A FACT WE OVERLOOK IN WAR ON CRIME

Judge William M. Lewis of Philadelphia has announced that jobless men who steal to feed their families will receive no punishment in his court.

Philadelphia bas some 250,000 unemployed, and for the past month they have received neither money nor food from the unemployment committee. A number of them, says Judge Lewis, have taken to stealing in their desperat'on; but when such men come before him they are promptly put on probation.

Probably there won't be anyone in the country to quarrel with the stand this judge has taken. To recognize that the man who is driven to crime in order to keep his wife and children from starving is not in the same class with the professional housebreaker or stick-up man is only common sense.

But it is a little odd, when you stop to think about it, that it has taken a business depression of unparalleled severity to make us accept this obvious fact.

In ordinary times our tendency is to make the puni hment fit the crime. The man who steals property of such and such value must stay in prison for such and such a period; the man who holds another man up on the h ghway gets a similarly inelastic sentence; and while erforts have been made, through probation departments, the use of the indeterminate sentence and so on, to soften the rough edges of these harsh rules, we have not got so very far away from the old, traditional code.

Such men as Clarence Darrow have been trying for y and to make us understand that the compelling motive back of most criminal acts is the economic one. Dig back tal enough into the life of even the most hardened yegg and you are apt to find that same desperate craving for the necessities of life. Later, to be sure, the criminal may follow this calling for other reasons; but his origins, in a tremendous number of cases, stem straight from the swamp of hopeless poverty.

Until we accept that fact, we shall never make head-way in the age-long "war on crime,"

BORAH'S DEBT SETTLEMENT

Senator Borah voiced a good deal of sound logic in his recent radio address on the war debts. So far, however, there is little indication that the other die-hards in Congress and elsewhere are ready to follow him. They seem to be preparing to stick by their guns, in spite of the new attitude shown by Idaho's famous statesman.

And the ironic part of all this is that it is at least partly Senator Borah's own fault. For years he has been one of the country's most noted irreconcilables. He helped weld the Senate bloc together, he directed it once it was o.ganized, he helped to build up the sentiment which now abhors all direct dealings with Europe and which demands that Europe pay its debts in full, in spite of depression or anything else.

However, Senator Borah is an exceedingly influential man and an uncommonly gifted and persuasive speaker. Let him stay on the firing line against the irreconcilable bloc for a little while, and the bloc will look as if it had been through a major bombardment.
