Senate Fails to Give Enough Votes to Home Rule

VALPARAISO, Ind., May 18. (UP)—Paul Barton, 21, today admitted in court that he was one of the youths who accepted an invitation from Virgil Kirkland, who is on trial for life for murdering Arlene Draves at a drinking party, to join in mistreating Arlene with Kirkland which resulted in the girl's death.

All but adults were banished from the courtroom while Barton told of Kirkland's attack on the girl.

Sheppard Breaks Leg Two Places

C. H. Sheppard, district manager of the Lydick Roofing company, sustained two breaks in his right leg Sunday, when he slid into a base while playing baseball during the Busher-Cotts-Pleasant View game at the dedication of Bizzell park.

The big bone of the ankle and the little bone below the knee were broken. At first it was believed he had injured only the large bone, but an x-ray picture this morning showed two breaks.

He was resting comfortably this afternoon at the Mid-West hospital and clinic.

250 Expected at Afternoon Picnic

Two hundred and fifty are expected at the picnic to be held at Cloverdale park this afternoon for Veterans of Foreign Wars, American legion members, families of the two organizations and special guests.

Paul T. Vickers has been invited to speak.

A good program has been arranged under the direction of Otis A. Kelly and Joseph A. Seymour.

SUIT ON ECTOR LAND INVOLVES EARLY HISTORY

By R. H. SHUFFLER (Odessa News-Times Staff)

ODESSA.—Much of the early history of Texas as well as a good part of the early history of the United States, is involved in one of the biggest land suits in Texas, over a strip of Ector county oil land. The case, in which the Texas and Pacific railway is plaintiff and the heirs of Fannie I. Jones, and Scharbauer & Eidson, Ector county, and W. A. Tunstall are defendants, is now up before the Federal court at El Paso. It is quite likely the case will be carried to the supreme court of the United States.

Paul Moss, who spent the early part of the week in El Paso, gave a brief resume of the complicated claims, and the lengthy history involved.

The legal battle is being made over a strip of land running through section 6, block 44, township 3 south, Ector county, just north of Penwell. The railroad claims a right-of-way of 400 feet, held by them in fee simple under state and national charter. They also claim the right to take oil and gas from beneath this strip, which is two hundred feet on either side of the tracks, across the section. The defendants claim the property is held merely as a right-of-way easement, for railroad purposes only.

To complicate matters, the attorney general has filed a suit on lands west of this tract along the right-of-way, in which the state claims the railroad to have an easement only. Back in 1851, it seems, the state through the legislature, incorporated the predecessor of the Texas and Pacific, giving a 200 foot right-of-way across the public domain. Later this same legislature petitioned congress to give the Texas and Pacific the same aid it had given to the Northern Pacific railway. In 1871, the United States through an act of congress incorporated the Texas and Pacific, giving them a 400-foot right-of-way, and granting certain sections of land in Arizona and California from the federal lands.

The railway contends that in asking congress to give the T. & P. the same aid as the Northern Pacific, Texas gave the federal government the power to grant this 400 foot right-of-way. The defendants contend that this 400 foot strip was only in the United States public land in the states to the west; that the public lands of Texas belonged only to Texas, and had never been given to the federal government.

The railroad claims that the Gadsden purchase, in which the United

Seeks to Aid Dry Law Victims

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., May 18. (UP)—When an official of the government commits an illegal act, it is the duty of the government to protect the victims of the act, in the opinion of Dennis Chavez, congressman-elect from New Mexico.

At the next session of congress, Chavez will attempt to have passed a bill for the relief of the family of Uvaldo Martinez, fatally wounded by a prohibition agent's bullet. C. W. Eskildson, prohibition agent, has been convicted on a second degree murder charge in the slaying.

The widow and children of Martinez are said to be in a destitute condition as a result of the head of the family being dead. "We all agree that it is the duty of the agent to enforce the prohibition law and no one can justly complain if he does that in the lawful method provided by the law itself," Chavez said. "But when a prohibition agent, marshal or any other officer of the law commits an illegal act, and thereby causes damage to innocent victims, it appears that it is the plain duty of the government to protect those victims."

Chavez suggests that prohibition agents should be placed under bond to care for just such cases as would be similar to the Martinez-Eskildson affair.

Congressman Lanham Is Heard by Record Crowd On Baccalaureate Date

The greatest crowd to hear a baccalaureate sermon in Midland overflowed auditorium and balcony of the high school Sunday morning, into the corridors and entrance ways. It was estimated by a staff member of this newspaper that, after seats in the wide entrance corridor had been placed for the convenience of those trying to hear the sermon and program, 300 people got out of cars and tried to stand where they could see and hear, leaving because there was no chance.

United States Congressman Fritz G. Lanham spoke at "The Aristocracy of Service." His speech was the essence of deep thought and expressed simply and in a strict conversational tone that gave Midland the chance to see the congressman as he is—dynamic in thought, colorful personality. At the close of his speech most of the graduating members of the class were reduced to tears while the congressman spoke on maintaining "old fashion virtue" in a modern age.

Successively, the congressman spoke on the aristocracies of brawn, brain, blood, "boodle" and service, showing the latter is the only recognized aristocracy that is totally unselfish.

The aristocracy of brawn is the employment of strength. It was one of the first interpretations of the primates. It existed far into the modern age, and still has its outcroppings in history.

The aristocracy of brain has overlapped several other aristocratic ages, man employing superior wisdom or superior tactics to outwit his fellow.

The aristocracy of blood refers the student back to the first community groupings of like kind, the first strong realization of "in union there is strength." The social groupings of the present so-called society is a working out of this society.

The aristocracy of boodle, is the reference to the money cliques. People are recognized because of their wealth. This is one of the most despicable aristocracies, the speaker said. A man has nothing by money in many instances; yet he is referred to on the front pages of the nation's press each time he wears a new hat at some watering place.

Of all the aristocracies, that of service is the only one which should be recognized as worthwhile. "The contribution of service constitutes those factors that make the only true aristocrat," the congressman said.

To students, the speaker suggested ways of bettering the world and suggested that everyone should be a recruiting officer in the legion of service.

No statue has been found by world wide travelers that stands in praise to the aristocracy of brawn or brain or blood or boodle, unless the man commemorated is also remembered for his unselfish life of service, he said.

Fallures in history have been due to selfishness. Benedict Arnold, distinguished American officer until the time when he turned traitor to the cause, stands as an example of such a failure. Jeanne d'Arc, whose statue may be seen in many places, was so unselfish that, when France wanted to reward her for saving her nation from the English, she asked that the exorbitant taxes about to be levied upon the property and the chattels of the poor of France might be marked off. She asked for nothing for herself.

"Mercy" Killer

"If I shot him, it must have been in one of the periods when my soul leaves my body" ... That's what Louise Schwarz, 57-year-old Amityville, L. I., spinster, is alleged to have told authorities who held her in connection with the death of her invalid brother, Edward, 55. She first told police that her brother committed suicide to end 20 years of constant suffering, but the physician who conducted the autopsy gave the opinion that it would have been impossible for the brother to have shot himself.

NON-AGGRESSION PACT PROPOSED BY SOVIET HEAD

SEVERAL BILLS TO COME UP

All But Adults Kept From Court Room During Day

AUSTIN, May 18. (UP)—Legislators were working in a swift pace today in an effort to complete work by noon Friday, which time has been set for sine die adjournment.

Appropriation bills for state departments, schools and institutions were still in conference committees but were expected to emerge Tuesday.

Home Rule Falls

AUSTIN, May 18. (UP)—The senate this morning failed to give enough favorable votes to submit the home rule amendment to the constitution. The house already decided for submission.

All Have Bills

The 42nd Texas legislature, now nearing the end of its regular session, has passed on some of the major issues to voters by submitting constitutional amendments for popular vote.

Both branches have submitted proposals to let reserve officers of various armed forces hold state office and vote in all elections. They have submitted a proposal to let improvements for seacoast communities be authorized by two-thirds of voters participating in an election. A proposal to reduce amount that may be charged for redemption of land sold for taxes, and an amendment to limit future investment of the University of Texas permanent fund.

268 Bills Signed

Up to the normal date for ending the session, May 13, there had been passed and signed by the governor a total of 268 bills. Nineteen were on the desk awaiting approval or rejection. Sixteen of these originated in the house. The numerous ways of shunting measures back and forth between the house and senate have left many major measures still awaiting final action. Some of these, originating in one branch, have been amended by the other branch and so have to go back to the house of origin. If changes are not accepted, conference committees are appointed. If these committees agree they submit their agreement to their respective branches for adoption.

Cowboys Invited To Big Reunion

STAMFORD. (UP)—Invitations to the second annual Texas cowboy reunion to be staged in this city June 25, 26 and 27, are being broadcast to all who saw actual service on the range of West Texas prior to 1895. All who fall in that classification will be honor guests of the three-day program.

FARM LEADERS MEET TO TALK ON MARKETING

CHICAGO, May 18. (UP)—Representatives of the National Farm Co-operative association met today to coordinate activities of various commodity marketing interests now operating under the federal farm board direction.

The meeting was called by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation who said the chief purpose was to effect an organization that would allow farmers the advantage of the federal agricultural marketing act. A further purpose was to organize a defense against groups opposed to the success of the cooperative movement.

Flaming Debris Fall Responsible for Injuries

GAINESVILLE, May 18. (UP)—H. C. Talley, 38, line foreman of the Texas Power and Light company, was killed almost instantly and Wayne Williams, night ticket agent for the M. K. & T. Railway company, was fatally injured here this morning when a wall of flaming debris toppled.

The two were bystanders. A dozen others were injured.

The fire started in the Trev Brothers garage and spread to the Kinney hardware store. Both were destroyed.

Firefighters were searching the ruins to ascertain if others were killed.

Court Abolishes Co. Agent Office

There will be no county farm agent in Midland, effective June 1, according to Frank Wendt, who said he had been given notice by the district agent that the office has been abolished by the commissioners court of the county.

Wendt will move to one of two other counties offered him by T. B. Wood, district governor, he said.

IMPORTANCE OF SUBORDINATES

A magazine writer, discreetly anonymous, has taken up the subject of efficient management of the boss. In all the varied literature on scientific management which he took the trouble to search he could find not one word about how to manage an immediate superior.

Plenty of carefully worked out plans for improving every phase of industrial enterprise exist, but there is not a single treatise on directing the energies of the boss to the greatest good of the business and his clever subordinate. The boss can study principles of handling those under him, but on the art of handling the boss the assistant has nothing to guide him but instinct and experience.

It is not likely that the list of works on this delicate subject will ever number hundreds. Management downward is taken for granted. Subordinate workers are well aware that at least occasionally they are lazy or careless or rebellious, and they assume that some one is going to discipline them and make them work. This frank acknowledgment makes it easy for the upper ranks to be tactless, even ruthless, in management of the lower. But the man in the interior position who has devised his own scheme for molding the boss's opinion and activities cannot on any account afford to reveal the wisdom he has acquired. His contribution to the science of management must be posthumous if it is made at all.

Doubtless, there are countless executives who owe their success to a candid or tactless subordinate, to the plain talk of a discharged employe or to eaves-dropping on the office staff when it is panning the boss.

INTERESTED

Texas should be interested in the plan for observance of national cotton week the first week in June.

Texas is the greatest cotton producing state in the nation. Its crop is a drug on the market. Its producers can't be overly enthusiastic about planting great acreage again this year.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, Inc., announces $2,000,000 will be spent in advertising by retail merchants, this being based on a survey of department stores, chain stores and mail order houses.

It should be a big factor in stimulating trade and business generally. The departments of commerce and agriculture are backing the plan. The least expected of the producing areas is to join in. Money received from cotton in Texas is widely distributed.

West Texas would be just as interested in seeing national wool week.

SWEETWATER AND CHICAGO

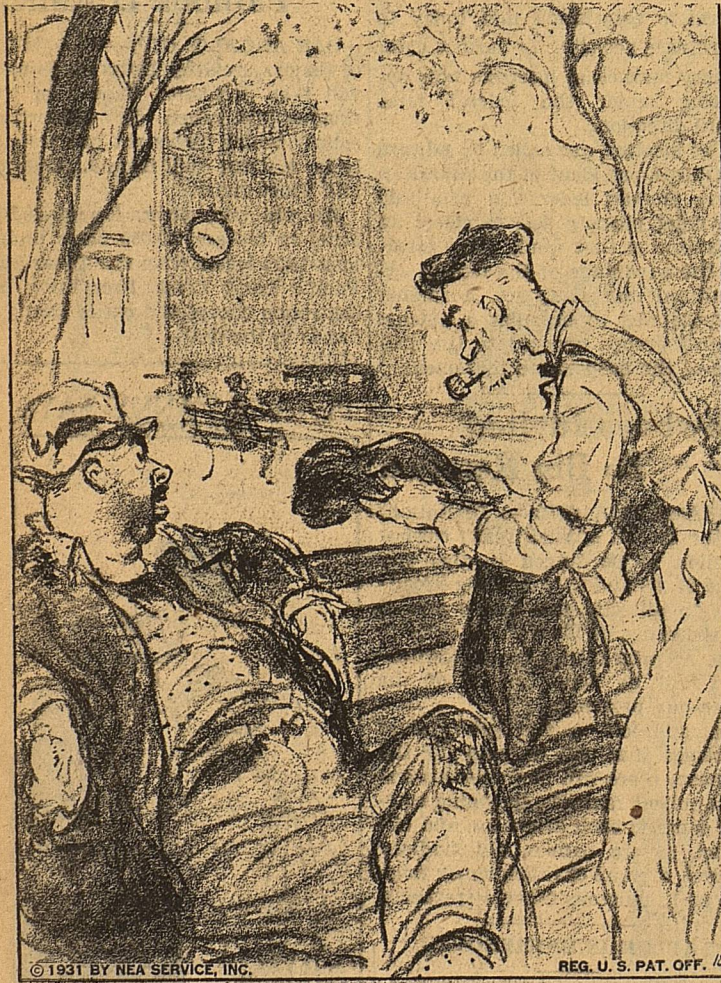

Sweetwater is known out there in West Texas as a tolerantly peaceful community. Up in Iowa, where adventurous youth still reads Texas Thrillers and has its dreams accordingly, the Sweetwater reputation appears to be different.

The following letter, which was recently received by Mayor Claude W. Bryant of the West Texas city, came from "two promising young sleuths" of the corn belt.

According to the Sweetwater Reporter: Last week Mayor Bryant received the following letter from Mt. Pleasant, Iowa:

"We are writing you to see if you need a pair of fast shooting deputies. Motto: We Never Miss. We have caught such criminals as Billy, the Kid; Pete the Terror; Mineral Wells and several other desperate characters as Jumbo Taft. For reference write to Raymond Payne. We are interested in this kind of work and believe we could help your community out. Hoping to hear from you soon. Yours truly, Dead-shot Lami and Shotgun Moore."

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

I've been checking up and I find that I am getting along about as well now as I did during the so-called boom or prosperous years here. I don't care a whole lot about getting rich. Several of friends made some money during the last three or four years and every time one of them made a bunch of jack some kill-joy would say, "You lucky hound!"

That's the sort of bunk that kills initiative and makes a poor man think he would just as soon be poor as to get rich and be called lucky instead of being given credit for his business acumen.

A lot of men got off to town on time this morning. After the sand storm Sunday afternoon, housewives were getting an early start today.

In every town you will find a fellow who gets a lot of free advertising, but he's usually a fellow who doesn't ask for free advertising and who buys some paid advertising.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES The subject of the lesson-sermon was "Mortals and Immortals" in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, May 17.

The golden text was from Galatians 6:8. "He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."

The service included the following passages from the Bible: "They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God." (Romans 9:8); "Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of?" (Isaiah 2:22).

Also these citations were read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The offspring of God start not from matter or ephemeral dust. They are in and of the Spirit, divine mind and so forever continue. . . Immortal man is not and never was material, but always spiritual and eternal."

The first case that I wish to review in settling the famous dispute as to whether a coyote suckles her young is that of Romulus and Remus.

"I'll use the simplest language possible so that Fish Pollard can understand it.

The story goes that Romulus was the legendary founder of Rome and its first king. With his twin brother Remus, he was thrown in infancy into the Tiber, but was preserved and suckled by a she-wolf.

Later on, Romulus slew Remus for some sort of stunt, etc.

Now, let it be understood that the coyote is a member of the wolf family. Let's use deductive reasoning and see what we can learn.

If a she-wolf suckled two little boys, is it not logical that she would suckle her young? We had better put it this way: A she-wolf did suckle two little boys. Is it not logical, then, that she would suckle her own?

A coyote is a member of the wolf family, and it has been proved that a wolf suckles its young. Therefore, is it not logical that a coyote would suckle its young?

I have not said yet whether the coyote suckles its young. I have merely put forth a little argument in the form of questions.

My answer and further review of this case will come up later.

PLEASANT VIEW CLAIMS GAME WAS DRAW

There seems to be a bit of doubt as to who won the Busher-Colt and Pleasant View game Sunday at Bizzell park. Mills tripped with two on base and was tagged at third when he overran the base. Manager Bizzell of Pleasant View said one of the runners, Robertson, had not touched the home plate by the time Mills was tagged.
