FAITH IN TEXAS	AGRICULTURE

Immediate distribution to farmers in almost every section of Texas of some $400,000 worth of tractors and tractor equipment, as announced in The Dallas News Friday, may be considered to mark the turning point in the long lane of agricultural depression in this State. It is significant proof of speedy recovery on the part of the Texas farmer, and of the stability of credit agencies which serve him. The firm whose manager announced the big deal is but one of the many large firms which made Dallas the leading farm machinery distributing center of the Southwest. Doubtless other firms are getting their share of the seasonal business originating on Texas farms. Their total sales must be formidable. Sales are proof of the faith of big business in Texas people.

Texas offers immense opportunities to the alert manufacturer and distributor of farm equipment, not only because of its vast size and varied topography, but chiefly because of its many-sided agriculture requiring almost every type of implement. It is the logical market for latest equipment to serve an expanding large-scale wheat-raising industry in the Texas Panhandle and throughout North Texas, an equally impressive field for a new type of cotton culture developed on the South Plains, a changing rice industry which is turning from horses and mules to power machinery, and a constantly growing crop diversification system which will continue to avail itself of the best equipment manufacturers have to offer.

Texas is an agricultural giant rapidly outgrowing this antiquated raiment. More and more the business world is turning its eyes to Texas, the last great farming frontier destined to play an ever-increasing role of importance in the Nation's agricultural development.-Semi-Weekly Farm News.

FIGURING OUT THE ELECTION

One of the nicest things about American politics is that it affords all of us with no end of pleasant and instructive speculation.

Before the recent election, for instance, all of the ex- which would make 1928 and 1930 perts were busy trying to guess how things were going to go, and most of the rest of us followed them, made our own estimates, wondered if we might be right, and altogether and the progressives such as voted had a swell time. And now that the election is over the for the elder Senator La Follette to field is even broader than before.

We can speculate now on the causes for the various upsets. Nobody knows for sure, so we can keep it up all year; and when we get that finished, we can start speculating about the probable effect of this election on the 1932 presidential race.

All of this hurts no one and its lots of fun. Politics is a great thing.

manhood offered itself for army service, there was a good deal of pained surprise at the large numbers that were turned down because they were not up to par physically. The millions of examinations made by the army doctors showed us that we were not, as a nation, quite as healthy as we had supposed.

Whether there has been any particular change in the years since the war is an open question. However, it is worth noting that the doctors who examine aspirants for nated and re-elected. aviation studies are finding a very high level of physical well-being among the young men who come to them. The Commerce Department has just revealed that only 5 per ers are thoroughly dissatisfied with sevelt, who is regarded as a liberal Everyone is asked, urged and recent of all the people who decide to learn to fly are rejected because of physical defects; yet these aviation examinations are extremely stiff.

It may be, of course, that only the healthy and robust even try to take the examinations in the first place. But it is just possible that the country's general average of physical excellence has risen a little.

WHILE riding with his Uncle Henry, Jimmy asked, "How many pigs have you?" "Well, you figure it out for yourself," replied Uncle Henry. "If I had as many more and half as many more and seven besides, I would have 32." How many did he actually have?
