Eclipse Warning Is Issued Here

The thousands of eyes that will be turned skyward in Midland on August 31, when Old Sol does his disappearing act, had better take a dark view of the celestial spectacle. That's the timely warning from Dr. W. E. Ryan, county health officer and optical expert, who says that vision may be seriously weakened by looking at an eclipse with the naked eye. Dr. Ryan does not recommend the use of ordinary lightly-tinted motoring glasses. "A test for any glass, colored or smoked," he says, "is to glance at the sun through it. If you find you are unable to maintain your gaze, the glass is not dark enough." The best way of smoking glass, he says, is to hold it over a candle flame, moving it along to get an even coating. Hold the smoked side away from the face, while using it, so it won't be brushed off. A photographic film or plate is satisfactory for this purpose if it has been uniformly exposed. But you should try the squint test to be sure it is dark enough.

Elza White Leads Girl Scout Trek

Led by Daddy Elza White, pioneer Texan, a party of girl scout leaders left Roswell, N. M., today on a 200-mile pack trip through the Cuadalupe mountains to the Carlsbad caves. The party is under the direction of the Misses Mary White and Ann Roos, members of the girl scout national staff, and is part of the leadership training given to girl scout leaders in this region, which includes Arizona, Oklahoma and Texas as well as New Mexico. The girls are making the journey on sure-footed cow ponies that can be trusted to take them easily up and down old trails, many of them untraveled by man since the days of the Spanish conquistadores and by woman at any time in known history. Carl Livingston, the archaeologist, has gone along to help them explore the prehistoric cliff dwellings and burial caves they are sure to find en route and also to help them delve into the secrets of hidden canyons. Being all experienced campers, the girl scout leaders are prepared to sleep at night in their bed-rolls on the hard ground and to pitch poncho shelters, should rain at the time threaten. Each is responsible for the feeding, hobbling and saddling of her own mount and for the care of her saddle, bridle, and bed-roll. The hauling of duffle and food is done by a chuck wagon which sticks to the more distant trails and meets the adventurous riders at meal times and at night. An emergency ration of one orange and a can of tomato juice is distributed each morning. To the call of "Roll out, cowboys! Come and get it!" shouted loud and clear by Daddy White, the girl scout leaders will make up each morning to wash hastily in the contents of half empty canteen and powder their noses before pocket mirrors stuck on a convenient cactus. The trip is expected to last through September 8, for they will spend eight days on the trail and one in the Carlsbad caves.

BOB WHITE, ITINERANT CAMPAIGNER FOR ROOSEVELT, WOULD SPEAK HERE

A Midland man who rode a combination burro-bus ride to Albany, N. Y., to see Governor Roosevelt, receiving a trophy cup from the democratic presidential nominee, makes quite a volume of belated copy. For several days his identity could not be established. The purgeon Howell, Midland man, told The Reporter-Telegram he gets postal cards from Bob White, the man referred to, each week, from all over the country. He said White spoke on the Fourth of July program here this year, following W. R. Smith on the platform. Following the ex-cupwinner's talk, delivered in typical range language, Howell took the man to his home for a chicken dinner, then drove him in his motor car to Big Springs. White said he had little money but that he managed to make his way over the country, campaigning first for this candidate and then that. He said in recent correspondence he would be glad to make a talk here soon for Roosevelt. White describes himself as a linesman by profession, and said

Alleges First Bale Too Light

Controversy met with the marketing of the first bale of cotton here Monday afternoon, the grower of the second bale, P. T. Turner, maintaining that W. L. Jones, grower of the first, turned in a "buddle" and not a bale. Turner told The Reporter-Telegram that, whereas a 365-pound bale has been necessary for winning the premium for the first cotton ginned each year, that Jones' bale weighed only 225 pounds, with his lead being in excess of only 700 pounds. Turner also said his own bale weighed 405 pounds, grossing $265, netting $285. Approximately $20 in premiums was made up for Jones. The Turner cotton drove on the sales, and the Cap Wallace was auctioneer. Jones' bale brought 11 cents from the Midland National bank, Turner's 10 cents from the First National. Cap Wallace was auctioneer. The Turner cotton was grown on the T. E. Bizell farm, three miles south of Midland.

HERE ARE FACTS BEFORE DRY LAW CAN BE CHANGED

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer WASHINGTON.—President Hoover's acceptance speech and the division among National leaders as to how to act in this presidential campaign have stimulated everybody to speculating again on the question when the country really can expect to get rid of its prohibition laws. The wets want to know whether there is any hope that the present congress, which stayed good and dry—but not as dry as usual—in its last session, will kindly modify the Volstead act at its next session, which begins in December after the elections. Some of them even profess a hope for passage of some amendment repealing the 18th amendment which could be submitted forthwith to the states. The mechanics of the situation are, chiefly, as follows: That majority votes in House and Senate can change the Volstead act assuming there is no presidential veto, which means two-thirds of both houses, plus ratification in three-fourths of the states is necessary for any change in the constitution. Some wets believe it will be several years before repeal or revision can be attained. The next congress is certain to be wetter than the present one and is likely to have a wet House majority, but it won't meet for at least 15 months unless called for special session after coming into existence next March. In test votes during the last session the wets got from 169 to 187 votes in the House and a 107 strength of 26 in the Senate, indicating the greater difficulty of passing wet legislation through the upper chamber whose members, furthermore, come up for re-election only once every six years.

STAND FOR NO SLASH IN SALARY

Popular Cry for Tax Relief Results In Session

AUSTIN, Aug. 30. (UP)—The legislature opened its tax relief session today by refusing to cut the pay of its own members. Representative J. B. Donnell of Hillsboro, proposed a cut of $5 per day and Mrs. Helen B. Moore of Texas City proposed that the pay be cut to $7.50 from the present $10 salary. Both proposals were voted down. Bills permitting insurance companies and building and loan associations to invest in federal home loan banks and allow sheriffs and constables fees for trips made arresting prisoners on complaint were offered in the house. A resolution to ratify the federal constitution "lame duck" amendment was presented. Rival bills for relief from road bond taxes were circulated for signatures. The house adjourned until ten tomorrow. The senate convened with 25 present, hearing five bills and one joint senate resolution, then adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

TAX RELIEF CALL IS BASIS FOR MEETING

AUSTIN, Aug. 30. (UP)—A swelling cry for tax relief caused the call of the third special session of the forty-second legislature. Governor Sterling told legislators when they convened today. The demand began months ago and became so increasingly urgent from all Texas that it could not be ignored any longer, he said. "Substantial relief can be provided by legislation," he added, "and delaying longer would not be just to the citizen." Sterling said the citizens beseeched him to call a session in July but delayed on account of the fact that most recent winners were engaged in election campaigns. The primary purpose of the session is to enact legislation setting aside a sufficient portion of state highway funds to pay the interest and sinking fund on this year and succeeding years on bonds heretofore issued by counties and road districts to help finance construction of state highways.

LIMPIA CANYON SEES MORE WATER THAN WITNESSED FOR FORTY YEARS

More water than the old-timers remember in 40 years is flowing down Limpia canyon. Walls of water have uncanny habits of sweeping out draws and arroyos at the most unexpected moments, making the roads unsafe to all save strong and experienced swimmers. Of late, numerous cars have been caught in avalanches of water, tons of water flowing with the speed of an express train. Rain on the watersheds bordering the headwaters of small streams feeding into the arid canyon has fallen often in the past few days. Rains last night fell at Marfa, Alpine, Fort Davis, Valentine, Balmorea, Fort Stockton, Pecos and Big Spring. Only a shower visited the Midland area, and this was so light as not to register on the gauge of the government observer here.

Swapping Yarns with Col. True

Col. True maintains a standing invitation to others to write to him the tell of their own extraordinary experiences. No holds barred. Address: Col. True, in care of The Reporter-Telegram.

Dear Col. True: Being a farmer and interested in farm problems, I want to tell you about corn my uncle produced in Iowa. He developed a new variety of corn. One day after he had planted early that morning he was out gathering roasting ears and had to jump to get a firm hold on a good ear. But the corn was growing so fast it carried him too high above the ground to turn loose. His two sons began to chop the stalk down with axes but owing to fact growth of the stalk they could not chop twice in the same place. Presently he was out of sight. This is a true story. My uncle never would misrepresent anything. But what puzzles me is how he got down and why this variety of corn is not grown here. I'm sure you remember the circumstance and will give full details. —C. E. Trammel. P. S. I understand Leon Goodman is raising this variety in Gaines county this year.

Sir: the corn you refer to is a variety that I developed while running an experiment farm in Iowa and I remember well the incident you mention. Your uncle's two sons called upon me when they found they were unable to get the old man down. I came immediately but for once was as much at a loss as they. I realized that I must go back to my laboratory and concentrate on the matter, but in the meantime your uncle was in quite a predicament. However, upon my advice the boys planted another grain of the corn beside the stalk that was carrying their father higher and higher. On this grain they put one drop of True's Super-Fertilizer and when the stalk appeared, they tied a large bag of food to the top of it. Its naturally rapid growth being stimulated by my powerful fertilizer, the second stalk soon overtook the other in growth and as the bag of food went by him, your uncle grabbed it. In this way we insured against his starving while I figured out a way to get him down.

Back in my laboratory then I worked night and day for many weeks upon the problem. In November the boys wrote that their father was beginning to complain and was showing signs of impatience, although with the aid of more corn and my fertilizer they had been able to keep him well fed and had just sent up his winter underwear. I went to work then with renewed vigor and in a few weeks perfected my famous True's Super-Reverse-Fertilizer. I hurried to your uncle's farm, applied some of the Reverse-Fertilizer to the stalk upon which the old gentleman was perched, and it immediately began to grow downward. On Christmas Eve he was back on the ground.

It is my understanding that Mr.

President of the University of Texas Gives a Modern Version of the "Advice To Laertes" in Letter Received Here

A modern version of the "advice to Laertes," this time being directed to a Midland Sunday school class recently named through request, is found in a letter written by H. Y. Benedict, president of the University of Texas, to the Threshold Thinkers class of the First Methodist church.

President Benedict, a brother of C. P. Benedict of Midland, wrote the following letter to Marion F. Peters, teacher of the class, and letters from other university presidents of the United States are being received daily and have been promised for publication by Peters:

"Your request for some words of wise advice from older heads shows that the younger generation is not so wholly absorbed in its own personal welfare and amusement as a great many think. In spite of many bad signs, mixed among the good, I believe that your generation is at least not worse than my generation was.

"Too much attention to private affairs and too little to public has been a standard evil throughout the course of history. Make sure of this—too little attention to the public welfare, too few good and competent citizens, will result in a condition that makes private welfare impossible.

"Without a great number of good citizens, good government is impossible, and without good government, public and private welfare are both impaired or destroyed.

"Governments are merely means by which men try to live together in justice and helpfulness. Man is now the animal most dangerous to man and governments are attempts to lessen the danger. In Texas men are hundreds of times more dangerous than rattlesnakes; where one person dies of snakebite, one hundred are murdered and two hundred are run over by autos. By ways of slavery, revolution, robbery and war men do yet more harm to other men.

"Good will and accurate knowledge are the ways to greater welfare, public and individual. In fact, they are the only ways to better lives and better communities.

"The church and the school are the two great institutions that promote these ways to welfare, to good life, abundant life. Other agencies assist and there is much overlapping of function, but speaking broadly, the church creates good will and friendship, the school helps to a knowledge of what to will and befriend in those frequent cases where the facts are obscure or complicated and require study to bring them out. Love for facts and love for neighbors are two absolutely essential ways to welfare, individual and national. Ill will and error can be but ways to destruction. Deaf, not life, lurks everywhere behind enemies and falsehoods. Good will is even more essential than found facts; good will prevents personalities, self-interests and falsehoods from obscuring the facts and rendering them useless. But good will is not enough. There must be knowledge to direct good intentions in all complex matters. Against ignorance the school against selfishness the church, fights.

"A certain sort of so-called success comes sometimes through sharp practice and twisted statements. A very large percentage of the success I have seen attained has come, however, via fair and generous dealings and mastery of all the related facts. Reliability and competency combined are hard to beat. Play fairly and skillfully; cherish all good will that you possess; prefer being occasionally deceived to being eternally suspicious. The way of kindness is the way of welfare, internally and externally, personally and financially. Cherish facts also. Seek them, find them, use them in coming to correct conclusions. It is not a matter of accident that the most successful wheat operator in Texas is also the best informed man in matters connected with the world's wheat crop. It is not a matter of accident that those who radiate good will receive it back abundantly."

Suggestion for Camers If you hesitate to can fruits because you dislike the idea of sitting down with a bushel basket of peaches or berries that need immediate attention, try this plan. Peel enough peaches, if that is your special fruit, for one jar. Have the sugar and water boiling while you do it. Can one jar. Then repeat the process on the next can. In this way you may stop working at any moment.

The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

"It's toasted" That package of mild Luckies

"If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse-trap than his neighbor, tho he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door."—RALPH WALDO EMERSON. Does not this explain the world-wide acceptance and approval of Lucky Strike?

War Ace Leading Air Reservists

ATLANTA, Ga. (UP)—When air corps reservists of the 312th squadron gathered for training at the airport here, they were under the command of a war ace, who brought down eight enemy ships and was saved twice in one flight during the war by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker.

The commander is Major James A. Meisner, now with the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co., of Birmingham.

When the United States entered the World war, Major Meisner left the junior class at Cornell and was in the first detail sent to France. After advanced air corps training, he was assigned to the 94th squadron of the 1st Pursuit group, led by Rickenbacker.

At 22 he was promoted to the rank of Major and led the 147th Pursuit squadron.

Meisner considers the following his most memorable adventure in France:

On patrol behind the German lines, he left his group to attack an enemy ship below him. While diving on the ship, he discovered that enemy ships were diving on him. Rickenbacker, leading the patrol, took care of the pursuing enemy planes while Meisner took care of the ship below.

Later, going home, Meisner went after two enemy ships flying in tandem. Diving down in his Newport, the fabric of the upper wing gave way at the leading edge. The ship could still be flown, but could not be maneuvered, leaving him at the mercy of the Germans. The latter were about to finish him off when Rickenbacker came diving in again and saved him.

Major Meisner has been awarded the D. S. C. with oak leaf, and the Croix de Guerre with two palms.

WHAT PRICE SPEED?

What price speed? The faster you go the more you pay! That, in brief, is the conclusion reached by the Chicago Motor club, based on a check of automobiles traveling at various speeds. Sixty to seventy miles an hour is from three to five times as expensive as a speed of 40 to 50 miles an hour. Among other things cited in the club's speed survey are these: Gasoline consumption at 55 miles is a fourth more than at 30. Oil consumption at 55 is seven times greater than it is at 30. Tire wear at 50 is double what it is at 40. The wear and tear on cars is many times greater when they are driven at high speeds. Not only is speeding costly in a financial way as the survey proves, it is exceedingly dangerous to life, limb and property. The moral is: Slow down if you would travel at less cost, and save yourself and other fellow from death, injury, property losses, a fine or a stay in jail.

The Amazon river is 3400 miles long and is 150 miles wide at its mouth.

Citizens of the United States spend about $50,000,000 a day for food.

HARDWARE LOSES TO UNITED IN FIRST REVERSE OF SECOND HALF

REPORTER-TELEGRAM CARRIES OUT SPIRIT OF UPSETS BY WALLOPING HOKUS-POKUS IN SCORING MELEE

By HERB ROUNTREE

Sofball history of a sort was written in the Nocturne last night, when a club that had not dropped a game during the ebbing first half smashed its shell in a hard fall and a club that had won but one decision in that period staged an Olympic scoring marathon.

It mattered little save for the edification of the crowd and the wearing away of the scorer's pencils that Midland Hardware lost to United Dry Goods, 8-4, and that The Reporter-Telegram won from Hokus-Pokus, 20-14. However, the value of the upsets could not be judged by the roaring of the crowd—and a good time was had by all.

Pyron's wildness as reflected in four free trips to the initial bag and three errors that smelled to heaven gave the United boys the game over Hardware. Adamson outpitched the Hardware ace and the United club worked with trigger-like precision behind him, making only one blubber. Hits were evenly divided, each club making seven. Two home runs were struck up, one by Cook and the other by Branch.

The other game was a repetition of scoring, with the Newsies and their borrowed players ringing the gong oftener. Hokus used two pitchers, but 11 errors will not win many ball games, especially when the hits are a-mes (14 each) and the opponents make only two bobbles. Parrott and Connor hit for the circuit on the Hokus roster. Northington and Franfield, borrowed players, belting four-ply blows for the Newsies.

How About a Game, Mr. Northington? Ah Me, Mr. Bunnell, but Don't You Think The Idea a Bit Absurd? Now Listen—

By HERB ROUNTREE

Two slightly obese and rubicund young men named Harry Bunnell, party of the first part, and Andy Northington, party of the second, are making conversational medicine ament a play-off between Texas Electric and Bell Telephone—a series that no one, unless it is Bunnell, seems to believe will be played.

Harry throws charges and allegations into that part of Andy's anatomy where the Tesco manager uses his toothpick, saying the two clubs are evenly matched, that both has dropped two and won two games in competition with the other, that Andy is afraid to meet his club, that he, Bunnell, would just as soon take a chance on driving in the winning run against any Tesco pitcher, that the waning receipts of the league would be driven upward by a sensational bear market if his club played Tesco and other things ad lib.

Andy, on the other hand, had little to say when telephoned at his office. "In the first place, I see no reason to play," he said. "Neither and there was a quiver in Blondie's voice. "You haven't done anything," said Larry, coming instantly to her defense.

"We've been chums since we were kids," declared Blondie. "What are you sore about, Lurline?" "I'm not sore—you're absurd. You know perfectly well you promised your mother that you'd be home."

"When?" Blondie stared at her with amazement. "On the telephone just now." "Are you sure?" "We've got no telephone, you know that."

"Screw you," Lurline's voice was full of contempt now. "Don't be rude!" "Well, you're the one that's rude," Blondie looked appealingly at Larry. There was something about the sympathy in his eyes that kept her tenement anger down. She felt much more ashamed than angry.

"You're the one," Lurline walked toward Blondie. "What are you doing about dinner?" "Dinner?" said Blondie in surprise. "I've had it." "What's the idea?" said Lurline to Larry.

"I'm looking for a girl for Pratt. He wants to step out tonight." "Don't you think you might consult the mirror as they heard him coming toward the bedroom." "Where's that good-looking . . ." he asked as he came in the room.

"Who?" asked Lurline, smiling at him certain that he meant her. "You're the one," and Larry walked toward Blondie. "What are you doing about dinner?" "Dinner?" said Blondie in surprise. "I've had it."

Election

CORRECTIONS CHANGE LEAD OF STERLING

DALLAS, Aug. 30.—The barest trickle of new returns from Saturday's democratic run-off primary, the closest election since Texas became a state, raised the lead of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson to 404 votes shortly after 10 o'clock last night. The Texas election bureau reported Governor R. S. Sterling 472,665. Two hundred and twenty counties of the state's 254 had made complete returns. The vote count at that hour totaled 945,774.

No Estimate Given The election bureau closed for the night after announcing these figures. The bureau reported that 68,219 votes had been counted in the 34 counties still marked incomplete. In the July primary their total vote was 68,205 votes, the bureau's figures showed.

No estimate was available of the votes remaining to be tabulated. The changes which swung the pendulum in favor of Mrs. Sterling after Sterling had led all day were accounted for in two corrections which netted the woman candidate 921 votes and in returns which continued to see in slowly.

Two Corrections The vote had veered and swayed from the incumbent to Mrs. Ferguson in such a dramatic manner that A. F. Henning, head of the Texas election bureau, declined to forecast anything as concerned the possible outcome of the race or as to Red Hat's any speakeasy you like.

"You're kidding," and Blondie's smile returns in full bloom. "Come on back," Larry pleads. Blondie stopped walking and started thinking. She liked Larry—liked him more every minute she was with him. Suddenly she said: "I don't know where Lurline gets off to go on like that."

"Just temperament. Let's go to a theatre—like to?" "What theatre?" Blondie was plainly not used to so many invitations in so short a time. "Anywhere you like," said Larry, as they started down the main hall. "I like to see Lurline on the stage."

"Good—you shall . . . the Follies." "That's great," and Blondie was her old self again. "As they reached Lurline's door, Blondie failed to notice that Larry let himself in with a key. They walked across the hallway toward the glass doors of the living room. As they entered, the could hear Lurline's voice saying: "I adore yachts. Do you know Monte Bone's craft? I forget how many tons, but a veritable palace on the sea."

No. 4999 NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE BY UNITED STATES MARSHAL United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas. Fort Worth Division. WHEREAS by virtue of an execution issued out of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas, Fort Worth Division, on a judgment rendered

Dated at Peecos, Texas, this the 15th day of August, A. D. 1932. SCOTT C. WHITE, United States Marshal, Western District of Texas. By E. G. DOTY, Deputy. Aug. 16-23-30-Sept. 6 and Sterling lost 241 by corrections from San Augustine county, a net gain for the former woman governor of 521. Sterling lost 400 in a Sabine county change.

The 5:30 tabulation had shown the governor ahead by 1,427 in his hard fight for renomination for a second term. All ballots had been counted in 220 of the state's 254 counties, with nearly complete returns from the others. The bureau declined to estimate the number of votes still uncounted. When 919,000 had been counted Sunday night, the bureau estimated that not more than 20,000 remained untabulated. Nevertheless, it received more than 25,000 additional Monday.

Sterling Led Through Day The total vote in the first primary a month ago was 967,928. When the bureau stopped work Sunday night, Mrs. Ferguson was in the lead by 493 votes. On its first tabulation Monday the governor led by 9,007. He kept in front throughout the day but his majority had fallen to 855 at 4 p. m. Then it rose to 1,427 on the 5:30 tabulation, was wiped out on the 9 o'clock total when Mrs. Ferguson went 220 ahead. She increased this lead to 404 on the 10 o'clock tabulation.

Returns from the primary will be carried in numerous counties exceeded Saturday and by the state committee September 12. Silent on Contest Governor Sterling and James E. Ferguson, his opponent's husband, and chief campaigner, were both in Austin. Both seemed cheerful. Sterling had to lock himself in an office to write his message to the special session of the state legislature meeting today to consider tax relief.

Neither would say anything about a possible contest of the election. Nevertheless, that possibility was widely discussed. At Marshall, Myron G. Blalock, assistant campaign manager for Sterling, said: "I am convinced Ferguson got thousands of illegal votes and I am not in the least afraid of any contest he might bring."

When the vote at the first primary in numerous counties exceeded poll tax payments there were charges that there had been widespread illegal voting. Three persons were indicted in Gregg county. Both Hopeful James E. Ferguson, husband of Mrs. Ferguson and her campaign manager, said he was hopeful his wife would come under the wire a winner.

"It's a close election, as everyone knows. The outcome seems in doubt just now but still I am confident Mrs. Ferguson will have a lead when an official canvass is made," he said. Governor Sterling likewise was confident of victory.

"I am feeling as good as ever I did in my life," he said. "I had more fun than I have ever enjoyed. If anything my health is better than when I started out on that long campaign. I guess it was because my conscience was clear."

SON BORN SUNDAY A son weighing eight pounds was born to Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Jackson Sunday afternoon at a Midland hospital. Both are doing nicely.

Dry Law

ality of light wines and beer, arising from the amendments prohibition of intoxicating beverages, would almost surely be raised and it might be enough to block modification or cause a veto.

The Glass Amendment If the present congress doesn't do anything about prohibition there is a good chance that the next one will be called into special session next spring to take action, especially in case Roosevelt is elected. Prohibition comes up in the Senate right at the start of the session in December. The Senate will have before it, as unfinished business, the resolution of Senator Carter Glass of Virginia for submission of an amendment which would repeal the amendment which prohibits the saloon and prevent the transportation of liquor into a dry state. This is just the sort of thing President Hoover advocates and the first vote is expected to be on a motion of Senator Norris to refer the resolution to the Judiciary committee.

Several states will hold November referenda on their state prohibition laws and the wets anticipate victory in most of them. Unless such laws are repealed, only about ten states will be legally wet regardless of what was done about the federal laws.

TWO WARD LOCATIONS Two more locations have been staked in section 4, Block 34, H. & T. C. Ry. Co. survey, in southeast Ward county, in which several oil wells have been drilled.
