Two Held After Exciting Chase of Galva Man's Captors

RANSOM PAID BY YOCUM

Details of Ransom Are Not Made Public By Banker

KEWANEE, Ill., Oct. 30. (P)—Two men were in custody today and a posse closing in on two others alleged to have kidnaped Earl L. Yocum, wealthy Galva banker Saturday.

Yocum was held three days for ransom and finally released. Mrs. Yocum said that the ransom was paid but refused to give details. Yocum refused to cooperate with police in seeking the kidnapers, explaining that he did not want "to be put on the spot."

KEWANEE, Ill., Oct. 30. (UP)—Dozens of state police and officers from three cities surrounded a field four miles southwest of here today in an attempt to capture four men, who are believed to be the kidnapers of Earl L. Yocum, millionaire Galva, Illinois, banker.

Three state policemen cornered four men in the field after a sensational automobile chase along a country lane, which ended when the car of fleeing men plunged through the fence and wrecked.

300-400 STUDES FROM WINK WILL ATTEND BIG GAME

Three or four hundred students are coming to Midland Saturday for the Midland-Wink football game that begins at 2:30 at Lackey field, a telephone call from Superintendent Lang to Superintendent Lackey this morning said.

The Wink team will be quartered at the Scharbauer hotel while a pep squad of 60 and a uniformed band of 40 parade Midland streets, Lang said.

Ticket sales began here this morning in earnest. Pupils in the high school will be requested to sell four adult tickets in order to earn a student ticket; pupils in the junior high school and the primary buildings will be given a student ticket if they sell two adult tickets. The room in each building turning in the largest sale will be given a room prize. Many of the high school students are proposing not to use their season tickets for the game, since this game was due to be played in Wink and since by buying tickets to this game they will help to put over the support of the game. Season tickets will be good for the game, however.

Odessa and Stanton have been asked to take a block each of 100 student tickets. If they do this before Friday night, the tickets will be sold at a slight per cent off. It is expected that team members and pep squads from these two towns will accept this proposition, and be here in large numbers. The same proposition is being made to the Crane schools.

Several organizations in Midland are being asked to take a block of 50 adult tickets, and thereby help finance the game Saturday. Many of the high school rooms will attempt to put over this many tickets by Friday night.

Out-of-district officials have been secured for the game, and all-in-all this promises to be one of the best and fastest games ever witnessed in Midland.

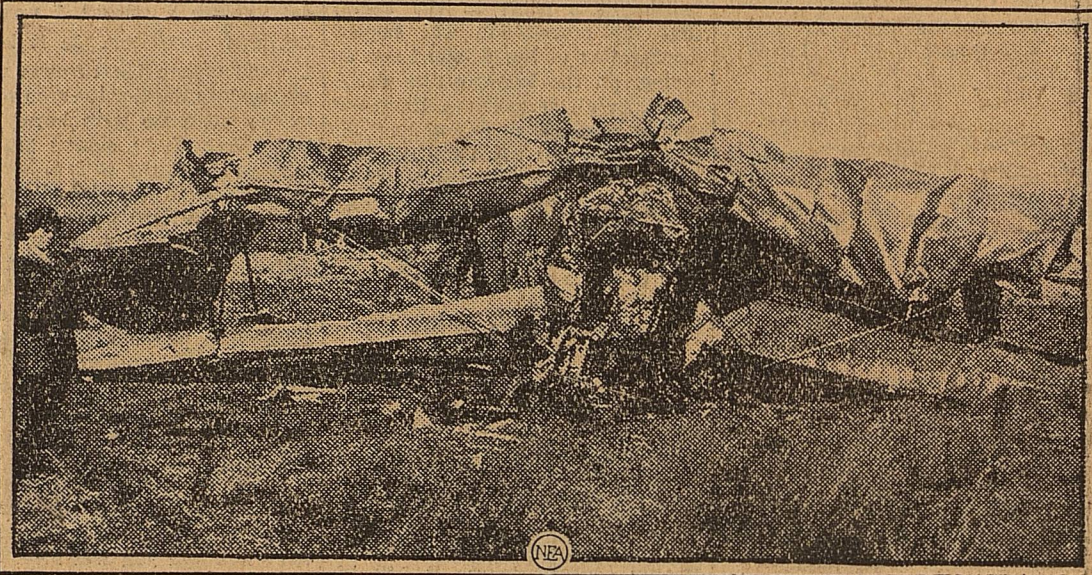

KANSAS CITY GUESTS

J. E. Hutt and wife of Kansas City are here visiting their son, Donald Hutt, county commissioner and head of the Hutt Cattle company.

HOUSTON GETS CONVENTION

SAN ANGELO, October 30. (P)—Houston was named next convention city of the Texas Order of Eastern Star at the annual meeting here today.

Where Distinguished Pilot and Student Died

Investigators seeking to determine the cause of this airplane crash, in which a distinguished pilot and a student flyer were killed, learned that it may have been caused by the instructor's failure to fasten his safety belt. Major Philip Watson is believed to have been thrown from the controls of the biplane when it began "bucking" at a low altitude over a golf links near Roosevelt Field, Long Island. The student, Julius Nester, was unable to keep the craft from diving to earth. Major Watson was a prominent member of the Air Corps Reserve and had been in commercial flying since his war-time training as a pilot.

JAPANESE BATTLE SAVAGES; MUSHU TAKEN IN FIGHT

TOKYO, Oct. 30. (P)—A thousand Japanese troops today sought head hunting Taiyal tribe savages in the jungles and mountain fastnesses of Central Formosa. The Taiyals several days ago killed 86 Japanese residents of the village of Mushu and possibly more in other villages, decapitating many of the victims and taking the heads as trophies.

The Japanese last night occupied Mushu only after beating off two attacks by the savages. Neighboring tribes indicated that the principal Taiyal grievance was forced labor on the roads under Japanese direction, with little or no pay.

Mack McCracken Is Morale Custodian

"Right this way, mustard plaster—ten cents, one dime, a tenth of a dollar."

This patter was not given by a costermonger as he stood among his crates of tomatoes, bananas and vegetables, but by Mack McCracken as he wandered about the lavish setting of the little theatre stage.

Mack, well known to little theatre goers, is an inimitable clown. It is a bit of work to make him up for characterization. He wriggles like a schoolboy and cracks jokes and otherwise keeps the cast agog at his antics.

Aside from being the leading man in "Aren't We All?" which is to be played at the Yuca theatre tonight, Mack aids the cast through the agency of discharging well his self appointed title of "Custodian of Morale."

Mack has played several leads with the little theatre group here. In the north he once fell heir to a role where he had to sing eight solos in an opera. His stock was boomed by a group of prangsters and, to his surprise, he accepted the part when approached by the director.

"They tried all brands on me, but none improved my voice," he explained.

In plays he has done everything from peeling potatoes to walking the plank as a buccaner. In the play tonight he will wish at times he could walk the plank.

Rough Ranchman Protests Action

Prayer was offered when it was announced Rev. Leslie Boone was not to return to Midland, and it was sincere prayer that he might return.

The Lions club was almost indignant when it learned the beloved Methodist pastor and Lions Club president was not to return to Midland.

The chamber of commerce in which he worked was disturbed and keenly regretful. The Methodist church was the worst hit and, of course, the most keenly disappointed. In fact, the whole city was sorrowful.

But the most expressive and sincerest expression of all was made by a rough and ready cowman.

"You say we ain't goin' to get our little preacher back?" "Aw, hell, I liked him better than any preacher I've heard in that church in a long time. And the cowman walked away disgusted because Leslie Boone is going to leave Midland.

B. FRANK HAAG F. STUBBEMAN LAW PARTNERS

The law firm of Haag & Stubbeman was announced this morning, to be composed of B. Frank Haag and Frank Stubbeman. In the formation of this partnership one of Midland's oldest attorneys from standpoint of service and Midland's youngest attorney will be joined together in the practice of law.

During the past six months Stubbeman has been in the employ of Haag, and the partnership is the result of the close business relationship.

Haag has practiced law in this city for almost 15 years. His business has taken him to many surrounding towns, where he has a wide acquaintance. He has given much of his time to Midland's welfare. His name has been closely linked with the city's development of the past number of years. He recently served Midland as mayor and is now a member of the school board.

Frank Stubbeman, the junior member of the firm, has been practicing law for a year and a half. For nearly a year before moving to Midland he practiced law in San Angelo, first with Judge Charles Gibbs and then with the firm of Gibbs & Lewis. Prior to his admittance to the bar he attended the University of Texas, where in 1926 he completed the work of a bachelor of arts degree, the study of government constituting his major work that degree. In 1929 he received the degree of bachelor of laws from the same institution. For three years he was a member of the University of Texas debating squad, and while a senior law student he was captain of the squad. The same year he was awarded the $100 debate prize (See FRANK HAAG page 6)

MORE THAN $1,000 TAKEN FROM HALL BY ROBBERY PAIR

FORT WORTH, Oct. 30. (UP)—Between $1,000 and $1,500 were obtained in a daylight robbery of the Southern Domino hall downtown shortly after 10 a. m. today.

Two men went into the hall, held up a dozen players and searched them, getting the money, according to reports to the police.

Cullen, hall manager, said that he lost $250.

Rotary Club Acts On Boone Departure

Resolutions thanking the Rev. Leslie A. Boone for his service as a citizen while residing in Midland were passed today by unanimous vote of the Rotary club upon announcement of his departure to Harlingen to be pastor of the First Methodist church there.

Boone, one of the speakers on the program today, spoke on scientific advancement by reason of work of master minds, and he made an appeal for the maximum effort and service by all citizens.

Boone was introduced by Paul T. Vickers who eulogized his services and usefulness while a citizen of Midland.

W. I. Pratt spoke briefly on business confidence, bringing out features of the program carried on over the nation last week by Lions clubs. He suggested that employers who plan to retain their employees should tell the latter of this intention, eliminating much of the unnecessary anxiety of the present day among wage earners and promoting better business.

Mrs. George T. Abell, at invitation of the program committee, appeared as a guest and made announcements pertaining to the Little Theatre play to be given tonight at the Yuca Theatre. John Bonner supplemented these announcements.

A. B. Anderson announced the convention of West Texas lumbermen to be held here November 14 and 15 and asked for cooperation of business men entertaining and welcoming the 150 or more guests.

B. Frank Haag urged a large attendance at the football game Saturday afternoon between Midland and Wink on the local field.

Scared "Bogey" Man, Boy Lets Rat Eat Face

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 30. (P)—When Recio Vargas, 6, awakened during the night to find a huge wood rat gnawing on his face, he did not call out because he thought the rat was the "bogey man" and would get him if he made any noise. He covered his head to ward off the attack.

Midland to Sill Air Route Seen

A new airways route will be strip mapped by Lieuts. Harold G. Peterson and Elvin F. Mughan next year, when the men begin work on the Midland to Fort Sill, Okla., sky-way, dispatches out of El Paso say.

Another route to be strip mapped is the southern transcontinental which will extend from Montgomery, Ala., to Monroe and Shreveport, La., and thence to Dallas, Midland and El Paso, via Pecos.

The officers will map a route from Fort Sill, the artillery post of the army, to Midland, so that a better junction with the transcontinental route will be made.

Contracts have been let for construction work on the El Paso to Fort Worth division of the transcontinental line. H. G. Eastridge of Odessa received one of the contracts, which provided for construction of a field and erection of a fence.

QUAKE IN ITALY LEAVES DEATH, INJURY IN WAKE

ANCONA, Italy, Oct. 30. (P)—Twenty seven are known killed and 150 injured in an earthquake which shook the Adriatic coast today. It was believed that casualties would increase as towns in the area so far not reporting were contacted.

Practically every house in this city of 50,000 persons was damaged. Senigallia reported 20 dead and 100 hurt. Marche province reported five dead and upward of 50 injured. Naples and Rome felt the shocks but were not seriously affected. Troops were sent to aid the suffering.

DOUBLE PENALTY HITS WEST TEXAS TO HURT AREA

SAN ANGELO, Oct. 30.—Double penalties have been heaped on a few Texas counties through fate and design—the pink boll worm and university lands.

It's just a coincidence that the pink boll worm quarantine area hits the counties which have university tax-exempted lands, but that post and the resulting quarantine is advanced as a reason why voters of Texas should favor the university land amendment and thus help to ease the burden the counties are bearing to the good of all of Texas.

The pink boll quarantine is costly and troublesome to West Texas counties, acting as a buffer to prevent the spread of the pink boll worm. Some of the counties in that quarantine area also bear the cost of public improvements that compound university land values and get not a cent from that area.

Representative Penrose B. Metcalfe, author of the amendment, points out that the counties of Andrews, Ector, Crane, Upton and Reagan, all holding university land, were hopeful of escaping the quarantine, which state officials continued last week. The older pink boll worm area includes El Paso, Ward and Pecos counties, which also have university lands.

EDITOR BURIED

DENISON, Oct. 30. (P)—Funeral services for Henry E. Ellis, retired newspaper editor, were held here today at 2:30. Burial will be at Groesbeck tomorrow.

The editor died yesterday after a long illness.

WOOD BOUGHT LEARNING

PIERPONT, O. (UP)—Old records in the possession of Edward Williams disclose that the weekly salary of the teacher for this county's first consolidated school was $125. The school was founded in 1834. One half a cord of wood was accepted in payment for tuition.

Pawning Children Latest Racket in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Oct. 30. (P)—Pawning of babies is the latest money borrowing racket in San Antonio.

Jobless parents, unable to seek work elsewhere because of shortage of money, are leaving their children as pledges with money-lenders to get cash for job hunting according to Miss Lucy Smithers, secretary of the San Antonio Child Protective and Humane society.

Wins Divorce

Charging Michael Cudahy, youthful heir to the millions of the packing king, with nagging her so much that she nearly had a breakdown, Muriel Cudahy has won a divorce in the Los Angeles courts. Mrs. Cudahy, formerly Muriel Evans of the films, married young Cudahy a year ago last July. This picture shows her in court.

RED CROSS FUND BEING RAISED IN MINE BLAST AREA

MCLESTER, Oct. 30. (UP)—As individual funeral services were being held today for 29 men who were killed when an explosion wrecked No. 4 of the Wheatley coal mine, Red Cross officials started a campaign to raise $25,000 to care for families of the victims.

Relatives were not eligible to receive compensation from the Oklahoma Industrial commission because of the flaw in the industrial insurance act, state officials.

Bodies of the victims were indistinguishable when carried from the mine last night. They were identified by metal discs carried in their pockets.

Does She Do You That Way, Sumner?

Charlotte Cragin once belonged to the Breckenridge little theatre. Possibly that accounts for the way she handles that arch clown Mack McCracken in tonight's performance of Lonsdale's "Aren't We All?" The Breckenridge organization is one of the finest in the state and the little theatre actor who is enabled to play with the group is fortunate.

The plot tonight revolves about her, as she makes men of two continents love her. As the feminine lead, she enters a case strangely like that in the comic section of "Boots and Her Buddies." She is the girl who gets men into jams and then lets them work their own way out. More than that, she is not delicate about giving them a wee shove back into the macintosh of their own crossed convictions.

If she can manage Sumner, her real husband, like she does McCracken, play husband, poor Sumner!

AS SEQUEL TURNS GUN ON HIMSELF

Kills Wife, Wounds Daughter Who Was Asleep

HOUSTON, Oct. 30. (UP)—A. E. Hart, 38, former lieutenant of infantry, worried and depressed because he had no regular job, wiped out his family and himself today when he shot his wife, Helen, 36, as she slept, fatally wounded his daughter, Vivian, 13, and then turned his gun on himself.

A revolver was found two feet from the man's head as he lay on the floor beside his child's bed. It has been fired three times.

Justice Campbell overstreet returned a verdict of murders of wife and child and suicide of man.

The bodies were found by Mrs. W. M. Rosenthal who lives above the Hart apartment.

HOUSTON, Oct. 30. (P)—Hart, 38, who fatally shot his wife and daughter as they slept, and then shot himself through the head, was a refrigerator salesman.

Mrs. Hart recently told some neighbors that they were "up against it" financially.

The family was shot with a pistol Hart borrowed yesterday from A. L. Atwood, saying he wanted "to do some pistol practice with a doctor."

Hart's father is E. O. Hart, wealthy Chicago realtor.

CLAIREMONT JURY ASSESSES FRITTS DEATH PENALTY

CLAIREMONT, Oct. 30. (P)—A jury here today gave Will Fritts the death penalty on charges of the fatal shooting of D. W. Hamilton at Hamilton's home near Rochester on October 24, 1928. The case came here on venue change.

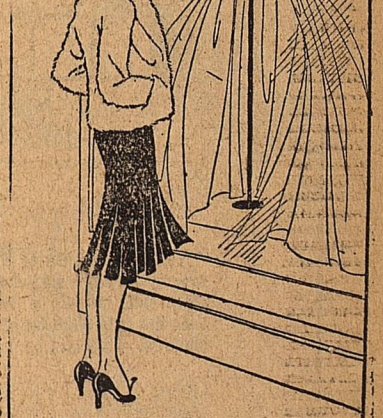

Earl Hamilton, son of D. W. Hamilton, was shot dead at the same time. Fritts claimed self defense following an argument starting when Fritts upbraided the young Hamilton for testifying against him at a previous liquor trial.

Mexia Hotel Burns, 20 Escape Death

MEXIA, Oct. 30. (UP)—Twenty guests narrowly escaped death when the Rosemead hotel, a two story building erected during the oil boom days, burned early today. All occupants were accounted for.

The loss was estimated at $10,000.

THAT COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Chamber of commerce directors, in voting to hold again this year Midland's community Christmas program, acted wisely. Especially were they wise in view of the depression talk that is somewhat exaggerated here.

When the community Christmas program was inaugurated, with the system of street decoration, colored lights, Christmas trees along the walks and in the principal street intersections, Midland was in the throes of its fastest growth period, if not in a boom. Then it was easy to create the Christmas spirit and people needed little impetus to induce them to spend freely.

This year, the Christmas decorations and the Christmas spirit accompanying them, are for the express purpose of creating in Midland as early as possible the holiday atmosphere for the benefit of Midland people and those who visit here. It is not so much an inducement to spend Christmas money as it is to catch the holiday spirit early and spend wisely. It is easier to conserve Christmas money by starting early, with a budget, than to start out after the goods have been picked over when it may necessitate spending more than was intended.

THE SENSE OF GLAMOUR

When a man starts regretting the passing of the good old days, and begins to remark that nothing is quite as fine nowadays as it used to be, it is a fair sign that he is getting old. Nevertheless, even a young man can spot one or two ways in which the modern world has fallen below the level of the world of his grandfather.

Life has grown easier and safer, and in most ways this has been all to the good; but there has departed, somehow, something of that sense of glamour that used to surround and make like a richer and brighter affair than it is today.

Captain John W. Thomason, Jr., that talented officer of United States marines, recently wrote a biography of Jeb Stuart that illustrates the matter perfectly.

Jeb Stuart was Lee's chief of cavalry in the Civil War. He was a cavalry officer in the days when the cavalry was the cavalry, when a general took his chances along with the buck privates, and war still had an overtone from the age of chivalry; and merely looking at his portrait, as Captain Thomason gives it, is enough to emphasize the passing of the sense of glamour.

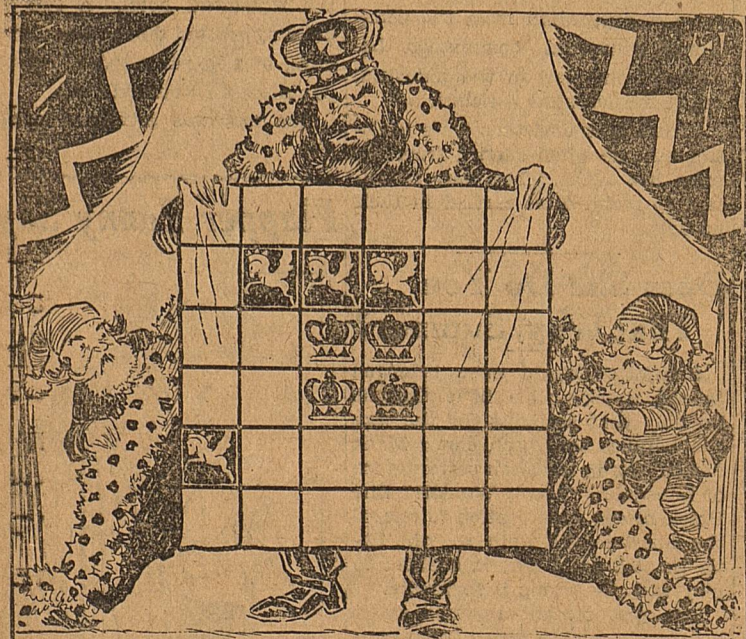

Look at the man's picture—a young man, with a flowing tawny beard, dressed in immaculate Confederate gray, wearing always a gay plume in his hat and gold spurs on his great cavalry boots, with a yellow silk sash about his waist and a gray cape lined with red silk that fluttered in the breeze when he galloped into action at the head of a thundering line of yelling horsemen, sabres aloft. He had a dash and fire of one of the children of romance. He wore a red rose in his lapel, sang rollicking songs when he slouched at ease in the saddle, and he died at last on the battlefield, a world-famous general at the age of 32.

Merely reading about the man quickens one's pulse, but he would be a lost and archaic misfit today. Generals do not gallop into action in this efficient era, nor do they wear plumed hats and red-lined capes. He was a type brought forth by a different generation. We cannot duplicate him.

It is all very well to say that plumes and bright spurs are unimportant. It is hard to live by bread alone; and among those things which nourish without filling the belly is this elusive, intangible aura of romance which the bright riders of the old days bore with them. Jeb Stuart furnished a masterpiece in the art of living; and, like all works of art, his career can lift the beholder out of himself and persuade him that man has, somewhere within him, a streak of divinity.

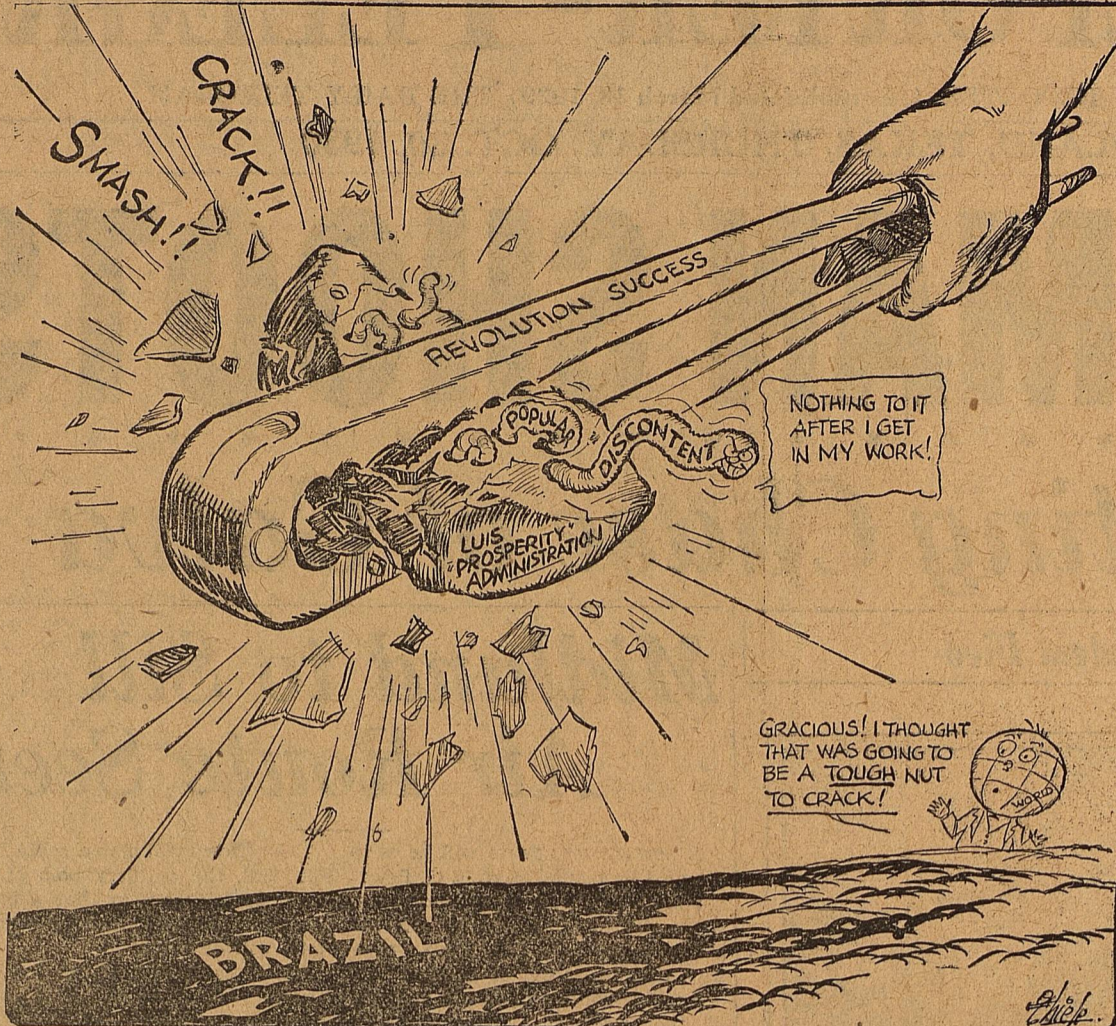

That is the sort of thing we have lost. And yet—have we really lost it, or has it only changed its guise? Was there not, a few years ago, a slim Viking who soared across a dark ocean in a silver monoplane, and brought high adventure down from the clouds for us? Perhaps, after all, a mechanical age can evolve its own romance. Let us hope so. We cannot live without it.

The Situation in a Brazil Nutshell!

White Russian Chief Was Kidnapped Says Detective

By MINOTT SAUNDERS, NEA Service Writer.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—The mystery of the strange disappearance of General Koutepoff, White Russian leader, from the heart of Paris nine months ago, may yet be solved through the efforts of Vladimir Bourtzeff, elderly Russian journalist here who has had a notable career as a criminal investigator.

Bourtzeff has told the French police, who have never ceased trying to trace Koutepoff, that he expects soon to be able to prove that Koutepoff was kidnaped by agents of the Cheka, Soviet secret police, but that he died outside of Paris from heart failure brought on by chloroform administered to keep him quiet. He claims to have a confession of the crime from Andre Fikner, formerly councillor at the Soviet Embassy in Berlin, who fled from his post and is now in hiding rather than to obey orders to return to Moscow and face the consequences.

The Koutepoff drama created a sensation here and gave the police a problem as baffling in many ways as the police of New York and Chicago face with the operations of gangsters. The few witnesses who were found were unreliable and Soviet officials and sympathizers claimed to know nothing about the case.

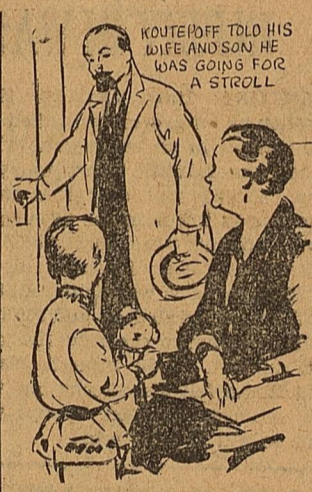

Sworn Deposition Awaited Bourtzeff says now that, after unfruitful work, he has the true story of the daring political crime from Fikner, who was detailed by the Cheka to "get" Koutepoff. The original confession was only verbal, and without witnesses, but Bourtzeff claims Fikner promised a sworn deposition as soon as he reached a safe retreat.

According to the confession, quoted by Bourtzeff, the Soviets had become alarmed at the activities of Koutepoff who, as the White Russian military leader, was successfully organizing his forces in countries to which the old-line Russians had fled, particularly France. Cheka agents, under Fikner, were ordered to bring Koutepoff alive to Russia, where he could be forced to reveal the names of his agents and their plans.

Koutepoff was put off his guard by a telegram from Fikner requesting a conference with agents of a White Russian society with which he had been in contact. The meeting place was a street corner near Koutepoff's home in a quiet residential district in Paris.

Killed by Chloroform At the appointed hour about midday of January 26, a Sunday when the streets were deserted, a car drove up bearing three men, one of whom resembled a loyal czarist known to Koutepoff. The general fell into the trap and got into the car. When he realized his mistake, there was a struggle, but a handkerchief saturated with chloroform was pressed to his face and he was held down until he lost consciousness. When attempts were made outside the city to revive him it was discovered that he had died. The body was smuggled out of France to Germany, and ultimately reached Moscow.

Bourtzeff says that Fikner named as accomplices Dr. Eysel Goldenstein and three other Czechs, Gelfand, Erbet and Janovitch. Fikner is further quoted as saying that all concerned by the Soviets except himself and one other, who is now in Moscow. Presumably they were punished for bungling the job. Fikner was also called back, but with reason to be apprehensive of his fate he deserted and fled. In this respect he followed the example of other Soviet servants, notably Gregory Bessedowsky, who occupied a similar position in the Paris Embassy, and is still here, after refusing a recall order, and has placed himself under the protection of the French police.

Nine months after the sensational disappearance in Paris of General Koutepoff, above, leader of the White Russian enemies of the Soviet, an amateur criminal investigator claims to have secured a confession indicating that secret agents from Russia kidnaped and accidentally caused the death of the general. The alleged confession agrees in most respects with evidence already secured by French police.

The Bourtzeff disclosures have caused renewed activity on the part of the police to clear up the Koutepoff mystery. They are carefully checking his story with information at hand, but remain skeptical, although Bourtzeff is known as a man not inclined to rashness in his work.

Trace of Limousine Lost The fact remains that nothing reliable has been heard of Koutepoff since the day he left his home, telling his wife and small son he was going for a stroll and would return shortly. The police were able to trace a gray limousine, similar to one seen in the street of the crime, to a point several miles outside of Paris, but there the scant was lost. One theory was that the victim was taken aboard a Soviet steamer off a deserted point on the Normandy coast. In this connection a man and a woman, clandestine lovers who were keeping a rendezvous beside the sea late that afternoon, came forward on the promise that their names would not be revealed and told the police that they saw a gray car drive to the beach and the occupants carrying a bundle that looked like it might contain a man's body to a small boat that suddenly appeared. After taking on the bundle the boat made all speed down the coast to a steamer that could be dimly seen in the haze.

No motive for the disappearance of Koutepoff, other than that he was spirited away by political enemies, has ever been reasonably advanced. Nationalistic newspapers here openly accused the Cheka of the crime and if the police can ultimately prove that Soviet agents were responsible, diplomatic explanations will almost certainly be demanded.

FOOD DOCTORS PARIS.—At an ultra-modern restaurant here, you do not receive a menu. All you receive are penetrating looks from what appears to be the head waiter. After he has looked at you for some time he calls two assistants and they look at you, after which all three go into consultation. Then, without a word from you, they bring you in a meal. They are "food diagnosticians," and they don't bring you what you want, but what they think is your food affinity.

Daily Washington Letter By Rodney Dutcher

Fickle Dame Rumor Says Wickersham Commission Will Recommend, in Effect, Light Wines and Beer—But One Guess Is as Good as Another, and Almost Anything May Happen

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The impression grows that the Wickersham Commission, otherwise known as the President's National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement, will come along one of these days with a report which will recommend, in effect, light wines and beer.

Your correspondent puts that forth as a matter of common report rather than as a prediction. The commission has said and done so many funny things, both collectively and individually—not forgetting that individual, Chairman George W. Wickersham—that your correspondent is little short of delighted to leave predictions about the commission to them as cares to make 'em.

In speculating about this commission one doesn't feel just like depending on the premise that all known facts point to the theory that the commission will suggest modification of the Volstead act. Of course, all the known facts do.

But, in all seriousness, there are several splendid minds among the membership and when you get such a group of acknowledge intellects accompanied by strong prejudices you are likely to get almost anything when everybody gets together and tries to make a report with recommendations.

Can't Ignore Report Assuming that the reader is impartial on the subject of prohibition—which certainly establishes a new record of optimism in assumptions—one makes bold to suggest that a definitely moist recommendation from the commission would cause a great deal of commotion. It simply can't be ignored. Even President Hoover couldn't ignore it. It's his commission, it includes several so-called "best minds" and it is dealing with a great national problem.

Everybody knows that Hoover isn't either a fanatical wet or a fanatical dry. It can be stated with confidence that the president is for whatever he thinks is best for the country and for the Republican party and for the success of the party ticket in 1932.

In passing the commission's report along to Congress, Mr. Hoover can endorse it, remain non-committal or make adverse comment. Assuming that the commission is somewhat less than completely dry in its suggestions, the subsequent attitude of the president becomes a lively subject of speculation. Nobody knows, apparently, just what he would do.

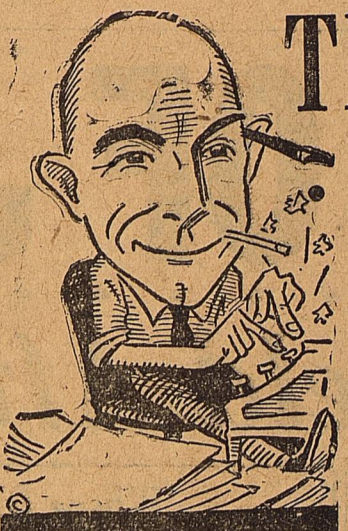

A great many persons are convinced that there are enough "Hoover men" on the commission—such as Wickersham and Judge Kenneth Mackintosh of Washington—to make sure that the majority attitude is not unsatisfactory to the president.

Even so, Mr. Hoover might pass the anticipated report along to Congress without comment, as the deliberate and carefully considered opinion of a distinguished and studious group of public servants.

Many Problems Involved Those who have watched the commission most closely—whether they have taken it seriously or otherwise—think that it will suggest that the Volstead act be amended to allow the various states to define the term "intoxicating beverage."

According to this belief, the commission is unlikely to suggest any tinkering with the eighteenth amendment. But, if the recommendation were carried out in legislation, those states where Volstead act enforcement is difficult—or impossible—would be allowing themselves light wines and real beer and those states which are really dry would continue to go along on near-beer and illicit products.

That proposition wouldn't appeal to the organized dries or to the organized wets—who are now all yelling for repeal of the eighteenth amendment. But it might look attractive to Mr. Hoover as he thinks of 1932. If he were publicly to throw the whole thing into the lap of Congress, announcing that decision on the commission's recommendations was entirely up to the people as their will might be expressed through their chosen representatives, he might be able to avoid making

The Town Quack

Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.

Did you go to the circus? If so, did you see a circus? I went, but I'm still wondering. Is it because I'm old or are the circuses we see now—a days inferior to those we used to see when we were boys? Could it be that those clowns yesterday were not so funny or is it because I am getting old and cynical and can't laugh unless there's a peculiar touch to the wise-crack? Anyway, I'm not satisfied, even though I went in on a pass. It wouldn't have been so bad if they had not required pass holders to pay a dime extra with each pass. The dime really represented about what the show was worth to me and I feel like they shouldn't have made me present the pass with it. Did you accept a pillow when you went in? If so, how did you feel when the next man collected two-bits for it? And then how did you feel after sitting on it? I can tell you. Just about like you would have felt if you hadn't had a pillow.

Now don't get the idea that I'm griped about that circus. I just can't get used to seeing an outfit get away with charging 25 cents for babes in arms and charging school kids 25 cents after telling them they have been given a half pass. If they had charged the children 15 cents and said nothing about the pass I might have said nothing about the children getting robbed, because some of them would pay that much to see the inside of the tent. When I got home I started to wash up but my wife said, "Haven't you just been to a washout?"

I'll have to admit that that trained seal was a good actor. If they had some humans in the circus that could act in the same proportion, they would be vastly better off. When it comes to the animal show, you'll have to admit that they have as fine a fleet of General Motors trucks as ever paraded through the streets of Midland.

Enough about the circus. I heard it belonged to General Motors. If it doesn't now, I imagine it will soon. Did you ever see an outfit buy so many trucks, evidently all at about the same time.

What I feel badly about is that I didn't know until this morning that yesterday was Bob Blevins' birthday.

Think that it will suggest that the Volstead act be amended to allow the various states to define the term "intoxicating beverage."

Of course, it is quite likely that the president isn't sure just what he will do in 1932, but it is dead certain that he is giving the matter plenty of thought.

It may occur to some readers that your correspondent has been slouching around trying to discover just what kind of a report the commission is going to make on prohibition and just what sort of an attitude the president is going to take. And that your correspondent hasn't had complete success.

YOUR CHILDREN by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON © 1930 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.
The baby's emotions develop just as his senses do, and with the same likeness to that of other babies. The emotions with which the baby is probably born are fear and rage, and possibly love. During the first six months he shows fear by:
1 to 6 weeks: a convulsive reaction to loud sounds.
12 to 16 weeks: signs of fear on seeing strangers.
1 to 6 weeks: struggling and crying if held so that he cannot move as he wants to.
12 to 16 weeks: crying and growing stiff if he is made to lie down when he wants to sit up. He is not born with obedience, this little tyrant of ours.
When Love Appears
Signs of a development of love are:
1 to 6 weeks: smiling and showing signs of contentment when touched on the lips.
7 weeks: smiling in response to the voice and nodding.
8 weeks and following: showing signs of pleasure in looking at new objects.
12 to 16 weeks: laughing aloud when played with (trumped or tossed gently).
21 weeks: laughing aloud at sudden sounds accompanied by sudden motion.
During the second six months his emotions become a little more complex:
7 1-2 months: the child shows signs of great joy at the sight of his carriage or hat.
At 8 months he may hang his head and show signs of embarrassment if his attempts to make sounds are imitated. He often refuses to continue.
By 8 3-4 months he will cry repeatedly if laughed at.

MIDLAND BELIEVED TO BE STRONGER MACHINE THAN WINK TEAM

WIN SHOULD PLACE MIDLAND AS THREAT

Midland is potentially three touchdowns better than Wink, say those who have watched the two clubs. But Wink is almost certain to score on Midland, they add.

The two schools play each other Saturday afternoon in Lackey stadium, beginning at 2:30.

Several oil scouts and former college football men have seen Wink play three games this season.

"The team is as fast as any high school eleven I ever saw," one of them said. "The quarterback is a polished streak and will score with a sack of flour strapped to his back unless he is swarmed. He hits the line with the ball in both hands, wriggles free, shakes a mean hip, brings up his knees into his belly and gets down a broken field like nobody's business."

On the other hand, there are those who like the work of Burris better.

"Burris is just as fast as the Winkler streak," one said. "He is possibly faster. There is little difference in the two men when it comes to being sensational. Both are great little ball toters and they may stage a ground gaining duel in the Saturday game."

Others found more analogy in the Wink quarter's running with the play of Hallman, Fryar or Midkiff. "There is one thing certain," one of these belief said. "It would be hard to pick out the best back on the Midland squad. The backfield is uniform in size and speed, after a fashion, and is dangerous enough with its versatile men."

It is likely that Fryar will be started at quarter for Midland, Midkiff at full and Hallman and Burris or Capt. Parker at halves. Midkiff, who showed sensational stuff in the Odessa game, will find the colder weather more to his liking. He is not adapted to hard running on hot days, but gets his ears pinned back on hog killin' days.

The morale of the squad appeared to be excellent yesterday. Barry sent his charges to the shower earlier than usual, so that the lads might go see the monkeys and elephants under the big top park somewhere around the D street sector. The team went through the afternoon practice with animation. Everyone was grinning and chattering in the dressing room as though in fine condition and fettle.

Midland has perfected its pass defense and may be dangerous in chunking the pellet. Fryar, Burris, Straughan and Hallman can peg the oval where it is needed, and make it sing as it rides. If the ends can get the butter off their fingers in time for the Wink game the air attack may result in Wink going home at the end of a sour afternoon.

If Midland wins the Wink contest, the team should be considered championship calibre. Wink clearly outplayed Pecos last Saturday, although it lost by a single point. Over in the

Four Horsemen of Notre Dame Are Nightmares of 1930

OLD COMBINATION NOT BETTER THAN NEW

By WILLIAM BRAUCHER
NEA Service Sports Editor

Did you say the Four Horsemen of Notre Dame have gone? Crowley, Miller, Layden and Stuhldreher were graduated years and years ago? They took coaching jobs, and they don't play the backfield for Notre Dame any more?

Well, now, that's odd. The Four Horsemen have gone? There's something funny about that. And they have been gone for years and years?

Why, they were out there just the other day! I watched them kick and pass and run, and for a while forgot that I was sitting in a magnificent new stadium. Thought I was out there on old Cartier Field. It all seemed very real, too. You could hear their hoofs thudding on the sod.

Harry Stuhldreher was there. He crouched down behind the center, Adams Walsh, and you could hear his sharp staccato commands to the waiting backs. I saw him kick the ball. Remember his kicks? Just one out of bounds on the enemy's five-yard line. Just as though he carried the ball or threw it there!

Frank Carideo is playing quarterback for Notre Dame? Is he short and stocky? Does he look like Stuhldreher? Surely, there's some mistake!

Jimmy Crowley was out there in that backfield the day I saw them. Nobody could pass like Crowley could, not even Barry Wood. Maybe Benny Friedman was almost as good. But just as sure as you're born, Crowley was out there passing the other day. I saw him run back and dodge and survey the field calmly, just as he did in the old days, and then let 'er fly. And Chuck Collins caught it, 35 yards away.

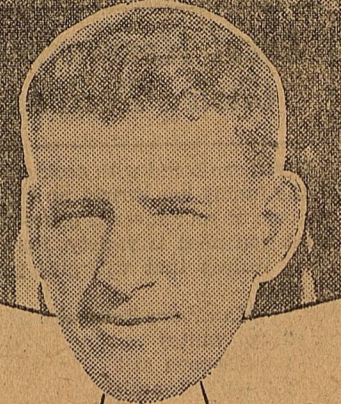

Marchmont Schwartz is throwing those passes now—Who the devil is Marchmont Schwartz? You're not kidding me now, are you, man?

Maybe you think I was only seeing things. But wait until I tell you about Elmer Layden. I know I can't be wrong about this. He went other end of the district there are two strong clubs, McCamey and Marfa that will have to be reckoned with later by the club that wins in this half of the district. It was Marfa last year who met the Doggies in the intra-district play-off, and it looks as if this club might be the one this year, inasmuch as McCamey's ineligibility charges have not been settled before the state interscholastic committee. If Midland can beat Wink it is believed that Pecos will be just another hard game and that the Dogs will finish on top.

around left end, galloping at full tilt. Three guys hit him. He spun like a kid's toy top, whirled and dashed for 18 years off right tackle. He was dragging two men along with him.

The guards and tackles were tearing up that line. Galloping Elmer went right through. After four guys hit him he kept on. The quarterback ran over to cut him off. He jabbed that quarterback right out of there.

But Jumping Joe Savoldi is Rocke's chief line bucker this year? There's something funny about that! Did he play Saturday? And after that touchdown, was it Carideo who kicked goal? It looked like Layden who kicked that ball to me. It was his style.

I saw Don Miller make an end run. Certainly it was in the new stadium! Stuhldreher, Crowley and Layden went right with him. I saw these men block and I know what I'm talking about. The end and the defensive halfbacks went down like ten pins. Somebody grabbed Miller around the waist and he whirled and there the tackler nine feet. I saw Don's legs churning. It looked like he had forty or fifty legs, they were moving so fast.

Marty Brill is on the backfield this year? On Notre Dame's first team? Well, how can that be! There's something funny about all this!

BRITISH FINISH THREE GIANTS OF THE ATMOSPHERE

LONDON, Oct. 30. (UP).—Bit by bit new facts about the two large sea-going aircraft soon to be used by the Royal Air Force experimental base for marine aircraft at Felixstowe are becoming known.

The Short "valetta," said to be the largest float seaplane in the world, flies almost daily over the River Medway at Rochester.

It is now known that the "Valetta" has flown at a little more than 140 miles an hour and has carried a total load, including the structure, of more than ten tons.

Seventeen thousand feet is given as the ceiling for this big three-motored plane. The range with a maximum load on board is placed at 520 miles. Air-cooled radial engines of 490 h. p. each furnish the craft with tremendous power and speed.

The other partner in the new British flying couple is the Blackburn "Sydney," a military flying boat with three moderately super-charged water-cooled Rolls-Royce 500 h. p. engines. This craft is also a monoplane and is designed in a slightly different form as a flying boat air liner. With the exception of the fabric covering is built entirely of metal. Nine tons constitute the total weight of the loaded aircraft which cruises at a speed of about 100 miles an hour. The craft can cruise from four to eight hours, depending on the load carried.

UNIVERSITY REGENTS WANT TO BE ABLE TO INVEST FUNDS IN WHATEVER BONDS WILL MAKE THE MOST MONEY

By PAUL BOLTON

AUSTIN, Oct. 30. (AP)—Visionary dreams of a magnificent University of Texas campus, surpassing any the nation boasts, indirectly led regents of the university to sponsor one of five amendments to the state constitution which will be voted upon at the November elections.

Ultimately, this campus would have been completed, with the rich proceeds from oil which for so many years rested unknown beneath the broad acres of West Texas. Whether or not the amendment is approved by a majority of the Texas electorate, the building program will go on; but it will be seriously hampered unless regents are allowed more latitude in investing university funds.

Oil revenues from University of Texas lands—which started flowing the black gold in 1923—go into the permanent fund of the university, there to accumulate interest. This interest may be used in the construction of buildings.

To safeguard university funds, framers of the Texas constitution specified that funds of the state school should be invested only in state or United States securities.

There are very few state bonds outstanding, this making necessary investment of the funds in government bonds.

The amendment to the constitution would do away with this restriction, allowing the regents to invest, not only in federal or state bonds, but in bonds of counties, schools, cities, or "in obligations and pledges issued by the board of regents, or secured by such obligations or pledges, for construction of dormitories and other buildings," or in bonds issued under the federal farm loan act.

This would allow the regents a wide latitude in their investments, and it is this very latitude which has raised criticism.

R. L. Batts, chairman of the board of regents, pointed out that of approximately $15,000,000 of the permanent fund now invested, at interest rates averaging about 3 3/4 per cent, $11,722,900 will be callable in October, 1933. This sum is invested in fourth issue Liberty bonds, paying 4 1/4 per cent interest. That sum must be reinvested in 1933, and Judge Batts fears that it will not be possible, with the money market continuing its present trend, to obtain a greater return than 2 1/2 per cent on government securities that year, thus appreciably cutting into the building revenue.

Critics of the proposed amendment have stressed the possibility of the regents issuing building bonds as an undesirable feature.

George B. Terrell, state commissioner of agriculture, and nominee for state legislature, declared that to all the regents to issue building bonds might mean the eventual destruction of the permanent fund.

Terrell's interpretations that the provision allowing regents to invest funds in "obligations and pledges" of their own creation would allow them to issue building bonds, and Terrell believes the fund would be dissipated in this manner in a short space of years.

The university's building plan calls for the expenditure of about $10,000,000 in the next few years. There is available for building nearly $1,000,000 a year, according to Terrell, and the fund upon which the interest is drawn, is fast increasing.

Terrell's analysis does not, however, take into consideration the fear of the board of regents that the interest rate on federal securities will be lower and the premium to obtain those securities higher in the next few years.

In the event of failure of the amendment, one source has suggested that should the state issue road bonds, that might prove a more profitable investment for the university.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Stickler Solution

The above sketch shows how the king cut his banner into four pieces of exactly the same size and shape, and each containing a flying steed and crown. Two of the pieces are shaded to make the solution clear.

FACTS OF LAND AMENDMENT; C. C. SUPPORTS THEM

Facts relating to taxation of university land which the Midland chamber of commerce, the West Texas chamber, most of the big Texas dailies and the Legislature of Texas favor through the passage of an amendment in the November election follow:

"The republic of Texas in 1839 gave for the establishment and endowment of the University of Texas 221,400 acres of land situated in the present counties of Cooke, Fannin, Grayson, Hunt, Collin, Lamar, McLeland, Shackelford and Callahan. By 1876 practically all this land had been sold and invested in bonds and land notes to the amount of $634,600. The income from this investment has returned to the university from $40,000 to $22,686 (last year) for its available funds. These lands, being disposed of, now pay their part of local taxes.

"The present constitution when adopted in 1876 set aside 1,000,000 acres of the public domain for a permanent endowment of the University. These lands were surveyed in 1879 in Tom Green, Crockett, Upton, Reagan, Pecos, Terrell, Schleicher and Irion counties. In 1883, the Legislature added an additional 1,000,000 acres situated in Andrews, Ward, Hudspeith, Martin, Winkler, Crane, Upton, Culberson, Ector and El Paso counties. None of these last 2,000,000 acres have been sold and it is this property and these seventeen counties which the university Land amendment affects.

"With the present and the prospective oil and gas development in this territory there is now no prospect of these lands ever being sold. Surface leases of this property for a number of years have provided the University about $250,000 a year available income and, since oil was discovered, the university permanent fund has grown to $16,032,650.

"Other lands such as penitentiary holdings are taxed for county purposes; county owned school lands pay their prorata part of county taxes and these point only to the fairness of the proposed amendment effecting the university lands.

"We find these seventeen counties building court houses, highways, schools and other public improvements, as well as maintaining their county governments. These university lands contribute nothing to the cost of these benefits. The territory getting these free benefits is more than twenty times as large as Rockwell county and is greater than the total land area of the states of Rhode Island and Delaware.

"Adoption of the proposed amendment will not effect the university or its income in any way. It is proposed that the state tax board shall set the assessed valuation of the university lands and that the resulting taxes shall be paid to the several counties from the state treasury. This will prevent local authorities from placing excessive valuations upon these lands and will enable all of the 253 counties that are served by the university to pay this taxation instead of its being forced on these seventeen West Texas counties.

which is given annually by Lutzer Stark to the best debater on the university squad. He represented the University of Texas in six intercollegiate debates, one of which was an international debate with the University of Sydney, Australia. During his last year in school, in addition to his law studies and public speaking activities in the university, he held the position of debate coach in the Austin high school and coached one of that school's debate teams to a state championship in the interscholastic league contests.

Staubeman's legal training included the course of study on oil and gas which is offered by the University of Texas School of Law, and that course of study has been proving especially useful to him in his law practice.

Latest Cadets Drive Other Flyers Dizzy

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 30. (P).—Two entries in the new class at Kelly field are driving their companions dizzy. Instructors are annexing very recent gray hairs and the whole camp is upset.

Among the class of 60 cadets are Laurence Merrill Williams and Maurice Clark Williams, ready to begin their training in advanced flying after racing primary instruction at March field, Calif.

They are Kelly field's first twins. Their father, L. Milton Williams of Ventura, Calif., who visited the boys recently, told of giving one baby two baths in a case of mistaken identity when Laurence and Maurice were some 19 years younger than now. He vows that it is impossible for him to tell the boys apart.

SCIENCE TO THE AID OF PETROL; WORK ASSIGNED

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 30. (P).—Figuratively speaking, science is being called upon to aid in stopping something that it started for the petroleum industry.

The industry is attempting to undo, in a way, the progress of engineering research in bringing about an increase output of crude oil and its refined products, and that attempt has made a new assignment for technologists.

Proration of crude oil production, the practice to which the industry has turned for eliminating present over supplies of both the raw material and its refinements, is presenting new technical questions. For, to be satisfactory, proration must be accomplished without injuring producing wells or interfering with existing oil pools.

Leading production engineers say that conditions may vary in individual cases and that the effects of the shutting in of wells will have upon the ultimate production of the well or the field can be told only after the experiment has been tried. Producers, however, recognizing proration as a technical problem, have expressed confidence in the ability of engineering to protect their interests and generally are inclined to the belief that little damage will be done to their wells or leases.

Some engineers are of the opinion that shutting in of certain wells is the distinct benefit in that the method allows pressures underground to equalize with the result that water is held back from the hole and oil driven in by the movement of gas as well as by the pressures exerted on the water next to the oil. These engineers say that full production of such wells would hasten water encroachment, just how soon depending upon the location of the well upon the structure.

On the other hand, some engineers argue that deferred oil is never recovered. It is generally agreed that if the producing sand is flooded with water, the oil left behind cannot be recovered by any present known method of production.

But it is also agreed that if proper engineering practices are followed, water encroachment largely can be controlled.

The task proration has created for science is strangely in contrast with that which confronted it some years ago when the question of future supply was considered a significant problem. Since then vast improvement has been made much faster and more accurate, so that today, through the agency of science, the petroleum industry is in command of equipment and practices that make possible draining of vast stores of crude oil.

Productions from depths of 5,000 feet and below are nothing more than a dream 15 years ago. Today there is some production from as deep as 9,000 feet.

The opinion is held by leaders of the industry that if the present reservoirs of oil in the earth could be held intact for six or seven months and no new pools opened in the meantime, the industry would enter the summer of 1931 in a healthy condition.

Writing "lines" as a punishment for school boys was in vogue nearly 2,400 years ago.

SIX HAVE DEATH SENTENCE OVER GUILTY HEADS

HUNTSVILLE, Oct. 30. (P).—In the "house of the doomed" better known by the inmates as "death row," are lodged six men who have hanging over them the death penalty which will be carried out unless the governor intervenes or unless halted by court action. For the first time in several years a negro is not included among the "legion of the condemned." Monty Jackson, negro from Fort Bend county, was recently removed from the death house after Governor Moody had commuted his death sentence to life in prison on the eve of his execution.

Of the sextet now on death row, two are scheduled to die in November while the other four are awaiting outcomes of their cases which are pending before the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Luz R. Arcos, handsome Mexican, who was given the extreme penalty in Medina county for the slaying of three members of the Barrientes family on Christmas day, 1928, and who has been granted three respites by the governor is scheduled to "go over" November 7. Arcos was recently returned to Huntsville from a sanity hearing at Hondo, in which he was adjudged sane.

Following Arcos to the chair will be Jesse J. Maple who was condemned to die for the fatal shooting of Officers Fitzgerald and Phares in Houston the night of September 21. Maple was asked to be executed as soon as possible from the time he was arrested, declared he would not object to having his sentence commuted, when he arrived at death row. Maple will take the final march down the "one way corridor" November 18.

Ofilio Herrera who has been lingering around and watching men pass his cell to the chair for over a year, has again appealed his case. Herrera was given the death penalty for the murder of Sheriff A. T. Murray of Mason county in February, 1929. Herrera's first case was reversed when the indictment failed to include the phrase "malice aforethought."

Hess Tyler is the next longest occupant of death row. Tyler was convicted of the slaying of Bryan Noll, storekeeper in Hall county. According to the testimony at the trial Tyler was attempting to hi-jack Noll.

Ira McKee and Joe Shields are the latest additions to death row. McKee was sentenced to death for killing W. R. Billingsley of Sparenburg. McKee had held up a little store run by a widow and her son, and was interrupted by Billingsley, whom McKee then shot and killed, the testimony showed.

Joe Shields, based his defense on the grounds of insanity, at his trial for the slaying of his wife, Shields, after shooting his wife, who had left him to go to her parents' home, shot and killed her mother and father. The homicides occurred near Brooksmith in Brown county.

COUNTY GAINS TWO FARMS

MONTROSE. (UP).—The 1930 census listed only two farms for San Juan county. At the last census, it was the only county in Colorado which had no agricultural tracts.

Joe Seymour Gets To Be a Preacher

Joe Seymour stood shaking from the criticism of the play director. "You will never be able to act like a preacher if you try hard the rest of your life."

That was 12 years ago, in a northern city. Joe was in stock then. But he has come back, and will be seen on the stage of the little theatre tonight in the role of a vicar—and what a vicar.

Joe grew visibly embarrassed as he related the occasion when he impressed his director with his absolute failure to show the making of a minister.

"Joe, you must not act quite so sacerdotal. You are not an ascetic even if you are the best minister the little theatre has ever characterized." Play Director Mrs. George Abell was saying a little while later as Joe walked back and forth with a truly ministerial air.

That Joe appreciated the sally was evident. He stopped and shaded his eyes from the footlights and called to a news writer in the back of the house.

"That first director was cock-eyed, Joe, what?"

Joe is another of those seasoned veterans of the stage. He is versatile as versatility itself, and has one of the best voices ever heard on a little theatre stage.

Midland Butler Once a Lord

How would it feel to be a lord one week and a butler the next?

A Hughes Tool company man can tell you.

He was Lord Valentine last year; now he is Morton, a butler. He has only recently moved to Midland, but he is already a player in good standing with the little theatre. His role of Lord Valentine last year was a lead part and he is being ordered around the stage tonight in "Aren't We All?" just as he hounded the man, Snipes, in the production "Ancestral Arms."

Luce has a good speaking voice and drinks coffee. His aversion to tea is such that he carries the tea service far ahead of him—or is this because he was once a lord and feels superior to such things?

Crinoline to Lace Is Easy for Her

This thing of being a young girl in crinoline one month and a decrepit woman the next does not bother Mrs. J. G. Gemmill, who plays tonight with the little theatre.

She has more than once alternated roles during a theatre season, taking opposite types for characterization. She has been in Midland only a few months, moving here from Los Angeles. She began playing juvenile parts when she was so young she had to be aided in dressing.

She plays the wiles of a characterized 55 years tonight on John Bonner, and makes that gentleman raise the windows.

YOUTH ACCIDENTALLY HUNG

LISBON. (UP).—While Manuel Ferreira Barreiros, 14, son of a merchant of Pombalinho, was picking figs with his seven-year-old cousin, he decided to demonstrate "how a hanging is carried out." Climbing the tree, he put his belt around his neck and tied the other end to a limb. Suddenly he slipped from the limb. He was strangled to death.

Sits in Ice Water, Minister in Lap

Ministers who take advantage of a hunting trip to give an enforced baptism to an unsuspecting nimrod should not be allowed to hunt in any lake bigger than a bath tub, says Marcos J. Williamson, the dark-skinned, mustached angle in the triangle that develops on the little theatre stage tonight.

Williamson and Winston F. Borum, pastor of the First Baptist church in Pecos, went hunting in the backhills country around Pecos. The minister wore hip boots and suggested that, instead of circling a small lake of extensive area, he carry Williamson on his back.

All went well, that cold morning just after dawn, until about half way across. Then the expedition decided to take on the aspect of a Lewis and Clark march, for the minister slipped and Marcos sat up to his waist in water that had been chilled to only a few degrees above freezing. The minister nobly sat on the Midland boy's lap, when he remained in cool contemplation.

Like an old Indian fighter, Marcos had to make the best of it until his clothes could dry. He pulled off his clothing and hung them before a hastily constructed fire, and ran up and down the grassy watershed to keep warm while the process was on.

A lot of help, the minister who had given him the bath! He sat down just beyond the edge of the water and gave himself over to laughter that caused the ducks to fly so high that no shots were possible.

In the play tonight, Marcos gets a "tipless" taste of how it feels to be the third angle of a triangle. He has played in little theatres and community houses in the north, east and in South Texas. He has directed several high school plays for Mission, Texas.

I Kiss 'em All Sings John Bonner

A man's voice may be musical when employed in conversational ranges, but it has been known to fall in registry of overtones when tried in a singing role.

The best voice in Midland—that of John Bonner—was a little off as he tried singing to the aria-like melody a song that sounded something like this:

"I kiss 'em all
In doorway or hall;
And my reason—puff!
Why, it's legitimate!"

Cabell is not suspected as having figured in the lines, but John knows the meaning of them, without doubt. He kisses every member of the little theatre's feminine members of the cast except one. And one would suspect from the amiable theatre manager's legibus repetition of his song that he was trying to convince himself that everything was all right although he misses one osculation. He was heard to register a complaint with Play Director Mrs. George T. Abell, asking in his petition that the continuity be re-written so that he might extend his amorous activities.

The little theatre critic is satisfied, however, that John should pay more attention to his baronial estates (He is an English lord in the play), and no more than he does to his love making.

John has been connected with the legitimate stage and motion pictures since he could stand on tip-toe and look over the box office window. He has played with little theatre organizations for several years, and has always been courteous in offering his theatres for productions. He is house manager for the Yucca, the beautiful Babylonian house where tonight's play will be presented.

Incidentally he carries the play on his capable shoulders. But he gets caught, at that.

Experience Just No Word to Her

Mrs. T. B. Flood says she has had little experience on the little theatre stage, which is fortunate for the rest of the group that plays at the Yucca theatre tonight. If she were much more experienced she might steal the play—something she has not been slow at doing during rehearsals.

A perfect speaking voice, stage presence aplenty, that's Mrs. Flood tonight—if you can distinguish her in her make-up.
