Beauty is the thing that most maidens crave-A pretty face and a permanent wave; But, what is beauty worth, I ask of you. Without personality strong and true? Tact and judgement must be possessed by her, Who would rise in this modern world of whir; She must have knowledge practical and broad, If honored she be by her world's applaud; She must be loving and

Her wisdom should grow as she passes on, Through book learning and experience won: Her charm must belong to her-not her dress. Surely, the name "Ideal" she'd not defile!
