FOXX HITS HOME RUN, BREAKING SCORELESS PITCHING DUEL

GAME IS DECIDED IN NINTH

Mackmen Can Copy Series by a Win Wednesday

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, St. Louis.—A terrific home run drive by Jimmy Foxx high into the left field bleachers in the ninth inning with Cochrane on base broke up a sensational pitching duel and gave the Athletics a 2-0 victory over the Cardinals, and put the Mackmen back in the lead for the world's championship today.

With a few raindrops drifting down, the St. Louis Cardinals relied on the veteran moist ball flinger, Burleigh Grimes, today to stage a comeback and tame the Athletics for the third straight time in the fifth World's series battle.

George Earnshaw, who won the second game, was Connie Mack's pitching choice.

Decided the Deadlock Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics and Gabby Street's St. Louis Cardinals today were right back where they started last week, each with two victories tucked away. Four are necessary to claim the world baseball championship.

The weather man predicted a trace of rain here late today, but probably not until after the game's completion.

Haines' brilliant pitching and batting is generally admitted to be the cause of the Cardinals' victory today.

The play-by-play of the game follows:

PROBLEM OF THE INCOMPETENTS

A large oil company, with extensive works and offices in Texas, last spring pared its forces to the bone. This summer, when the rush season came upon them, they did not add to their personnel as had been the usual custom. The employees who had survived the springtime elimination process were, of course, the company's most efficient workers and, by one expedient or another, they contrived to do the work which almost twice their number had done in former "peak" seasons. . . . It is a significant achievement, but forecasts another economic adjustment. Our new prosperity will be a sane prosperity and, even under the most favorable of business conditions, slack management will not be tolerated. Non-productive workers will be discovered and discharged. A good stenographer, a good mechanic, and a good ditch-digger will encounter little difficulty in unearthing a job, but the man or woman who used to "get by" because a lazy department head didn't notice his shortcomings is in for some pretty tough sledding.

The point is this: Unless some new industries and new enterprises are brought into the state in unexpected number, Texas is going to have a surplus of workers for some years to come. Under ordinary conditions, industry has no alternative but to be satisfied with a sprinkling of mediocre workers. But conditions which were ordinary a year ago are not ordinary now, and probably never will be again. In consequence the mediocre, under-par worker creates a new economic problem. . . . Evidence of that problem will be unusual demands upon organized charity, and, in the winter months, distress and suffering.

The prosperity of Texas industry, of Texas merchants, and of efficient Texas workers is assured. But the plight of the small army of incompetents neither can be legislated out of existence nor absorbed in the flood of returning prosperity.

THE "WHY" OF BRUTALITY

A committee of the American Bar Association, appointed to study lawless methods of law enforcement, recently made this report concerning police brutality:

"We can only say that the 'third degree' in the sense of rigid and severe examination of men under arrest by police officers or prosecuting attorneys or both is in use almost everywhere, if not everywhere, in the United States."

Now the third degree is a disgrace to civilization, and deserves no defense. But while we are campaigning against it, we might as well look a little farther and figure out just what it is that causes the third degree to be so generally used.

Policemen and prosecutors, to begin with, are no more brutal than the rest of us. Some of them are hard-boiled and a very few are downright cruel, but in the main they are pretty representative citizens, as decent and kind-hearted as their jobs will let them be. Why, then, does the ordinary man who is arrested as a suspect in a crime take it for granted that he will be kicked and cuffed and bruised and whipped when he reaches the station house?

The real reason probably lies, not in the police station, but in the courts of justice.

So it has become a police axiom that the case against a suspect is hardly complete without a signed, sworn confession; and it is the eagerness to get this confession—born of the sad knowledge that without it the best case in the world may fall through—that causes the third degree.

All of this, of course, does not form an excuse. No language is strong enough to condemn the practice of torturing prisoners into making confessions. But understanding this background may help us in the task of eliminating the third degree. Concentrating our energies on the courts might do more good than simply calling policemen names.

How About Hocking Some of That Jewelry First?

Two Tiny Islands Assume Big Proportions in Booze Trade; Condition Serious

By GEORGE COMSTOCK, NEA Service Writer.

ST. PIERRE, Oct. 6.—The tiny French island of St. Pierre and Miquelon from which it has been assumed only French liquors were being transported are in reality being used as the base for a gigantic liquor smuggling trade from Canada into the United States. So large has this trade grown that it practically circumvents Canada's large law which prohibited the export of Canadian liquor across the American border.

St. Pierre, largest town and principal seaport of the islands, is the center of the industry. It is the new liquor smuggling capital of the transformed into a bustling and wealth-drunk town resembling a western mining camp in gold rush days.

Today St. Pierre's harbor is crowded with ships, but they are not fishermen. Fishing, once the sole support of the islands, has been forgotten for the new and more lucrative industry of liquor running. There is scarcely a family left on the islands which is not connected in some way with the liquor traffic. Some of the natives of the place have reaped large fortunes in the past few months. Low, fast, battle gray, speed boats slip in and out of the harbor, and rusty tramp steamers lie alongside the stone quay, their winches groaning and stuttering as they discharge their cargoes of thousands of cases of liquor, destined for the United States. Over the entire town there is an air of activity, and a decided smell of whisky hangs in the air. INHABITANTS OF ISLANDS DISTRUST STRANGERS

I have been in St. Pierre for some time investigating the liquor traffic, and from observations, and conversations with people engaged in the business, here are a few outstanding facts regarding this new rum center:

FIRST—During the 12 months just passed, approximately 1,000,000 cases of assorted liquors were shipped from here to the United States. Only a small percentage of it failed to reach its destination.

SECOND—Fully 90 per cent of this liquor originates in Canada. There is no doubt but that the rum syndicates have found a route through St. Pierre which practically nullifies Canada's law aimed to aid the American government's enforcement of prohibition.

THIRD—Many of Canada's largest liquor manufacturers have established offices and maintain staffs of workers in St. Pierre—presumably to care for the first of the town's inhabitants.

FOURTH—A French possession, St. Pierre and its sister islands are governed under the French Colonial system. The authorities of the islands are fully aware of the extent of the liquor smuggling trade, and render it every assistance.

FIFTH—The inhabitants and authorities of the islands are suspicious and secretive with strangers who are not in the rum trade. St. Pierre has made a great deal of money out of the liquor business, and intends to make more. Strangers are not welcome.

This is a busy season of the year in St. Pierre. Several of the liquor syndicates prefer to ship liquor to the island and store it, thus avoiding the additional dangers of a late season voyage for cargo carrying vessels. This has taxed the storage space on the island, and every warehouse is crammed with liquor cases. Work is being rushed on new and larger buildings which will be used for this purpose, but in the meantime there is an acute shortage of storage facilities. In order to get the great amount of liquor off the quay and under cover it has been necessary to make use of many private dwellings as storerooms. As you walk along the town's narrow streets it is not unusual to glance behind the inevitable white lace curtains and see that the living room is packed with whisky cases.

At present there are approximately 3,000,000 cases of liquor stored in and around St. Pierre. Some of this, of course, came from France; wines, champagnes, fine brandies and the like. But the great majority of it is Canadian whisky.

St. Pierre, picturesque nowadays with its swagging rum-runners, red-capped sailors, and its many stories of sudden wealth and adventure, has another bid to fame. It is the only port in the world governed by a great power, where news regarding the coming and going of vessels is not public property. The authorities on this island, however, are giving out no information. The rum trade is shrouded in sec-

Daily Washington Letter By Rodney Dutcher

It Isn't Much Fun Being a Politician Unless You can Win an Election Once in a While, and That's Why New York Republicans Declared for Repeal of Eighteenth Amendment

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Politicians are politicians and that is why the Republican state convention in New York, by a three to one vote, declared for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the return of the liquor problem to the individual states.

A month before the convention, it was commonly believed among those most conversant with state politics in New York that the Republicans would adopt a straddling plank on prohibition in an attempt to keep the upstate drys happy as well as the New York City wets.

But politicians are politicians and it is not much fun being a politician unless you can win an election once in a while and get your party into office.

The New York Republicans are tired of losing state elections. For years now they have had a Democratic governor and two United States senators. Their weakness in the state enabled New York Democrats to produce a strong presidential candidate in 1928 and the chances are that another New York Democratic governor will be the strongest contender for the Democratic nomination in 1932.

About all the attention the Republican party in New York has attracted through the country has been in connection with prohibition scandals in New York City and the uninspiring efforts of Republican state legislators to thwart Governors Al Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It has never been questioned by anyone that, insofar as any state can be tagged as wet or dry, New York has been wet. With the Democrats of the state militantly wet, the Republicans have obviously been at a disadvantage when dry or straddling.

There are more drys, apparently, in the New York Republican party than in the New York Democratic party. But that didn't win the G. O. P. any statewide elections. In 1925 the drys entered an independent senatorial candidate who took away enough votes to defeat Senator James W. Wadsworth, who had come out wet, but the New York Republicans doubtless figure that that sort of thing can't go on forever.

Independent dry candidates sometimes have a distinct nuisance value—and so have independent wet candidates—in a campaign. The infinitesimal voting strength of the old Prohibition party indicates how difficult it is to draw voters away from the major parties to "waste" their ballots on a strictly dry ticket.

All this was obvious enough when, at a psychological moment, out stepped U. S. District Attorney Charles H. Tuttle of New York with his resignation and the public assertion that the Eighteenth Amendment could not be enforced and ought to be repealed. After that it was just a question whether the G. O. P. would take the full plunge and advocate repeal in so many words or go wet in some milder fashion. But Tuttle was the outstanding candidate. No one else in sight seemed to have a chance to beat Roosevelt and Tuttle seemed a stronger man than the usual Republican candidate in New York. So the party took the plunge.

The New York situation naturally reminds one of what has happened this year in the important normally Republican states of New Jersey, Illinois, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

Republicans of New Jersey went wet after the overwhelming primary nomination of Dwight Morrow for senator on top of his wet declaration. The Democratic party was wet anyway and its senatorial candidate undoubtedly would have defeated any Republican dry.

Republicans of Illinois are now wet and their senatorial candidate, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, has autumn suggestions were "stove pipes, coal buckets or hods, shovels, pokers, pop corn poppers, black walnuts, hickory nuts, pecans, taters, apples, new lasses, salted butts and smoked chunk meats."

Shelf hardware, such as "ammunition and guns, children's stockings and lunch baskets" was offered. "We do not intend to give you anything outside of water, heat and a welcome," the store declared.

LARGE WHEAT SUPPLY REAL CAUSE OF CRASH

By ALLARD SMITH

Recent disclosures of short-selling of American wheat by the Russians has called attention to the extreme low level of this great commodity.

In September, wheat dropped below 90 cents a bushel, the lowest price for the crop reached thus far and the lowest in 24 years. The price was over 50 cents a bushel cheaper than one year.

Many theories have been advanced for this great decline. Russian selling may have had some been repudiated by the Anti-Saloon League, which is backing an independent dry candidate.

More votes for the two wet candidates, Eben Draper and "Boss" Gillis, were cast in the Massachusetts Republican senatorial primary than for William M. Butler, the dry, who won. Inference is that Butler would have been beaten by wet Mr. Draper except for the Gillis complication. The Democratic party there is wet and because of that fact Butler is likely to be defeated in the election.

Pennsylvania Republicans have no Democratic competition so they have usually been able to smother prohibition as an issue. The two wet candidates for the G. O. P. gubernatorial nomination polled 250,000 more votes than Gifford Pinchot, the winning dry, after the wets had forced the machine candidate to adopt a moist attitude.

rency, at least insofar as the port authorities and rum-runners themselves can make it so. There is no doubt at all but that the trade is flourishing with the full knowledge and connivance of the island authorities. Either on their own responsibility, or acting on orders from France, they are rendering all possible aid to the growing business of smuggling. For instance, clearance papers for the rum-runners are notoriously easy to secure. It is not unusual for a "speedie," as the faster rum boats are called to slip out of St. Pierre, loaded to the line with liquor, and carrying clearance papers for the Bahamas, a voyage of some 1500 miles each way. In four or five days the same boat will return, riding high in the water, and the captain will report that he has made a round-trip voyage!

LIQUOR FROM CANADA IS WITHIN THE LAW

Canada's part in all this is quite within the law. A Canadian distiller ships to St. Pierre, a French possession, a cargo of liquor. It may be shipped in the distiller's name or in the name of the distiller's St. Pierre's agent. In this transaction the ship's papers are in perfect order. The Canadian law against the export of liquor across the American border did not say that the Dominion bound itself to prevent shipment of its liquor to France, or a French possespart in depressing the price recently, but the real explanation is much broader. Actually the price reflects the pressure of large wheat supplies on the market at a time of world-wide economic recession and low commodity prices.

In a year of depression and reduced consumption, the wheat producing countries of the globe are growing a wheat crop larger than in 1929. In North and South America alone the crop will be 288 million bushels above the yield of last year. The world's stock of wheat is now about 413 million bushels. The American "carry-over" from the 1929 harvest is 137 million bushels greater than one year ago.

Offsetting this to some extent is the fact that the European wheat crop is 60 million bushels smaller than in 1929. The fact that wheat is selling below corn is resulting in the feeding of some of the surplus wheat to livestock in this country. The American corn crop is estimated 1,980,000,000 bushels against 2,600,000,000 bushels in 1929 while the wheat crops is 338 million bushels against 806 million bushels in 1929.

In the past, the abnormally great reduction of wheat prices has almost always been followed by a rather rapid recovery from one cause or another. The most notable example of this was in 1896 when wheat dropped to 53 cents a bushel, but had recovered to 94 cents a bushel five months later.

of the island, and the extent of the trade is well shown by the fact that never before have the island been so prosperous.

It should be said for the authorities, however, that they are putting some of the money back into the business. Big dredges have been working for months in St. Pierre's harbor, in an effort to deepen the channel so that it will accommodate even larger ships. A new breakwater is under construction; new warehouses and wharfs are being constructed. St. Pierre expects the rum trade to grow to even larger proportions.

When Canada passed its anti-export law, St. Pierre had a population of 1500. Today there are 4000 people on the island, and most of them are making money out of the rum trade in one way or another. There is an air of prosperity about the place. Expensive American automobiles bounce along narrow roads where, only a few years ago, ox carts were the rule. The cafes are filled with sailors and workers. These people are all glad to explain that they consider prohibition in the United States one of the greatest benefits yet conferred on mankind, and they hope it lasts forever.

'Cinderella? Don't Be Silly!'

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Writer.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 6.—When John J. Raskob, Jr., first began calling at the Aaronson's modest apartment in an equally modest neighborhood here, it was 15-year-old Minerva who raced down the long stairs of the two-family house to admit him. But it was her elder sister, Esther, who received the financier's son and went with him to shows and college dances.

An artist's sketch of Miss Minerva Aaronson, the young New Haven, Conn., stenographer who is engaged to marry John J. Raskob, Jr.

If that sounds like the beginning of the "Cinderella romance" that some sensation-seekers refer to in connection with the recently announced engagement of young Raskob and Minerva Elaine Aaronson, don't mention it to his fiancée. Her large dark eyes flash with indignation when she hears the story of how the "kid sister" of a poor Jewish family won the heart of a prince of fortune whose father had been knighted by the Pope.

Even under the stress of a heated denial, she speaks in a low, cultured voice: "There was nothing 'Cinderella' about it. That was years ago; he just came to call a few times. Do you think I care whether he has any money? We're both working, aren't we?"

"Religion doesn't matter. If our families don't object, we certainly shouldn't. We've scarcely even talked about it. And it isn't anybody's business, either."

How Romance Began John Raskob, Jr., was a freshman at Yale when he first knew the Aaronsons. There was no romance between him and Esther, which she proved by marrying Bernard Koukind, a lawyer and Yale graduate.

Meanwhile, however, Minerva hadn't been moping in any chimney corners. Both she and her sister were as pretty and popular as any of the young society folk in town.

Their father, the late Abraham S. Aaronson, had been a prominent New Haven lawyer, city attorney for Ansonia, and had served several terms as a state representative.

Young Raskob was well along in his course in administrative engineering at the Sheffield Scientific School when he began to go back to the apartment on tree-lined Sherman avenue, this time to see Minerva. She had graduated from New Haven High School in 1927, was an expert stenographer and had gone to work in a brokerage office.

"Jake and Minerva" For awhile it was just the regular sort of college "case." There were dances and movie and fraternity parties. Campus friends knew them, always collectively, as "Jake and Minerva." Then there was the matter of Raskob's fraternity pin, collegiate symbol of a betrotal, though often a secret one, when accepted by a girl.

Anyway, the jeweled emblem of Theta Xi disappeared for a time from Raskob's keeping, and to campus gossipers the inference was obvious. Denials were issued by everybody concerned, but the romance prospered. Raskob brought saddle horses from his father's estate in Maryland and the two often rode together. This last summer, following his graduation, Miss Aaronson spent her two weeks' vacation at the Raskob summer home near Centerville.

Publicity broke over them with bewildering suddenness when the engagement was formally announced. Both refused interviews and even fled the city for a time. Back to her typewriter in the offices of Boardman and Company, Miss Aaronson's employers interrupted business matters to receive, and curtly dismiss, her many callers.

May Keep on Working "You'd think," she said, "that my fiance, instead of his father, had a lot of money and was chairman of the National Democratic committee. I'm trying to hold a job here, and I'm interested in my work. I'm going to keep right on working until we're married. That may be in the spring and it may be a little later. Our plans can't be definite yet because Mr. Raskob has just started his new job in Boston."

As a matter of fact, Miss Aaronson implied that she may continue working after marriage. "I know lots of girls who do," she said, "whether it's necessary or not. A girl who has worked for some time often finds that outside interests are necessary. "Money wouldn't have anything to do with it in my case, perhaps. But that story about having $2,000,000 settled on us is absurd, of course. We're going to live just like any other young couple. We wouldn't have it any other way."

She isn't quite clear about just what young Raskob is doing with the firm in Boston. "Why, it's some sort of position," she explained, habitually. "Something quite technical, I suppose. He's an engineer, you know."

Their future place of residence also is on the indefinite list. It will be, she supposes, "just a modest little place that we can afford," perhaps in Boston, or wherever Mr. Raskob is employed.

No Religious Disputes The differences in their family religious beliefs concern her not at all, said Miss Aaronson. "That is something that must be determined by the feeling in one's heart. When people dared to talk about an 'Abie's Irish Rose' affair, we scarcely know what they meant, for there never has been a bit of friction on that score."

"We haven't talked about it, nor avoided the subject either. It just doesn't count, especially when our people have been so nice. My mother announced the engagement and Mr. Raskob, Sr., approved it."

Everybody wants to know what kind of ceremony we will have. I really don't know, and I certainly don't care."

Miss Aaronson is of medium height, lithe and graceful, with fair skin tanned by the summer outdoors. Her hair is brown, wavy and is "growing out" after a bob. She wore a trim but conservative business dress, unadorned by Raskob's fraternity pin, and her ring finger did not bear the engagement solitaire which has become the talk of New Haven. A five-carat square-cut stone must be a little cumbersome for a nimble-fingered typist.

She lives with her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Aaronson, and her younger sister Helen, now 16. There she has had plenty of opportunity to learn the duties of domesticity, and perhaps her most heated resentment was directed against the report that she didn't know how to cook.

"Nobody who ever came to my house said that," Minerva declared. "I can cook, and pretty well, too."

Buddie Hall, oil man of San Angelo, was in Midland Sunday afternoon.

Miss Grace Kenney of Amarillo spent Sunday visiting with Mrs. Bertha Kenney.

Mrs. Gott, who has been filling the position of bookkeeper at Grissom Robertson's company, has returned to her home in Coleman.

Mrs. Alice Mason has returned from Breckenridge where she visited her sister, Mrs. Myrtle Aycock, and attended the Simmons-T. C. U. ball game Saturday afternoon.

Local Housewives' Choice Recipes

Apples are the most healthful fruit and are especially good for school children's lunches. For the evening meal the children would like apples cooked by the recipes we offer today.

Apple Salad Four apples, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1-2 cup boiling water, grated rind and juice of lemon, 1-3 cup shredded coconut, 2 tablespoons chopped raisins, 2 tablespoons chopped nuts meats, mayonnaise.

Apple Meringue Four apples, 1-2 cup stewed dates, 1-2 cup nut meats, 2 egg whites, 1-2 cup sugar, few grains salt. Pare apples and cut in halves. Remove cores and fill cavities with about half the sugar. Place in buttered baking dish, cover and bake until half done. In the meantime beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry. Beat in remaining sugar and fold in stewed fruit and finely chopped nuts. Cover apples with mixture and continue baking in a slow oven until meringue is firm to the touch. It will take about 40 minutes. Chill and serve with or without a garnish of whipped cream.

Sole Leather of a Good Shoe Is Pliable

By WILLIAM H. BALDWIN Author of "The Shopping Book" Written for NEA Service

A shoe may be beautiful, with an intricate design, and of fine leather, but if it pinches in the toe the shopper will naturally be dissatisfied. The proper last is the most important single item in a shoe.

Expensive shoes are bench-made; that is, every part of the shoe is made by hand. In shoes which are hand-turned, the stitching is done by machine. Shoes built for style, usually have narrow lasts, whereas corrective shoes have wide lasts for comfort, and can stand the wear and tear of much usage.

Bend the sole of the shoe to see if it has a tendency to crack. A good sole will be pliable and will not crack. Also, bend the counter—the part which fits around the heel of the foot. If it is made of good leather, as in good shoes, it will be pliable and fit snugly around the heel. If made of fiber it will be harder and stiffer. The balance of the shoe also is an indication of workmanship. Put the shoe on a plane surface, like the floor or a show case, and note whether all of the sole and heel are flush with the surface.

TOMORROW: Washing machines.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in the series of 10 articles concerning coaching changes in the big universities of football fame.

By CHESTER L. SMITH
NEA Service Special Writer

A man who had an urge to act Shakespearean roles and who might have been on the stage today had he not suffered an attack of homesickness one day in New York, is Georgetown University's new football coach.

He is thick set, grizzled, personable Tommy Mills, one of Knute Rocke's master strategists at Notre Dame for the last three seasons and bearing the verbal Croix de Guerre pinned on him by "K. K." for being "the smartest football scout I ever met."

Mills was graduated from Beloit College, after which he went to the University of Wisconsin firmly bent on studying law. However, the drama always had held out an irresistible lure and he finally accepted an offer to join the cast of Kismet, which Mrs. Fiske was to produce in New York with Otis Skinner in the leading role.

Broadway soon lost its charm for youthful Tommy Mills; as rehearsals dragged on and on, he found himself wondering whether an actor's life was the happy, thrill-packed road he had pictured. There was the offer of a teaching and coaching position in an Omaha high school, which had been made him several months before, and one night when discouragement hung heavy on his shoulders, he hastily packed and started west to claim it.

In Omaha, Tommy found time to play in a local stock company and also in moving pictures, but he soon lost his yen for grease paint and when Creighton University offered him its head coaching, he threw away his phoney whiskers for good and all to accept.

In his five years there, Mills brought Creighton up from a non-entity in midwestern athletics to a constant threat, his basketball team winning 72 out of 76 games. Then Beloit called him back.

At the little Wisconsin college Mills performed another miracle, transforming a downhearted loser into a battling champion that held the conference title in all sports for three seasons running. His 1922 eleven defeated Northwestern, while in 1925 he stormed into South Bend with a team that the Irish were able to down only by a last-ditch rally in the closing minutes of the last period.

A year later found Mills himself serving under Rockne, who had evidently decided it was better to have such a foe in his own camp than in the opposing trenches. He coached wrestling, boxing and varsity football for two years, then took over the freshmen for a year.

Now he's at Georgetown in the position Lou Little filled so capably until he left to go to Columbia. A good break for the Blue and Gray? Well, they think so.

TOMORROW: Bob Higgins, All-America end at Penn State.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing

They are the coveted trophies that signalize his unprecedented triumph in the four major golf tournaments of the year. The cups were received from (left to right) the British Open, the American Amateur, the British Amateur, and the American Open. Standing at the right is O. B. Keeler, Atlanta sports writer and friend of the champion.

ANOTHER ARGUMENT AGAINST NIGHT FOOTBALL ADVANCED BY SCHOOLMEN

Another hazard hidden away amid night athletics has been ferreted out by the Houston public school board and exposed to the light of day.

In banning night football games between schools of the city, the Bayou city educators pointed out that such contests would be attended by unchaperoned girls and boys, placing a responsibility upon school officials.

The pennant fund of some $4,000 raised for the Fort Worth Cats, 1930 Texas league and Dixie champions, might be the last to be subscribed in Texas.

Chambers of commerce in the eight cities of the league, which customarily have taken a leading part in raising such funds, have received a suggestion from John Boswell, secretary of the Wichita Falls chamber, that they do not participate in future drives.

Boswell said such movements were unpopular among members of commercial organizations, also that the players' share in Dixie series receipts was sufficient to compensate them for their efforts.

Last winter, with Ray Hart and Jake Hess at forwards, the Rice Owls had probably the third strongest team in the Southwest Conference basketball race. With both due back, Owl supporters were predicting a championship for 1930-31.

But, alas, the ineligibility bugaboo has stopped Coach "Pug" Daugherty's quintet before it could get started. Both Hart and Hess, a report from Houston says, failed to make passing grades and have been ruled out for the year.

In addition to their prowess on the basketball court, where they ranked one-two among conference scorers in the last campaign, Hart and Hess were stars in other sports. Hess was the conference's second ranking netter, topped only by Bruce Barnes, University of Texas flash.

Whitworth Only Tex. League Draftee

FORT WORTH, Oct. 6. (AP).—Dick Whitworth, who avowedly is railroad man first and a baseball player afterward, had the distinction of being the only Texas leaguer drafted at the close of the 1930 campaign. The Chicago Cubs claimed him at the regular price, $4,000, and expect him to make good as a relief pitcher next year.

All very well, except that the Fort Worth veteran might hand his new bosses the shock of their lives by resigning at any given moment. He has said, time and again, that he will give up baseball anytime it endangers his seniority with the Southern Pacific, with whom he has been employed many years.

Twice during the last campaign, Whitworth was on the point of quitting the Cats and getting back on the job, but each time President Ted Robinson induced the rail officials to extend his star's leave of absence. Robinson's persuasive oratory practically won a Texas league and Dixie title for the Panthers. After winning more games than any hurler in the league, Whitworth beat Memphis twice in the Dixie classic.

Whitworth pitched and played outfield and shortstop for the railroad team at Austin for several years before signing up with the Austin Club of the Texas Association 10 years ago. Houston acquired him in 1927, and he came to Fort Worth last year.

COMET MISSES EARTH, FRENCH EXPERTS REVEAL

By RALPH HEINZEN, United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Oct. 6. (UP).—French astronomers at the Meudon observatory have announced that all danger of a collision of the Schwassmann-Wachmann comet with the earth is past. The comet has swung as close to the earth as it will ever come and is now disappearing, having missed this globe by the comparatively small celestial space of five million miles.

French scientists insist that the earth had a narrower escape than most laymen ever imagined. Had the little comet come on at the speed and angle it did when it was discovered by the German astronomers, Schwassmann and Wachmann on May 1, 1930, it would have put a dent in the globe and perhaps knocked the earth out of its smoothening circuit.

Scientists are lost in wild conjectures of what might have happened had the collision actually occurred. Some argue that the earth would have broken into bits at the impact, others believe that like a Derby hat, the earth would have been bent but nothing more serious would occur.

The comet was traveling at a pace which would have left the world far behind. Through the telescope, watchers could see the comet streaking through the field of stars, its progress being such that movement was visible to the eye.

The Schwassmann-Wachmann will be back in five years, but its circuit will be even farther away from the earth. Instead of being 22 times as far away as the Moon, it will be 30 times, so that from now on there will be lessened danger of a collision.

French astronomers point out that there have been but three comets come dangerously close to the globe in the past few centuries. Lexell's comet came nearest, missing the world by 1,440,000 miles on July 1, 1770, while the Pong-Winnecke passed, no hits.

Market Report

NEW YORK — Despite weakness in stocks lower levels for wheat and general downward tendencies in other major commodity prices cotton futures held steady today within narrow range of previous closing levels. News developments generally against market. However there was sufficient buying from shorts 'trade' and New Orleans to check future extension of recent decline. Private estimates of American crop continued to show increases over month ago. Average of nine private reports issued thus far put crop at 14,223,000 bales, against 14,162,000 month ago.

ed by just 3,480,000 miles off on June 27, 1927.

The Meudon scientists succeeded in photographing the new comet and have been able to figure its size as 400 yards in diameter instead of tens, hundreds or thousands of miles as astronomers first believed. The rest of the visible mass is ultra-rarefied carbon gas which makes the comet appear much larger than it really is.

Scientists point out that there have been meteors of that size strike the earth, but proved of little damage because they came in on an angle instead of coming directly down and because they came at much less speed. In North-Eastern Arizona is a meteor crater 1,200 yards in diameter and 180 yards deep.

They are to fly by way of Bermuda and the Azores and expect to make a return trip across the ocean if weather conditions are favorable.

Midland Scouts in Odessa Ceremony

At an investiture service Sunday night at the Baptist church in Odessa, Troop 60 of the boy scouts of that place received a charter from Assistant Executive Marcos Williamson. Three Midland troops, 51, 52 and 53, had representatives present. These went through the impressive candle ceremony directly after the charter had been presented. Williamson spoke for several minutes on the necessity of the church of America enrolling boy scouts and sponsoring boy scout troops.

G. W. Brenneman and A. A. Clark, scoutmasters, went with the boys and served an outdoor supper to them in Odessa prior to the ceremony.

Murray H. Fly, Odessa superintendent of schools, is chairman of the troop committee in Odessa; A. H. Dennison is scout master of the 12 members of Troop 60; W. A. Adams and Paul Frame otherwise compose the troop committee, and Earnest Beasley, eagle scout from Fort Worth, is assistant scout master.

Following the ceremonies, the Rev. W. H. Marsh spoke to a large crowd. It is expected that another scout troop will be organized soon, and that the two will be taken over by churches as sponsors.
