VETERANS' BILL ADVOCATES PREPARE TO ANSWER CHARGE

AN EXTRA SESSION RUMORED

Such Session Would Raise Funds for Meeting Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21. (AP).—Confident of enacting the veterans' loan bill over the forthcoming veto of President Hoover, senate advocates today made available additional funds to safeguard against complaint that cost of the legislation could not be met.

Senator Vandenberg, republican, Michigan, told the senate a reservoir of $780,000,000 is available in the treasury. However, he obtained an amendment to the naval supply bill, making an additional $112,000,000 already voted as government insurance available by the first of July.

Rumors were rife that the president in his veto message might declare an extra session of congress necessary to raise funds for meeting the obligation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21. (UP).—The veterans' bill went the rounds of government departments today, collecting arguments why it should not become law. Hoover dispatched it to department heads for official reports before writing apparently a futile veto message on it probably Tuesday or Wednesday.

Midland Sorghum Off for Testing

Bundles of hegari, maize, feterita and red top sorghum were sent by the chamber of commerce this week to Milwaukee, Wis., for experimentation in a dehydrator. The grain sorghums were gathered by Will Elkin, and he and J. M. Flannigan of the Hill Feed company, prepared them for shipment.

The agricultural committee of the Midland chamber hopes to get a dryer experiment made at Midland with a view to making cattle feeding more practicable and remunerative. If the tests prove to do as claimed, the cattlemen and farmer would both be immeasurably aided, committee members say. The grain sorghums were sent to Milwaukee on request of the biggest feed dryer manufacturing concern in the country.

Poet Turns Realist in a Hurry; Hair Nearly Turns

Will Midkiff meant to chop out a mesquite root, not a varmint. Certainly he had no intention of clipping the tail of the booger. So when an uncouth looking customer that appeared to be a cross between a salamander, stinging scorpion and snake charged out at him, eyes glaring and red, forked tongue darting, Midkiff left that particular bush and headed for the sanctity of the more general brush. The reptile was finally captured and brought to the office of The Reporter-Telegram, where it can be seen today in the window of the news room. Several residents, hearing of it, called Saturday afternoon to see the strange creature, but could not identify it according to biological family. The Town Quack leans to the conviction it is a chameleon, one of those chromatic lizards he referred to last week as having the power to turn green without having to turn envious. But Midkiff turned a sedate, mesquite-dotted cow pasture into an acrobatic hippodrome during those brief moments he found convenient to contrast his speed with that of the reptile. "A man told me he was a red-headed Arkansas lizard," Midkiff explained to a newspaperman. "I don't know whether any of his folks ever saw Arkansas, but you can tell the public I know he's red-headed." Midkiff is one of our local poets, dealing in verse feet. He readily admitted a momentary lapse of recourse to figurative feet and became dynamic with the urge of the literal—and that he drummed the ground quite rhythmically.

Recent Shooting Here a Closely Guarded Secret

Details of a recent shooting in Midland that never reached the press were learned Saturday when it was announced that Sam Warren, employe of The Reporter-Telegram, was slightly wounded.

Despite the fact more than 300 people heard the shot and nine persons saw Warren, in acute pain, slip into a chair and rest his head in his hands, the affair was carefully guarded and few, if any, heard of it.

Events leading to the shooting were dramatic. A girl was being threatened with a revolver. As she threw up her hands before her face, a man's voice ground out: "I'll kill you—I'll kill you—"

There was a rush for the light switch and the lights went off. There was an odd, half-throated cry, a gun spoke and another cry. There was the thud of a falling body.

All this happened on the stage of the little theatre when "The Inner Circle" was played a few weeks ago.

But behind the scenes, unknown to even those on the stage, an actor crumpled up in the half light as the switch again thrown on was. This actor was Sam Warren. George Abell, standing near him with a gun smoking in one hand,

GILES TO APPEAL HIS SENTENCE

Rumors Afloat as to Readiness of Jones Case

Trial of the case of State vs. C. B. Jones, indicted on a murder charge by the grand jury in the present court term in connection with the fatal shooting on January 24 of W. L. Russell, Abilene real estate dealer, holds the spotlight as district court goes into the fourth and final week Monday.

This case and the murder trial of State vs. Manuel Brown, colored, indicted in connection with the shooting to death of Sonny Sneed, negro hotel proprietor, were docketed for the week of February 23, a special venire of 108 men, including all jurors summoned for service during the present term, having been called.

Cunningham in Case Interest in the Jones case was enhanced Saturday when J. F. "Jim" Cunningham, well known lawyer of Abilene, made his appearance here and began assisting District Attorney W. R. Smith as special prosecutor, retained for that purpose by the father of the man who was shot to death.

The defense is in charge of Sam K. Wassaf, who, on account of having been ordered to bed by his physician, could not be communicated with Saturday night. Rumors that an insanity plea would be introduced could not be verified.

THE FATHER OF OUR COUNTRY

America stands today with honor and reverence on the occasion of George Washington's 199th anniversary. The first president, a soldier whose record is still a mark for military leaders to emulate, and, above all, a true patriot, George Washington's place as the "father of our country" will forever stand unchallenged in the hearts of the American people. It is with a feeling of love, pride and reverence that Americans pause today to honor the first and greatest national hero.

IT'S BEST FORGOTTEN

The decision of the Navy Department not to hold its court-martial for General Smedley Butler seems, on the whole, to have been wise.

There is no question but that General Butler spoke indiscreetly. It was not his first offense of the kind. The general seems to have a tongue that gets away from him now and then, and a reprimand was surely due him.

But no good purpose could have been served by a protracted court-martial. The whole affair would simply have kept the limelight for many weeks after it should have been forgotten. And since General Butler was prepared to fight the case, it is possible that the State Department's apology to Mussolini would have lost much of its soothing quality before the thing ended.

Now it can be forgotten. That is just as well. General Butler has served his country extremely well on various battlefields. We do not like to be reminded constantly that he is an erratic and irresponsible public speaker.

ONE IDEA OF HAPPINESS

It is a little hard to tell whether young Charles Pierce of New York deserves sympathy or a throaty horse laugh.

Pierce, you recall, was a bank clerk. He had a wife, a child, and a small salary. Doctors told him he had tuberculosis and gave him only a year to live. So Pierce decided to make his last year a good one.

He started by stealing $200,000 worth of his employers' bonds. Then, leaving his wife and child, he sailed to Havana, where he ran through his money in short order in the usual defaulting-bank-clerk manner—horses, booze and fair-haired playmates. Returning to New York to cash some more of the bonds he was arrested, and a prison term now awaits him.

That is bad enough. But the new examination shows that his health isn't as bad as he had been told. Instead of dying within a year, he is likely to live for a long time.

Probably every man, at one time or another, has turned over in his mind that puzzling question, "What would you do if you only had a year to live?" And it is equally probable that a good many have reached Pierce's conclusion; to go in for a last gay spree regardless of the consequences. But life could not put a more ironic footnote on such a stunt than it provided in Pierce's case.

A good many different morals could be, and probably will be, drawn from all of this. Leaving aside the more obvious ones, it occurs to us that the young man's trouble came chiefly because he had such a hazy and mistaken notion of the way in which happiness can really be attained.

Naturally, if one only has a year to live, one wants to make it as enjoyable as a year as possible; and this chap deserves a small bit of pity, not because he cut loose and broke various laws, but because the only way he could think of to gain his end involved nothing but the bar room, the race track and the night club.

No one whose life is even occasionally satisfactory could harbor such a notion in the first place. The tragedy of this young bank clerk, then, arises not so much from the idiotic escapades on which he finally embarked, but from the miserable, cramped and cheerless existence that he led before it happened.

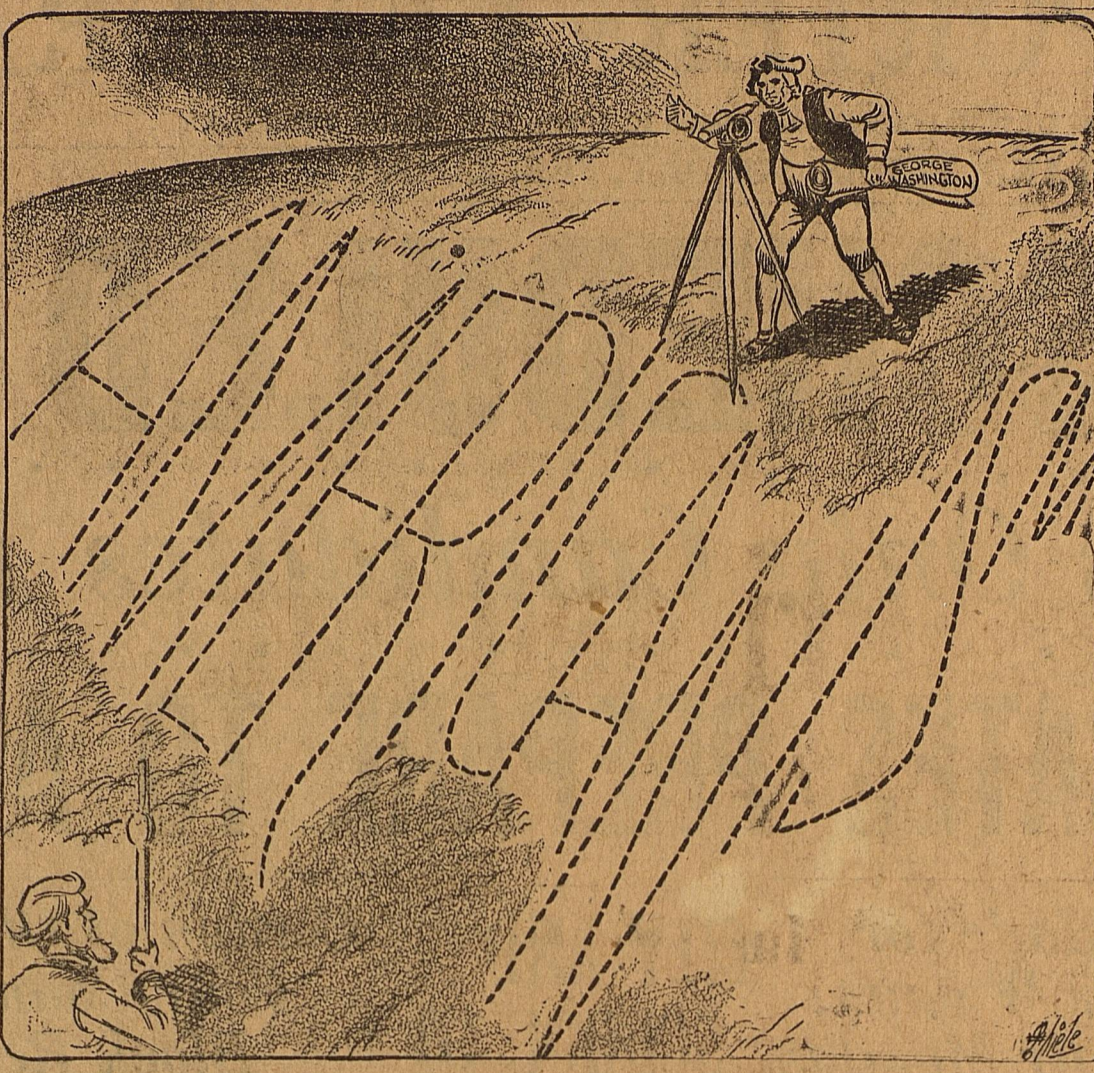

His catastrophe mirrors what he was, and what thousands of other small-salaried, hard-working people are. In a world filled with infinite potentialities and marvels, the brightest goal these people can see is the role of coal-oil Johnny. What a commentary on the conditions under which life occasionally has to exist.

The Town Quack

Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.

Letters to The Quack

We often wonder if the splendid habit of saying thank you, with a real kick in it, has gone out of fashion. (Something must be done to cause a thank you to be handed out. That is regular stuff. If you don't do something it is a certainty that you are not going to be thanked for it, but if you do something, even though it is something you should do, the transaction is more satisfactorily closed if a good big thank you is handed out. That is like handing out a cash discount. A sort of gray. The gink that is writing this stuff is strong for a hearty thank you at the slightest provocation. And when this same gink gets a big business of his own, which is not impossible, he is going to chase out the back door any employee that doesn't say a hearty thank you for any coin of the realm that hits the cash register.

That it hasn't gone out of fashion entirely it is in order to cite a few cases to prove our point: There's a little office boy in this town named Addison Wadley who says, "Say, I'm much obliged to you for buying these shoe strings in my store." Then we buy two pairs more and a suit of B.V.D.'s. Eddie Sims of the Hotel Coffee Shop says, "Thank you," before you look at the menu. Then you buy a steak when your intention was to stop at coffee. George Philippus blushes with gratitude when you buy a pair of garters. He blushes more when you buy a pair of drawers, and when you buy a pair of "step-ins", say, that is when the blushes mount to the top of his ears. All evidence of a thank you spirit.

Look at John Bonner. He'll almost give you the keys to the city when you hand him a PAID ticket to one of his shows. Ily Pratt has been known to walk to the front door with you, with great dignity, as a mark of appreciation, par excellence, for a seven cent purchase of blue ribbon. Paul Vickers cries on your shoulder when you pay your dues. Up to date he hasn't cried much. Louie Arrington acts as though you had lifted the mortgage on the old home when you buy a bottle of Pluto on which he makes 1 and 3-4 cents.

These are a few who do thank you with fine sincerity and there are no doubt more, but most of these who do thank you do it in an offish manner in which there is no zip, that is, no earnestness.

We do not think much of these observations but they were generated by an experience in which the keeper of a store said, "Well, you got what you paid for, didn't you?" Sure, we did. But the next time we'll get 'em, not in THAT store.

By all rights, Paul Barron should have had another wheel barrow ride Saturday morning, and Dr. Thomas should have pushed. The final game with the Clinic, giving our boys the season's schampionship, and awarding the silver trophy to us until next year when we hope to win it again, was considerably more of a decisive victory for The Reporter-Telegram.

For that reason, I believe a wheel barrow pushing would have been a good way for Dr. Thomas to give vent to the Clinic's feelings.

"Hell's Angels" Is Greatest Air Drama Ever Created

One of the most glorious picture entertainments it has ever been this reviewer's privilege to see was flashed on the screen at the Ritz theatre. It is called "Hell's Angels" and it's the film that Producer-Director Howard Hughes took three years to make at a cost of $4,000,000. But the magnitude, the spectacle the grandeur of this breathtaking air drama, with its countless droning planes, mighty Zeppelins and stirring sky conflicts, more than justifies everything that has been put into it. It had last night's audience gasping for breath when it was all over. As an achievement it is doubtful whether it will ever have an equal; as a dramatic account of the aviators' part in the war it tells the story on such a grandiose scale that all future pictures of this sort can be but feeble anti-climaxes.

Never have there been such thrills as those provided by the sensational stunts of the flying circus. There is no question but that the aviators were risking life continually as were the cameramen who, besides catching remarkable long shots and close-ups, of the amazing air encounters have contributed a magnificent piece of photography as well. The Zeppelin raid, the daring dog-fights, the crack-ups, the head-on collisions and the 10,000-foot plunges to earth are reproduced so vividly as to make you forget it is a picture. There were no miniature of fake shots used in these sequences. Everything is genuine. Many of the best known war aces piloted the different planes. Three men were killed and a cameraman expired as a result of the terrific nerve tension under which he was working.

There will not be another picture like "Hell's Angels" for a long time, if ever. No matter what you've seen before, you'll be electrified by its three terrific high-lights—the raid on London, the bombing of the German munitions factory and the free-for-all dog-fight high in the clouds.

Night has fallen over London. Suddenly a Zeppelin noses its way out of the clouds. The crew is testing the bombing apparatus. Crisply, orders are barked out. The British sound-detectors pick up the sounds of the monster's motors. And defending planes zoom off to disperse the enemy. A terrific battle is waged in which all planes but one is forced down. The machine gun of the last one has jammed. A steady stream of lead belches forth from the angry mouth of the sky whale. In desperation, the helpless pilot points his plane toward the big ship and rams into her at top speed. Thunderous noises, sizzling, leaping flames, and down go the entangled masses of steel and matter with the crew caught like rats in a trap. What a thrill! What drama!

The blowing up of the munitions plant and the terrific dog-fight between 50 planes or more, zooming, plunging, crashing, somersaulting down to destruction provide the most astounding thrills that have ever captivated an audience.

There is a colorful story running through the film about two brothers of totally different natures, one fine and noble, the other bon vivant who loves himself and his good times. They join the Royal Air Corps and become major factors in the aerial adventures that make "Hell's Angels" the astounding air spectacle it is. Ben Lyon, James Hall and Jean Harlow, a striking blonde beauty who makes her first screen appearance in this picture, head a splendid cast of well-known actors and aviators.

"Hell's Angels" is comparable to nothing you've ever seen before. Unsurpassed in its quality to entertain and amaze, it is one picture you will want to see at least once, if not two and three times.

There is an African antelope, called the Gemsbok, that never drinks water, being satisfied with the moisture obtained from plants on which it feeds.

POWKI HULDA HAWAII
A tribe of Hawaiians used the words, "POWKI HULDA" to designate the islands upon which they lived. The two words are composed of ten different letters. Each letter was used to represent a different figure. "L," for example, might represent 7. Thus "POWKI" and "HULDA" each are numbers of five figures. An explorer added these two numbers together and found that their total spelled HAWAII. Can you discover what figure each letter represents?

Adversity Made Them Great

Fog-like, legend has long since wrapped itself about the figures of Washington and Lincoln. Of each little but myths are left . . . myths of an epic quality through which it has become nearly impossible to see the man. Standing, god-like, in the sun of a nation's adoration, each casts a shadow that obliterates the very traits that made him great . . . those intensely human qualities which made decision hard when a people's fate hung in the balance.

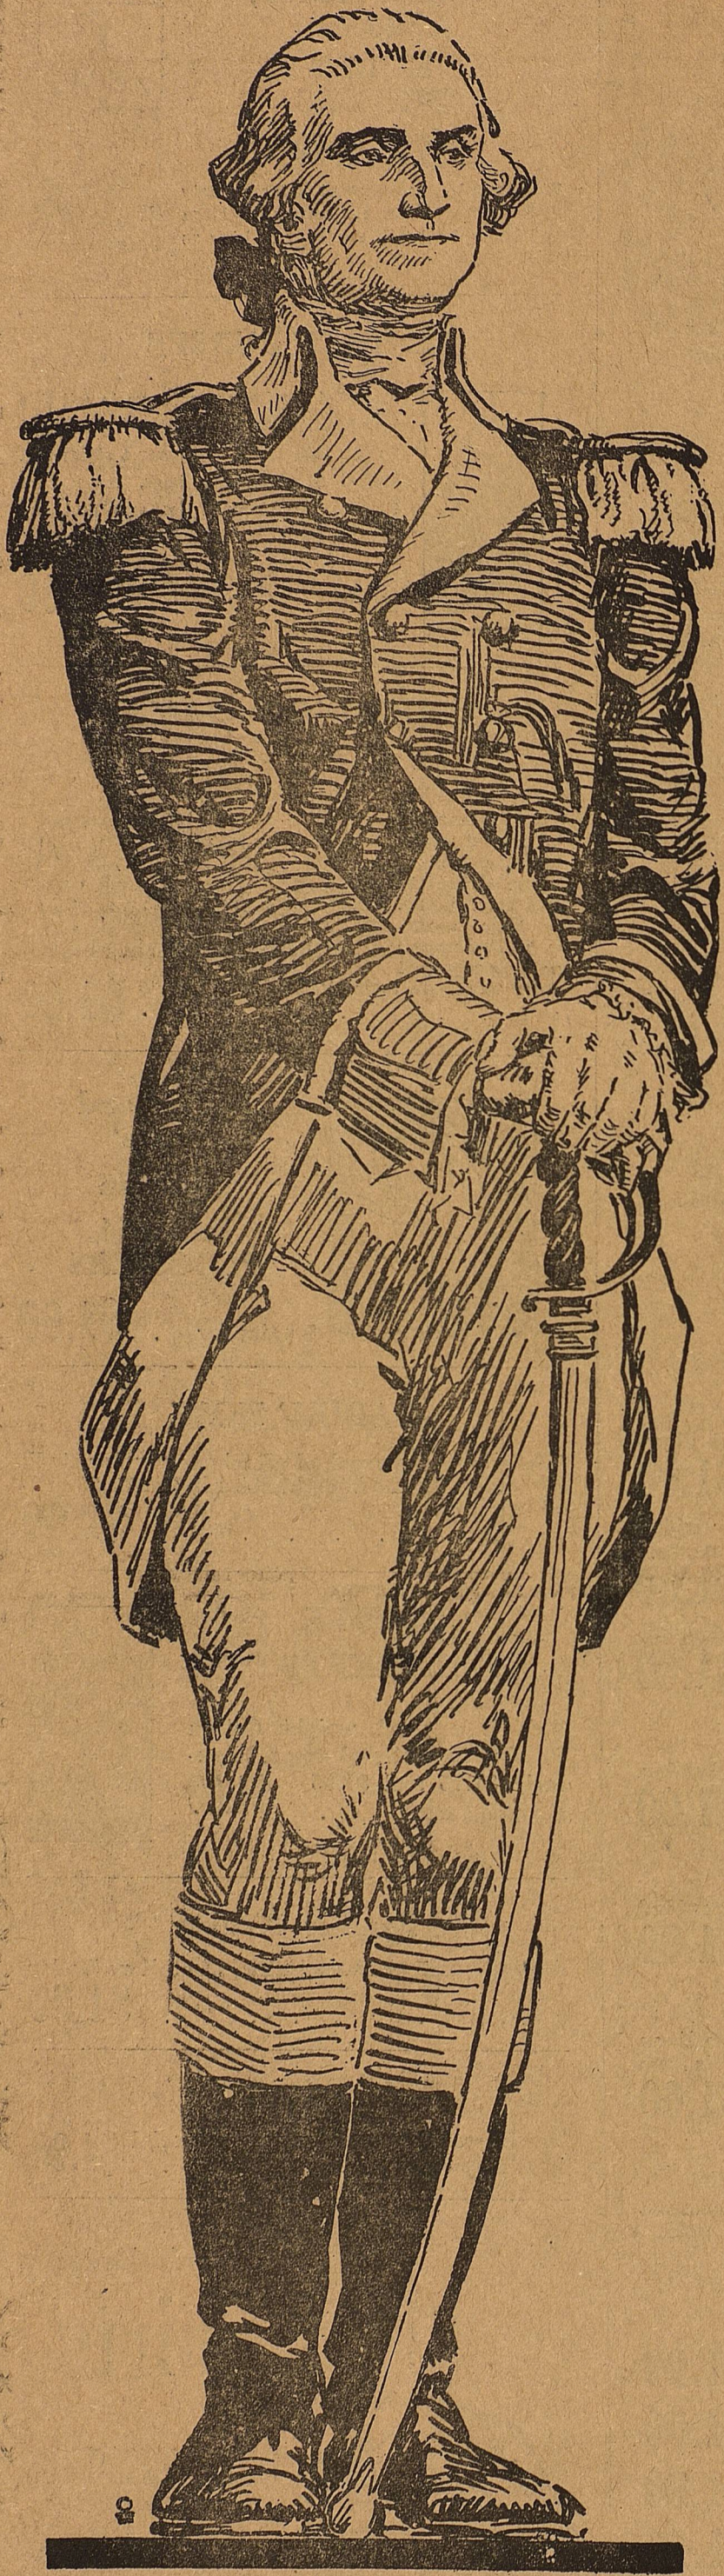

Yet it is from these very human qualities that made failure always imminent that we can best draw inspiration for courage when courage is most needed.

Lincoln and Washington are immortal because each met and mastered very human problems in the face of his own limitations. They were often petty, grueling tasks whose accomplishment meant no Homeric reward, but only further thankless labor, only other obstacles to be cleared by human skill in the face of human failings.

Not only with a heaven-sent inspiration . . . but perseverance and tireless work in the face of Valley Forge, official jealousies, subordinate blundering and a shilly-shallying congress brought victory to Washington in 1781. Through divine omniscience . . . the weary struggles of a gaunt, perplexed countryman dedicated a reunited nation to a glorious destiny in spite of bickering politicians, incompetent generals, military unfamiliarity, a scolding wife and a mad actor's gun.

These, then, are the real Washington . . . the real Lincoln . . . men whose works live on to inspire posterity because their responsibility called forth their utmost powers. To a nation faced with economic discouragements their problems make ours seem quite insignificant and petty in comparison.

REPORTER-TELEGRAM TEAM WINS INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE TROPHY

Methodists and Christians Play Off Clinched Percentage Tuesday Night

FAST BREAKING OFFENSE COMPLETELY ROUTES CLINIC IN LAST HALF; ONLY DECISIVE GAME EITHER HAS DROPPED

Friday night was good to the flashy red cage combination of The Reporter-Telegram, and the boys from Mister Barron's institution won the championship of the Industrial Basketball league. Incidentally, they scored the greatest number of points collected in any given nocturnal affair, 46-23 or a two-to-one ratio, and stamped themselves as being an even more powerful club than they had been rated at any time during the season.

The Midland Clinic-Hospital could not hold the sifting offense that breezed around and over its club. Captain Sam Warren of the red jerseys told his men before the game he wanted no dribbling during the night, but wanted a fast rolling four-man offense employing snap passes for a plan of battle. And, in the second half, Clinic wore down under the grueling pace and the lads from the stable of T. Paul, the "wheelbarrow jockey," began a steady, almost monotonous system of tip-the-ball-to-Sam-who-shoots-to-Lane-who-slaps-it-to-R. T. who-slaps-it-back-to-whoever-is-breaking-fastest-towards-him-who-places-the-ball-over-the-rim.

The scarlet club waited until the last game of the season to flash in its real form, most of the fans found. It never showed quite the polish during the regular season that was expected of it, but finished in a blaze that was pretty to see. The game made the all-season standing of the two clubs three all, the Clinic beating the newbies in each regular season game, but losing in the play-off for the first half and in two of the three championship games played. The league trophy was presented to Manager Duard Scott at the bas-

Godby of the Clinic was his team's high scorer, getting a total of nine points during the evening. Bramlet and Mills played a fast-passing, close-guarding game, and with a precision that was almost grim. For Clinic, honors were well split, also. Godby, Stubbeman, Osborne, Smith, Cox, Goodpasture (don't believe we've seen his name before) and Curtin playing excellent games. The box score:

With the CAGERS

By SPORTS EDITOR.

The Right Honorable T. R. Wright, who besides being a doctor gets his mail addressed to the president of the Midland Industrial Basketball league, has started more than one something during the year—but that dance Saturday night was the hot spot of the season. Great shouldered athletes, humped shouldered office clerks, in which this department is represented, pretty little blondes and brunettes in exquisite gowns, matrons, bald-headed men—all were there and tripping to the strains of Grady Gilder's Imperial orchestra. We say tripping advisedly when we refer to ourselves—but the night was a great success.

We still wonder who was the more clever, Paul Vickers or Grady Gilder. Vickers, with characteristic good humor, pointed out that the Industrial league was the child of a bachelor—but was legitimate in that it was a brain child. He presented the cup to Manager Scott of the newspaper institution, and with the consummate grace of a courtier bestowing the order of the garter upon some knight who had never thought how expedient it was to keep up his socks, he gave off an assortment of ticklish vaporing and then announced he was going home—adding that he hoped his going would not stop the dance. Gilder, on the other hand, said nothing, but how he did introduce that new number, "Weave of the Basketeers," written especially for the basketball dance! He's the sort of fellow who

ONE GAME WOULD GIVE M'S THE GONFALON

With the playoff of the Industrial league of last week receding into local sports history, basketball fans will have to appease themselves with a mere possibility of basketball in Midland going into another week longer than this one.

The First Methodist and the First Christians play off a tie for the second half Tuesday night. In case the Christians win there will be a three-game playoff for the Inter-Church loop beginning Thursday night and ending, if the contest goes all the way, Tuesday night of next week.

It would appear to the dopsters that there is little upon which to strike a pose and forecast a Christian win. The Methodists will likely win the Tuesday night affair and thus automatically close the season. They would have won both halves.

A playoff for the city championship would be impossible, in case the Methodists live up to expectation. That church's club is practically the same as the one used by The Reporter-Telegram to cop the Industrial league, and it goes without saying that the club not be split so as to let the Methodists play the newbies.

Many would like to see the Methodists lose Tuesday night so as to prolong cage sport another week. A good crowd is expected to be at the Scharbauer gym on that night to see for themselves what the decision will be.

can keep an orchestra together during these musical droughts. Blue Steele and some of the other notables can tell you that is an accomplishment nowadays. There's a little joke connection with the new number. This department decided Grady should play something new for the night, but Grady said he had nothing but what had been heard over the radio waves. So this department, always getting a foot into it the wrong way, went ahead and announced Grady would play a new number anyway. The director, easy enough to get along with, saw the story and got busy. Calling his men into conference, he said he had three hours in which to concoct a new tune, and that everyone was to retire to his room and get busy. It wasn't long until somebody hit on a tune snatch that makes 'em go nuts in Tin Pan alley. "That's it!" Grady said in his composed sort of manner. A lot of unintelligent jargon about starting in this or that flat, and Grady went to a piano and started slowly with one hand, then began following up his carom shots along the bass end of the court. Pretty soon he got the tip-off and away his men went. The sax and reeds fell in line, Babe, always ready for such thing in case of emergency, improvised some words for the score and the basket was scored. When we left the place tuneful overtones were being manufactured with a speed that was unmentionable. And, later in the night, we danced exactly three steps to the haunting melody—a swell looking young fellow claimed the girl and the others were spinning so fast we couldn't get in reach of anyone to tag.

We know another bit of rumour you possibly haven't heard about this fellow Gilder. Do you remember the F.L.E. organization? The one that broke all membership records last summer? Grady wrote the theme song for it. He was in a Lubbock hotel one night when a delegation asked to see him. The lyric was never sung in public. But the public took it up at private moments and sang it with gusto. And Grady broadcast the tune over the radios of the Southwest, plenty. Here's an idea for our friend Mr. Jury, dubbed Arthur G., and who is a good Rotarian, lime grower and known to most of us as the manager of Mr. and Mrs. Scharbauer's big hotel—why not grab off a few more dances of the sort Saturday night? And while we're still on the subject, how about Grady Gilder's Imperials sitting on the dais on those nights? The best orchestra that has played here in Midland since Grady played here months ago.

Dr. Herman Klapproth who makes a certain number of incisions a month in the clinic-hospital building came up to the dance to see what was going on. He purchased a little red tag, pinned it on his chest, walked over to a girl in a red dress—incidentally the girl was dancing with Manager Godby of the Clinic basketball team—tagged her and won the dancing contest arranged by Dr. T. R. Wright.

I forgot to tell you, Miss Mae Moore was the one in the red dress. A girl in a sort of brown or cream dress (or something of the sort) was second. She was Miss Margaret Mahon, and her dancing partner was none other than Mack McCracken.

Still trying to remember things: Paul Vickers told the ballroom group of the value to organized sports of such a man as Dr. Wright. He explained that the doctor took the job as president of the league when he was constrained by his friends, and how he worked hard all sea-

Analysis of the two clubs in the playoff for the trophy of the Industrial league showed no surprising difference in strength, considering the absence of Clayton from the lineup of Clinic, the score book seems to show.

...to keep the league on a popular financial footing. The success of the season and the dances thereafter attest to his popularity as much as his knowledge of conducting an organization.

Giles Wimberly comes in for a kiss on each cheek—just an old French custom. He was given a beautiful golf sweater for his services to the league. He referred numerous games and did anything else that was asked of him. He received no money for his services, electing to aid the league without financial remuneration. The whole league appreciates his work.

Cantrell Hays, who called more games than anyone else during the year, is another one we'd like to have stand. He handled difficult games in a way that was pleasing to almost everyone. It's easy to don a red shirt or a black shirt, hollow real loud and be made dictator of a strong government—but few people can survive the effects of trying to please the sidelines while in the role of a referee. Even Hays will grow prematurely old if he keeps at it. Ask any doctor.

Taylor Second Best Salesman in U. S.

Every city in America except Philadelphia had to concede Midland honors in having the best refrigerator salesman in the country.

Bedford Taylor, with the Texas Electric Service company and a salesman of the refrigerator handled by that concern, sold more "boxes" than anyone in the U. S., except the salesman mentioned. He sold 323 in 1930.

As a result, he left Midland Saturday night for Cleveland, all expenses paid by the manufacturing company. He will join 139 other salesmen who are getting similar trips. Each year the company checks report slips and decides the most valuable 140 men to the organization and gives them a trip. He attends the General Electric Refrigerator convention.

Taylor has received several valuable gifts this year in appreciation for his work for the company. He will be away two weeks.

appeals at Austin. One civil case was tried Saturday, verdict being postponed until Monday. Judge Chas. L. Klapproth said late in the week that a report that a fifth week of court would be held, to handle carried over civil cases, was in error, the approaching week being the last of the February term.

Two Lawyers Active Last week was characterized by rapid trial of several criminal cases. An unusual condition occurred in that only two lawyers participated in the cases, besides the judge. District Attorney W. R. Smith was pitted in each case against G. W. Dunaway for the defense.

Three judges had used the bench in the new court house during the first term. Judge Klapproth exchanging places for one day with Judge Drane of Pecos, and G. W. Dunaway being chosen by local lawyers to preside one day while Judge Klapproth was trying cases in Big Spring during the illness of the district judge there.

Chamber Gets out Membership Cards

The chamber of commerce Friday began the distribution of membership cards suitable for hanging up in offices and places of business. These cards are available at the chamber of commerce and are for all members. Those who do not receive cards are invited to call for theirs at the office of the organization.

The cards are ornamental in design and are made to hang on the wall of the establishment or where the individual member may wish. They are distributed free to all members. The object of this card is to let all local people as well as new-comers and fake advertising solicitors know that those who have the cards are doing their part for community progress by supporting their chamber of commerce.

Unemployed Asked To Register Now

Farmers who need work as well as town people who want to work on the alley paving were asked Saturday by A. J. Gates, city manager, to register at the city hall.

The West Texas Construction company is cooperating with the city by employing all local labor except two skilled supervisors. The city is anxious to give the work to those most in need in the city and on the farms. Only real residents of Midland or Midland county, that is those who have been in Midland county since Jan. 1, 1931, will be given work.

Those desiring work are asked to register early this week.

More Singing At Men's Class

Men who attend the big class for men in Hotel Scharbauer Sunday are asked to be ready to call for their favorite songs. Percy J. Mims, the song leader, will give the men opportunity to call for their old time favorites. The singing will start five minutes ahead of the regular meeting hour which is 9:45, so as to hasten the gathering of the men. Cotter Hiett, general attendance chairman, is planning some new campaign activity to increase the attendance. Working men have been specially urged to attend. Last Sunday a good representation of carpenters, day laborers, yard workers and others were present.

23 Drilling Blocks In Harrison County

MARSHALL, Tex., Feb. 21.—Twenty-three drilling blocks have been completed or are nearing completion in Harrison county, which adjoins the new productive area of Rusk and Gregg counties on the east. Oil men say that this is a record for an unproved area. Prospects were reported good for at least twenty drilling wells within a month.

More than 2,000 instruments relating to leases and royalties have been filed with the county clerk since January 1, and nine additional deputies have been added to his force.

PERRYTON, Feb. 21. (AP).—Square cut nails were used in the construction of Ochiltree county's old courthouse which was recently removed to make way for a modern $50,000 building.

Workmen in remodeling the lower floor for a Legion hall found only the old-fashioned nails, even in the laths. The building was erected in 1890, the lumber having been hauled overland from Dodge City, Kan.

Warning Comes a Bit Too Late

"Just as I had finished remarking that we had better be careful because it was Friday the thirteenth, our car hit a slick spot in the road and overturned," Mrs. V. P. Ogden told an Odessa physician while being treated for cuts and bruises received when the car in which she was riding with her husband and a friend overturned near Duro. The Ogdens were on their way from their home in Chicago to Los Angeles, California, when the accident occurred, on the Bankhead Highway, a few miles west of here, the Odessa News-Times says.

According to the accounts given by the Ogdens, they were driving west on the highway at a fair rate of speed, when their car, a heavy sedan, struck a slick spot in the road, got out of control and overturned. The car was somewhat damaged, but none of the occupants were seriously injured. Mrs. Ogden received numerous minor cuts and bruises from flying glass, but neither of the men was injured.
