SOCIETY GIRL IN TORCH MURDER

Father Admits Killing Boy Who Compromised Daughter

DAUGHTER ACCUSES ASSASSIN

Both Say Boy Made a Threatening Move Before Shots

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 14. (UP)—Roy C. King, 41, confessed last night that he shot and killed Lewis Palmer, 19, on July 20 when he found Palmer in a compromising position with his daughter, Glenda.

He admitted guilt after hours of questioning during which he was directly accused by his daughter. A crowd of nearly a thousand milled about the jail after reports of the girl's accusations were circulated.

King said he went to a park to protect his daughter, finding the pair. Palmer made a threatening move and King shot him, father and daughter agreed.

Still living, the boy was loaded into his own automobile by the pair and driven away by the girl. She said she debated whether to take him to a hospital while Palmer bled to death.

The girl finally found the father again and the pair concocted a story, saying a hobo killed Palmer and attacked her.

Three Ladybirds Land at Airport

Three of the ladybirds who will enter the Santa Monica to Cleveland air race landed in Midland Thursday, engaged in an "unofficial" race that started in Dallas and included a landing earlier in the afternoon at Abilene and a night stop in El Paso. Mrs. Ruth Stewart, St. Louis, flying a Challenger Robbin, was first to the port here, landing at 3:40. Miss Jean LaRene, Dallas, landed her Kinner Rearwin at 3:57. Mrs. Debbie Stanford of Houston, who was few hours of flying time to her credit, made a poor landing when she settled to the field at 4:04. She is flying a Fairchild KR-34.

Although she took off 17 minutes behind Mrs. Stewart, Miss LaRene was first into El Paso, reaching there at 6 p. m., mountain time, after a 4:45 takeoff. Mrs. Stewart landed there at 6:15, and Mrs. Stanford at 6:45. The latter did not take off from Sloan field until 4:29.

The women's race begins next Thursday, and has many pilots among the fair sex listed as starters. Miss LaRene said they had good flying weather Thursday, a good tail wind blowing them along their course most of the time.

PENALTY PAID BY SHIELD

Killer of Three Is Electrocuted In Huntsville

HUNTSVILLE, Aug. 14. (AP)—Joe Shield, triple slayer, of Brown county, went to his death in the electric chair at the state prison here early this morning. He was pronounced dead at 12:12 a. m. Eight minutes after the first charge of current entered the body.

Smile on Thin Lips With a smile on his thin lips, the man entered the small death chamber with a step light and steady. He marched directly to the chair. Three wardens stepped up and went about the business of adjusting the electrodes. Their work done, they stepped back and a split second later, a dynamo whirred.

When Shields entered the death chamber, he looked neither to the right nor left. He walked straight to the front of the room and faced Warden W. W. Ward.

Standing there in the garish light he looked the prison official squarely in the eyes as he was asked if he had anything to say.

"The room was as still as a tomb. 'Well, I don't believe I have except, Warden, I have too much regard for you and I ask you not to press the button that kills me.'"

He turned to the crowd, held up his hand and said, "If there is anyone out there who is my friend—goodbye."

As he started to sit down in the chair he saw newspaper reporters with pencils poised. "Boys, please don't forget to treat me fair in your stories," he said.

After sitting in the chair, he bowed his head.

"I am praying to God to forgive everybody and may God forgive me everything I ever did."

His face was ashen gray. "Men, I am dying for the love of my two little girls. I am ready."

Almost before the echo of his last word had died away, the first charge had surged through his body. Two more charges were applied in quick succession.

Killed Three Shield was given the death penalty in Brown county when convicted on a charge of shooting his estranged wife, Mrs. Opal Mae Shield, at Brookessmith, May 16, and her parents.

When You Can't You Can—Can

Tin cans are rattling in Midland county like they never rattled before. Cotton can go down to three cents and thrifty Midland farm people will still eat. Miss Geneva Derryberry, county home demonstration agent, estimates 30,000 cans of vegetables, fruits, and meats have been put up so far this year. She has been working at all hours the past two weeks assisting in canning demonstrations.

The Midland county commissioners court has purchased an additional canning outfit to lend farm people who have no canner.

Beans, peas, okra, beef, chicken and what have you, are going into cans while the women work with feverish activity. With cotton down like it is, many farmers think the only people who can eat will be people with cans to eat from, and canning is being rushed.

The urge has gone out throughout the South for the farm folk to can everything they can. One farmer said Friday he already had enough stuff canned to live on for a year and all he would have to buy was sugar, coffee, and flour.

The cry is out: "Don't say you can't—can!"

Papal Party to Be Through Here

Distinguished clerics and laymen from New York, Boston, Newark, Trenton, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, D. C., make up the party.

THREE ARE GIVEN LIFE SENTENCES

Girl Admits Washing Bloody Clothes Of Man

ANN ARBOR, Aug. 14. (UP)—Catherine Keller, 25, heiress and member of a prominent family, was under arrest today for investigation in connection with four Ypsilanti torch murders for which Fred Smith, Frank Oliver and Nathan Blackstone, a negro, were given terms in swift trials.

Police said the girl had been Smith's sweetheart and accompanied the three when they held up the quartet Tuesday night. Smith's confession involved the girl.

Catherine was arrested by Lieutenant Black of the state police, who said he found bloody newspapers and a pistol in her home.

Black said the girl admitted washing Smith's bloodstained clothes. The pistol is believed to be the one used to kill the two girls and two boys whose bodies were burned.

Extreme Penalty Is Given Trio

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Aug. 13.—Two white youths and a gigantic negro, all bearing evidence of rough handling by angry crowds last night received Michigan's severest penalty for the brutal torch murder of two young couples on a lonely road last Tuesday.

The sentences, four life imprisonment terms for each man, not to run concurrently, were imposed three hours and twenty minutes after the trio had confessed the crime which aroused this quiet university community.

Story Is Heard

Judge George W. Sample before passing sentences heard two of the prisoners—Fred Smith, 22 and Frank Oliver, 19—tell how they with their accomplice, David Thomas Blackstone, 33, negro, killed the young people, transported their bodies several miles in an automobile, and then set fire to the car and the bodies.

Robbery was the motive of the attack, the prisoners said, although Smith added that Blackstone assaulted one of the girls, Anna May Harrison. The two boys in the car—Harry Lore and Thomas Wheatley—recognized him, Smith said, and this brought death to them, Miss Harrison and Vivian Gold, who like Miss Harrison was a visitor in the community from Cleveland.

OUR LIMITLESS HORIZONS

Graduation addresses are usually fairly dreary affairs. Once in a while, though, a speaker emerges who has something to say, and when that happens the graduates he addresses can consider themselves more than lucky.

The other day Dean Thomas W. Graham of the Oberlin Graduate School of Theology spoke before a group of summer school graduates; and a few of his sentences stick in the memory and set one thinking, as all such speeches are supposed to do.

There are finer tools yet to be made than any we have now," he asserts. "More stirring music will be composed, poetry of greater rhythm and profounder prose will be written, and in the realm of architecture, sculpture and painting greater heights are yet to be obtained."

Why should a simple statement of fact like that be so encouraging? Why should it set one dreaming, and make one wish that one were just graduating from high school, with a world of limitless possibilities ahead? It does those things somehow; but why?

Probably it is because we like to be reminded that we live in a sadly unfinished world. We like to feel that great demands are going to be made on us. We like to be told that the human race as a whole is climbing painfully up a long, dark slope, and that men better than the ordinary stand out, here and there, to point the way and see glorious things beyond the rise ahead.

It is not altogether true that man always seeks his own ease and tries above all to make himself comfortable. There are men who cannot be happy unless they are tackling jobs that will take all they have to give, and more; indeed, all of us have a tinge of that illogical desire to spend ourselves completely on some job that can never be perfectly accomplished.

We shall, in time, produce few Shakespeares and Beethovens and Michaelangelos, and the world will be a better place than it is now. The hardest tasks are still ahead of us. We should be thankful.

THE CRUX IN LAW

The federal judge who told New York lawyers recently that they ought not to defend criminals whom they know to be guilty touched a point that occurs to the layman very often, and that never seems to get any very convincing answer from the legal profession.

Even a criminal, of course, has his rights, and it is no more than fair that he have counsel to see that his rights are respected. Nevertheless, it is a bit hard to see how a reputable lawyer can devote his high-priced abilities to the task of helping a known rascal escape punishment entirely.

We are told, of course, occasionally, that a lawyer of standing will not defend a man he knows to be guilty. We are told also that the moon is made of green cheese. The most notorious gangster can always find a good lawyer to help him beat the rap. That is one reason for the general public's widespread suspicion of the legal profession.

TRANS-ATLANTIC AIRMAIL

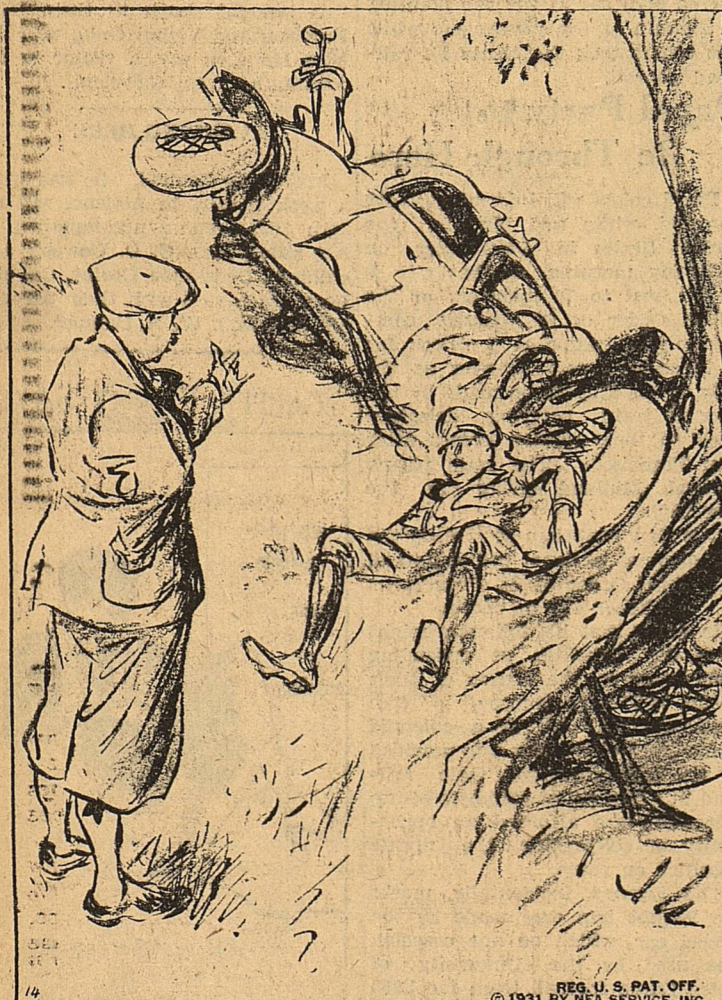

Among the interesting topics for speculation this summer is the question whether an America-to-Europe airmail line will be first established with airplanes or with dirigibles.

The pathfinding plane sent over the Greenland-Iceland route by the Transamerican Airlines Corporation shows that the airplane is just about ready to tackle the job. This northern route provides relatively short water hops and is said to be fairly free from fog and bad weather. Regular airmail service does not seem very far away.

On the other hand, the dirigibles have also demonstrated their capacity. The exploits of the Graf Zeppelin and the building of the Akron have drawn new attention to this type of flying machine. Negotiations for a trans-Atlantic dirigible service have gone forward.

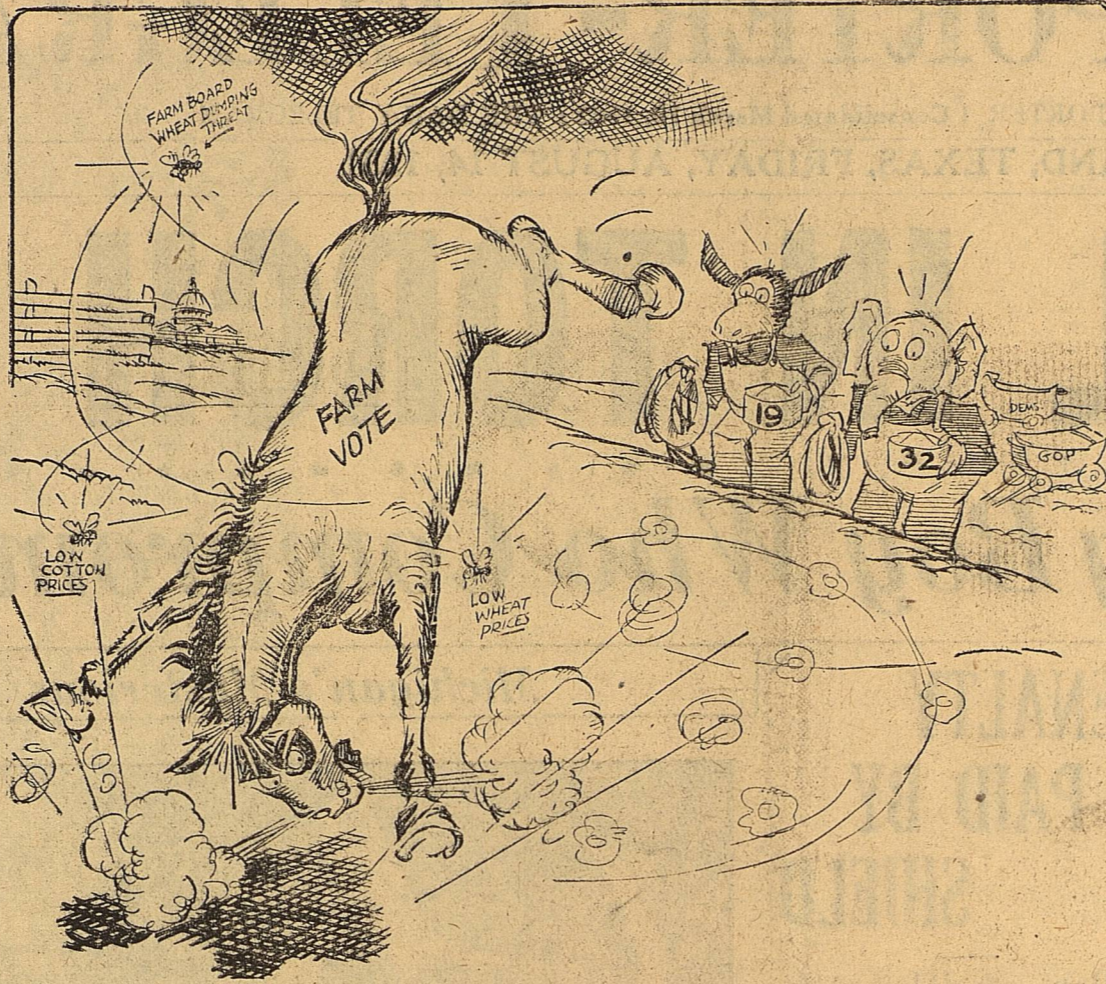

Which kind of machine will be the first to put such a service on a regular schedule?

Wales Thrilled As Wise Counsellor Beat Epinard

Editor's Note: Perhaps the most colorful race in turf history was the international event which Wise Counsellor won from Epinard, the story of which is the ninth in the series of "Ten Famous Triumphs of the Turf."

By MAX RIDDLE (Copyright 1931, NEA Service, Inc.) The colors of Great Britain floated over the box of His Royal Highness Edward, Crown Prince of England, as Epinard, champion of the French, stepped from the paddock at Belmont Park to battle a select group of American horses.

Probably no race run in America ever presented so colorful a picture as did that first of the series of three international races in which Epinard competed. Celebrities of three nations gathered at Belmont that Labor Day in the fall of 1924. A throng had come to see Epinard, but that equine ruler was temporarily forgotten as the Prince of Wales entered the stands. Somewhere, a band played the British national anthem and, as the Union Jack was unfurled above the royal box, a mighty throng of people cheered its respects to England's prince.

Epinard was French owned and bred, but back in his history there appeared the name of America's own great breeder, August Belmont. The history of Epinard's breeding is a romantic story in itself.

Born the son of a not-too-well-regarded French stallion, Badajoz, and the mare, Epine Blanche, which Pierre Wertheimer had bought from Belmont, Epinard was sent to an experimental breeding farm near the town of Haras de Bessan. The country about Haras de Bessan was unknown as stock raising land, but Epinard, and others later, showed that Bessan grass was conducive to unusual bone development in thoroughbreds. From his first start—the Prix Yacowlef—Epinard showed almost unmatched ability, and it was during his four-year-old career that Mr. Wertheimer decided to race him in America.

Epinard's task was not an easy one. His was not a match race with one horse; it was a race against half a dozen or more horses such as Zev, Wise Counsellor, Little Chief, Baffling, Ladkin and others. Sarazen was practically the only great American horse absent. Thus, it was a case of Epinard against the field, and there was a large chance that he would be subjected to any one of the dozens of misfortunes that may happen to a horse in a race.

Although Zev opened the favorite in the betting, he was shortly supplanted by Wise Counsellor. Wise Counsellor's early career had been about as strange as Epinard's. His mother, Rustle, was supposedly barren and was sold to Mayor Bradley of Lexington for $100. Rustle was then bred to Mentor, and Wise Counsellor was born of the match. He won several minor races in Kentucky and capped his two-year-old racing with a fine victory in the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes. This latter victory made him a winter book favorite with Sarazen for the Derby. Neither horse was able to get into shape for the race, but by a strange coincidence both horses returned to shape on the same day—the day of Epinard's first American race. As Sarazen had not been nominated for the big event, he was forced to be content with winning the race immediately preceding the international classic.

Wise Counsellor well deserved to be the favorite, as later events showed, but the start of the race found him sixth and apparently unable to better himself. Baffling took an early lead, closely pursued by Zev. Epinard, running easily, was bottled against the rail and found it impossible to get free.

As the horses swung into the stretch, the name of Zev was sent to the skies in a mighty roar. Zev had raced Baffling into submission, and appeared certain to duplicate his international triumph of the previous year. The swing into the home stretch broke the field, however, and gave Jockey Haynes a chance to free Epinard. The French horse was not slow to respond. Running on the outside, he thundered down the stretch, overtaking and passing the tired Zev.

It was now or never for Wise Counsellor. Even as Epinard had done, so Wise Counsellor went to the outside. With gigantic strides he ran over the field and caught Epinard. For a time the two horses ran neck to neck while the crowd cheered itself into hysteria. Then in the moment that just precedes victory, both horses were seen to falter. The victory now rested with the Jockeys and Frankie Keogh, on Wise Counsellor, literally pulled his mount into stride again. The gallant colt recovered to win by a short half length.

Daily Washington Letter By Rodney Dutcher

Administration Is Not Falsifying Figures on Unemployment and Wage Cuts But Merely Presenting the Pleasant Side—About 3,000,000 Working on Curtailed Schedules

WASHINGTON — As unemployment and wage-cut news crashes insistently to the front, along with many predictions of a distressful winter, the administration is again charged with camouflaging in an attempt to make conditions seem brighter than they are. But as a matter of fact the government has only been stressing publicity for such pleasant statistics as it can find and not stressing the others.

Federal figures are not being falsified and the most reliable of them are still being issued frankly and fearlessly even if there is no reason to ballyhoo them. Efforts of Secretary of Labor Doak and his U. S. Employment Service to give us something to cheer about have been so naive that if the country has been misinformed it must be the fault of careless newspaper correspondents. Doak gets out a report on the expanded employment service and far in the lead, in capital letters, one reads: Total employment placements from April 1 to July 1, 1931, 638,689." Down toward the end of the report you find buried the fact that the service only claims it has filled 282,000 jobs, the rest of the placements having been made by state agencies. Most of the 282,000 are supposed to have been harvest hands, who are always hired in large numbers at this period.

The employment service bulletin begins by announcing: "There was an improvement in the demand for certain classes of labor throughout June." It then tells at length about a seasonal increase of outdoor work, finally admitting "little change in the industrial situation."

But the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows a drop of two per cent in employment from May to June and a decrease of 4.5 per cent in payroll totals. In three of 11 major industries which this bureau surveys there was a decrease rather than an increase. The big exception was canning and preserving and there were slight seasonal increases in the laundry and cleaning and dyeing industries.

January, 1930 showed a decrease in employment to 90.2 as compared with the index figure of 100 for a supposedly average year. Another 18 months, ending with the recent June, and the figure had gradually gone down to 72.2 per cent.

Indicating the extent of curtailment of working hours and wage cuts, the end of the first half of this year showed that payroll totals had decreased at a much faster rate. The payroll index figures were 87.6 for January, 1930, and 62.5 for June, 1931.

Unemployment means total loss of income and sustained purchasing power. Wage cuts and reduced hours mean curtailment of income.

More than 1400 plants have admitted wage reductions this year in reports to the statistics bureau. Those cuts affected about 20,000 workers. The total number of wage cuts and of employes affected presumably was several times as great, owing to the relative scantiness of companies reporting. But last January with 335 reported wage cuts showed more of them than any month since.

Thirty-nine per cent of plants reporting to the bureau report part-time work and the extent of part-time is estimated largely on such surveys as those in Philadelphia and Cincinnati which indicated that for every 10 jobs men six were working part time.

On that basis it has been believed that at least 3,000,000 persons have been working on curtailed schedules—and incomes. The effect, along with that of wage cuts, is seen in lower per capita earnings of those actually at work. The labor statistics bureau shows reduced incomes per man from June, 1930, to June, 1931, of 12 per cent in manufacturing, 15 to 22 per cent in coal mining, 20 per cent metal mining and about five per cent in trade.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

Here is a little 1-act play that you might try the next time you have some parlor guests and entertainment runs short: City Editor (should be a man about 28 years old with a small mustache): "Fellows, come here in a hurry, I have found a snake." I almost forgot to tell that the scene is on a golf course. Two other golfers together: "Boy, we are coming as fast as we can." C. E.: "Here he is under that little bush." "Darn you," ejaculated one of the other golfers as he raised the bush up carefully with his trusty putter, "it's nothing in the world but a lady bug."

The mystery of the playlet is how on earth did the city editor mistake a lady bug for a snake. Have your guests figure hard on solving the mystery.

John Howe says that he had to work hard as a boy, also; which leads me to believe that there really is no rest for the wicked.

I wish I could find an American with plenty of leisure who would teach me some good Mexican songs. I prefer to be taught the Mexican words as well as the tune.

Do I hear the voice of an applicant or is it merely the ringing in my ears of the shaving soap that I smear on my face with no thought of the depression?

I have formed a peculiar liking of late for those Mexican songs and I don't know frijoles about any of 'em.

"Hey, Ross, whose voice is that I hear behind your shoulders?" "And that's enough! The telephone conversation ends so far as I am concerned."

Pink roses were the keynote of decorations at the home of Mrs. Charles Mix Thursday morning when she was hostess to members of the Bien Amigos club with a bridge-breakfast party.

Silver bud vases filled with the flowers centered breakfast tables. Flowers also graced other parts of the rooms.

In the bridge games, Mrs. H. W. Mathews played high for members and Mrs. Al Loskamp for guests. Mrs. E. D. Ruse was awarded a cut prize.

Seated for the breakfast and bridge were Meses Bedford Taylor, C. D. Hodges, F. F. Winger, T. B. Flood, H. W. Mathews, Joe D. Chambers, E. D. Ruse and Al Loskamp.

Extreme Styles Won't Find Favor with Paris

There's a hint of the Victorian era—but only a hint—in the new products of the Paris fashion shops. Left: A beige patterned woolen is used by Jacques Heim for an early fall wrap trimmed with dark brown astrakhan; the belt is of matching brown suede. Upper center: Molyneux's latest creation in hats is expressed here in a mauve felt trimmed with "plumes de coq" shaded to match. Lower center: another new hat by Molyneux is fashioned of soft black felt and has a back trimming of white marabout. Right: Black velvet styles a formal afternoon coat trimmed with ermine.

Melon Feast Given By Men's Class for Friendly Builders

Members of the Men's Bible class of the First Methodist church complimented the women of the Friendly Builders' class with a cantaloupe and watermelon feast at Cloverdale Thursday evening.

The affair, said to be one of the most enjoyable of the summer for members of the classes, was attended by more than 75 persons. After the feast, guests joined in peppy games and conversation.

Appreciates Midland More After Trip To Short Course, Says 4-H Club Girl

Editor's Note: The following article starts a series written by Midland county delegates to the A. & M. Short Course in July.

By EULA MAE CAFFEY

Perhaps it is because I have never lived anywhere except in West Texas that I took particular notice of the crowded towns and cities we went through on our way to College Station. I did not realize until I left Midland how much I appreciate its spacious, cool and clean appearance.

Another thing I noticed was the method of farming used in eastern and southern Texas. The farms were cut up into small, irregular and odd-shaped "patches" of corn, cotton, sweet potatoes, peanuts, peas and the like. The soil in cultivation was in very small valleys, in sand-beds and on hillsides. It seemed to me that such farming was useless, but I am sure it was because I have always seen the level fields of not less than a hundred acres on the farms of West Texas.

What I most enjoyed was the scenery. I saw running brooks large groves of big green trees and meadows covered with soft carpet grass. I would have given much for the privilege to play there.

We reached College Station at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, had supper at six, then gathered on the lawn to give club yells and songs and to get acquainted.

Our hours for meals and rest were regular. After breakfast each morning we assembled for chapel, where we received much inspiration. Monday we had a good lecture on health, planned and organized the week's work, then went out to the fair grounds. Monday night we were given a treat to the show that gave an educational picture and a good comedy. This feature was repeated every night.

Tuesday the club girls and boys had picture-made in two groups one of which formed the words "Texas 4-H Club." We visited the art gallery and heard a wonderful lecture on art, then heard one equally as good on music. The woman who gave the lecture made music on glasses partly filled with water, on bowls, flower pots, home-made drums and a number of other interesting instruments. We also had interesting demonstrations on improving the home yard, the well-planned wardrobe, pantry, essentials of an adequate diet, planting a garden, and so forth.

We visited the Key Demonstration Farm Home Wednesday. It was attractively and completely furnished in every detail, and its beauty and convenience were an inspiration to every visitor.

On Thursday was the style show. There were many lovely house-dresses, sport and street frocks and evening gowns worn by girls of the college and by those attending the short course. This show was convincing that clothes have a vital affect upon personality. All of these were made of cotton.

I cannot describe the many interesting sights I saw in the medical hall, or the "Bone House," as it is called. I saw skeletons of human beings and of many forms of lower animals. Then there was a black corpse in a peculiar casket that looked to me like the container the Indian papoose is placed in. I also saw different animals mounted in life-like form.

The most interesting part of Friday's program was the lecture on planning a home. The suitable type of homes for different sections of the country, the most attractive windows, their location, the selection and arrangement of furniture were points of emphasis. Although we enjoyed the lectures throughout the week, everyone was glad when the last-named was over because we were free to prepare for our trip to Galveston.

Between College Station and Galveston I saw some more beautiful and heavy-laden orchards and even more attractive scenery than I had seen between Midland and College Station. I cannot express my admiration and enjoyment of the tall pines and other trees that were so gracefully draped in Spanish moss. Galveston itself was a land of flowers and wide-spreading palm trees.

When we went for a boat ride I saw ships of Italy, France, England, Germany and the United States. The capacity of these vessels was astounding to me. It is needless to say I enjoyed the boat ride immensely; the most thrilling part was the fact that I went outside of the United States' boundary. Later we went in swimming and every minute was a thrill. I can never forget how I enjoyed diving into the waves and riding them back to shore.

Space will not permit me to tell of my experiences, but I must say I sincerely appreciated the courtesy of the chamber of commerce, the work of our club and demonstrator, and the educational values I received from this trip the short course at A. & M.

Happy Birthday!

997 won't break down

because it's cut from the Heart of the Crude

Thousands of Texas motorists are astonished at the low consumption of Humble 997... Yet the reason is simple—We use only 2% of the crude petroleum that comes out of the ground... the very heart of the crude. (See diagram at the left.)

But we go much further than that. Humble's new vacuum refining makes 997 motor oil practically 100% carbon-clear and gives it a new high in heat resistance. Let the nearest Humble dealer fill your crankcase today with the oil that won't break down... "997."

HUMBLE OIL AND REFINING COMPANY
Makers of Esso

Many refiners use as high as 54% of the crude to make motor oil. The diagram above shows the actual amount of crude we use for 997—only 2% of the total. Super refining by a new vacuum process does the rest.

COWDEN-EPLEY TAMES HARDWARE; CO-EDS BEAT BUSINESS GIRLS

REVERSES CHANGE FUTURE OF THE TWO LOOPS

Two significant changes, one in both playground ball leagues, were observed in last night's results.

The 12-4 upset of Midland Hardware company by Cowden-Epley shunted the former club into a par with The Reporter-Telegram for second place, thus removing itself in a large degree from its threat against the league leading Buicks of Bob Scruggs whose club has not dropped a decision this half.

In the Women's Bi-City league, the same thing happened. The Business girls, cocked and primed to beat Stanton, suddenly were knocked off by the rompin' Betty Co-Eds, 13-11, and now Stanton stands out ahead of the league where, before the game, the Business girls had the chance to climb above the Starlets.

In the other game of the Nocturne league, Bell Telephone company kept tied in the percentages with Cowden-Epley by winning, 13-6, over the Rexall stores, incidentally showing the Pill Rollers into the cellar again.

Hall of the Fords hit two doubles, Watlington one, and W. Whitmire hit for the circuit. Hurst of the hardware smashed out a triple.

Linnie Laurie Long of the Betty Co-Eds hit a home run, and Mrs. Hurst of the Business girls circled the four corners when her hard driven ball went through an outfielder.

SPORTS REPORTS

By R. C. HANKINS

Cowden-Epley and the Betty Co-Eds played yesterday like they had been indulging in the new breakfast food we read about. A truck captured with a load of alcohol in Kansas recently carried a sign "Grandma's Breakfast Food." Why, Grandma!

One of the cities in the north has passed an ordinance against intoxicated bicycle riders pedaling to the ball games. The city should now pass a blanket ordinance making any form of suicide a felony, someone has pointed out.

Speaking of those wine bricks that they're buying in Manhattan, they might be sold at ball games where the umps make rotten decisions—for jelly making, as one might say.

Some wag points out that by the time Jack Dempsey gets ready to fight his announced come-back, Benny Leonard will be taller than Primo Carnera.

Then, some fellow looked at the stars and picked the Cardinals to win the pennant. A fellow writer asked: "Is there no end to the marvels of science?"

We listened to a group of the night ballers as they warmed up their gags before entering the game. One told about a fellow player who asked his hostess at a party if she believed in the power of prayer, and receiving the answer: "I would if you had gone home about an hour ago."

We were talking to one of the Business Girls. "Your husband has had his hair cut close, hasn't he?" "Yes, the coward!"

One of the boys who played baseball with the 2nd cavalry told us a waiter asked him if he wanted more water and he told her no, that his soup plate was full of it.

A big leaguer was on the train the other day during the wash-outs. He congratulated the conductor on having the train running on the second, but later found out it was yesterday's train.

Women know yarns—plenty of them. A Stanton player said the wife of a professor she knew told her husband it was ten years before that they became engaged. "Heavens!" the professor exclaimed. "Why didn't you remind me before? It's high time we were married!"

Dr. Jno. B. Thomas and J. B. Thomas Jr. will play for No. 5 man in matches to begin this afternoon.

In play over the past two or three days, Dr. Thomas beat Alvon Patterson, 10-8, 6-2; J. B. Thomas Jr. won from Dr. Herman Klapproth, 8-10, 6-1, 6-4; McCrary won from Godbey 6-4, 7-5.

Thomas, father and son, play to decide who will challenge Godbey for No. 4 man.

McCrary had no difficulty in defeating his No. 3 position against Godbey.

Stubbeman and Ferguson play this afternoon at 5:30 for No. 1 position.

Relative to the tournament to be played in Midland Sunday, beginning at 9 a. m., a letter from H. B. Dunagan Jr. said the following members of the Big Spring club will be present: Bill McCarty, George Dabney, H. B. Dunagan,

WIFE OF WILEY POST ON VISIT TO SWEETWATER

By MARY CRUTCHER SWEETWATER.—Sitting in the little living room of her mother's and father's farm home about two miles west of Divide in Nolan county, Mrs. Wiley Post, wife of the world-famous flyer, related the story of the Post-Gatty flight as if it were just another day in her life.

of September or the first of October en route from California to Oklahoma.

She's Not Talkative

Mrs. Post stated that she wasn't very talkative, but would be willing to answer all questions to the best of her knowledge. She claims to have no aversion to newspaper reporters in spite of the fact that she has seen so many of them of late.

Post lost very little weight on his flight, according to Mrs. Post, and he has already gained that back. Comparing pictures of Post and Gatty taken before the flight and ones afterward showed how the men had wrinkled and tired in the eight days, fifteen hours and fifty-one minutes of their flight.

Told of His Practice

Mrs. Post told how "Wiley practiced for weeks before the flight on getting only two hours sleep each night." During the entire flight he and Gatty got only fifteen hours of sleep and that wasn't very restful sleep.

When asked if she suffered much suspense and anxiety while her husband was gone, Mrs. Post answered, "I worried some while he was over the ocean, but as soon as I received word that they had crossed the ocean safely I had no worries. I've never worried about Wiley, while he was flying over land, for he always says that unless the plane loses its wings or some other major part, he can steer it to the ground all right."

She Likes to Fly

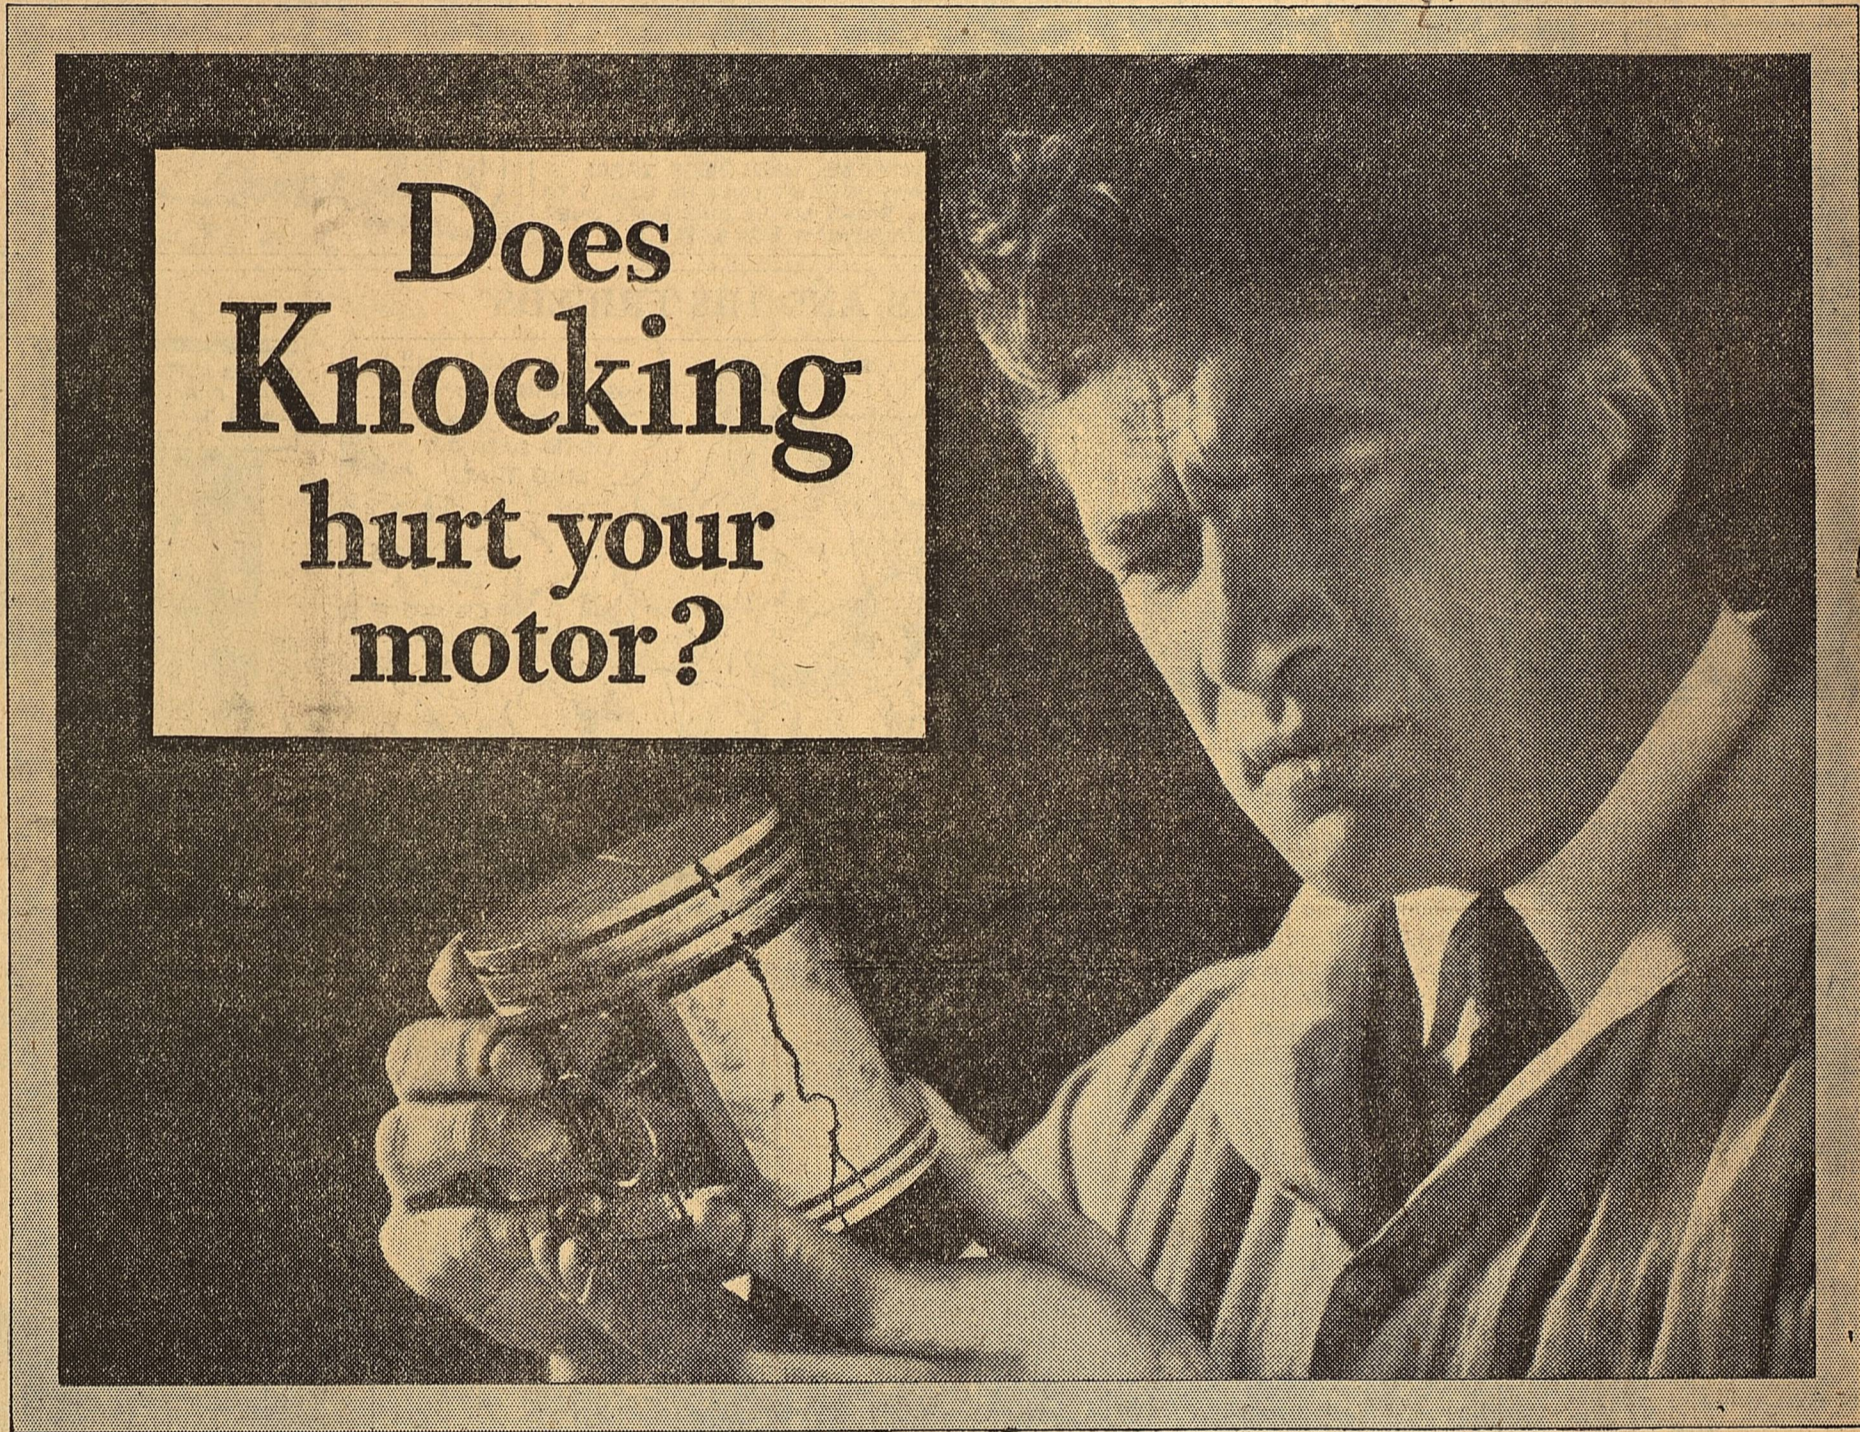

"Yes, of course I like to fly," Mrs. Post said smiling, "but I never intend to fly a plane myself. I've never had any desire to do so, and besides, Wiley doesn't want me to."

Mrs. Post expressed the belief that Mr. Post would never try to set another flying record. She said that flying is a "dirty game" for there is so much competition and rivalry in it and that she thought Mr. Post was through with it as a profession. The height of his ambition is to be a rancher (but not in this country), according to Mrs. Post. However definite plans for their future have not been made. About the only

We stopped after testing the third gasoline... why crack more pistons?

THE TEST:

DOES the gasoline you use make a real difference in the harm "knocking" can do to your motor? We selected 5 leading premium fuels and set out to discover.

We set the spark on a 7-to-1 compression automobile engine far in advance of normal. Then we ran the motor from 8 to 45 miles per hour, time after time, for ten minutes.

Ten minutes of this with ESSO left the motor in perfect condition.

Eight minutes with Fuel A—and one piston cracked!

Ten minutes with Fuel B—and three pistons cracked!

The experiments were then discontinued, inasmuch as the competitive fuels already tested were those with the highest anti-knock qualities.

The test reported above gives further dramatic proof of the unquestioned advance which ESSO represents.

Millions of motorists know, of course, that ESSO increases power. Few realize, perhaps, the way it spares the motor. Protects it. Resists the damaging effect of driving under the most severe conditions. Fewer repair bills and longer life for your car are the results.

A ten-day trial will tell you why!
