HIGH-VELOCITY HURRICANE REPORTED APPROACHING FLORIDA

DOMINGO IS LAID BARREN

More Than 300 Dead And Nearly 1000 Are Injured

The Washington Red Cross has cabled $15,000 to the hurricane area.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Sept. 4. (P)—All American cable offices here today estimated that 300 were dead and 900 injured in Santo Domingo by a hurricane which swept westward along Greater Antilles during the last 24 hours.

Reports from the Port Au Prince, Haiti, said the high mountains between the two republics had fended off the worst wind. Heavy winds and rains were received but no deaths were reported.

The Santo Domingo wind was blowing at 160 miles an hour. Strong buildings were blown down. Small native homes whipped away like straws.

The Porto Rico steamship line ship Coamo narrowly escaped destruction, being badly used by the storm.

The American Red Cross at Washington and other United States agencies were preparing aid. Communications were damaged and an accurate picture of the conditions was delayed.

Twister Hits Town FISKVILLE, Sept. 4. (UP).—Houses were unroofed, trees uprooted and crops were beaten by a small twister which struck this community late Wednesday.

India Reports Floods SHILLONG, India, Sept. 4. (A)—A hundred thousand persons were driven from their homes by Brannaputra river floods near Bokoni and Laokoa where the water was over the rooftops.

Moving Toward Florida A violent tropical hurricane moving westward toward northern Cuba and Florida today left the West Indies city of Santo Domingo wrecked and in urgent need of food and medical supplies.

After 18 hours in which the Dominican republic capital was isolated by broken communication, the anxious world without this morning learned the catastrophe had left the city "fifty per cent destroyed." The population of the city is about 50,000.

The storm is not expected to reach the American coast before 36 hours.

Prairie Men Here For Visit Today

Five visiting representatives of the Prairie Oil and Gas company are here today, conferring with W. A. Yeager, head of the land department in Texas, and J. M. Armstrong, chief geologist for Texas, C. P. Watson, scout from Pecos, Keith Crause, of the land department, and Oren Gambill, scout, of Roswell are in the party.

PEACE HELD UP

BOMBAY, India, Sept. 4. (P)—Peace negotiations between the Indian government and the civil disobedience leaders including Mahatma Gandhi officially broke down today.

Daring French Aviators Flying Easily on Way to Dallas for $25,000 Prize

OWENSPORT, Ky., Sept. 4. (P)—Two airplanes, believed to be Coste's Question Mark and his manager, Rene Rancover's ship, were reported over here at 12:20, central standard time, this afternoon.

DALLAS, Sept. 4. (UP).—Coste and Bellonte were speeding westward toward Texas today to receive one of the chief prizes of their daring Atlantic flight.

The Question Mark lifted from the runway of the Curtiss airport at Long Island at 7:30 this morning. Unsettled weather was predicted today in the flyers' pathway over east Texas.

A rousing welcome was planned this morning for the latest aviation idols when they swoop down to end the long flight here this afternoon between 4 and 5 o'clock. Presentation of a $25,000 prize will be the climax to a round of activities planned.

Intervening cities reported the plane was flying low and easily.

Rapidly Approaching

DALLAS, Sept. 4. (P)—The scarlet "Question Mark" rapidly approached Dallas today.

The distance is from 1,400 to 1,600 miles.

It was estimated that the Texas flight would take 10 to 13 hours. Dallas is bedecked in the French tricolors. Several troops of soldiers have been assigned to Love field to guard the plane and escort the flyers on their landing late today. A convoy of airplanes from Dallas is flying 50 miles out to accompany the Frenchmen here.

Another French Record

PARIS, Sept. 4. (P)—Maryse Bastie, French aviatrix, broke the woman's sustained flight endurance record, landing at 9:30 this morning after 38 hours in the air.

MERCHANT DISPLAYS PLANNED

Big Exhibit of Farm Products Expected During Fair

The Midland County Farm fair Sept. 26 and 27 has been enlarged this year to include exhibits by Midland business houses. The Midland chamber of commerce has arranged for exhibit space which is offered free of charge as long as it lasts to the merchants of Midland.

John Scharbauer has loaned one of his Wall street buildings 90x30 feet in dimension. Part of this will be occupied by the farm exhibits being arranged under general supervision of County Agent Frank Wendt, assisted by Miss Genevieve Derryberry, county home demonstration agent, in the women's division and club work.

Space not required for farm exhibits will be awarded to Midland business houses in the order of their application, and this article in today's Reporter-Telegram is notice that they may begin selecting space, a chamber employe said today.

Some outside space for heavy machinery will also be available without cost. Applications for space should be made to the chamber of commerce. These exhibit booths will give business houses an opportunity to advertise their wares, make demonstrations, distribute samples, or otherwise occupy their booths without a cent of cost.

Wendt heartily approved the idea advanced at a meeting of directors, saying that exhibits by Midland business men not only would be of benefit to them, but would help the fair and help attendance.

Experienced New Teachers Are on Faculty This Year

Nine new teachers have been added to the faculty of the city public schools, W. W. Lackey, superintendent announced this morning.

Russell E. Shrader is a graduate of Southwestern university and has had three years as science teacher and band director in the Mission high school, where he developed a band of 95 pieces. He has also conducted boys camp bands for several summers. While in his senior year, he conducted the band at Southwestern university. He was at Camp Martin this summer. He is a skilled musician and comes highly recommended by the school authorities at Mission and at Southwestern university. He will have charge of the high school band and will teach science in the high school.

Daniel R. Carter is a B. A. graduate of Drury college, Springfield, Mo., and has been principal and coach of high schools in New Mexico and Texas for 6 years. For the last three years he has been principal and coach at Beeville, Texas, where he taught science and mathematics in the high school. He will teach mathematics in the high school and will serve as assistant coach.

Miss Agnes Kolaja is a graduate of the University of Texas, holding a B. S. degree in home economics and a Smith-Hughes vocational home economics certificate. She had two years of post graduate work in the University of Prague. She has had eight years experience in teaching home economics in affiliated high schools, having secured affiliation both in foods and clothing in all of the schools in which she has taught. She was recommended by the vocational board as the best available teacher on the list at this time. She will have charge of the clothing department in the high school, Mrs. Roy F. Stockard having requested to be transferred to the junior high school.

Miss Marian Cartwright is a B. A. graduate of the College of Industrial Arts and has done considerable work toward her M. A. degree at the University of Texas. She has had six years experience as teacher of mathematics in affiliated high schools of Texas and Oklahoma. She was head of the mathematics department of the Childress high school for three years. She comes recommended by Dean White of C. I. A. and by former superintendents with whom she has worked.

Miss Jane Traweck is a graduate of Huntsville Teachers' college, holds a permanent state teachers' certificate and has had 10 years of successful experience as grammar school principal and primary supervisor. She is unqualifiedly recommended by former superintendents and school authorities. She will be principal of North ward succeeding Mrs. D. H. Starling who resigned when she and her husband moved to Hobbs.

G. R. Bode is a B. A. graduate of Southwestern university and has done 18 weeks on his M. A. degree at the University of Texas. He has had four years experience as grammar school principal, the last three of which he was principal of the junior high school at Mason, Texas. Bode will be principal of the junior high school, succeeding C. S. Hereford, who resigned to accept a similar position at Kingsville, Texas.

Miss Helen Weisner has had three years of college work at the College of Industrial Arts. She has taught four years in the public schools of Mexico, and is an experienced primary teacher. She is highly recommended by the college authorities. (See NEW TEACHERS page 6)

SHRINKAGE HURTS ALL AMERICAN AGRARIANS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4. (UP).—Further shrinkage of corn feed crops due to the drought last month is aggravating the plight of American farmers, an official survey indicated today.

Prospects are for the corn crop to drop below the two-billion bushels level. Water for stock remains acute. The August rainfall for Texas was 50 per cent normal, the report showed, in Oklahoma 90 per cent normal and in Arkansas 14 per cent.

ADMITS TRIED TO ASSASSINATE MUSSOLINI

TRIESTE, Italy, Sept. 4. (P)—Francisco Marusic, terrorist on trial, testified today that an attempt had been planned against Premier Mussolini's life by hiding a bomb in Mussolini's automobile.

Luigi Valencie, who confessed yesterday, was to have planted the bomb.

Midland and Ector Sheriffs to Paso

Sheriff A. C. Francis left Tuesday night for the State Sheriff association which has convened in El Paso.

Reeder Webb, Odessa sheriff, flew to the border city by plane Wednesday.

Sheriffs from throughout the state were present at the opening of the convention.

Suggests List Who Might not Enjoy It

"The newspapers must have their jokes," a letter to The Reporter-Telegram this morning said.

The writer, a well known Midland humorist, pointed out that it was likely that the venire lists for three district court cases would be published in this newspaper this week.

"If you publish them, it is probable that Fish and Bud (Pollard and Estes) would appreciate it greatly and might congratulate each other if they were not too overcome from not having to chase each other down. It would also be a boon to the State of Texas, the County of Midland, Judge Klapproth—in fact everybody except the defendants! P. S. I forgot to mention the readers of your paper in the last catalogue."

G O P AND DEMOS HOLD PLATFORM MEETS NEXT WEEK

DALLAS. (P)—Republicans and democrats will meet next week to formulate their respective platforms for the impending general state election next November. The Republicans in state convention at San Angelo and the Democrats at Galveston do not anticipate any contentious controversies.

Nominations made in the recent primaries will be ratified and in addition new state executive committees will be named.

No Cases in Court Up to Noon Today

District court let up on its steady grind of non-jury cases this morning, no cases being tried.

Three cases were disposed of Wednesday and nine Tuesday.

This afternoon is expected to see several minor civil cases go to trial. No jury was demanded for any of these.

Jury cases on a large criminal and civil docket are to be heard beginning Sept. 8, Monday.

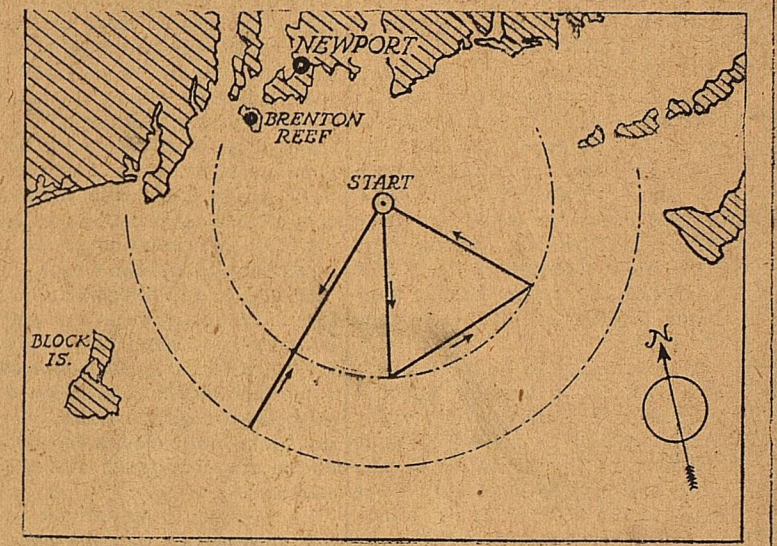

Midland 'Top Hand' Rides Gothamward; Reckons as How He Will Take Prizes

Elmer Jones, Midland rodeo star, has "slipped off" without any save a limited group knowing where he was heading, and will be one of the Texas "hands" to take part in the World Series rodeo, to be held Sept. 10-20 in the famous Madison Square Garden arena.

He will return to Midland in time to go to El Paso for the rodeo there, Oct. 3-5, of which Spence Jowell will be judge.

The Madison Square Garden corporation has announced that, for the first time in history, cowboys and cowgirls who are keeping alive the spirit of the red-blooded West will have a chance to compete in two great eastern contests, under a single, responsible management.

New Cup Races Course

The new locale of the America's Cup races, to be sailed off Newport, R. I., instead of off Sandy Hook, where all previous competitions have been held, is shown in this map. Here, beginning September 13, Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V will meet the American defender, Enterprise, in a match to be decided by the best four out of seven races. The first race, and every alternate one thereafter, will be fifteen nautical miles to windward, or to leeward, and return. The course for the second, fourth and six races will be a triangle with ten nautical miles to the side. The starting point, as shown, is nine nautical miles southeast from Brenton Reef Light, near Newport. In this map, the dotted concentric arcs indicate the outer limits to which the two styles of courses will be laid, but the direction of sailing will vary each day according to the wind.

ECTOR WILDCAT FILLS WITH OIL AS 25-BARREL HEAD FLOW RESULTS AT 10 O'CLOCK; EXPECT FORD DRILLING

The Southern Crude Oil Purchasing company No. A-1 Cowden, northern Ector county wildcat, flowed a head of 25 barrels that overflowed the hole into the slush pit this morning at 10 o'clock and shortly afterward the hole stood filled with 4168 feet of oil.

This was the second head the well had flowed. It stood 3700 feet in oil at 8 o'clock this morning. Drilling had been resumed following a shut-down Wednesday for orders.

The Fuhrman Petroleum corporation No. 1 W. T. Ford, southern Andrews county wildcat, had not resumed drilling early this morning, but was changing drilling cable. It was expected to start drilling at noon sharp.

The Ector county discovery was one of three significant oil strikes in West Texas recently. Possibilities of a new field were offered when oil filled 1,200 feet in the hole of the northern Ector county test, 21 miles from a producing area.

On Wednesday the Ector county test filled the 1,200-foot depth in nine hours from pay at 4,130-35 feet in sandy lime. Drilling had reached 4,142 feet. Gas was estimated at 200,000 cubic feet.

The wildcat is 330 feet from the west line and 2,310 feet from the north line of section 236, block 43, township 1 north, T. & P. Ry. survey. It is 21 miles southeast of Andrews county production and 24 miles north and slightly east of the Penn field in Ector county.

Fuhrman Petroleum Corporation No. 1 W. T. Ford, Southern Andrews county wildcat approximately 18 miles north and slightly west of Southern Crude's test, remained shut down Wednesday evening at 4,145 feet waiting for a new drilling line. There have been no changes reported in Fuhrman No. 1 Ford since drilling was resumed below 26,000,000 cubic feet of gas encountered at 4,062-68 feet. Gas came back in undiminished volume when the hole was bailed down early this week.

Fuhrman No. 1 Ford is 2,200 feet from the west line and 440 feet from the south line of section 16, block A-43, public school land, and the nearest production is from Deep Rock Oil company No. 1 Ogden and No. 1 King, which are both small wells.

The only clemency that is left to save Panzran from the gallows and which will preserve the reputation of Kansas lies with President Hoover.

The average college student can understudy anyone.

Teachers from Three Counties Present At Gathering

More than 125 school teachers of Midland, Martin and Andrews counties attended the opening session this morning of the tri-county institute, an address by Dr. L. L. Click, assistant dean of the University of Texas, being the principal number on the program.

Following the invocation by the Rev. Thomas D. Murphy, devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. Leslie A. Boone who preached a stirring short sermon.

B. Frank Haag, representative of the board of education of the Midland schools, gave the address of welcome to the visitors and to the Midland teachers. His talk was responded to by Principal Fincher of Stanton and Superintendent Summerhill of Andrews.

Musical Numbers Walter Elkin, Midland musician, entertained with saxophone solo numbers.

Miss Lena Solomon, talented director of music in the high school, sang for the audience.

Cards were passed, enrolling those attending the institute, and the names will appear in tomorrow's paper.

County Judge M. R. Hill is conducting the institute, assisted by Superintendent W. W. Lackey of the city schools.

Speaks on Short Story

Dr. Click, when introduced by Superintendent Lackey, chose for his subject, "The Short Story." As an illustration of points he would bring out, the speaker read one of his own stories which appears regularly in a certain trade magazine, as he said "to float the advertising."

He explained that modern short stories are written and marketed along lines of mass production; that the principal thing in writing one is to provide a plot or situation, to "get someone in a hole and let him work out of it." He said that in writing novels, it is necessary to build up around outstanding characters, but that in the short story the situation created is the principal thing.

He referred to the short story as the newest and the seventh form of art, mentioning that although the French, English and American authors were doing the most with the short story, America is leading.

Are Standardized He declared that short stories have been "O'Henryized" or standardized. (See INSTITUTE page 6)

THAT DEEP SEATED RIVALRY

Continued editorial comment in the Big Spring Daily Herald anent the attitude taken, or to be taken, by Midland in the fight to be made by Big Spring and the Texas and Pacific for a northern extension of the railroad of that city refers to "men and women in both Midland and Big Spring who have absorbed through twenty, thirty or even forty years deep seated rivalry between the two places."

However, in a preceding paragraph, the Herald columnist passes the following compliment, an appreciated one, on Midland citizenship. "Midland, as a community, deserves volumes of praise for its aggressiveness, the whole souled loyalty of its citizenship, and ability to work together unselfishly for the common good."

The other day, after application had been made to build a new railroad north from Big Spring into the Panhandle, we reprinted an editorial written by the editor of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, T. Paul Barron, in which he noted that the announcement did not mean anything like a million dollars to Midland and simultaneously pointed out that Midland ought to get a Santa Fe line from Lamesa or Seagraves to Sterling city.

Paul in turn reprinted the comments we made and added some more comments of his own. Those comments are just what we expected of Paul and Midland. We figured a few days ago that Midland might have some sort of reason to believe she would have a chance to get a new railroad provided the Santa Fe could successfully oppose the Texas & Pacific Northern plan.

In that event we would not have blamed Midland for joining the Santa Fe in a protest of the T & P application; under similar conditions, Big Spring would have done just that.

But, according to Editor Barron's latest article, it appears Midland business men feel their city really has no reason to believe there is any plan of the Santa Fe or any other company to build thru there provided the T. & P. is not allowed to build and therefore they have no intention of opposing the plan to build north from here.

On the other hand Midland men feel they should be allies of Big Spring and offer their congratulations to Big Spring for her good fortune.

As the legless man in "The Penalty," Chaney effected the illusion by having his legs strapped behind him.

"We had to stop every few minutes," he explained, "to remove the straps and massage my legs which had grown numb. The pain was pretty tough."

"Thunder" in which Chaney played the part of an old railroad engineer, sent him to a hospital because of his relations with the other woman in the case, Verona Thompson.

If so, his motives were strangely alike in both reasons. Both seemingly were to protect his wife from the shock of an understanding that would be "worse than death to her," as Payne intimated when in his cell.

But, with his wife out of the way, why did Payne kill himself? Why did he not make his peace with the Higher Intelligence he evidently believed exists and march coolly to the chair? Why did he choose to continue to the last his desire to do the thing that would keep him in the spot light on the front page?

Amarillo is convinced that it was because of the man's singular philosophy, a philosophy grounded in the vacillating morals of Oscar Wilde, the poet who had sworn to write nothing else to cheer humanity and who embraced a future credo of "I forewith dedicate my life to tragedy."

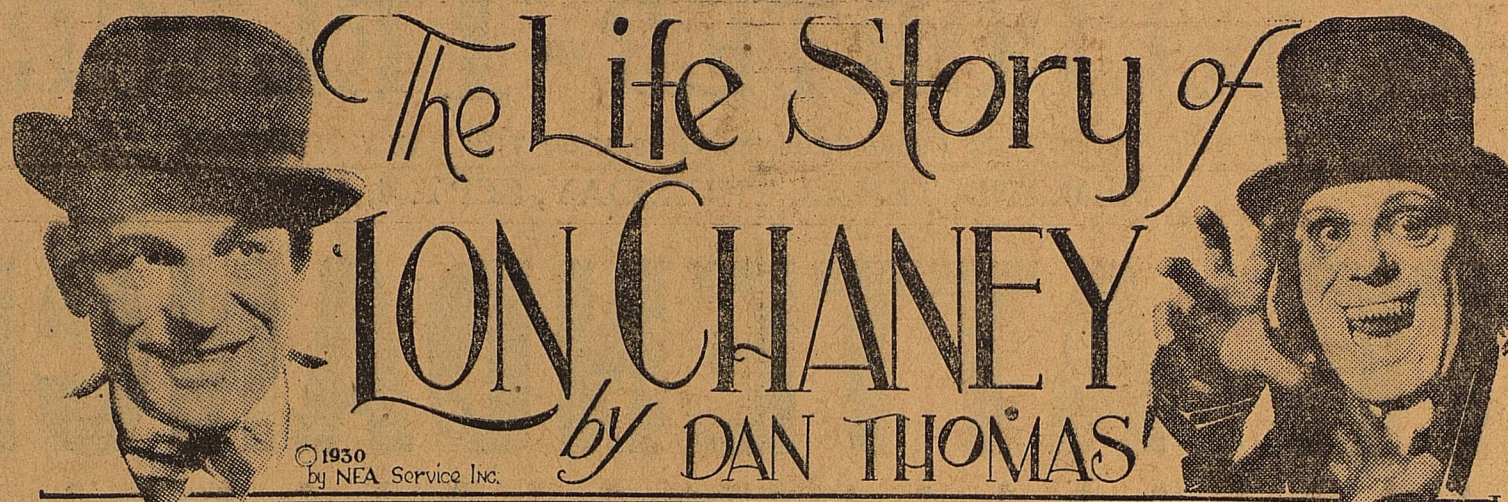

There is reason to believe this for, the first morning the Midland staff writer was in Amarillo, he accompanied Harry Montgomery, star police reporter of the Globe and News, to an interview with the slayer. Here he heard something calculated to inspire belief in the rumor, something that later was proved.

There Payne sat, in a cell dark with natural gloom and darked still with that brooding, intangible something that caused one to grope for a definition and talk as nearly in a whisper as possible. His brother, Sid Payne of Tulsa was in the room, as was the defense attorney. Outside the jail a curious crowd gathered.

"I will play square with the courts if they will hurry this case," Payne said in substance after the amenities had been observed. "But the grand jury must hurry and return that indictment and the case must be set. I must be executed. And everything must be hurried through. That is my only request."

Some of the marked excerpts were: "Each man kills the thing he loves, By each let this be heard, Some do it with a bitter look, Some with a flattering word, The coward does it with a kiss, The brave man with a sword!"

There are at least four mistakes in the above picture. They may pertain to grammar, history, etiquette, drawing or whatnot. See if you can find them. Then look at the scrambled word below—and unscramble you bat.

1930 by NEA Service Inc.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a series of six stories by Dan Thomas, Hollywood correspondent of The Reporter-Telegram and NEA Service, on the life of Lon Chaney, the movies' greatest character actor. Today, Thomas tells of the star's remarkable genius as a make-up artist.

By DAN THOMAS, NEA Service Writer. (Copyright, 1930, NEA Service, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Sept. 4.—Of all the malformed and evil-looking creatures with which Lon Chaney led movie-goers through a series of delectable nightmares, perhaps his greatest role was that of Quasimodo, the hairy one-eyed dwarf in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

"I covered my face with a new one, blanked out an eye with a shell of false teeth and was strapped in a harness," Chaney once related in explaining how he made up for the part. "I actually had nothing of my own but one eye to play the part with. Of course, it hurt—but it's all a part of the game."

But Lon Chaney's art lay not in make-up alone. Victor Hugo, in the novel, made Quasimodo the demon of the Middle Ages; Chaney, by his powerful interpretation of the little hunchback, gave him a soul.

Of course, you remember the picture... the hairy bell ringer, creeping ape-like around the sculptured gargoyles, feared by those who didn't revile him, half man and half devil, savior of the girl to whom he gave sanctuary in the church and nemesis of the mephitic priest who threatened her.

As repulsive in appearance as the master genius of make-up could devise, audiences nevertheless found something to pity in this misshapen lump that might have been a man had the fates been kinder. That "something" was put there by Chaney.

He insisted on riding in a locomotive cab in near-zero weather with the window open. The price of his slanting eyes in "Mr. Wu," his greatest Chinese role, was pain that lasted for days, caused by the use of adhesive tape to keep the outer corners of his eyes pulled backward, and upward.

Some sort of price in the form of self-imposed torture was paid for nearly all his other famous roles. Among those best remembered are: The squirming cripple in "The Miracle Man," in which he permanently lamed his shoulder by throwing it out of joint.

The one-eyed dive-keeper in "On the Road to Mandalay." The doubled-up cook in "The Catbird," which he effected by curving his spine, drawing up one leg and having the tailor accentuate this apparent bodily deformity by making one side of his suit of clothes longer than the other.

The armless circus freak in "The Unknown," in which he had his arms bound closely to his sides. The paralyzed African trader in "West of Zanzibar," who dragged himself around with his hands.

The Dracula-like vampire in "London After Midnight," in which he used a chemical to distend his eyes after a formula prepared by an oculist.

The hideous, slinking creature of the cellar in "The Phantom of the Opera." The long-haired Sergei in his Russian drama, "Mockery." The sad-hearted circus clown in "He Who Gets Slapped."

The field-like Gaspard the Good in "The Trip," his north woods drama of revenge. The grandmotherly old woman and Prof. Echo, the ventriloquist, whose parts he played in "The Unholy Three."

He made one picture in which he wore no make-up at all—not even powder. That was "Tell It to the Marines," in which Chaney played the hard-boiled Sergeant O'Hara. It proved one of his greatest successes; his acting did it.

Chaney's success at make-up was not gained at the price of pain alone. For years after he first tackled Hollywood as an "extra," he spent several hours each day before his mirror, putting make-up on and taking it off just to see what he could do. After he got to be a star, he often spent three hours a day making up.

He visited police courts, waterfront dives and all sorts of places in search of types. The pictures in the rogues' gallery at police headquarters proved a gold mine, his sinister, leering "Singapore Joe" whose blind eye he simulated by inserting a milky glass eye under his own lid, was one of the rogue gallery's products.

Layer on layer he built up his face to change its appearance, using putty and plastic wax for the purpose. Lines he graved thereon with a sharp tracer. Scars he imitated with chemicals. Cotton stuffed in his jaws to make his face puff out; bits of rubber worn in his nostrils to make his nose appear flat; hidden face clamps to warp his features; false teeth that fitted over his own; wigs, artificial eye-brows and the like—all these were the implements of his trade.

Chaney had none of those eccentricities like Richard Mansfield, his famous predecessor of the legitimate theater, who is said to have compelled stage hands to wear soft-soled shoes so they would not make a sound during his great dramatic moments. Lon was congenial with everybody around the studio. But he was a hard worker—as hard as any Hollywood has ever seen.

He went into his roles with an intensity that might lead one to believe he had hypnotized himself into actually living the part of the cripple or the deformed man whom he played. All else seemed forgotten. But the instant the cameras ceased to grind Chaney was himself again.

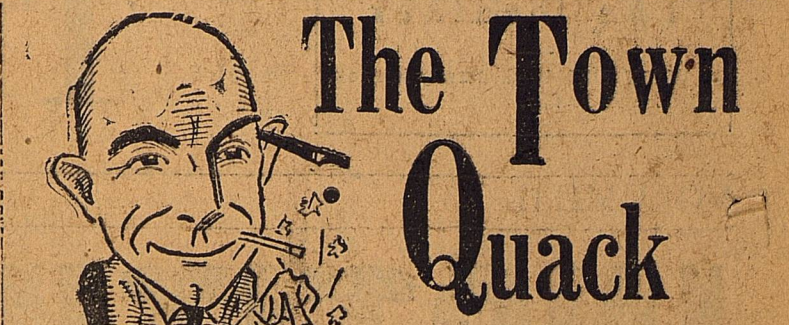

"He's just like an electric light—he switches himself on and off," a studio spectator once described it. Of all the horrible demons in human form that Chaney's fantastic mind conceived and his genius of make-up gave birth, perhaps none was more hideous than the slinking masked cellar creature who haunts the memory of those who saw "The Phantom of the Opera." The great moment came when this villain was finally cornered and his mask was withdrawn, revealing a face that nothing less than a grinning, tight-skinned Death Head could equal for pure horror.

Movie-goers from coast to coast shivered and gasped when that mask came off, their nerves strained to the breaking point. At a performance in the Strand theater at Birmingham, Ala., according to one of the many odd stories that drifted back here, when the hideous face stood revealed one woman spectator screamed "Oh, my God!"—and fainted dead away.

The memory of this and other hideous faces that Chaney gave to the screen is still seared in the minds of millions of movie-goers, but the man himself was of a totally different cast. During an interval in the filming of one of his greatest horror pictures, Peggy Wood caught Chaney replacing some baby birds that had fallen out of their nest and he acted like a bashful school-boy.

"Don't tell the gang about it," he pleaded. "They'll kid me to death. You know, I'm supposed to be a hard-boiled guy!"

NEXT: Lon Chaney as a man and a husband... the little known private life of the screen's best known actor.

Daily Washington Letter By Rodney Dutcher

Ten Years After Deciding to Get Out of Business, Uncle Sam Is in It Deeper Than Ever Before—Farm Relief Only One of Many Federal Activities

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—The impossibility of keeping Uncle Sam out of business seems to have been thoroughly demonstrated in 10 years of rule by the political party which was returned to office in 1920 with a slogan of "More business in government and less government in business."

Between actual federal enterprises and various types of assistance to existing industries, Uncle Sam qualifies as the world's biggest business man. Very few important lines of business activity you'll find where he isn't engaged in one way or another.

Down at the Panama Canal, which cost $375,000,000 when canals were cheap, Uncle Sam not only operates a toll gate but does business as a ship chandler as well. Receipts from toll fees for 1929 were $27,367,000 against expenses of $9,637,000 and receipts from business operations—such as supplies and repairs—were $17,230,000 as against $16,498,000 expenses. And there's more and more talk of building a Nicaraguan canal, which would cost about a billion.

Up in Alaska there's the Alaska railroad, federally owned and operated. It had a deficit of $958,000 for the last fiscal year.

Business and shipping interests cheered last June as Congress passed a $120,000,000 rivers and harbors bill which Senator Vandenberg of Michigan insisted involved $340,000,000 in commitments. The cost of construction and maintenance of inland waterway systems has amounted to more than $460,000,000 to date.

Government barges on the Mississippi and Warrior rivers have had a total income of nearly $30,000,000 in the last five years, with a net operating income of about $900,000.

No doubt was left as to the validity of Uncle Sam's claim to being the world's largest road builder when Congress passed the Dowdell-Phipps $375,000,000 road bill last spring. The measure provided expenditures of $125,000,000 annually on roads in the next three years, $50,000,000 more than in any previous year.

Aviation and the merchant marine have been stimulated by increasingly large mail contracts. Ocean mail contracts this year, under liberal provisions of the Jones-White act, will total $18,376,000. Air mail contracts for the last fiscal year were let for $14,618,000, as compared with $115,000,000 paid out by the Postoffice Department to railroads.

As a result of the last big Mississippi flood the same Uncle took over a $325,000,000 flood control job which is being spread over a period of 10 years.

Practically $150,000,000 has been invested in irrigation work in the west, the money being taken from leases and sales of public lands and paid back by water users.

And of course the government has been in the shipping business since the war. It went in still further under the Jones-White act provisions for shipping losses and more liberal mail contracts.

He did not wring his hands nor weep. Nor did he peck or pine. But he drank the air as though it held some healthful anodyne; With open mouth he drank the sun As though it had been wine!

And strange it was to see him pass With a step so light and gay, And strange it was to see him look So wistfully at the day. And strange it was to think that he Had such a debt to pay.

And twice a day he smoked his pipe, And drank his quart of beer; His soul was resolute, and held No hiding place for fear; He often said that he was glad The hangman's hands were near.

Then the night before the hanging: He lay as one who lies and dreams In a pleasant meadow-land, The watchers watched him as he slept, And could not understand How one could sleep so sweet a sleep With the hangman close at hand.

Payne, however, was afraid of Wilde's description of prison life. On Monday when he granted his last interview to the press, a group of prisoners were taken from the county jail and chained together in his presence, preparatory to being taken to the penitentiary at Huntsville. He pointed to the "chain" and said:

"And still some of these attorneys will try to convince me that (and he pointed to the prison chain) is better than death. Oscar Wilde's prison philosophy was about right." Here is Wilde's description of prison life:

At Work on the Payne Case

Editor's Note: This story will give a different slant to the Payne mystery. The staff writer who "covered" it was on the ground, close enough to feel the explosion that dismembered the criminal's body.

A. D. Payne was in the Potter county jail, where he had just been lodged as a result of the serving of a writ of habeas corpus granted Defense Attorney Callaway by District Judge Bishop. For the purpose of getting into the real motives behind the man's killing of his wife, the attempt upon the life of his son, and the cool contemplation of how he could dispatch himself if ever his connection with the case should be discovered—we must leave the prisoner in the jail and jump forward until soon after Payne's death.

Payne's former law associate Mr. Cade confessed that Payne had talked with him when the wife-killer was in the Hutchinson county jail.

"I will tell you something if you will swear not to tell until after my death," he said. "However, you must not plead insanity if I let you defend me. I just tell you this."

And Payne, so Cade alleges, told a story of strange appeal. He said he had realized only a few weeks before his wife's death that he was losing his mental power and that he was afraid he was growing insane.

"In fact, I'm afraid I will break down and go mad before my case is brought to trial," he said. Payne said his wife had always thought of her husband as a man with masterful, brilliant mind and that he couldn't bear to see her disillusioned. So he decided to kill her in order that she should never know. He explained that he believed she would be better off dead.

He explained his reason for wanting to kill the boy, his son A. D. Jr., was because insanity had run in the male members of the Payne family for several generations, an uncle dying in an institution. He didn't want that to happen to his son.

Payne had formerly been quoted as saying he killed his wife because he was afraid she would learn of his relations with the other woman in the case, Verona Thompson.

If so, his motives were strangely alike in both reasons. Both seemingly were to protect his wife from the shock of an understanding that would be "worse than death to her," as Payne intimated when in his cell.

But, with his wife out of the way, why did Payne kill himself? Why did he not make his peace with the Higher Intelligence he evidently believed exists and march coolly to the chair? Why did he choose to continue to the last his desire to do the thing that would keep him in the spot light on the front page?

Amarillo is convinced that it was because of the man's singular philosophy, a philosophy grounded in the vacillating morals of Oscar Wilde, the poet who had sworn to write nothing else to cheer humanity and who embraced a future credo of "I forewith dedicate my life to tragedy."

Autumn Programs Resumed by Mothers' Club at Wednesday Meeting With Mrs. T. Paul Barron; Year's Work Outlined

The second of Midland study clubs to open for autumn programs this week was the Mothers' Study club which met at the home of Mrs. T. Paul Barron Wednesday afternoon for a study based on "Women Among Primitive Peoples."

Mrs. Frank Wolcott read a paper prepared by Mrs. Fred Turner on "Economic and Social Functions," and Mrs. Barron followed with a discussion on "How Women Are Treated Among Primitive Peoples."

A brief sketch of the year's study work was outlined by Mrs. J. D. Young who told the various subjects to be discussed on "The Woman Problem."

One of the most unique features of Wednesday's meeting was the response to the roll call, each member giving an "Echo of Vacation" in rhyme.

The roll of this club includes Mmes. Paul Barron, R. O. Collins, C. M. Goldsmith, E. I. Head, J. E. Hill, W. A. Hyatt, Myrl Jowell, Duke Kimbrough, W. P. Knight, C. A. McClintic, J. O. Nobles, Roy Parks, M. M. Seymour, J. M. Speed, Allen Tolbert, Fred Turner, Frank Wolcott, and J. D. Young.

Attractive Party Opens Fall Season At Crump Home

Touches of old-fashioned motifs in table appointments, prizes and floral decorations graced the home of Mrs. J. L. Crump yesterday when she had as her guests members of the Mid-Week bridge club at the first meeting of the autumn season.

Guest prize for the bridge games went to Mrs. Alden S. Donnelly and a club prize was given to Mrs. W. L. Brown. Miss Lois Patterson received high cut award.

At tea time tables were centered with green baskets filled with pilox and party plates were passed to Mmes. W. L. Brown, D. J. Finley, S. B. Cragin, I. E. Daniel, J. L. Greene, R. J. More, M. C. Lucky, A. C. Neal, W. E. Wallace, F. W. Eschill, Alden S. Donnelly, Harvey Joan, A. N. Hendrickson, H. N. Bayer, R. L. March of Duncan, Okla., and Miss Lois Patterson.

Miss Wirta Ragand has returned to Midland after several days spent in Dallas.

Mrs. W. C. Tatom and Mrs. L. E. Prothro have been visiting in El Paso this week.

Men's Pajamas Appear in Wide Range of Color

By WILLIAM H. BALDWIN
Author of "The Shopping Book"
Written for NEA Service

Men's pajamas are made up in percales, woven madras, mercerized cloth, broadcloth, flannel, flannelette and silk, with a wide range of color patterns.

Be cautious in patronizing "bargain sales" where shirts or pajamas are advertised by sizes at such exceptional prices as "$5 pajamas for $1.50." The chances are that these goods are skimpy in cut, or loud, undesirable and out-of-fashion in color and pattern, or of cheap dyes. In reputable stores when cuts in prices in several articles in a lot are mentioned in an advertisement, it is a rule that at least one-third of the articles offered shall have been sold previously at the highest price named, the rest scaling down to a price that was honestly higher than the new sale price.

In some stores, a very few of the highest-grade and highest-priced articles will be thrown on the sales counter together with a great mass of cheaper stuff, the store counting on the few real bargains to attract the crowd.

Barbecue Given for Friends at the H. E. Cummins Ranch

Among the most distinct evidences of western hospitality was seen at the H. E. Cummins ranch Labor day evening when Mr. and Mrs. Cummins and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Coe entertained their friends with an old fashioned barbecue.

The guests enjoyed bridge and "42" games until time for the feast which was served under a giant elm tree on one long table. The menu included barbecued beef, bread, frijoles, tomatoes, pickles, onions, celery, fruit, bean and potato salad, "son of a gun," cake iced tea and coffee.

The guest list for the event included Mr. and Mrs. Foy Proctor, Mrs. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Salterwhite, Judge and Mrs. S. M. Halley and daughter, Miss Faye, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Slater, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Cowden and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Ratliff and daughters, Thabert and Louis Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Cowden Home Scene of Class Party

Members of Mrs. George F. Brown's class were guests at the home of Mrs. E. W. Cowden Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. F. C. Norwood and Mrs. W. T. Forehand as co-hostesses.

The first period of the afternoon was spent selecting officers. Mrs. Brown was retained as teacher, Mrs. E. W. Cowden, named president, Mrs. B. C. Girdley, first vice-president, Mrs. Alton Umberton, second vice-president and Mrs. Frank Norwood, third vice-president.

The social hour consisted of a lively guessing contest which was won by Mrs. John Hix. At tea time the hostesses served ices to Mmes. Spence Jowall, B. A. Wall, B. H. Blakeney, Frank Olson, A. C. Francis, A. M. Gantt, W. G. Florney, Robertson, L. A. West, L. T. Pratt, J. M. White, J. M. Garrett, B. C. Girdley, Brown, Hix and Nora B. Holcombe.

PAYNE CASE

I know not whether Laws be right, Or whether Laws be wrong; All that we know who lie in gaol Is that the wall is strong; And that each day is like a year, A year whose days are long.

But this I know, that every Law, That men have made for Man, Since first man took his brother's life, And the sad world began, But straws the wheat and saves the chaff With a most evil fan.

This, too, I know—and wise it were If each should know the same— That every prison that men build Is built with bricks of shame, And bound with bars lest Christ should see How men their brothers maim, With bars they blur the gracious moon, And blind the goodly sun; And they do well to hide their Hell, For in it things are done That Son of God nor son of Man Ever should look upon!

The vilest deeds like poison weeds Bloom well in prison air; It is only what is good in Man That wastes and withers there; Pale Anguish keeps the heavy gate,

"NO MEDICINE EVER HELPED AS DID KONJOLA"

Stubborn And Painful Stomach Ailment Readily Yields To Power of Famed Compound

Each narrow cell in which we dwell Is a foul and dark latrine, And the fetid breath of living Death Chokes up each grated screen, And all, bust Lust, is turned to dust In humanity's machine.

And never a human voice comes near To speak a gentle word; And the eye that watches through the door Is pitiless and hard; And by all forgot, we rot and rot, With soul and body marred.

Although Payne believed that he had done a meretricious thing in killing his wife, to save her from mental pain and anguish, he realized that he had violated the laws of society and that he must pay the penalty. "I believe in capital punishment," Payne said in his last interview, "except that I do not look upon death as punishment. It is often merciful."

And he of the swollen purple throat, And the stark and staring eyes, Wait for the holy hands that took The Thief of Paradise; And a broken and contrite heart The Lord will not despise . . .

And all men kill the thing they love, By all let this be heard, Some do it with a bitter look, Some with a flattering word, The coward does it with a kiss, The brave man with a sword!

. . . And there till Christ call forth the dead In Silence let him lie, Or need to waste the foolish tear, Or heave the windy sigh; The man had killed the thing he loved, And so he had to die.

MRS. EDNA BARNETT

"Each day for a year I was in misery," said Mrs. Edna Barnett, 713 North Pearl street, Dallas. "My system had become weak and run down from indigestion. Food failed of digestion and I had a constant burning sensation in my throat and stomach. Gas formed and I often belched violently. My nerves were upset and little things upset me terribly. I did not sleep well at night."

"The number of local people getting results attracted my attention to Konjola. I noticed a change for the better in my condition after I had taken the first bottle. I have taken four bottles to date and my health is again normal. I eat what I wish without a trace of indigestion or bloating. My nervous condition is much relieved and I sleep well at night. No medicine ever helped me as did Konjola."

The files of Konjola contain thousands of such statements. It is recommended, however, that this medicine be given a thorough trial, in the average case over a six to eight week period.

Konjola is sold in Midland at Mayes-Young Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. (Adv.)

GIRL OF HIS DREAMS

CAMBRIDGE, O. (UP)—All the way from Hawaii to meet "the girl of his dreams," Walter H. Wallace, U. S. A. has come that far. A Christmas package mailed to the army in 1928 bore the name of a Cambridge girl on it. Wallace corresponded with her and they exchanged photographs. Now, two years later, he has come to see her.

HEAT KILLS FISH

RHINELANDER, Wis. (UP)—Intense heat of the last few weeks has killed many game fish in lakes and streams of Oneida and upper Wisconsin counties, it is claimed here. Most of the lakes are at unusually low levels.

PIGSKIN PUNCHERS GET FIRST PRACTICE; SERIOUS ASPECT

EXPERIENCE SHOWS PLAINLY AS A PROPERTY

The high school Bulldogs got their first taste of practice work at the high school Wednesday afternoon when kick-off tactics, charging and tackling were started.

The men look better to fans about town than the squad that started last season, when every candidate except two or three gave the appearance of being wet behind the ears. But the gang appears to feel no security as to its being able to down the opposition coming up from other clubs and, further showing the marks of more experience than last year, is talking little and listening much.

The morale of the squad appears to be good. It is recognized that there will be tough opposition all season and that nothing but a perfectly welded machine will survive in the rough sea. Already waves are awash on the shores of the district champions, blown up by freshets from near Wink, where a real squad is being groomed by Coach Johnson.

Wink expects to win, judging from pre-season publicity, and critics are giving them a good chance.

Midland will open with Austin high at El Paso this month, under the arc lights. Then the strength of the squad can be estimated.

Lamesa Football Chances Fading

LAMESA.—Prospects for a 1930 championship Golden Tornado football eleven were dimmed Monday when a first call for recruits was made by Coach F. T. McCollum. The line-up of over fifty men showed a considerable amount of green timber and a large loss in regular players from last season's squad. Experienced coaching on the part of McCollum and his helper, L. E. Gregg, may whip the team into shape for a good showing in this year's campaign, but unless they find some unexpected stars in the new men they have on hand a problem that will require some headscratching.

BOASTS VETERAN LINE

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Tulane university will have a veteran line, averaging slightly more than 184 pounds this season.

Records Rock Crazy in Breeze of 1930 Texas League Baseball Season

By GAYLE TALBOT Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer.

DALLAS, Sept. 4. (AP)—The Texas League season of 1930, rapidly wearing itself out, will be remembered in the records. More grand, gloomy and peculiar performances have been witnessed since shop was opened in April than in four or five ordinary years.

Take for instance the astounding rise of night baseball. The first half was well along before the innovation even was seriously considered. In the brief time since the Waco Cubs pitched in and strung bulbs about Katy Park in a last, desperate effort to make ends meet, the nocturnal game has become firmly established; so firmly, in fact, that every park in the league will be equipped next season and day bouts will become a novelty.

It is interesting now, in our superior knowledge, to look back to the days when the league's master minds were agreeing with each other that night ball never, never could take the place of the good old daylight brand. They gave a beautiful variety of reasons why. But, some 14,000 cash customers saw a moonlight conflict at Houston recently, and that many of 'em can't be wrong.

Or the year's individual feats, that of Oscar Eckhardt in taking the batting leadership the very first week and holding it right to the bitter end probably is without parallel in the circuit's history. Every week, monotonously, the Exporter star appeared at the head of the last. Newspapers just left the head standing: "Eckhardt Still Leads Texas Batters."

Pitching history has been made by Lil Stoner since the Pirates shipped him down to Fort Worth. The stocky right-hander, among other things, hurled the year's only no-hit, no-run game against the San Antonio Indians. On another occasion, and against the same set of batters, he set a new Texas League mark of 18 strikeouts in nine innings. Both feats were with benefit of floodlights.

Possibly Stoner's outstanding performance was on August 25 when he stopped the Houston Buffs, 3 to 1, in 14 dazzling innings. He allowed only four hits in the great duel with Tony Kaufman. While not as spectacular as his two triumphs at San Antonio, Stoner's work that night was of far greater importance. It was a turning point in a hot race. That heart-breaking loss cracked the Buffs just when they were grasping for the top and started them tumbling down to fourth place. It started the Cats on a rampage that carried them out in from of the field.

Two other prodigious feats of the year bore the Wichita Falls trade mark. On July 6 the Spudders' brilliant infield of Burns, Storti, Levey and that many writers turn them out by contract, so many a month at a stipulated price. He said short stories were being written by "perspiration and not inspiration."

He referred to the part humor plays in writing short stories, and said "humor whips people back in line when they get out of line."

Stories of this age make people think, he said, in addition to the old requirements of making readers laugh, wait and weep.

All of the arts are now in confusion, Dr. Oljek said, declaring that none was in more confusion than the short story. Literature has been "jazzed up," he said, explaining that jazz is rhythm which has been slapped in the face.

He asked the question, "Are we going to cheapen literature?" men-

Attendance of Rotary Club Jumps

End of the vacation season was noticeable today at the Rotary club luncheon, more than 50 members and guests being present, marking the largest attendance within recent weeks.

Miss Jennie Elkan, entertaining with harp solos, and Secretary Land of the Odessa chamber of commerce speaking were principal numbers on the program.

Short talks were made by Miss Ze Dene Horne, of Atlanta, who will put on the W. C. T. U. play here, and Dr. L. L. Click of Texas university. W. I. Pratt gave a short talk, inducting two new members of the club, Harry Tolbert and Jack Hazeltine, the third new member, Chester H. Shepard, being out of the city.

Announcements were made of the visit to be made next Thursday of the district governor of Rotary, Ray H. Nichols of Vernon, and a full attendance was requested.

Oilers to Continue Their Batting Sprée

The Midland Oilers, surviving member of the Tri-County league, will go to Odessa Sunday for a double header.

The club has won two games over the past two Sundays, taking Odessa for a 17-2 fall and Stanton for a reversal that finally totalled 12-3.
