HUNAN CITY OVERRUN BY BANDITS; AMERICA SENDS WARNING

LOOTING, BURNING GOING ON

Foreigners Placed on War Vessels for Protection

PEIPING, July 30. (AP)—Changsha city, capital of the Hunan province, today reported the burning of government buildings, foreign property and American oil companies. Communists systematically looted the town, inviting coolies to take what they wanted and join the communists.

U. S. Warned WASHINGTON, July 30. (AP)—The state department announced the Nanking government had been notified against the loss of American life or property at Taian, Shanghai, China, and should such loss occur, "the American government reserves all rights in the matter."

At the same time it was reported by official sources that the U. S. S. Palos, which has been dispatched to remove Americans from Changsha, had departed from that place because it could not protect property in view of the "overwhelming number of communists."

Two American male missionaries were left behind, it was said officially. It was reported further that Father Braiman of the Italian mission was captured by bandits when he made a last minute effort to leave the city after previously refusing to depart.

The U. S. S. Palos was reported struck once by rifle fire. Women and children and others were transferred to the British ship Aphis for the sake of greater comfort.

Bandits Overrun City SHANGHAI, July 30.—Overrun by a communist horde, the rich city of Shanghai, capital of Hunan province, today was systematically sacked and burned by the invaders while foreign warships removed their nationals to safety.

Striking the nationalist garrison, weakened by transfer of troops to the northern civil war fronts, the communists easily overcame opposition and entered into the walled city. An orgy of killing and pillaging followed, said foreign wireless reports from the city, but not before foreigners had found refuge on warships lay in the Siang river, on which Changsha is located.

The raid was described here as the most serious red incursion yet executed within China. Influential Chinese reiterated their belief it was instigated in the third international at Moscow. They said unless the Nanking government was able to halt the civil war that has been ravaging the country for months and turn attention to communist activity the red threat was destined soon to become grave.

The wildest rumors resulted from the raid. One was that establishment of a communist government south of the Yangtze river was imminent. Nationalist government bonds declined sharply as another result of the red activity.

After taking aboard missionaries and foreigners desiring to leave, the warships were forced by the rapidly receding river to withdraw. Millions of dollars worth of foreign property thus was left at the mercy of the reds. Whether that property been plundered was not revealed in fragmentary advices reaching here.

Barrons Back in Texas on Vacation

T. Paul Barron, publisher of The Reporter-Telegram, writes from Alpine another installment of notes on his vacation tour.

He will be home in a few days. The publisher said in his letter: "The vacation without a destination policy worked out well when after leaving the Grand Canyon country and crossing the northern New Mexico, we decided to spend a few days in Ruidoso before returning home."

"We left Albuquerque shortly after noon and drove to Socorro, expecting to start the next morning for Ruidoso, by way of Carrizozo. En route to Socorro, however, we ran into the daily rain and negotiated a few difficult hills while the rainfall and traffic combined to make the red clay surface slippery."

"Twice we forged swift streams which had changed from dry creek beds to raging torrents in the space of a half hour of mountain rains, but due to their shallow nature traffic was not endangered. We were glad to stop at Socorro for the night, and motorists arriving late from both north and south reported hard going."

"The following morning, we learned that the road eastward to Ruidoso was impassible on account of bridges being washed out the evening before. It was necessary to go back to Albuquerque or to continue down the Rio Grande to El Paso, the first possible junction with an easterly highway being at Las Cruces, little more than 40 miles from El Paso. MURPHY OFFERS THOMASON AID; REGRET'S STORY

E. E. (Pat) Murphy, defeated candidate for congressman from the 16th Texas district, said Tuesday that he has no alibi for his defeat.

Murphy wired congratulations to R. E. Thomason late Monday.

In a statement wired to the El Paso Post Murphy said: "Based upon fairly complete returns, it appears that I have been defeated by less than 5000 votes. I have no alibi, but merely didn't get enough votes."

"I am a Democrat and Thomason will have my support as nominee if he wants it. I am grateful for the support received in my own county and elsewhere and wish to thank the press and my many friends and supporters to whom I can only say I did my best and fought a hard, honest, fair fight and lost."

"To those who voted for the other man, all I can say is that the election is over and I pledge my best efforts to aid any forward move to put West Texas on the map."

"I regret that someone became so excited that they found it necessary on the eve of election publish in all newspapers an item purporting to be an interview at Austin of the commander of the American Legion quoting him as saying that a man known as an ex-service man was claiming support of the legion and he didn't have it."

"Mr. Cox made no such statement and the newspaper correspondent has stated in writing he did not post such a wire."

"I am sure Thomason had no connection with that news story, but I do think the newspapers that carried the story should aid the ex-service men in finding out who is responsible for such a false statement and give them a good spanking. This is not said in any bitterness, because I think Thomason is entitled to the full glory for his splendid victory. But the story robbed me of thousands of votes and is unsportsman-like."

Tabulation of votes in the 38 counties of the district was still incomplete Tuesday, but officials said that probably less than 500 votes remain to be counted.

More or less complete returns from 37 counties gave Thomason 20,518, Murphy 14,849 and Burkhead 1539, a lead for Thomason over both opponents of 4130 votes.

A TRIFLE TOO EFFICIENT

A brief railway trip through half a dozen important American cities leads one to the sad conclusion that the day of the cavernous old-fashioned railway station is no more.

Of course, it is very nice to see that our railroads are prosperous and energetic enough to build a lot of new stations. The new ones, furthermore, are probably a good deal more efficient than the old ones. Just the same, there must be a good many Americans who will see the old stations go with something like regret.

The new railroad station is strictly business. Half of the time the tracks are underground. When they are not, each narrow strip of platform has its own roof, which runs along no higher than the tops of the cars. Getting on a train, in such a station, is about as exciting as boarding an elevator.

But the old kind—the kind with the enormous, high-roofed train shed, with rays of sunlight leaking in through occasional chinks to fall, slantwise, across the tall plumes of drifting white steam—those were railroad stations! Taking a train in such a station was an adventure. You felt that you were going somewhere. There was a bit of pomp to one's departure.

Railroad experts have found that those vast train sheds are uneconomical, and they are coming down. In their place are the modern ones, with no eye-filling vistas and no great, echoing, open spaces—up-to-date, but uninteresting.

Worse yet, the railroads are beginning to use electric engines to haul their trains in and out of the big terminals. This, from the point of view of excitement, is pretty nearly the last straw. There used to be an enormous thrill in walking down the platform of one of those old-fashioned train sheds, with the engines panting and puffing like so many chargers, their steam and smoke rising to dissolve under the blackened girders of the shed, and all the noises of a great railway station echoing and re-echoing under the big roof. But now—no echoes, no steam, no high vistas, no panting engines. An electric locomotive is about as thrilling as a street car.

The people who live in small towns, perhaps, are luckier. It is exciting to board a train from a country station, late at night. Everything is quiet, except for the tick-tick of the telegraph in the office. Beyond the lighted platform, all is blackness. Then, far off, comes the wail of the locomotive's whistle. Its bright headlight swings into view, down the track—and at last it comes in with a rush and a roar, its sleepers looking extra palatial and inviting by contrast with the dingy station. You swing up the step, the conductor's "Boo-board!" echoes down the platform, and you're off. It's lots of fun.

But these modern stations—who can get a kick out of them?

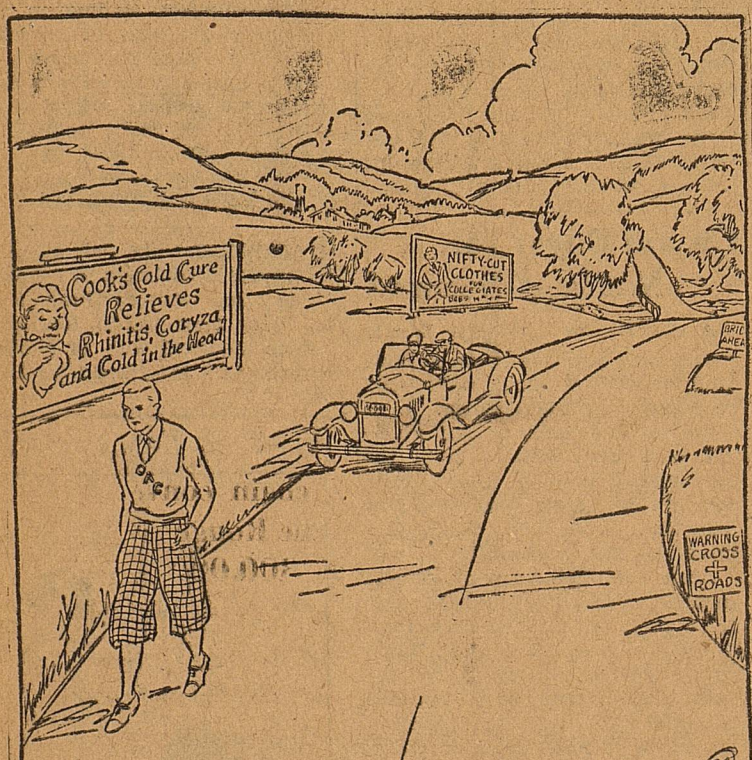

BANISHING FOOD PRODUCTION WASTE

There should be a minimum of waste in manufacturing and distributing human necessities. Since time immemorial the production and distribution of food has been inefficient in comparison to the standards of efficiency maintained in other industries.

Recognizing this condition, one of the largest manufacturers of table specialties has consolidated over 40 non-competitive products and is producing and distributing them under unified management.

This is a tremendous step forward. No commodity is so vital as food. Mass production and distribution is the industrial doctrine principally responsible for the progress made by such industries as the electric, the automobile and the telephone. It should prove to be a revolutionary force in raising the food industry to where it can give us better and cheaper products.

Detroit's Queer Experiment In Government

Editor's Note: This is the first of several stories by Bruce Catton, staff writer for The Reporter-Telegram and NEA Service on the remarkable situation now existing in Detroit.

By BRUCE CATTON, NEA Service Writer.

DETROIT, July 30.—An experiment in municipal government, indulged in because the ghost of the Ku Klux Klan still stalks through the streets of America's fourth city, is just coming to an exciting conclusion. Mayor Charles Bowles, recalled by the voters at a special election, faces almost certain defeat in the special election that will be held in September to choose his successor.

The experiment was a peculiar one.

Detroit elected a mayor on a reform platform and found the gamblers and liquor dealers enjoying a strange new prosperity under his regime. Detroit defeated the candidate who called for an "open town"—and then found that the town was more "open" under the man it elected than it probably would have been if the other chap had won. Now, since the murder of Gerald Buckley, radio vice crusader, an unprecedented cleanup has taken place.

Mayor Bowles, storm center of the most hectic administration Detroit ever had, is a strange figure.

Born in the small town of Yale, Mich., a former street car motor-man and then an obscure lawyer, he was practically unheard of in Detroit until six years ago. Then he ran for mayor with Ku Klux Klan backing—although he has always denied ever being a member of the Klan himself—and surprised everybody by polling 70,000 votes.

He ran again in the next election. Again he was beaten, but again the Klan helped him get a huge vote. Bowles thereupon ran for a judgeship in the recorder's court, won election, and bided his time.

A year ago he entered the lists again. Victorious in the primary, he faced former Mayor John W. Smith in the fall election. Smith is a Catholic and a wet.

Bowles set up a law-and-order platform. Nightly he demanded a cleanup in the police department. He urged the closing of blind pigs—as speakies are known here—gambling joints and disorderly houses. Simultaneously, the religious issue entered the campaign—not in the open, but underground. The Klan as an organization is moribund here; but its ghost still lives, and the religious issue won many votes for Bowles. He beat Smith by about 8500 votes.

Elected, Troubles Begin Bowles' administration had hardly begun before he was in hot water. First he tried to raise street railway fares from six to eight cents and to cut bus fares from ten to eight cents. It was charged that the effort to cut the bus fares was an attempt to reward voters in the outlying districts who had gone heavily anti-Smith in the election; at any rate the city council refused to approve the move, and it was dropped.

Then Bowles appointed to the commission of public works one John Gillespie. Gillespie was head of the Detroit Reduction Company, which held a profitable city contract for the disposal of garbage. When he took office, Gillespie announced that he had severed connection with this company; nevertheless, he had not been in office 10 days before he got the council to re-award the contract to the Detroit Reduction Company, and fought sharply to kill a proposal for construction of a city-owned reduction plant.

City Is "Wide Open" Gillespie also was accused of interfering in the conduct of other departments, notably the police department. It was noticed, furthermore, that gambling houses were beginning to re-open, and that blind pigs were running full blast. In addition, it was recalled that even during the campaign the city's gamblers had been reported to be contributors to Bowles' campaign fund.

Detroit soon became, once more, a wide-open town. The newspapers stormed about it for a long time without getting action. Finally Mayor or Bowles went to see the Kentucky Derby, and during his absence Police Commissioner H. H. Emmons went out and made a series of raids on gambling joints and blind pigs. Bowles got back to town two days later and promptly removed Emmons from office, putting Thomas C. Wilcox in his place. That was the move that provoked the recall movement. It gained impetus from that date, and the recall campaign just ended and one of the most spectacular and exciting in Detroit's history.

The Murder of Buckley Bowles lost in the recall election; and just after his defeat was announced he suffered a bit of supreme bad luck. Jerry Buckley, radio announcer who had fought him throughout the campaign, was murdered by gangsters in a hotel lobby; and although it became evident that the reason for Buckley's murder lay elsewhere, the tragedy reacted directly against the mayor.

Two days after the murder, Gillespie resigned his position and said he would take no part in the fall campaign; and political wise-acters attributed his move to a conviction that Bowles cannot possibly win. Moreover, in response to an aroused public sentiment, the greatest cleanup in Detroit's history has begun. Speakies and gambling joints have been closed by the score.

As things stand today, Bowles is doomed to defeat unless there are so many candidates against him that the protest vote is split. His opponents are alive to this danger, and present indications are that they will unite behind George Engel, former president of the civil service commission, former commissioner of public works and former city comptroller. If they do, only a miracle can save Bowles.

Bowles Still Confident Bowles, however, professes to be confident and full of fight. "We are going to have a real fight before they put this steal across," he told me. "It is a bare-faced steal engineered by certain local political leaders, chief among them the man I defeated in the last election—ex-Mayor Smith."

"I say the recall was a steal because of the fact that it was based on insufficient petitions. Under the law, the recall petitions must bear 90,000 signatures. These petitions had not more than 25,000—the rest were filled in."

"I don't believe the Buckley murder had any connection with the recall movement. The police department charges that Buckley was involved in racketeering activities. I think it is quite apparent from the police reports that he was killed by gangsters because of his racketeering activities; at least, that is indicated by the report."

"It was pointed out by one police official that because of Buckley's connection with the recall movement, the gangsters chose that particular time to kill him so as to divert attention from the real motive for the murder."

"The gang situation here is no worse than it is anywhere else. We've had gang shootings here, just as other cities have had them, but ours have been exaggerated by an unfriendly press. We are suppressing that sort of thing as fast as we can. Commissioner Wilcox is honest and energetic and he is making a real effort to give Detroit a clean administration."

IN APPRECIATION

Mrs. Earl Hyde has written the following lines of appreciation, in memory of Mrs. Jean Lloyd who was near murdered on the highway near Toyah Sunday. Mrs. Hyde knew Mrs. Lloyd well, she says:

"To you who only wished to live That more to others you might give By taking weary, worn out souls And helping onward toward new goals.

"Our heads are bent, our hearts are bowed As we stand mute, a sorrowing crowd. We need your faith, your sweet, bright smile As on this earth we bide a while.

"Tis not for us to understand Why God stayed not that murderous hand; Perhaps if into heaven we could see We'd understand His need of thee."

Daily Washington Letter

By Rodney Dutcher It's Been Pretty Rough Going for the Senators From New England, but George Higgins Moses of New Hampshire Is One of Them Who Seems to Like It

WASHINGTON, July 30.—This has been a rough year on the senators from New England and the latest victim is the ablest and most picturesque of the lot, the Hon. George Higgins Moses of New Hampshire.

Senator Freddie Hale of Maine, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, is recovering from the defeat of his attempt to block the London treaty. Gould of Maine is retiring from public life, presumably on account of Anti-Saloon League enmity after it appeared that he was letting wine ferment in his cellar. Bingham of Connecticut was censured by the Senate because he let an agent of the Connecticut manufacturers in on secret tariff sessions.

Gillett of Massachusetts, whose state went Democratic in 1928, has retired from the Senate and is likely to be succeeded by a Democrat. Little is heard of Green of Vermont, who was crippled by a stray bullet in a battle between bootleggers and cops several years ago, but Dale of Vermont got mixed up with the oil lobby in some way and had to make public explanations. Metcalf of Rhode Island is faced with opposition this year that may prove fatal. Keyes of New Hampshire recently complained that cockroaches in the Senate office building were eating the bindings off his books.

Then there's George Higgins Moses, the wise-cracking, hard-boiled veteran politician who plays politics because he loves the intrigue of it and nearly always does things with his tongue in his cheek. George Higgins remembers a few years ago when New England was in the saddle down here.

George Higgins gets into more little jams than anyone else you can think of and he always seems to do it by design. Lately his troubles have been in connection with his chairmanship of the Republican senatorial campaign committee. He had them in the same connection last year when he named Otto Kahn as treasurer of the committee, causing enough protest to embarrass Mr. Kahn to the point that Mr. Kahn quit. This time, however, the loud speakers of the so-called "Young Turks" in the Senate were trying to make George Higgins quit. They promised to make him quit, in fact, but George Higgins is still chairman.

Instead of being a rebuke to George Higgins, the plan whereby he will supervise Republican senatorial campaigns east of the Mississippi while Steiwer of Oregon takes over the western territory is said to be George Higgins' own idea. But the decision of party Treasurer J. R. Nutt not to turn the campaign fund over to George Higgins was more of a slap.

Just to recall that these troubles of George Higgins in campaigns aren't anything new, remember 1928. National Chairman Hubert Work and George Higgins had a feud all the way through. On George Higgins left Hubert's office muttering "At last they've found a man who can stop Hoover." George Higgins became eastern campaign manager for Hoover and the Democrats found one of his letters to an editor praising as "hot stuff" a violent anti-Catholic circular—indicating, as before suggested, that George Higgins is a very practical politician.

A few months ago George Hig-

The Town Quack

Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.

I received a letter this morning from Editor T. Paul Barron, the no-destination vacationist.

Barron is back in Texas and is enjoying this state's 5-cent coffee.

The editor can express himself adequately, and it follows: "Dear Quack:

"I've been taking a sure enough vacation, which explains why I haven't sent Hankins any more copy, badly as he probably needs it. I've missed your column, not having seen a Reporter-Telegram since I left home almost two weeks ago.

"Have you had any 'tree-sitters' to begin endurance tests at Midland, or are there any trees to sit in. Don't let any of them sit in my crab apple tree at home.

"Up at Albuquerque, three boys and a girl were in a tree sitting gins called the Republican progressive senators 'sons of the wild jackass' and in the subsequent commotion there were plenty of Republicans to moan bitterly that that was a heck of a way to talk for a senatorial campaign manager whose business was to re-elect Republican senators.

Every since National Chairman Claudius Huston had some of his interesting lobbying-financial deals revealed by the Senate Lobby Committee George Higgins and Claudius have been the only Republicans who thought Claudius shouldn't resign at the first convenient moment. George Higgins insisted that the party ought to defend Claudius and keep him at the helm, which attitude gained very few more friends for George Higgins.

You might have considered George Higgins quite regular up to that point, but he went and committed the unfavorable sin when he belabored President Hoover during the debate on the naval treaty.

So there are many Republicans who feel like saying to George Higgins: "Son of a wild jackass, yourself!"

A prize in the western section of a nation-wide photographic contest for beautiful mothers and attractive children, has been awarded to Mary Helen, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Holmsley, 1343 South Fourth street, it was announced yesterday.

A third prize in the section went to Mary Helen. She was notified of her selection on July 12, but having been on a vacation trip with her parents, did not learn of it until she returned this week.

The contest, sponsored by the Photographers' Association of America, came to a close early in May. Thousands of photographers were entered, and a total of 44 mothers and children were awarded $20,000 in cash. Mary Searle of Fresno, Calif., was first prize winner for the section in which little Miss Holmsley placed.

Prizes were awarded both for the entire section and for the sections, there being five divisions. The western section included the state of Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

Nickel Plate on Brass Isn't Only Bathroom Ware

By WILLIAM H. BALDWIN
Author of "The Shopping Book"
Written for NEA Service

Nickel plate on brass long has been standard for bathroom fittings. Its disadvantages are that it does tarnish and that where the plate eventually wears through, the yellow brass is exposed. Also, the shopper should remember there are on the market inferior fittings which resemble nickel on brass and which thus make it advisable to deal only with a store of excellent reputation in buying nickel-plated ware.

Chromium plate, used for the radiator and lamp fittings of automobiles, is establishing a name for itself in the field of bathroom accessories, because the metal makes a fine appearance, does not rust or tarnish and is easy to keep clean. The best chromium ware is plated on a nickel base.

China ware for the bathroom offsets its liability to break or chip with the advantages of inherent beauty and of cleanliness. There is no surface plating to wear off through use.

Porcelain or iron is the least expensive type of fitting. It will withstand hard usage and may survive being dropped on the floor. But if it does chip, the exposed iron will soon rust.

For the Well-Red Miss---

Rouge can be a real "red menace" to beauty unless it's correctly placed. These pictures, posed by dainty June Collyer, show how the rouge-wise girl enhances the contours of her face. Left: The plump round face can be given pleasing contours by placing rouge high, away from the nose and keeping it in a shallow semi-circle. Center: The well-proportioned face takes its rouge where color comes naturally, on the cheek's curve, midway between the eye line and the nose and a dash on the chin. Right: The long, thin face can gain pleasing curves and take on increased youthfulness by rouging in a much larger circumference, high and wide on the cheeks and a bit on the chin, too.

Meeting the Needs of Millions of People

The low-priced automobile has brought greater opportunity and added hours of recreation to millions of men and women

BECAUSE the automobile is such an important factor in the lives and prosperity of so many people, the purpose of the Ford Motor Company is something more than the mere manufacture of a motor car.

There is no service in simply setting up a machine or a plant and letting it turn out goods. The service extends into every detail of the business—design, production, the wages paid and the selling price. All are a part of the plan.

The Ford Motor Company looks upon itself as charged with making an automobile that will meet the needs of millions of people and to provide it at a low price. That is its mission. That is its duty and its obligation to the public.

The search for better ways of doing things is never-ending. There is ceaseless, untiring effort to find new methods and new machines that will save steps and time in manufacturing. The Ford plants are, in reality, a great mechanical university, dedicated to the advancement of industry. Many manufacturers come to see and share the progress made.

The greatest progress comes by never standing still. Today's methods, however successful, can never be taken as wholly right. They represent simply the best efforts of the moment. Tomorrow must bring an improvement in the methods of the day before. Hard work usually finds the way.

Once it was thought impossible to cast gray iron by the endless chain method. All precedent was against it and every previous experiment had failed. Many men had shut their minds to the possibility of change. But fair prices to the public demanded that wasteful methods be eliminated in this operation. Finally the way was found and old methods gave place to new.

A better way of making axle shafts saved thirty-six million dollars in four years. A new method of cutting crankcases reduced the cost by $500,000 a year. The perfection of a new machine saved a similar amount on such a little thing as one bolt. Then electric welding was developed to make many bolts unnecessary and to increase structural strength.

Just a little while ago, an endless chain conveyor almost four miles long was installed at the Rouge plant. This conveyor has a daily capacity of 300,000 parts weighing more than 2,000,000 pounds. By substituting the tireless, unvarying machine for tasks formerly done by hand, it has made the day's work easier for thousands of workers and saved time and money in the manufacture of the car. All of these things are done in the interest and the service of the public—so that the benefits of reliable, economical transportation may be placed within the means of every one.

Baseball's Pranks Tough on Fonseca

By CLAIRE BURCKY,
NEA Service Sports Writer.

One man's misfortune often is another man's good luck. Which explains a situation on the fourth-place Cleveland Indians club where Lew Fonseca, the American League's batting champion and second highest fielding first baseman in 1929, sits in the dugout and watches the performances of Eddie Morgan, a youngster who almost failed to make the grade as a big league outfielder, but who graces first base in true Chase style and clouts with the power of a Gehrig.

The road was rough and troublesome over which the singing Portuguese marched to success. It took nine long years with the Frisco Seals, Cincinnati Reds, Phillies, Newark Bears and finally the Indians. He arrived a year ago and, by his remarkable batting, kicking and leadership qualities, won the title of the American League's most valuable player.

Scarlet fever, followed by a dislocated shoulder early in the season and, still later, by a broken wrist, put the veteran on the shelf. With the season more than half gone, he's ready to play again but—

Up from New Orleans in 1928 came Tulane Eddie Morgan, dragging after him a batting average of .354 and newspaper clippings comparing him with Ty Cobb. This Speaker and "Shoelless Joe" Jackson, who had played seven positions with the Pelicans, but even after that they said he was an outfielder who some day would rank with Cobb, Speaker and Jackson.

He hit pretty fair in 1928, a .313 average in 76 games. Unlike Speaker's, however, his outfielding was of the Ike Boone variety so they moved him into right field and used him sparingly. He played 93 games last season as a right fielder and boosted his batting average five points to .318.

Fonseca took over the first basing duties this year, despite his fever-weakened condition. One understudy was cut loose when it began to look like the Portuguese had regained his 1929 form. A few days later the Indians sent away on option the only remaining understudy—and the next day Fonseca dislocated his shoulder.

Tulane Eddie Morgan, the seven-one player for New Orleans, pulled on the piece of leather which, by some queer stretch of his imagination, Fonseca called a first baseman's mitt. Eddie finished the game with it, but the next day the Indians' management had bought him a new one.

Weeks of rest brought the injured shoulder back to normal and Fonseca resumed his position in the lineup. Art (The Great) Shires collided with him—and more weeks of nursing a fractured wrist followed. He's ready to play now. "Where?" asks Fonseca.

Recent averages showed Morgan clouting at a .340 clip. That figure included more than two dozen doubles and 20 home runs up to July 25—the latter figure surpassing anything ever accomplished by a Cleveland ball player.

There probably will be no more outfielding for Tulane Eddie. Averill, Falk, Jamieson, Seeds and Porter are handling the situation nicely. Besides, Morgan has arrived as a first baseman.

In the dugout at League Park, Cleveland, sits the American League's 1929 batting champion and most valuable player. One man's misfortune often is another man's good luck.

TEXAS SUN HEALTHFUL

AUSTIN. (AP)—How many ultra-violet rays are there to a square inch of Texas sunshine?

This question was propounded by Miss Mary Gearing, chairman of the department of home economics of the University of Texas, who is of the opinion that the answer might have definite bearing on research in child nutrition.

Ultra-violet rays are those considered especially healthful, and since Texas has more sunshine than many other states, it is reasonable to suppose there are more ultra-violet rays in the sunshine. And it is a known fact that children here grow tall faster than in most other climes.

If it could be determined that ultra-violet rays are more abundant here, the information might prove of economic value to the state.

So far as Miss Gearing has been able to determine, no attempt has been made to gauge Texas sunshine, although this has been done in other sections.

COTTON PICKERS WANTED

SAN ANTONIO. (AP)—A call for several thousand cotton pickers has been issued by J. H. Fallin, superintendent of the United States department of labor employment service bureau here.

The picker movement to the cotton areas of South Texas is unusually light this year, Fallin reported. The number of pickers leaving San Antonio daily on the Corpus Christi and Lower Rio Grande valley highway totals only about 300. In order that the demand for pickers be promptly met, the picker movement through this district should be at least 1,000 a day for the next 35 or 40 days, he said.

The crop is good, he reported, and picking wages are in keeping with the price received for cotton by the farmers.

PLAN TO PLACE LINCOLN'S BODY ON PUBLIC VIEW

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 30. (UP)—Plans are under consideration here for the excavation of the casket containing the body of Abraham Lincoln from beneath his tomb and of placing the remains in a sarcophagus in the open view of the public so that a more real sentiment may be attached to the annual pilgrimages here of many thousands of Lincoln devotees.

The plan has been encouraged by Herbert Wells Fay, custodian of the tomb, and numerous students of Lincoln in all parts of the world.

"I believe the time will come when public sentiment will demand that the body of Mr. Lincoln be placed in a sarcophagus for public view," Fay said. "Persons from all parts of the country who visit the tomb, have frequently voiced that opinion."

Lincoln's body at present is encased in a bed of concrete ten feet beneath the tomb which towers over Oak Ridge Cemetery atop a high hill.

The coffin, containing Lincoln's body, was placed in a steel cage, which in turn was blocked off in concrete, because of a fear some years ago that an attempt might be made to steal the civil war president's remains. An unsuccessful raid was frustrated many years ago. Workers are now employed in remodeling the tomb and the empty sarcophagus in which it has been suggested that Lincoln's body be placed has been removed from its showplace to an adjoining lawn.

It is proposed to spend $175,000 in the remodeling and make the tomb one of the world's beauty spots as well as having it fitted into an appropriate Lincoln Shrine. Originally the plans did not provide for disturbing "Old Abe's body" but now that it has been suggested by Fay it is possible that some action toward its excavation from beneath the tomb and the placing of it in a sarcophagus in a spot where it may be viewed by the public, may be taken.

Hobbs to Hold Fiddlin' Contest. The West Texas-New Mexico old fiddlers contest will be held at the Hobbs school house Friday, August 1st, at 8:00 p. m.

This will be one of the greatest events of the year in this eventful city. Scores of old time fiddlers and younger ones are looking forward to this as a reunion long to be remembered. Big Chief Henry Hall and his Indian orchestra of Victor fame, will furnish some popular hits as a part of the program.

As an additional feature of the program, the home talent of Hobbs will be represented by some fifty boys and girls now studying in Professor Shirey's vocal classes. These youngsters will present some of the best songs of the day.

The ugliest and best stage dancer of Arkansas has promised to do his stuff to the best fiddling. Prizes will be awarded to the fiddlers as follows: First prize, $15 in gold; second prize, $7.50 in gold; third prize, $2.50 in gold; five other prizes of $1 each.

Also a beautiful wrist watch will be given to the best looking woman present. The big double auditorium is expected to be filled to its capacity. Anyone arriving with his fiddle before the program begins, may enter the contest.

All will be treated alike, and prizes will be fairly awarded. All the surrounding towns and cities of West Texas and New Mexico will be represented. Midland fiddlers are invited.

President Talks To Lions Today

By HARRY L. HAIGHT.

The Lions Club was presided over today by Leslie Boone, its president, for the first time since he returned from the Lions convention held in Denver. He was there as the direct representative of Midland's Lions club. He made a general report of the conditions that confront the country at large so far as it relates to business affairs and found that the depression was in no way insurmountable and that a sound basis was being found from which a new and stronger fabric could be woven that would make for a greater and stronger and more impregnable commercial government than has as yet existed.

He laid great stress on the possibilities for improvement that is possible in Midland. This city, according to Boone, has a reputation for accomplishments that is envied by cities in the states he went through on his trip, and far in excess of towns of equal size and of greater commercial importance.

Barrons Back- (Continued from Page 1). "Following the Rio Grande southward, we passed through the little village of San Marcial, flooded almost from the map a year before, and from the width of the river at that point, in possible danger of repeated floods. The roads through this section were still slick, but got better farther south. The highway ran out over foothills a short distance from the river, but at every point where the Rio Grande was visible down to the huge Elephant Butte Dam, a few miles from Hot Springs, it looked as if the banks were almost carrying a capacity load. A number of small highway bridges had had the approaches washed out, and highway maintenance crews were already at work repairing the damage.

"Below the dam, all the way into El Paso, irrigation is carried on extensively, and truck and cotton crops were flourishing. A new highway is under construction from Hatch, N. M., to Las Cruces.

"We reached El Paso in the early afternoon and stayed two nights, deciding the following morning to swing out through the Davis Mountain country to complete our vacation. Although rains in this section have been confined largely to scattered showers, the temperature shortly after noon today was hardly above 80, and the weather is delightful.

Final program arrangements will be made Sunday, August 3, when the executive committee meets in Colorado in response to a call by Chairman E. O. Ellington of Big Spring.

The entertainment committee is laying plans to provide the visiting dentists two days of real entertainment, according to E. A. Kelley, chairman of the public relations committee of the Big Spring chamber of commerce. The Settles hotel, the new 16-story hotel will be officially dedicated with banquet and dance on the night of September 20 with dentists of the West Texas Dental association as hosts, according to Manager F. W. Crow.

Mrs. E. F. Payne and family were in Midland this morning en route to their home in Walters, Oklahoma after a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Seth Ingham on the Ingham ranch.

Errorgrams CORRECTIONS. (1) For safety's sake it is customary for pedestrians to keep to the left, facing oncoming cars. (2) The sign at the left is redundant in that "coryza" and "cold in the head" have the same meaning. (3) The road sign at the right is wrong, as the road just beyond is not a crossroad, but a branch road. (4) One rail is missing from the bridge in the distance. (5) The scrambled word is SACCHARINE.

"Flying Barrel" Ready for Tests

A "comet ship" is the name that has been given to this revolutionary type of plane, pictured here as it awaited its first tests at East Berlin, N. J. Its builders claim the craft will travel 300 miles an hour in the air and they expect to fly from New York to Berlin in 12 hours. Air is sucked into one end of the barrel-shaped plane by the four-bladed propeller of a 60-horsepower motor, and expelled at the other end. Once aloft, the craft will depend on a set of stub ailerons on the forward end and will be steered by elevators in the tail. Note the enclosed cockpit. The craft has been made to come down on either land or water, and because of its small wingspread, it can be stored in an ordinary garage or taxied along a highway.

Oil Industry Worth $11,000,000,000, and Has 2,000,000 People: Sales $3,000,000,000

The words "oil industry" are used so glibly by practically everybody today that very few stop to think that "the industry" employs directly and indirectly some two million people, produces a billion barrels of crude oil a year, makes and sells refined products worth close to three billion dollars a year and has total assets of over eleven billion dollars.

If the billion barrels of crude oil produced in the United States in 1929 had been stored in standard size oil storage tanks (65,000 barrels each) it would have required nearly 20,000 tanks to hold last year's output. And if these 20,000 tanks had been grouped in a single tank farm laid out the way tank farms are regularly laid out, the "farm" would have covered 125 square miles.

Or if, instead of storing last year's output of crude oil in a giant tank farm, it had flowed as "a river of oil" 100 feet wide and 10 feet deep, the river would have been 1,000 miles long.

Last year's output of crude oil, a billion barrels, was transported through about 100,000 miles of trunk (large size) pipelines and gathering (small size) pipelines. These pipelines carried an average of about 2,500,000 barrels of crude oil a day and all traveled at an average of about 4 miles an hour, or 160 miles a day. Crude oil imported into the United States (about 79,000,000 barrels last year) is brought in by oil tank steamers.

About 91 per cent of the billion barrels of crude oil produced, transported and stored in 1929 actually went through refineries. About two and a half per cent was exported and about two per cent used for all other purposes. In other words, about 95.5 per cent of all the crude oil produced in the United States last year was "used up." This means that we produced 45,000,000 barrels more oil in the United States than the amount of domestic oil run to stills. However, 75,000,000 barrels of foreign oil, mostly from Venezuela, Colombia and Mexico, were run to stills. Had 75,000,000 barrels of domestic oil been run to stills (instead of foreign oil) it would have required all of the 45,000,000 barrels referred to above together with 30,000,000 barrels that would have been drawn from storage. Every barrel of foreign crude oil run to stills in the United States and, to that extent, injures our own domestic oil industry.

Out of this slightly less than a billion barrels of crude oil refined in the United States last year 434,000,000 barrels of gasoline were made. And if this gasoline were loaded into average size tank cars (about 200 barrels to the car) it would make a "train" 16,000 miles long. In 1929 the daily consumption of gasoline averaged a little more than 1,000,000 barrels a day. If the average motor vehicle got fifteen miles to the gallon of gasoline, the 25,000,000 motor vehicles in the United States last year "traveled" an average of about 630,000,000 miles every twenty-four hours.

Probably less than 50 of the big oil companies market half of the refined products sold at filling stations. The other 50 per cent is sold by tens of thousands of "marketers" most of whom own only one filling station, and very few of whom own a good-sized chain of stations.

Summed up in a few words: the crude oil of the United States is produced by about 16,000 companies, partnerships, and individuals—this crude is transported and stored by about fifty big companies—it is refined in about three hundred sixty really active refineries owned by about two hundred refining companies—and the finished products are sold at something like 300,000 retail outlets.

Pipeline companies and refineries are in very strategic positions because it is generally understood that, in most instances, they "make the prices" for both crude oil and its finished products. Combined, there are only a few hundred pipeline companies and refiners.

Thus a few hundred companies practically control the oil industry because they control the price paid for crude oil and the price at which its refined products are sold.

TO THE VOTERS I THANK YOU. It is a fine thing to have the support of friends in the daily walk of life, but an extraordinary expression of confidence such as I received at the polls last Saturday with a big majority of votes for the office of sheriff and tax collector, is to be greatly appreciated indeed.
