Disaster Overtakes Attempt to Race Across Atlantic

ONE PLANE CRASHES; 1 TURNS BACK

Solbert, Petersen in Placentia Bay, Unharmed

ST. JOHN, Aug. 24. (UP)—The race between two American monoplanes over the Atlantic ended in New Foundland last night when one plane crashed on Placentia Bay, while the other was forced to make a safe landing at an obscure port.

ST. JOHN, Aug. 24. (UP)—The Hutchinson "flying family" prepared to take off before noon on the second lap of their flight to Europe.

HARBOR GRACE, Aug. 24. (UP)—The Green Mountain Boy landed here at 7:20, eastern standard time, after an overnight stop at Burgeo.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (UP)—Captain James A. Mollison said today that the storm area over the mid-Atlantic will prevent his return flight to Europe as soon as he had expected.

CROWDS NERVOUSLY WAIT IN DARKNESS

HARBOR GRACE, N. F., Aug. 24.—One of three flying expeditions bent on crossing the Atlantic, had completed its first jump Tuesday night while the other two, planning to make Harbor Grace their first stop, were awaited anxiously here as darkness set in.

Lieutenant Colonel George Hutchinson and his "flying family" of seven arrived at the plane base at St. John, N. F., at 3:05 p. m. C. S. T. after a five hour and 58 minute flight from Lloyd Bennett field at New York.

At Harbor Grace, however, there was no sign of the two other ships, one with Thor Solberg and Carl Petersen from New York, the other carrying Clyde Lee and John Bochkon from Barre, Vt.

Officials at the airport here lighted flares when darkness set in and numerous automobiles, carrying persons who came to greet the two ships, turned on their headlights. It was raining heavily and the wind was east northeast. The latest report of a plane flying in this direction had come from Beaufort 120 miles distant, shortly before midnight.

Solberg and Petersen and Lee and Bochkon have Oslo, Norway, as their ultimate destination. They planned to stop here for the night, refuel, and get away as soon as the weather permitted.

Two other planes were poised for trans-Atlantic crossings in New York.

A. Mollison, Scotch flyer who made the first solo flight from Europe to New York last week, had his Moth plane ready at Roosevelt field for the return trip when the weather reports met his approval.

SNOW AT 9,000 FEET

Those aviators who make daily high altitude flights to get the dope on the weather seem to have some odd experiences now and then.

Ralph Wenzinger, who makes such flights for the weather bureau at Cleveland, had one of them not long ago. He went to an altitude of 9000 feet on a hot summer day—and ran into the heaviest snowstorm he had seen in more than a year!

On the ground everything was summery, and not a flake got down to where earthbound mortals could see it. But Wenzinger, a mile and a half off the ground, was fighting a January blizzard; and he had to go up to 16,000 feet before he could get out into summer weather again.

The moral of all this seems to be that if you have an airplane you needn't worry about hot weather. You can find your own snow just by going up far enough.

The Town Quack

before he reads or hears it. The Ferguson man won't read it if it comes from Sterling and the Sterling man won't read it if it comes from Ferguson, if they can find out some other way but not every voter is sitting so tightly on his own side of the fence. You would be surprised how many are still searching for "the truth." Let's hope they find it.

Bills still arrive promptly, even though John Howe is postmaster. Some fellow who must have been a Sterling man, was in to see us the other day and told this old, old Ferguson story.

An old country boy had done wrong and had been put in the penitentiary. His brother went to see Governor Jim to see if he could get him out. But Jim wouldn't talk about a pardon. He kept talking about a big, fine, upstanding bull he had out on his farm. And Jim finally mentioned that the bull was for sale.

"But what use would I have for a bull?" the farmer asked. "Your brother could ride him home," Governor Jim is said to have replied. "I'm not printing this to be malicious or abusive but just because it's an old, old story and I think it's funny. It has been used in previous campaigns against Jim and they are using it again."

Swapping Yarns with Col. True

Col. True maintains a standing invitation to others to write to him and tell of their own extraordinary experiences. No holds barred. Address Col. True, in care of The Reporter-Telegram.

Dear Col. True: While living in Missouri, where it sometimes gets very hot in the summer time, I was hauling a load of pop corn to town one day. A little after noon the sun kept getting hotter and hotter, and soon the corn started popping and showering down around my team of mules. They thought it was snowing and froze to death. —Mrs. Ola Dublin Haynes.

Madam: That wasn't so hot. I've worn red flannels on hotter days than that. You might as well have told the old one about the warm weather when the hens laid hard-boiled eggs. But, speaking of hot weather and hens, I remember a few days one summer while I was farming back in Arkansas, when it really got hot. About ten o'clock that morning one of my old hens laid an egg. It was a perfectly fresh egg, and when I heard her cackle I ran to get it, but it had already hatched out under that broiling sun. By noon the chicken was frying size, and by one o'clock it was fried. Everything had a sort of scorched smell that day, even the water in the creek which, by the way, was all boiled away by mid-afternoon. I even saw some birds flying past with their feathers smoking.

The banker who held a mortgage on my farm came out about four o'clock that day to foreclose on me, but when he pulled the papers out of his pocket they were burned to a crisp. That saved my farm but the sun had raised big blisters on it and nothing would grow there any more. It was so hot I could smoke my pipe without lighting it, and the smoke rings I blew melted and ran all over the ground.

Joan Still Wants To See the World

When Joan Blondell is all fed up with being a movie star she is going to spend most of her time and money on travel, a habit she acquired quite young. Just at present she is starring in "Miss Pinkerton" the First National production of the Mary Roberts Rinehart thriller at the Yucca theatre last time today. When she was one year old, Joan was in Berlin, Germany having gone there from New York with her trouper father and mother. By the time she was two, the Blondells had played their famous act over most of Germany and were in Paris, France, where Joan spent her second birthday.

A jump of 6,000 miles allowed her to spend her third in Vancouver, B. C. And liking the Eskimos she spent her fourth in London, England. Christ Church, New Zealand, ushered in her fifth. New York her sixth and Cincinnati, Ohio, her seventh. Eighth, ninth and tenth birthdays were spent in Chicago, Ill., Ogden, Utah, and Butte, Montana, respectively.

She jumped to Sidney, Australia, for the eleventh, back to Rockaway Beach, Long Island, for the twelfth, to San Diego for the thirteenth, to Venice, California, for the fourteenth, to Brooklyn for the sixteenth, to Santa Monica for the seventeenth, to Albuquerque for the eighteenth, and to Denton, Fort Wayne, Grand Rapids, Hartford and Hollywood for the nineteenth, twentieth, twenty-first and twenty-second.

But Joan's yen to make up for all the travel Hollywood is making her miss has nothing to do with any dislike of the place. She says that if she weren't in pictures and had her choice of a place to live, she'd choose Hollywood.

Just because the town seems to fit me," she explains. "It lets me do what I like, and nobody bothers. I don't like to wear hats. Neither does Hollywood. I like to run around by myself. Hollywood is the only place I can do it without a lot of special notice." The town itself long ago put the stamp of its approval on "The Blondell Kid." She doesn't go to his parties, seldom, if ever, attends an opening—preferring to mingle, bareheaded, with the crowd watching the stars go in—but she likes it, and it likes her. And that makes it mutual.

There are only about 40,000 Eskimos in the entire Arctic region.

LEGION TURNED OUT

The largest turnout of American legion members ever held for such a purpose took place in Indianapolis recently when legionnaires paraded for scenes in "Tom Brown of Culver," the Universal drama which is to be at the Yucca theatre on Thursday and Friday. The scenes were made on the Indiana War Memorial Plaza, and the parade was headed by Ralph Gates, state commander of the legion. An array of color bearers, drum corps and units representing the cities of Rochester, Anderson, Clinton, Kokomo, Tippon and Frankfort added a gay note to the ceremony. Also in line was the honor guard from Culver Military Academy, where much of "Tom Brown of Culver" was filmed under the direction of William Wyler. Places in the Culver unit were occupied by Tom Brown, Ben Alexander, Richard Cromwell and Dick Winslow, youthful members of the cast. Tom Brown, H. B. Warner, and Slim Summerville are featured in "Tom Brown of Culver," which tells a dramatic story of a boy who attends this famous school.

PETROLEUM DRUG EXTENDS HARDWARE BEFORE GIVING UP GAME

ELLIS' CLUB FLAILS BALL MIGHTILY IN STRONG SIXTH INNING RALLY AND FIVE RUNS RESULT; LOSE GAME THO

By HERB ROUNTREE

Fans of the Nocturne were treated to a real spectacle last night, when Petroleum Drug, a seventh place club, scored five runs in one inning to forge ahead of Midland Hardware. Hardware came back to win an 8-5 game, however, by scoring four runs in the seventh frame, which with the three already tabulated kept the perfect record of the company intact.

Herb Jones and Johnnie Woody hit for four sacks, Woody's blow coming with the bases loaded. Texas Electric won from United Dry Goods in the second game, 8-3. Straughan started wild but settled down and tossed steady ball. Andy Northington slipped into the spotlight with a home run. Straughan on ahead, but the pitcher missed third and his run failed to count.

All-Star Aggregation Made up Solely Of Brothers May Be Turned Loose for Series of Games With Hardwaremen

Two all-star clubs are being picked for a series of games with Midland Hardware at the conclusion of the Nocturne season. One of these will be made up of brothers only, there being at least 16 siblings in the loop.

The games will be designed to pay the remaining cost of equipment purchased at the beginning of the season.

The fans likely will help in selecting a club from the following array of brothers: W. Whitmire, H. Whitmire, B. Hurst, D. Hurst, B. Howard, H. Howard, E. Estes, A. Estes, B. Morgan, R. Morgan, Jack Mills and his brother, A. Nicholson, B. Nicholson, H. Drake and F. Drake. There may be others in this list.

The clubs will be formed in an attempt to find if there can be formed a stronger club in the city than that of Midland Hardware, which club won the first half handily and has not lost a game the second.

"Hello! Hello! Lurline impatiently batted the receiver hook. She was Lottie Callahan again—almost.

Madelon, her French maid, walked in carrying the cake lavishly tied with white ribbon in a jet black box, with the bunch of forget-me-nots on top of the huge bow.

"He hung up! Can you beat it, the bum!" Impetuously Lurline took the bow from Madelon and stalked toward the door. Only a few steps and once more she was the leading show girl of the Folies. She turned, and with an authoritative wave of her hand, ordered:

"Cocktails, caviar and a little cold wine. If anyone calls me, I'm visiting ma mere, and as she reached the door she added, "on Long Island."

Lurline's visits to her mother were of debating clubs to the present day of service organizations, which do not discuss politics save on few occasions. He said he hoped for the day when the old economies return to lift the dilemma of oppressive taxation. He said the per capita tax per month tax has increased from $1.13 to $50 a month for every family head, that since 1914 state taxes have increased from $14,000,000 to approximately $110,000,000. He said cotton in Texas will not pay the state taxes, and that the total farm yield will not pay the national taxes collected.

Woman Leader Against Davis

WEATHERFORD, Aug. 24.—Mrs. Oscar Barthold, of Weatherford, Texas Regent of the Confederate museum at Richmond and prominent in the United Daughters of the Confederacy, in a statement released today, said: "I think that all Daughters of the Confederacy and all of the descendants and admirers of the men who fought with Robert E. Lee, should be reminded that J. H. Cyclopedia Davis, when a member of congress, made a bitter and unwarranted attack on Jefferson Davis and other Confederate leaders and heroes when he said that Jeff Davis, Robert Toombs, W. L. Yancey and others had a damnable design on American liberty and that they planned to extend slavery to Mexico and Cuba, and to secede from the union to save their special privileges. This attack so outraged his colleagues that by a vote of the house of representatives it was expunged from the congressional record.

"Now this same J. H. Cyclopedia Davis comes before us again, seeking the suffrage of Southern Democrats, and opposing the nomination of Joseph Weldon Bailey Jr., a worthy son of a brilliant and loyal Southern statesman whose glorious career is source of pride to every Texan.

"I would not presume to dictate to another how to vote, but as for me and my house, we will cast our votes for young Joe Bailey, and against the traducer of Southern statesmanship and Southern traditions—Cyclone Davis. And I take this method of reminding those who love the South that to vote for Cyclone Davis to represent Texas in the United States congress is to vote to give him an opportunity to again betray the Southland."

CATTLE SHIPMENTS

AUSTIN.—Total interstate rail shipments of all classes of cattle from Texas during July were 2 per cent less than in the same month last year, according to compilations of the University of Texas bureau of business research. The decline was due entirely to the marked slump of 28 per cent in cattle shipments, the report said. On the other hand, carload shipments of calves increased 50 per cent; hogs 56 per cent, and sheep 37 per cent.

"Fort Worth received only about 60 per cent as many cattle as in July, 1931, but a material increase in the number of calves, swine, and sheep occurred at this market last month," the bureau's report said.

"A marked increase over last year is shown for cattle, calves, and hogs at the Los Angeles market for cattle and calves at the Denver market, and for other Colorado points; for cattle at Chicago; for cattle and calves at Nebraska points; for cattle and calves in Iowa.

England's average per capita annual income is about $250.

BLONDIE Of the Folies

By Frances Marion

CHAPTER VII
To one unaccustomed to the tenement district of New York, with its squalor, its noisy din, its filth, its sweating humanity, its nauseous odors—there is only one sure cause. That is a vivid mental picture of the exact opposite—the quiet, clean, exclusiveness of the Park Avenue apartment district.

The Chateau Thermoyne was on Park Avenue, twenty stories of unrivaled luxury. In front stood a footman in livery in gold braid and blue grey, at attention twenty-four hours out of every twenty-four, for the sole purpose of opening and closing the doors of the guests' linousness. At the rear of the Chateau Thermoyne was the New York skyline, an incomparable sentinel that night and day furnished the tenant's eye with the only scenery a city-dweller care for.

A pent house on top of the Chateau Thermoyne was the last word in liveried attention and skyline view. And the choice pent house in the building was occupied by Lurline Cavendish, the newest sensation of the Folies.

Lurline Cavendish was the talk of the town and her figure the object of all eyes. Draped and undraped she graced the pages of magazines, rotogravure sections and just plain newspapers. For this, or against that, she appeared in all the ads, still draped and undraped. "I one were to believe the stories, Venus was a monstrosity compared to Lurline, for Lurline Cavendish had the perfect hands, the perfect feet, the perfect legs, the perfect head, the perfect nose, the perfect hips, the perfect eyes, the perfect waist, the perfect hair—well, there was nothing about Lurline that was not super-perfect.

So said the newspaper stories, and one could almost believe them today. In the richly glittering entrance hall of her penthouse, Lurline Cavendish stood at the telephone making a colorful picture of feminine loveliness. Smartly tailored in the latest-cut suit, wearing a modish and becoming hat, her shoulders draped with elegant silver fox furs, Lurline Cavendish of the Folies looked every bit her name and position. Only those who knew well the Lottie Callahan, or Lacy's Department Store, would have recognized her now. And her language over the telephone would have raised doubts even in the minds of those who knew the old Lottie.

"No—no—no. I'm just leaving my apartment now. . . . What do you want to know for, In-quis-i-tive? I'm going to tell you the truth then. I'm going to see my dear ma-ma. . . . When I saw a silly little boy selling silly little badges I suddenly realized it was Mother's day, and I was overcome with remorse. . . . Thus spoke Lurline Cavendish who was just being Lurline Cavendish of the Folies. But to those who knew, it was just Lottie Callahan, of the tenement district, getting ritzy.

"Oh, you're naughty," Lurline continued into the phone. "Such a naughty boy! How is the market?"

"Lousy!" came the masculine voice out of the receiver.

"No—no—no. Larry, boy. Please. . . . Not that naughty word. . . . no dear, I can't see you. Not for an hour. Poor dear mother is waiting for me. I see so little of her. . . . I feel so guilty sometimes I saw some delightful cakes with 'Mother' done in pearls and sugar over the top and instead of taking large blossoms I thought it would be rather sweet to take just

What's the Reason for this swing to Chesterfield

We believe it's Mildness and Better Taste

IF YOUR cigarette is mild—that is, not strong, not bitter, but smokes cool and smooth—then you'll like it and don't worry about how many you smoke.

If your cigarette tastes right; if it tastes better—that is, not oversweet; and if it has a pleasing aroma—then you enjoy it the more.

Everything known to Science is used to make Chesterfield Cigarettes milder and taste better and to give them a pleasing aroma.

First, the right kind of ripe, sweet leaf tobacco—Domestic and Turkish. Then these tobaccos are blended and cross-blended to make sure that Chesterfields are milder and better-tasting. That's why "They Satisfy." Give Chesterfields a trial. They are certain to please you.
