DECISION OF STERLING ANENT SPECIAL SESSION AWAITED

COTTON CONTROL SOUGHT

Thousands Watching, Hoping Action Will Come

By The United Press King Cotton held the attention of thousands dependent upon him for a livelihood today as the decision of Governor Ross S. Sterling was awaited.

Sterling is expected to call a special session for the purpose of devising laws controlling cotton production. He is studying hundreds of returns from a questionnaire sent to legislators, cotton growers and business men asking for their attitude on the situation.

Solons Questioned Shortly afternoon the governor telegraphed all legislators who failed to respond, asking them to reply immediately.

The governor is also studying Governor Huey P. Long's Louisiana plan, ordering a holiday on cotton growing during 1932. Widely divergent ideas were expressed throughout the state.

A majority is favoring a special session but a few are wanting the adoption of Long's plan.

Sister Midland Resident Is Dead Mrs. Frank Austin, 76, sister of W. M. Schrock of Midland, died early Saturday morning at her home in Belton. Details of the death were not known to relatives here.

Burial services were held in Belton Sunday afternoon. Schrock was unable to attend.

Mrs. Austin is survived by several children. Her husband died several years ago.

Women Top Men In S. S. Rivalry The women beat the men by one person Sunday in the contest between the Co-Workers and the Men's class of Hotel Scharbauer. The women had 60 present and the men 109. However, under the set-up the men are handicapped by 50 persons.

This contest lasts through September. The hairy chested gents of Hotel Scharbauer are not feeling quite so cheery now that they have let the women beat them the first Sunday of the contest, one member admitted Monday, but he added that the men were agitated to the point they would work hard this week.

Cards prepared by Cotter Hiett and Claude O. Crane are being used in invitations. The regular teacher returned Saturday and will speak next Sunday to the men.

ERROR CORRECTED An error in an advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post regarding the location of the Broadway of America, was run in corrected form in a subsequent issue, according to a letter received by the chamber of commerce from the Curtis Publishing Co. The Midland chamber joined other chambers in a protest of the error in the advertisement.

Giant German Air Liner Arrives

Winging above Manhattan's busy waterfront, a passenger liner of the skies—the Dornier DO-X—is shown in this vivid Reporter-Telegram-NEA Service aerial photo as it appeared on its arrival over the metropolis. Note the powerful battery of twelve engines, mounted in tandem. The huge German air cruiser's 131-foot hull is larger than that of the flagship Santa Maria which brought Columbus on his voyage of discovery in America. The giant wing, 157 feet long, is ten feet thick near the leading edge. Note the rows of port holes.

CHINA SUFFERS AS DYKES CUT; REDS BLAMED

HANKOW, Aug. 31. (UP)—Reports were received here today that communist armies cut the dykes along the flooded Yangtze river to swamp pursuing government troops, thereby drowning thousands of natives. Continued rains today added to the suffering of survivors fighting the hunger and plague. Official statistics said that 160,000 houses were submerged and nearly 800,000 persons were affected by the floods. Sixty-six per cent of that number are said to be homeless.

Peters to Address Ward Teachers

The Rev. Howard Peters, pastor of the First Christian church, will deliver the principal address Thursday at the Ward county teachers institute at Barstow. The Midland pastor received a long distance phone call from his former pastorate at West Plains, Mo. asking him to conduct a revival there soon. Mr. Peters was pastor at West Plains for three years. The Christian pastor is now engaged in a revival meeting at Cotton Flat, where the attendance has increased an average of about 55 per cent since the opening service.

TOO OLD FOR GOLF, ANGELO MAN WILL TAKE UP FLYING AIRPLANES

SAN ANGELO, Tex., (UP)—After 40 years of operating a Santa Fe railroad engine, Wyatt Warren Shortt, now 70 years old, will soon retire and will take up aviation. From railroad engineering to "skyway engineering" will be his object. He has passed the government physical examination for a private pilot and in another month will be taking ground school work at the Monsey School of Aviation. "Too old to take up golf," the veteran engineer says, "so I think I'll take to the sky." And thus the man who fired a locomotive when troops were stationed at Fort Concho and who knew Judge Roy Bean, the famed "Law West of the Pecos," is to learn about the most modern of transportation methods. Of the hundreds of Roy Bean stories told and published, Shortt tells on that perhaps has not been

Dobbin Loses in Bout With Train

A new switch stand was required as a result of a plow horse and an iron horse meeting on the railroad track near the refinery east of Midland Saturday morning. The first passenger train to the west struck the horse while traveling at an estimated rate of 60 miles an hour, flinging the animal into the air and into the switch stand. The stand was broken and had the train been traveling east, would likely have resulted in allowing rail spreading and resultant ditching of the fast train. The switch had to be spiked down after the accident so it would be safe for traffic.

CONFESSION ON DEATHBED CLEARS WAY TO FREEDOM

MOUNT CARMEL, Ill., Aug. 31. (UP)—The deathbed confession of George R. Pond, 62, farmer, today urged authorities of two states to start action for the release of Jesse Lucas, who has served 26 years of a life sentence for the murder of Clyde Showalter. Pond's wife told officers that he confessed on his deathbed that he, and not Lucas, slew Showalter. Members of the jury that sentenced Lucas assembled today, all signing the petition recommending his release.

HARLAN LABOR WAR FLARES UP AS TWO KILLED

HARLAN, Ky., Aug. 31. (UP)—Renewed violence in labor troubles was feared today after two coal miners were killed and three wounded. The shootings occurred after the region had been quiet under martial law since spring when outbreaks occurred. The miners were killed last night when they fired upon deputy sheriffs.

40 to Leave City On Hunting Trip

When midnight chimes sound, about 40 men of Midland and the surrounding territory will stir restlessly. They are to get out of bed not so long afterward and betake themselves to the rolling prairie-land of Gaines county to hunt doves. Several oil men of Fort Worth and other towns will be included in the hunting party, it is understood. Fred Turner is one of those arranging the shoot.

Texas Hunters Ready WICHITA FALLS, Aug. 31. (UP). With September 1 and the opening of the dove season just around the corner, Texas hunters are hauling out long idle shotguns in preparation for keen sport. The Texas laws decree that doves may be killed in the northwest sector, except in a few counties governed by special legislation, from September 1 to October 31. This rule applies to country lying north of the Southern Pacific railroad. South of the tracks the season is one month later.

R. R. Commission Confers on Ratio

AUSTIN, Aug. 31. (UP)—The state railroad commissioners were conferring today in an effort to decide upon a regulation of production in the East Texas field, which has been shut down by martial law since August 17. The type of the order considered today was not revealed.

SESSION CLOSES IN CITY

More Than 1000 Are Counted Sunday In Midland

Stanton was selected as the next host city to the Midland-Martin County singing convention at the session held Sunday at the Baptist church in Midland. The next convention is to be held in Stanton the last Sunday in November.

More than 1000 people attended the convention during the day. The majority of those present were from Stanton and the southeastern part of Midland county, but there were a number present from Midland, Odessa, Barstow, Big Spring and various other communities.

Hull Presides The convention was called to order by Elmer Hull, after which W. R. Purser took charge of the choir arrangements. The singing lasted from 10:30 a. m. to 4 p. m. and many present were enjoying the program so much that they wished to continue later.

The congregational singing was interspersed with quartets, double quartets, duets, solos, piano numbers and a reading by Miss Letta Runtree and various special groupings of the singers. Many Midland people said the singing was the best congregational rendition they had ever heard in Midland, the tenor and alto coming in for particular praise.

Welcome Expressed Officers of the association who were responsible for the success of the meeting Sunday were: Elmer Hull, president; Frank Koonce, vice president; J. William Arnett, secretary, and John King, chairman. Arnett was also elected book custodian Sunday to take charge of the new books bought by the association assisted by the Midland chamber of commerce.

A brief address of welcome was given by Paul T. Vickers in which he expressed the appreciation of Midland people for being honored by being selected as the convention city. The Midland man especially complimented the people of Stanton and Courtney and the Greenwood community of Midland county for being mainly responsible for the association, assisted by the people of the other farming communities.

Many Aid Work Two visiting young ladies from Barstow, Mrs. J. A. Hutchison and Miss Ruth Dick; Miss Ole Westbrook, N. W. Wood; W. R. Purser and C. J. Shultz were among those who gave special numbers which drew much applause. (See CONVENTION page 6)

MIDLAND COUPLE FINDS PRICES NO LOWER IN NEW YORK THAN AT HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Paul T. Vickers returned Saturday from a trip to New York City and Niagara Falls. They saw all of the sights sought out by visiting outlanders, besides collecting material for their work. Mrs. Vickers visited the largest studios of dancing and expression in New York to get material for her classes. The Midland couple attended the anti-gangster rally at Madison Square garden where they heard Bainbridge Colby, Gen. Smedley D. Butler, Charles Francis Coe and other speakers. They saw "The Green Pastures," "Grand Hotel" and several other of the best shows on Broadway, got into the visitors gallery of the stock exchange, and visited all of the principal points

Babies Defend Themselves

This little judge's platform leaves no room for doubt. He has joined New York's civic campaign against gangsters. A jury at the annual Rockaway, Long Island, baby parade returned a verdict of first prize for 'Judge' James Delaney Jr., when he appeared on this novel float. It calls attention to the recent killings of children in gang warfare.

Punchers Run out Preachers; Worship

When cowboys want to worship they want to do it in their own way and without being exhorted by ministers licensed to preach the ways of God.

That is the idea of the Bloys camp meeting, held 17 miles from Fort Davis about two weeks ago, or at least the impression made on two Midland men who visited the place for a short time Sunday week. L. B. Lancaster and George Abell drove to the encampment to find a business associate. They were amazed to see a large crowd of punchers squatting on their high heels or gathered in the tabernacle that centers a large natural amphitheatre. DALLAS, Aug. 31. (UP)—Business failed to show much of a revival in the Eleventh Federal Reserve district, of which Texas is a part, during the last 30 days, the Dallas Federal Reserve bank said today in its monthly report.

A substantial gain in the prospective production of principal agricultural commodities and a drastic decline in the price of cotton, the district's major crop, were the outstanding developments listed for the district.

The general picking up in wholesale business, which usually occurs in July, was not in evidence in some lines this year, the report states. While gains were recorded in groceries, and drugs, decreases were noted in dry goods, farm implements and hardware.

Weather conditions have been generally favorable for crop growth and harvesting operations, the report said. Prospective production of most major crops and many minor crops is larger than a year ago, according to August first reports of the department of agriculture.

The price of cotton, which had been declining most steadily since the early days of July, broke sharply following the issuance of the government's report on Aug. 8. The low price will materially reduce the returns from this year's cotton crop and, consequently, the farmers' debt paying and purchasing power, the report stated.

Contrary to seasonal tendencies, exports of cotton during July from the ports of Houston and Galveston exceeded those of the previous month and again reflected a substantial increase over the corresponding month of 1930. During the 1930-31 cotton season, which ended July 31, however, the combined exports of cotton from the two ports averaged 2.4 per cent less than in the 1929-30 season. Receipts during the 12-month period were 3.2 per cent (See DECLINE page 6)

Officers Skeptical; Form Letters Are Found

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 31. (UP).—Prison chain gangs today dug beneath the cement garage floor and in a sewer outside in a hunt for bodies of more sex starved women, believed to have been murdered by Harry F. Powers, mail order Romeo.

Powers, who is in jail, insisted there were no more bodies. Authorities ordered searching to continue, believing that more names might be added to those of Mrs. Dorothy A. Pressler Lemke, latest revealed victim, and Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher and her three children. Form letters written by Powers to women in all parts of the United States and also replies were in the possession of police.

THE CONSTANT REVOLT

Retiring after 30 years of service as dean of men at the University of Illinois, Thomas Arkle Clark casts a thoughtful glance back over the years and concludes that young people, taken by and large, are just about what they always were.

"Young people haven't changed fundamentally in 30 years," he says. "They are all going to the same places, only their ways lie over hard roads, in automobiles, or in airplanes, and the to the accompaniment of radios.

"The economic and social conditions are different, but not the psychology of youth. There are just as many serious-minded students and just as many frivolous ones as 30 years ago."

All of this sounds logical enough, but it is vaguely disappointing. A man who has kept a watchful eye on university students for over a quarter of a century ought to have something to say about the revolt of youth, or the way in which the younger generation is going to perdition. We expect it of him. It's an old American custom.

Still, the gentleman probably knows what he is talking about; and his summing-up makes one wonder if this whole "youth problem" isn't one of those perennial problems that never get solved, never get worse and never lead to anything in particular.

It is the function of youth to be in revolt, to be disrespectful of its elders, to do things that the generations just ahead thinks scandalous. Every "younger generation" since the days of the Pharaohs, probably, has been that way. This, indeed, is the one unchanging thing in a changing world.

Indeed, we older ones who get shocked by the doings of the youngsters—were't we ourselves, a few years ago, shocking our own elders? And weren't they, in turn, doing the same thing a few decades before? All of these revolts that we and our fathers and our grandfathers led—where are they now? Living on in the youth of today, perhaps—otherwise, non-existent.

The fact is both comforting and saddening. Youth isn't going to upset the applecart. It will grow up presently, get disillusioned, and raise its own hands over the antics of its children. It always has, and it always will. Sometimes one almost wishes that it wouldn't.

LEARNING TO DIE

A good soldier should know how to meet death gallantly; and it appears, from a recent United Press dispatch, that John J. Fitzgerald of Boston, formerly a soldier in the A. E. F., knew this as well as any soldier that ever lived—even though death did not come to him until nearly 13 years after the war ended.

Fitzgerald—in case you didn't see the story—lay in a Veterans' Bureau hospital in Pennsylvania. Shrapnel wounds and gas had wrecked his body. He had only a fortnight to live, and he knew it. Also he had some $380 in ready cash.

So, a few days ago, Fitzgerald left his bed, dressed quietly, and went A. W. O. L. from the hospital. He went to Pittsburgh, with his cash in his pocket. There he made for a mission where the down and out were cared for.

Quietly, the ex-service man mingled with the jobless men who were living on charity. He talked to them and learned their needs. To one man he gave the price of a ticket home. For another he bought new shoes. For a third he bought food.

So it went. Presently he had just 75 cents left. He went to a cheap rooming house, rented a room, and lay down to die. Death came, very speedily. His body went to the city morgue, and was identified just in time to prevent burial in the Potter's Field.

The great ones of the earth, after all, aren't the ones that give the rest of us the courage and faith that we need if we are to go on living. Those things come from the humble ones—the unnamed and unnoticed private soldiers, who prove that unselfishness and simple bravery can triumph over death and the fear of death. There is more encouragement in this little story about John Fitzgerald than in a dozen sermons or a hundred novels. Humanity that can handle its last hours as he handled his is not, after all, so very far below the angels.

Most of us do not like to think about death. We are

Two Out of Three Men and One Out of Four Women Are Employed In American Cities, a Survey of a Dozen Cities Shows, But There Is an Increase of Women at Work

WASHINGTON.—About two out of three men and one out of every four women in American cities appear to be employed.

One gathers this from a cross-section of the reports that come in every day from the Census Bureau of its count in various cities of "persons 10 years old and over engaged in gainful occupations."

Taking five California cities and seven New York cities from the latest batch of returns you find that the average percentage of the male population employed is about 66 per cent and the average percentage of the female population about 24. The California cities are San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, and Oakland and the New York cities are New York, Albany, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Buffalo and Yonkers.

The larger cities show a greater percentage of gainfully employed persons of both sexes and the percentage of women at work increases especially in the bigger centers. San Francisco has 74 per cent of its men and 29 per cent of its women at work; New York 67 per cent and 25 per cent. The state of Maine, by way of comparison, shows 74 per cent of its men gainfully employed and 21 per cent of its women.

Figures thus tabulated indicate an anticipated but not startling increase in the proportion of women at work, both married and single.

Your correspondent also acknowledges announcements in the same mail from the Department of Agriculture, Labor, Justice and Interior. Listen:

Paradichlorobenzene dissolved in crude cottonseed oil at the rate of one pound for two quarts of oil and applied with a paint brush is the latest and most satisfactory control measure for the lesser peach borer. Experts worked three years in Georgia before that announcement could be made. The lesser peach borer is the one that attacks trees above the ground and the other borer, called the peach tree borer, strikes at the trunk, just below the ground.

Both domestic and foreign markets for butter have shown considerable strength in the last month. Russian butter exports continue to increase.

The Interior department says the number of student caravans—classrooms on wheels—has broken all previous records in visiting Yosemite National park this summer.

Its office of education assures parents that lisping and stuttering in children does not necessarily denote an inferior native ability and that among those who suffered from vocal impediments were "Leigh Hunt, Charles Kingsley, Charles I. Demosthenes, Aristotle, Aesop, Alcibiades, Cato, Virgil, Manzoni, Erasmus, Halberbe, Turenne, Boyle, Priestley, Lamb, Erasmus Darwin, Charles Darwin, Moses Mendelssohn, Cardon, Camille-Desmoulins and the little artist, David."

Black Diamonds Don't Glisten, but Are Valuable to Industry..

BY DEXTER H. TEED NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Aug. 31—Little black bits of, cinder-like mineral, insignificant appearing as grate sweepings, are caught by the downward thrust of a steel tooth. Relentlessly it crunches, with pressure of 25 tons, and fragments are sectioned.

And because that has been happening in a small office high up in a Manhattan building for 30 years, thousands of wheels are turning, stacks all over America are belching smoke, automobiles are whining over a network of highways—and billion dollar projects are speeded onward. Boulder Dam couldn't be built without them.

$20,000,000 Worth The cinder-like bits are black diamonds, as pure as the brilliants that sparkle on the bosoms of heiresses. But theirs is a less glamorous though more practical destiny, for they are designed to become the teeth of drills that eat into earthbound minerals, far below earth's surface.

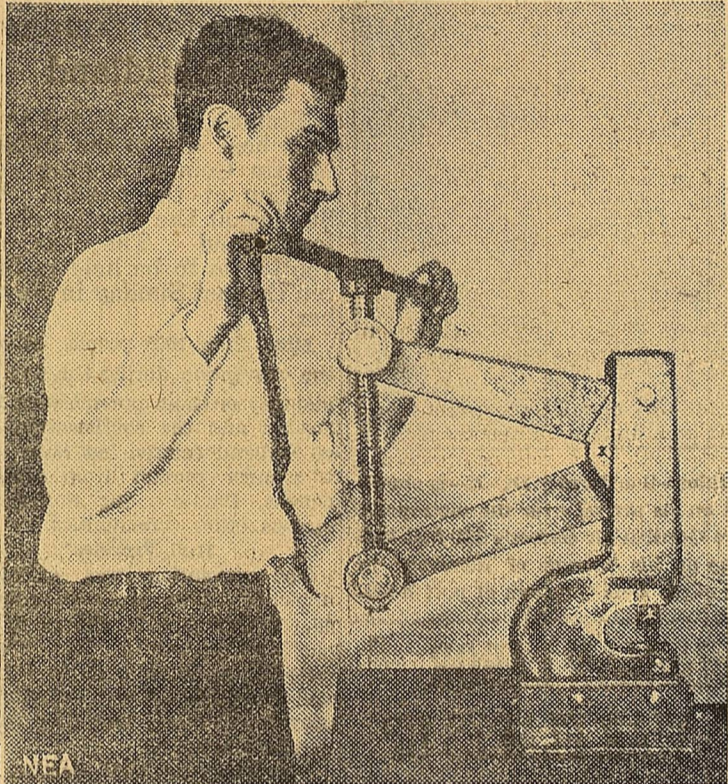

In that single breaking machine black diamonds worth $20,000,000 have been fashioned by Arthur Bandler, called the "black diamond king" of America.

As cutting edges for diamond drills these unimpressive bits—you wouldn't pick one of them up if you saw it on a sidewalk—have uncovered unguessed mineral deposits in all parts of America, and the world. They are indispensable. From the time they are washed from alluvial sands in the wilds of Brazil until they are playing an essential part for some giant corporation, they are wholly out of the limelight.

Tougher Than White Stones They are used only for commercial purposes. As the white diamond is crystalline, has lines of cleavage and will therefore crack it is unsuited for drilling. But the black diamond, cinder-like though it may seem, has no lines of cleavage and thus can stand the battering when a drill bores down into rock-ribbed Manhattan or flinty rock of ore-bearing ranges.

Bandler, who seven years ago obtained the only diamond concession ever allowed in Bahia, Brazil, sometimes carries as much as $100,000 worth of black diamonds in his pockets. He has no fear of robbers, for criminals who obtained the black bits could never sell them, as mining and other organizations buy only from reputable firms. They are worthless as gems.

Once Thrown Away Until it was discovered they were better than white diamonds for drilling, some 40 years ago, they were thrown away. But once that discovery was made, waste heaps were combed frantically by industrious natives. Now they are worth about $185 a carat, more than the white diamonds. The demand exceeds the supply.

Black diamonds . . . useless to milady as jewels but invaluable to industry . . . become the teeth of drills after being shattered by the device pictured at the top . . . Below, Arthur S. Bandler, the "black diamond king" of America, tests the quality of one of these strictly utilitarian stones under the microscope.

The largest black diamond ever found weighed 3078 carats and was as large as a big fist. Bandler, with his machine, has broken diamonds as large as 600 carats. The yearly production is 3500 carats, worth nearly $5,000,000.

Secrets of methods of breaking up diamonds have been guarded jealously for decades, but Bandler says now that he sees no reason for secrecy any more.

Sees High Future Looking into the future he predicts enormously wealthy deposits of mineral may soon be discovered because of a new utilization of black diamonds.

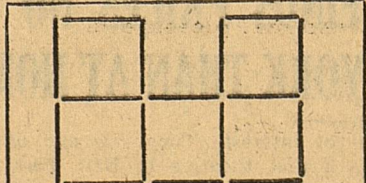

Diamond drills can be transported to isolated and unexplored regions by airplanes and borings made to locate deposits deep in the earth. The older method of sinking a shaft was impractical in territory far from civilization.

But that is not Bandler's job. He must conduct his business, direct 1400 natives in Brazil and crush out teeth on his machine to make the drills that probe deep down in the earth.

A soldier has to learn that lesson so thoroughly that it is a part of him. This Boston Irishman learned it, and when the test came he met it gallantly.

It seems the old man didn't know I would someday be a successful columnist. So one night I called my wife (she was my girl in them days) and she said I'd better not call any more. "I'm afraid something's going to happen," she said. "I saw pa putting lead in his wooden leg."

And she has the effrontery to tell me I don't have a leg to stand on during the depression!

like that of Christians; the rise and spread of Islam and the rise and degeneration of Mohammed, its founder—all these are discussed by the author in a readable manner.

So are the great religions of India—Buddhism and Hinduism and others with their strange asceticism and stranger seeking after utter nothingness as the supreme goal to be attained by man. The fad (which it probably deserves no more dignified name than that) which is now found among western peoples of more or less enthusiastically listening to and perhaps accepting Hindu systems of thought is noticed by Mr. Browne. He concludes that Indian philosophy will not take deep root in the Western world. Why? Because at the heart of Hindu philosophy is the desire for final death and absolute extinction and such a desire the rampant western mind cannot comprehend.

The so-called "Three Truths" of Confucianism, Taoism, and Buddhism are discussed under the caption "What Happened in China." It is a part of the strange irony of fate that the men who were responsible for the creation of the two religions of Confucianism and Taoism had very little liking for the gods and for prayer. Yet after death both were made gods and prayed to by ardent disciples.

The discussion of Judaism under the heading "What Happened in Israel" is probably the most interesting part of the book. Mr. Browne explains the old Jewish prophets to an extent that makes the reader wonder if he is himself of Jewish extraction. If he shows any favoritism in his treatment of the various religions, it seems to be for Judaism. With Christianity perhaps next.

The discussions of Jesus Christ, and Christianity are to a conservative Christian rather very convincing nor satisfactory. The book is not written from the viewpoint of orthodox Christianity. It apparently aims to deal with religions impartially. Certainly Christianity receives no favors unless it is in the final summary of its accomplishments.

The author writes fluently and well—so much so that there are times when the reader almost forgets that this or that convincing paragraph is founded not on fact but on some "probably" or "if" clause preceding it. It may be significant that such paragraphs are often the ones that would seem to disprove certain cherished beliefs. If read at all, this book should be read through; otherwise it will be misunderstood.

For the reader whose beliefs are well grounded and who knows how to select and reject automatically as he reads, "This Believing World" will be interesting reading. To others, probably, it will be unprofitable.

The book is now on the fourteen-day shelf of non-fiction at the county library. —Kathleen Elland.

STANTON WALLOPS BALL TO BEAT ICEMEN WHILE SCOUT WATCHES

COAHOMA CRACKS OUT DECISION OVER P. V.

Stanton took a good baseball game Sunday afternoon from Southern Ice, 10-6. The Ice pitcher, Bill Howard, gave up only five hits, but errors of Jones and Howard at shortstop and second, respectively, kept him in hot water almost every inning. Both he and Jack Heaton, Stanton pitcher, ran wild at intervals, however, a weakness that bobbed up at the wrong intervals Sunday. Heaton allowed 11 hits to be taken from his offerings.

Stanton was unable to get "Red" Holt out, the big catcher hitting four out of four trips, two doubles, a triple and single. He batted in five of the six runs made.

A scout from Louisville in the American association, Dave Shean, was in Stanton to watch the work of Johnie Woody, Stanton's left-handed second baseman. He was impressed with his play, and said all the two pitchers need is control to make them among the best pitchers in the state. Woody made several particularly pretty catches, and L. Jones, Southern Ice center fielder, made several nice catches and throws.

In Midland, the Volunteer Firemen beat the Bizzellmen 8-6 in a game that took the place of the Big Spring-Bizzellmen game, called off because the Cosden Oilers could not play until after 5 o'clock.

A crack team from Coahoma completely swamped the Bizzellmen in another game, winning by a reported 21-3 score. No score sheets were kept of the two Midland games.

SPORTS REPORTS

BY R. C. HANKINS

With a lantern in one hand and a philosophical taste in the mouth, we try to play at being happy at the conclusion of our vacation; saying we need to come back to work in order to rest, that vacations are the bunk inasmuch as they keep one on the go forever and anon, that they blister one's back, shoulders, face and legs, and such like. But it's hard to kid oneself. Vacations are great, sunburn and all. We've not been out of the city limits and have enjoyed the best vacation of our rapidly aging existence. Golf, swimming, radioing, reading (except for newspapers) and that sort of thing. A couple of playground ball games. To Sunday school and church. To dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Starr, and who minds if you wear golf clothes? That was the sort of thing. Sandy Auchterlonie, the golf pro next door in the apartment has lots and lots of golf magazines and the best radio we've heard. Bo-Peep went over and peeped in the window and got acquainted. Soon she was in the house and since we had to go after her we had a chance to see the magazines. Mrs. Sandy is reading some of our American and Colliers and that sort of thing—and we keep the golf magazines in circulation.

Now that the foregoing has stamped us as officially back on the sports desk, we'll shake the emulsi settling around your shoulders and make an interesting announcement: Women of the playground ball league will organize basketball teams. A meeting has been called to open at 6:30 this evening at the chamber of commerce. "Don't wait for a personal invitation," Mrs. George Abell said. "All women are asked to come if they are interested." Another invitation to Stanton to engage in three games with an all-star aggregation of playground ball players in Midland has been issued, and the results of such a series would aid in buying basketball equipment. Midland women will never be content to stay home and play bridge in the evenings again, we are informed. They must have their athletics. We must say—ungrudgingly they have made a perfect go of it of late, and must compliment their decision to carry on through a season of another sport. We even hear

MIDLAND WINS GOLF TOURNEY OVER STANTON

For the first time this season, Midland B golfers outshot the Stanton country club team, winning a Sunday afternoon tournament on the links here, 59-29.

Early in the afternoon a gale hindered good play but the wind layed about the time of the in round and clouds made the afternoon more comfortable.

A return tournament will be played Sunday, Sept. 12, in Stanton. They have a building in which to play.

"Oscar" Seymour would have shot some more balls over the fence at No. 5 fairway yesterday—but alas! Oscar had only five balls. These he got over without any trouble.

Sandy was ill this morning, running a high temperature. Result of gas breathed when in the World war. Affected as though with la grippe. First time he has been troubled since coming to Midland. St. Louis, where for years he was pro at one of the finest clubs of the city, is too humid for him so he is out west in the aridity. One of the best fellows we've seen. We were taking a bit of driving instruction early Sunday morning and overheard Sandy tell a golfer he should watch a woman swing and pick up some points. "The average golfer is very foolish," he said. "He comes out to the course and dubs around, getting no fun out of his game. He is responsible for the common belief that golf is a lot of hard work over which men exclaim as if it were play. He is like the man who bought a grand piano, had it delivered, then threw it out the window because he couldn't get a tune out of it. All golfers should start with instruction, just like a kid starting to school. One must have form to play, and no amount of reading in books can give you that. Just a few minutes with a pro will do more than years of unassisted study. There are individual traits to be reckoned with."

In justice to Sandy, we must say he was talking to us—and about our own brand of play. After 30 minutes, we could hit a golf ball easier than we ever did in our life, and with a brassie could send a shot much farther than we ever did with a driver. Into the wind, we found that a clean hit spoon shot can bore straight and with distance into the wind. For one, we advocate that about 50 fellows about town plunk down a $2 bill and get Sandy to work with him on those woods. You'll save many dollars a year in balls you've been hitting into the rough and over fences.

Theo Ferguson tore a ligament in his left foot at Big Spring Sunday. Played 48 games afterward. Then had to quit. He possibly will be out of play for the season, certainly faces the prospect of not entering the El Paso tourney. Incidentally, all Midland players lost in a clean sweep to Big Spring.

BANKERS AID GREAT BRITAIN ON ROAD BACK

BY ARTHUR F. DEGREVE
LONDON, Aug. 31. (UP)—The conservative, influential Bank of England is at last giving Britain industry a helping hand in its fight for life.

Although London still remains a great money market, industrialists here for the past 10 years figuratively have gone to the cupboard and found it bare.

The explanation lies in the policies adopted by both the financial institutions and leaders of industry in the 19th century when Great Britain led the world in modern industrial development.

Two Kinds of Banks
It was an era of plenty. Money that found its way into industry came from the pockets of owners and executives, many of whom had independent fortunes. Banks were divided into two classes.

One—Deposit banks—joint stock banks, which were organized to finance commerce rather than industry and whose chief thought was for easy liquidity of advances. Development of expansion of plant and equipment were not considered.

Two—Merchant banks, which financed projects throughout the world including railways, mines, etc., but which showed no interest in home manufacturing where their financial returns were not considered comparatively attractive.

This situation confronted the country at the end of the World war, which consumed fortunes and men alike. Manufacturers suddenly were faced with the necessity of modernizing their plants in order to compete abroad and found it extremely difficult and costly to obtain proper backing.

Liquid Funds
Ample liquid funds existed in deposit banks and there were large subscriptions to huge foreign loans launched here, but the British industrialist was compelled to float stock issues at high rates, because of the low earnings shown in the annual reports.

The result was a steady decline in plant efficiency. The already serious condition of industry was hastened by the world wide economic depression.
At this point, in November, 1929, the Securities Management Trust, Ltd., was formed under the auspices of the Bank of England to investigate and advise upon schemes of rationalization in the basic industries of Great Britain.

In April, 1930, the bank sponsored the formation of the Bankers' Industrial Development Co., Ltd., whose shareholders included all the important merchant bankers, joint stock bankers and investment trusts. Its object was to provide funds to assist in rationalization schemes approved by the Securities Management Trust, Ltd.

Financial Leaders
Leaders of the nation's financial, industrial and agricultural world are represented in the two companies, but the Bank of England is the inspiring force. The shipping industry and textiles already have benefitted from it and ambitious plans are being made to help others.

One difficulty, however, may arise to curtail progress in this direction. The will to rationalize must be present and exhibited before the two agencies will interfere. This hazard is doubly great when the conservative nature of the British business man is considered and the matter of family prestige, which may be affected by any radical change, properly discounted.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Meek returned Sunday from Plainview where they spent the week with friends.

Punchers--

wind like chalky ribbon. Cooling breezes sweep the place, it must be about 6,000 feet in altitude, making for summer comfort. Various denominations have their own camp kitchens and visitors eat with which denomination they wish.

No one pays. When the meeting is over expenses are figured and one gives what he likes.

"You'd be surprised to hear how many checks officials in charge tear up," Lancaster said. "They told us they found they had more money offered by ranchmen than was necessary to maintain the camp during its session."
"One of the most peculiar things about the prayer meeting services of the ranchmen, they don't let ministers meet with them. One minister told me the cowmen 'chased' him out. He thought it was funny. Other services, naturally, are open to all.

"Punchers get up, twist their hats and tell of their experiences. One man from Jeff Davis county was on the platform while we were there. He said that, large as the county is, only one pauper had been buried there in 50 years, and that the reason for his being outside the pale of Christian experience. He told the punchers all one had to do in order to have means and some affluence was to honestly profess religious tendencies before other men."
"Ex-Congressman Claude B. Hudspeth of El Paso was there, as were Judge Hendrix of Odessa, and a brother of 'Cowboy' Evans, Midland ranchman.

"The camp was established by the Reverend Bloys, a Presbyterian minister, 45 years ago, and has been continued for a week a year since."

Aboard Airliner Eastern Air Transport

Smoking compartment, Washington-New York plane. Hostess offering Chesterfields. Photos by courtesy Eastern Air Transport, Inc.

Dear Peggy

I'm almost too excited to write, and there's so much to see, both inside the plane and out. We've left Washington behind now, and I've just had a Chesterfield in the smoking compartment—they serve them on every ship.
"Among the eighteen passengers there's a senator and a foreign diplomat, and I'm surprised at the number of women. The trip is two hundred miles and the meter in the cabin reads two miles a minute, think of that.
"For me, the Chesterfields were the nicest touch of all. I was just dying for a smoke, and when the hostess passed them (and my favorite cigarette at that) everyone else seemed as tickled as I was. And my—they did taste good!"

Chesterfields are served in the smoking compartments of all these planes—the largest and most luxurious in the East. With the fast growth of air travel, Chesterfield makes many new friends each day, here as in city streets and country homes—wherever good taste counts.

A mild cigarette—delightfully mild and smooth—with a tobacco fragrance all its own.

Whether you're air-minded or not, you'll always find Chesterfield on the air-line to taste—the quickest way to get there. They Satisfy!
