The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

Harry Tolbert who, on account of wet weather, has not been able to get the feed stacked out at his farm, said maybe he could grow some more feed to stack next year as result of the moisture.

At least one thing Hoover and these foreign emissaries can agree on is a statement that they have not agreed on anything.

Americans may be fast, but Grandi has demonstrated that he is still Fascist.

A Baltimore girl, seeking divorce, said she was hypnotized when she was married. And who isn't?

Despite the depression, a metropolitan laundry did a bigger business this year than last. Sure cleaned up!

In smoking there's no waist, so the ads say.

Report on where it has rained: Everywhere.
 Report on amount of rainfall: Plenty.
 Weather forecast: Wet.

I'd hate to go in for any such betting as took place between Gene Howe at Aarillo and Chas. Guy at Lubbock. As result of Amarillo's win over Lubbock Thanksgiving day, Guy had to sweep out the Amarillo News-Globe three-story building and some other institutions having heads of civic organizations standing guard.

This is a nice day for the game between Lubbock and Pampa and, likely as not, the drizzle there is more crystal like in form.

NEW SONG PLATES

A brand new gift for the home-maker who is an inveterate hostess is a set of the new French peasant plates that have a little time for their center design.

They come in the gayest colors and each plate of the four, eight or twelve sets, has a different French air on it, each labelled so you will know well what song you must sing when you finish eating, quite the reverse action from little Tommy Tucker who had to sing BEFORE he ate.

For the bridge table or a luncheon these plates are most decorative and highly entertaining, and mother, a fussy aunt, a bride, or almost any woman would love them.

K. E. Nutt and son, K. E., Jr., are in Midland today from their home in Lovington.

Mrs. A. B. Coleman and son, Ray, and daughter, Beulah Mae, spent Thanksgiving with Mrs. Coleman's sister, in El Paso.

RIISING FROM OBSCURITY

One of our favorite traditions is the belief that only in the United States can the son of poor parents rise to the highest positions in the land. The "log cabin to the White House" story has convinced us that this is true. Only America holds opportunity for the underdog.

To a certain extent this is true. But there are more exceptions than we generally suppose; and a recent dispatch from Paris by an American newspaperman contains some information that is apt to be surprising.

Europe, this writer points out, is today very largely ruled by men who came from the lower strata of the population.

In England, of course, there is Ramsay MacDonald, brought up in the bleak poverty of a Scottish village, and now prime minister of the empire. Paralleling his case is that of another famous English prime minister, Lloyd George, who was a penniless orphan and who was reared by a shoemaker.

In France, Premier Laval was the son of a butcher. His family was so poor that he had a hard time getting a decent education. Foreign Minister Briand, similarly, was the son of exceedingly poor parents. Former Premier Herriot is another who came from a poor family.

Chancellor Heinrich Bruening of Germany did not come from a poverty-stricken family, but his people belonged to the lower middle class. In Czechoslovakia Thomas Masaryk is president, the son of a blacksmith, and another blacksmith's son who rose to power is none other than Benito Mussolini himself. Russia, of course, is ruled by men who came up from the depths, and has been ever since the revolution.

This list is rather impressive. To be sure, it is probably perfectly true that opportunity is still greater on this side of the Atlantic than in Europe. The son of poor parents has more chances. But it is quite obvious that the avenues to fame and riches are by no means closed to him on the other side of the ocean. Europe's so-called ruling class is by no means the closed corporation we generally suppose.

WORST DEPRESSION?

The head of a large life insurance company recently took up arms against the prevailing notion that the current depression has been the worst one in American history. Speaking to a writer for the Magazine of Wall Street, he declared:

"In 1839 every single bank in the United States outside of New England closed its doors. On May 10 of that year every bank in New York City closed. . . . In 1873 there were 3,000,000 men out of work in a population of 40,000,000, 89 railroads went into the hands of receivers, and 300 out of 307 iron and steel plants absolutely shut down. As for 1893, I remember it distinctly, and I want to tell you that as a nation we are in ease now compared with what we went through then."

Cold comfort? Perhaps. But it doesn't hurt to be reminded that our condition not only could be, but in the past has been, a great deal worse than it is now.

DANGER IN HUNTING

The opening of the fall hunting season has brought an amazing number of reports of deaths and injuries to hunters, especially in the populous states of the east and middle west; and a reading of them almost makes one think that there are large sections of the country in which there is no longer any room for the hunter.

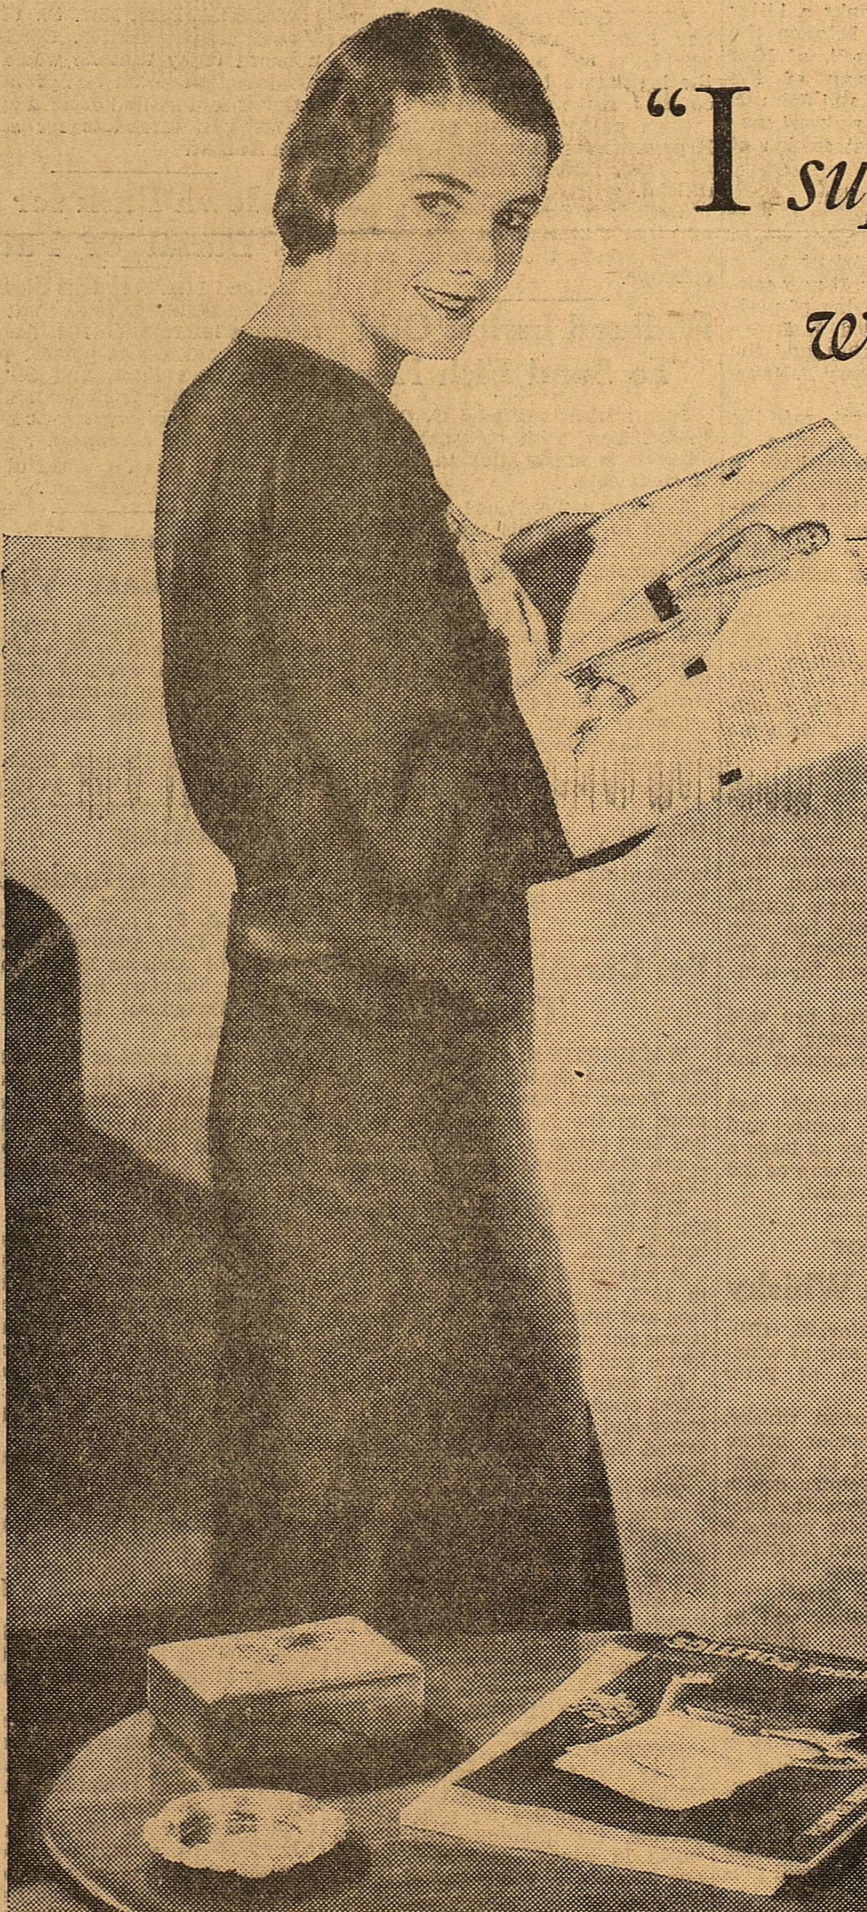

For that seems to be the cause of a huge percentage of these accidents. The hunters are too close together. There are too many cities and towns, and the open fields where game abounds do not have space for all who wish to hunt to do so in safety.

It is odd, when you stop to think about it. Much less than a century ago such items as venison, wild turkey and pheasant were common on the bills of fare almost everywhere west of Pittsburgh. Today the congestion is so great that the hunters can't get out of each other's way.

Side Glances by Clark

"I'd advise the services of a trained nurse for a few weeks and someone to do the housework. And, above all, she mustn't ovrry about anything."

"I suppose I'm like most people who read the newspapers . . ."

"I DON'T read all the ads, any more than I read the whole of any newspaper or magazine. But I do read a good many of them.

"Recently I've been reading more than usual, and I certainly like what Chesterfield has to say and the way it is said. I would probably like the cigarette, too, but somehow I just haven't got 'round to trying it.

"Come to think of it, I can't tell you why I smoke this other cigarette. It's more from habit, I suppose, than for any real reason.

"I'd never thought about it before, but last night, at a party, I noticed eight of my friends—five men and three girls—who had changed to Chesterfields. They told me that Chesterfields are milder, that they taste better, that they just seem to satisfy.

"Of course, cigarettes are a small thing, but, after all, they give me a lot of pleasure, and a cigarette like Chesterfield that you hear such good things about, must be good. Anyway, I've just bought my first package of Chesterfields, and I believe I'll find them just like the ads say—milder—taste better—pure—satisfy."
