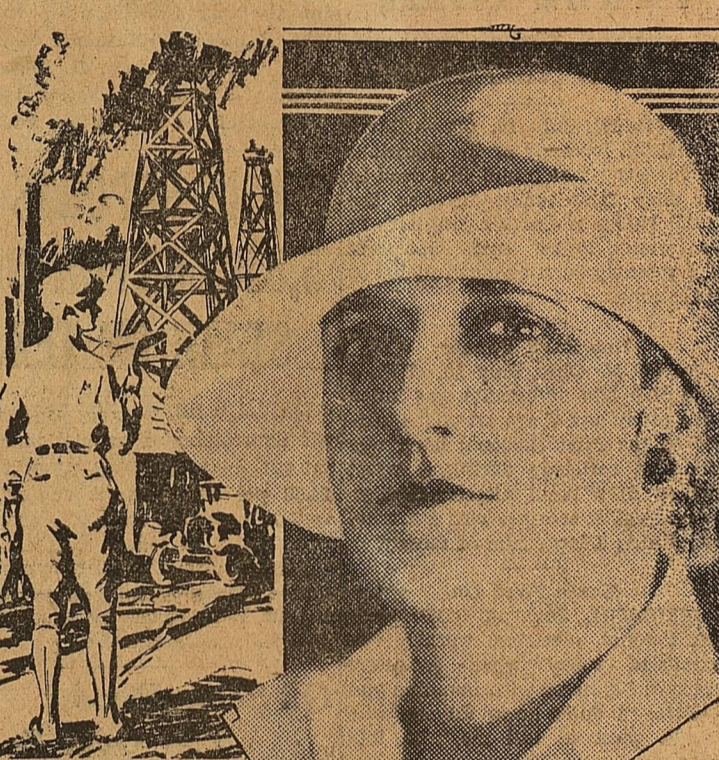

She has also organized the Ann B. Gordon Oil Co. Inc., and directs all of its activities as its president. In addition, she has taken a 40-acre lease in Brown county and have brought in six producing wells on it.

Miss Gordon does not talk much about her success. When she is with close friends, however, she is fond of telling of some of the freakish incidents that have marked her business career.

Has Both Profited and Lost in Unusual Deals

Once, when she was still in the real estate business, she closed a deal and counted on a large commission. To her disappointment, however, she was unable to collect it, and in the end had to be satisfied with a collection of second-hand furniture. She had no earthly use for it, but she took it because it seemed slightly better than nothing at all. Some time later she disposed of it by exchanging it for a lease on a section of almost worthless land in West Texas; and when a prospective purchaser appeared she gladly sold him the lease for a dollar an acre. Then, later on, she discovered that the land held oil and that she could have realized $55,000 for her lease.

when she lost out on a deal. To balance it, there is the story of the time when she took a lease on a section of land in New Mexico as her commission on a real estate deal. The land was not supposed to be worth much but she held on to it; recently a 950-barrel well was brought in near her holdings, and her land has become worth a big sum. She has not sold it, but is planning to drill it herself as soon as she finishes developing her other holdings.

Miss Gordon's home-coming was made a great occasion by the townspeople of Flat Creek. The town turned out to greet her and made of her visit one of the big events in its history.

"Miss Ann," as she is familiarly known, has never married—all her life she has been too busy with business affairs to worry about love.

CUTS OFF ARM

FT. STOCKTON, July 15.—George Peters of the Murchison ranch, in company with Harry Shuttleworth, while coming in to Fort Stockton from the 7D farms, met a sheep-shearing machine near a culvert, and in some manner they were crowded too near each other, and George Peters had his left arm in the door of his Chevrolet coupe and some part of the shearing machine struck his arm, cutting it off just above the elbow.

George was rushed to the Dr. Martin Emergency hospital, at which place Dr. Martin, assisted by Dr. E. A. Barrett, stopped the blood, dressed the wound and George is reported doing nicely. The car was slightly damaged and Shuttleworth escaped injury.

It is said that it required 2000 men three years to carry a single stone from Elephantine to Elias for use in one of Egypt's pyramids.

American Export Trade Begins to Show a Marked Decline. Especially With Our Best Customers—Tariff May Not Be a Cause but Here Are the Figures, Anyhow

WASHINGTON, July 16.—This year doubtless will come to be known as the time when Uncle Sam, merchant prince, gave the cash customers a poke in the snoot.

History will also decide whether he got away with it. A lot of those darned foreigners who have been buying our goods have been insisting lately that he can't—and our export figures of recent months have been used to corroborate the contention.

Protests, as everyone knows, were received from nearly 40 foreign nations against the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill. In the past few weeks there have been instances of discrimination against Soviet Russia and latest figures on our trade with her show an astonishing decline.

A Tangled Situation

Other factors than artificial trade barriers have entered into the unfortunate foreign trade situation, so it probably is too easily to accept the assurance of those who insist it's all our own fault. Nevertheless, here are the latest facts and figures for whatever they may be worth.

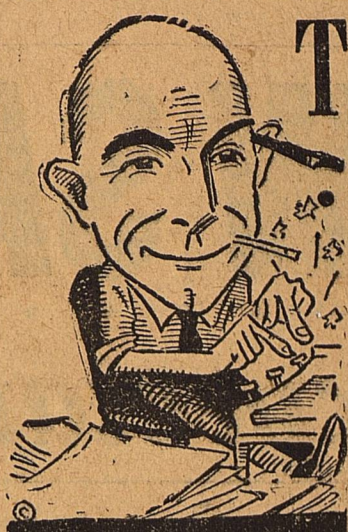

Exports to more than four-fifths of our principal markets dropped off in the first quarter of this year. There were declines of sales to Canada amounting to 23 per cent, Italy 25 per cent, Germany 26 per cent, Japan 24 per cent, Argentina 38 per cent, Cuba 23 per cent, Brazil 53 per cent, China 26 per cent, Australia 30 per cent and so on. Imports showed a somewhat less decline, generally, than exports. Their decline in value has been attributed principally to low world prices.

The U. S. Chamber of Commerce recently announced that exports for the first quarter, totalling $1,129,000,000, were only about four per cent below the average for the first quarters of the years 1924-1928, although they were 20 per cent below 1929. But the value of exports had been increasing steadily from year to year right up to 1930, when the United States reached a peak where it was unable to remain.

In the first quarter our exports to Russia were going strong and the Chamber cites a 228 per cent increase over exports to the Soviet in the 1929 first quarter. But suddenly there has come a decided slump in Russia's purchases here.

Exports to Russia in January were $12,420,000, but in May they were only $3,098,000—a decline of 75 per cent. Russia has been buying more from other countries and less from us. In the last three months of 1929 and the first three months of 1930 she purchased $44,163,000 from Great Britain as against less than $20,000,000 in the similar six-month period the year before.

England has recognized the Russian government and the United States has not. It has been reported that the Soviet sought to distribute its orders as much as possible to nations according recognition. Non-recognition of Russia, however, has been a longstanding American policy and there is no indication that Russia's commercial policy will affect our diplomatic policy.

The Town Quack

Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.

I'll never say any more about a saxophone player after the way that freight train whistled at daybreak this morning. If it had been in the middle of the Fort Worth freight yards, with all switches open and a train on every track, it could have had the way cleared before it bumped into another train, the way it was whistling. However, maybe it's just a new method someone had adopted of getting people down to work on time. Not a bad idea at that when there is so much likelihood of laying off a few of the force at any time, and the fellow who makes a little slip may be the first to go.

The editor says J. R. Vanderventer advised him to give me a vacation. I acknowledge Mr. Vanderventer's compliment and told the editor to express my appreciation.

Russians Charge Discrimination

But the Russians have also been complaining, as they cite our dwindling exports to their country, of various discriminating barriers raised against them. A large cargo of Russian lumber has recently been held up on the charge that it was produced by convict labor and there has been agitation for a general embargo both on Russian lumber and Russian coal. A 10 per cent compensatory duty on a cargo of Russian matches was recently assessed when it was complained that the matches were being dumped at less than cost price. The State Department has refused to permit Russia to buy military planes in this country and Russia presumably will buy them elsewhere.

Department of Commerce officials, as if alarmed at the general trend, point out with respect to embargo pleas that imports of Russian lumber and coal are negligible. No one is especially interested in the justice or injustice of tariffs and other trade barriers such as those lately aimed or proposed against Russia. What causes concern is the tendency of one blow to lead to another; the fact that trade barriers tend to reduce sales, and everybody knows that if exports don't pick up we can't get back to the peak reached by American business generally in 1929.

and then came the unkindest crack of all—the editor says Van wants a vacation from reading this bunk and would like to see me lay off a week or two.

Paul Vickers has been hiding behind women's skirts for two or three days now. When you pass the chamber of commerce, try to look in through the window. The display of prize winning home made dresses cuts the secretary off from the public gaze.

Vickers, who uses such expressions as "pudicitudinous," specializes in femininity anyway. When a representative of the national women's air derby came here to figure on a stop at Midland, Vickers proposed that the name should be changed from "women's derby" to "women's brasserie," or something of the sort that would make the air race sound more feminine.

It's funny what a difference just a comma will make. The following shows that: "After washing golf hose, babies, sweaters and stockings, place them on wooden frames bought especially for this purpose. The articles will dry evenly without shrinking and will not require pressing."—Indianapolis News.

"Vagabond King" at Ritz Today Brings to Screen Paramount's Greatest Baritone

By NOEL HOUSTON, In Oklahoma News, March 7th 1930

"The Vagabond King," all color musical drama, probably is the biggest picture ever made by any moving picture company.

The screen production, with its unlimited possibilities, makes the stage production look like a bunch of boys out in the haybarn singing "Sweet Adeline."

Dr. Ludwig Berger took all his German education and culture to direct this picture. Dr. Berger doesn't bring the middle ages to us; he takes us back to them in a glorious, romantic journey of battle, love and song.

He has no tap-dancing chorus girls or highly painted chorus men—no adagios or toe dances. All this ordinary stuff is thrown into the alley.

And the Rudolf Friml music is about the best "rendered" I ever heard. On the stage no more than 50 voices can be put on at once.

The story is based partially on the life of Francois Villon, beggar poet. He is the idol of the tavern loafers and the street women. He hates the Burgundians, enemies of Paris, and also despise his King, Louis XI.

The rollicking, thrilling story goes on. Much of Villon's poetry is inserted in the dialog. When Huguette dies in his arms he says: "ah, where are the snows of yesterday?"

Dennis King, who not only looks like John Barrymore, but has a remarkable similar style of acting, sings his songs, like "Song of the Vagabonds" and "Only a Rose" in a beautiful voice.

O. P. Heggie, the king, contributes an amusing, sly performance with a chuckle that is immense. Lillian Roth—desirable as ever, as Huguette, Jeanette MacDonald—still queenly and reaching the highest notes with fervor, as the king's niece, Warner Oland—the treacherous grand marshal. A great cast.

I can only say, you must see it to realize its immensity. It cannot be compared fairly with pictures like "Disraeli" or "The Lady Lies" for they are entirely different. It is the greatest musical drama I ever

BIG OSCAR NOT BRIGHTEST PROSPECT FOR MAJORS; NEW NIGHT PITCHING IS ON; WACHTEL FINDS SELF ON HOT DAY

By GALE TALBOT Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer.

DALLAS, July 16. (AP)—That the heaviest hitter is not necessarily the brightest major league prospect is proved in the case of big Oscar Eckhardt, Beaumont outfielder. Although the former-Texas University hero has been whanging the ball over the 400 mark ever since the season opened and looks like the greatest natural hitter the circuit has seen since Ike Boone was with San Antonio, his name not first in line with baseball men gathered to discuss big league candidates. The consensus seems to be that the league's two outstanding prospects for the big time are Leslie Mallon, Fort Worth's bounding second baseman, and Jim Levey, shortstop of the Wichita Falls Spudders. Neither is in a class with Eckhardt as a hitter, but both are better all-around players.

Eckhardt's case appears similar to that of Boone, who has been in and out of the big show several times since the year he cracked most of the existing Texas League batting marks. The Longhorn hero finds hitting easy, but he has never mastered the fielding end. He is a good enough outfielder to get by in the Texas League; in fact, is much faster and more graceful than Boone ever was. But he is not and never will be a finished fielder.

The Detroit Tigers, with whom the Shippers have some sort of working agreement, are expected to give Eckhardt a trial this year. Shrewd baseball men say he would make Burky Harris a great pinch hitter, but predict he will not gain a regular place in the line-up.

With night baseball firmly established at Waco and Shreveport, Houston planning to turn on the electricity July 22, and San Antonio expecting to light up before the month is out, the league's pitchers and catchers are getting their heads together in a common cause, passing around helpful hints on how to baffle the batters.

The best bet, say the receivers, is a low, fast one down the outside corner. If the pitcher's control is not that good, then, just a fast one. A hard one with a hop has proved more effective than a curve under the arcs and it is predicted fast ball heavers will be at a premium before the season is out.

"Curves don't seem to bother them much at night," said one backstop. "But a fast ball hops by them and is in the old mitt before they know it."

They're having a tough time getting old Paulio Wachtel out of the Texas League. For the better part of two seasons now he has been shunted about like a box car, but he refuses to turn loose. Once this season, when Dallas cut him drift, Paulio signed up with a semi-pro outfit and it looked like he was at last on his way, but Del Pratt rescued him for Waco at the last minute.

The ancient spitballer failed to regain his form with the Cubs, and last week Papa Pratt asked waivers. No other Texas League club wanted him. That looked like the end of the long trail, for certain—but wait.

Wachtel was given one more chance. Pratt sent him against his former mates, the Fort Worth Cats, with the very definite understanding that he win or pack his bags. The mates smiled on Paulio. They gave him a sizzling day, something over 100 in the shade, the kind of day he loves best. He held the Cats to six hits, and blanked them, 6 to 0, boosting the Cubs into third place. He will be around a while longer.

mense popularity. He is said to have spent around a quarter of a million in installing a modern polo plant and equipping the Concho riders with the finest ponies available. He not only guaranteed all expenses of the Mexican team, but supplied their mounts for the series.

FOOTBALL STARTS IN TWO MONTHS; NIGHT BASEBALL HURTS PLAYER; OX COWAN SEEMS TO BE SURE FIRE PUG

By GAYLE TALBOT, Jr. DALLAS, July 16. (P)—Less than two months now until another Southwest Conference football season will be on its way. It promises in several respects to be the greatest session the fans of this section have been privileged to it in on.

Moore has been hailed as the greatest outfield prospect the league has seen in a decade. But if his throwing arm is impaired permanently, his price tag will shrink considerably. Woe is Mr. Hammond.

Other games with an intersectional flavor scheduled are Southern Methodist vs. Navy, Southern Methodist vs. Indiana, Rice vs. Arizona, Aggies vs. Tulane, Texas vs. Oklahoma, Rice vs. Sewanee, and Rice vs. Iowa State.

Although he played out his football career with Sul Ross College of Alpine, a secondary school, Cowan was such an outstanding performer as to gain statewide recognition.
