Murder Solution Expected by Law

MCALLEN, Oct. 7. (UP)—The mysterious disappearance Sept. 12 of Manuel Chavez, nursery workman, and the reason for his disappearance are expected to be brought to light with the arrest of two Mexicans, one an American citizen.

The two were among five arrested in a raid by patrolmen on the Rancho Teresa, 52 miles northwest of the Rio Grande city. Mexico Hugo, an American citizen, and Carlos Navarro, an alien, are being held in connection with the Chavez case.

Chavez, Lugo and Navarro were seen together in McAllen a week before Chavez vanished. Two days later his body was fished from the Rio Grande near Reynosa. Condition of the body indicated foul play.

Debunks Theory Criminals Return

EL PASO, Oct. 7. (UP)—There's nothing to the old story that a criminal always returns to the scene of his crime, in the opinion of Frank T. Bailey, special investigator for the district attorney's office.

In the 20 years that Bailey has been an officer, he said he had not found evidence to support the belief that criminals return.

"In a few cases, of course, some of them do come back," Bailey said. "But they are not the 'smart crook' variety. It is usually the insane and abnormally minded criminal who haunts the scene of his crime."

"Catching a criminal is a matter of much patience, exhaustive investigation and a drop of luck. The first rule in investigating any crime is to visit the scene. Even though the act was committed years ago, it is better to see where it was done."

A History Lesson—In One Picture

The vanished glory of ancient Rome and the growing power of modern Italy touch across the centuries in this striking photograph. The camera caught the mammoth new plane "Umberto Maddalena" as it flew low over the crumbling ruins of the once proud empire. The big airship, built on the same style as the German DO-X, was en route to its base at Vigna di Valle, Italy.

NATIONAL DEFICIT FACES CONGRESS UPON CONVENING; PLANS FOR FUNDS TO BE AMONG ITS FIRST PROBLEMS

By RAYMOND CLAPPER United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON, Oct. 7. (UP)—Whether to tax or borrow is a question that will command major importance in the next congress. The administration's position is described as being open-minded at the moment, but it is expected that President Hoover will have resolved upon his course before sending his annual message to congress.

The issue is precipitated by the existence of a deficit for the year ended June 30 of nearly $1,000,000,000, the prospect of one even larger for the current year, and the possibility of a third one of about the same size for the following year, unless new revenues are created.

Senator David A. Reed, republican Pa., member of the senate finance committee, is advocating a general sales tax. "Unless we cut expenses materially below what they are now, we will soon be facing a $3,000,000,000 deficit and our borrowing capacity will be seriously impaired," he said. "I hope we can make reductions enough to avoid tax increases but it looks doubtful to me."

Senator James E. Watson, republican senate leader, on the contrary is opposed to new taxes. He believes this would be a mistake in a presidential year. Some other high party leaders have expressed themselves privately the same way.

Tax Attempts Planned Yet majority opinion is that aggressive attempts will be made to force through tax legislation regardless of what the administration's attitude may prove to be. All revenue legislation must originate in the house and the rules are such that it practically must be recommended by the house ways and means committee before it can see the light of day on the house floor.

As the control of this committee depends upon which party controls the house, its course is impossible to forecast. However, the probabilities are that the committee will hold hearings and let various plans be proposed and then consider whether to recommend tax legislation.

In any event sharp debate is expected not only over this issue, but the important related one as to where the additional burden there is to be one, shall fall. (See NATIONAL DEFICIT page 4)

THE MEANING OF RICHES

In Mississippi there is a 75-year-old lady who is suing for a share in New York's $50,000,000 Wendel estate; and the other day, talking about the lawsuit, she remarked plaintively, "I'll wish I was younger, if I'm going to get the money."

There is something very human about that remark, and something rather pathetic. To come into great wealth is the buried dream of all of us; but we want it while we still have desires to satisfy and dreams to fulfill and years to waste. To grow suddenly rich at 75 is better, probably, than not to get rich at all, but it is not a great deal better. For youth is not on the market, and when the last flicker of youth has vanished there is not a great deal else than the ordinary persons want to buy.

Indeed, this attitude explains a great deal, when you stop to think about it. It explains why get-rich-quick schemes always have flourished, and always will. It explains why there are always plenty of people to buy lottery tickets, and dream of the lucky stroke of chance that may enrich them. It explains why decent young men occasionally turn into embezzlers and defaulters. It explains why a gold rush will recruit men all over the world.

An industrious and gifted man can very often make a huge fortune in business. But he can't make it all at once, and that is the whole trouble. For, when we dream about being rich, we don't put it far in the future. We want it now, while we have vigor and long years and bright hopes to squander. The long climb up the ladder, looked at from that angle, sometimes seems impossibly tedious.

And this is true, too, whether one's desires are noble or base. The man to whom a fortune is only a means for gratifying his appetites will quite naturally want the money while he is young; but so, too, will the person who wants money for the leisure it will bring him, for the release that it will mean from petty cares and mean demands, for the doors that it will open to the things of the spirit.

And that, of course, is where life always seems hard and cruel. Unless a man is the especial favorite of the gods, things won't work out as he wishes. We dream of money, which is another way of saying that we dream of complete freedom; but we have to put in long years of service first, and if we can't find our compensations in serving we are out of luck. Riches and youth do not go hand in hand.

LINDBERGH'S INFLUENCE

Just how much Colonel Lindbergh's flights may do directly for the famine sufferers of China is problematical. Indirectly, however, they will probably prove worth more than anything that anyone else can do.

Lindbergh, when you stop to think about it, is remarkably like Midas. The difference is that whereas whatever Midas touched turned to gold, whatever Lindbergh touches turns to front page news. By flying over the famine districts the young aviator will focus world attention on China's plight in a way that no one else on earth could do. He has the magic touch. He can compel us to think about China's famine.

That, in the end, will mean a great deal to the famine relief campaign. The hungry coolies who stare up at the strange plane in the sky will never realize just how much that plane is doing for them.

POLITICAL PROTECTION

The legislative investigating committee that is trying to uncover some of New York City's more scandalous municipal secrets pops up now with evidence that the late Arnold Rothstein, "big shot" gambler of nation-wide notoriety, conducted many of his operations under the sheltering wing of Tammany Hall.

Whether or not this particular charge is finally substantiated, there is nothing about it that need surprise anyone. Whenever any racketeer attains the proportions that Rothstein did, it is a perfectly safe bet that he has a quiet little understanding with someone in high authority. Underworld "kings" simply don't exist without protection. The only surprise possible in this case would be to learn that Rothstein didn't have any high political connections.

AIMEE'S Love Story

Editor's Note: This is the second of six stories on the amazing events in the love story of Aimee Semple McPherson.

By LAURA LOU BROOKMAN NEA Service Writer

(Copyright, 1931, NEA Service, Inc.) Aimee McPherson—the "magnetic, golden-haired angel of the Angelus Temple"—wore a blue suit trimmed with blue fox fur and a modish Eugene hat when she and David Hutton were married in a tri-motored passenger plane at Yuma, Ariz., because "married in blue your love will be true."

How different this sky elopement, heralded around the world, from the simple home ceremony years ago in the little Canadian town of Ingersoll. Once when Aimee Elizabeth Kennedy, 17, tripped altarward with Robert Semple, preacher and boiler-maker!

No reporters, no photographers at that wedding.

There was no elaborate trousseau either. There was no posing before motion picture cameras. Aimee, the blushing bride, had seen only one motion picture in her life at that time. She had attended just one dance—and danced with the village preacher.

Those were the days when Aimee was a red-head. She attended Ingersoll Collegiate Institute and her chum held a distinction was the fact that when school programs were given Miss Kennedy always won applause for speaking the best "piece."

She had admirers—yes, indeed. In 1907 Aimee entered a popularity contest staged by the Woodstock (Ont.) Sentinel-Review. She won more votes than anyone else and was awarded the grand prize—a free vacation trip down the St. Lawrence to Quebec. It was Aimee's first view of the world outside the small Canadian community—a world she was to encircle and conquer.

She was not given the title, "Miss Popularity" (it was before the time of beauty contests), but that prize trip held all the significance and glamor for the farm girl that subsequent "Miss Manhattan" and "Miss Chicago" have known.

That trip seems to have been the turning point in Aimee Kennedy's life. She was pretty, 17, rather well developed but still girlish. Life beckoned and the fire that has since made her the greatest woman evangelist in the world had begun to burn.

The trip to Quebec was to be followed shortly by more momentous happenings.

Aimee heard talk in the school class room about "The Holy Ghost Revival" services Preacher Robert Semple was conducting. Semple was a newcomer in Ingersoll. Curious, Aimee left a school play rehearsal to visit the revival.

Here is the way she tells the story: "As a school girl I spoke at school and church entertainments and took part in all the amateur plays I could. I loved the stage and decided to be an actress. I tried to forget my mother's teachings and read David and Ingersoll."

"Then one day, dressed in all my finery, I slipped into a little mission in the Canadian town where I attended school, attracted by the voice of the handsome young preacher, Robert Semple. He had curly brown hair and a beautiful face and he upset me."

"At first I giggled at some of the things he said, but I couldn't forget them. I went again and then one afternoon driving along the frozen country road in a sleigh the miracle happened. A warm glow filled my heart and I began to pray to God to forgive me. I was converted."

Thus simultaneously Aimee was won to God and to the church. She flung herself into the excitement of the revival meetings. She absented herself from school day after day to sit in the crowded mission room. Nothing her mother and father could say or do could keep the girl away.

As the evangelist explains: "I have never done anything half-hearted. Some people go through life always undecided, always neutral, but from the time I was a tiny child, whatever I did I did with my whole heart."

So there were arguments in the Kennedy household but as usual Aimee won. She gave up school and was steadfast in her attendance at the mission house until the end of the meetings.

Rev. Semple departed to conduct evangelical work elsewhere. There were letters, however. Aimee corresponded with the tall young man with the curly hair and he came back.

She was helping a neighbor care for her two sick children when, as she tells it, "the door opened and in walked Robert Semple, offering his services and prayers. After he had prayed the children fell into a quiet sleep and we sat down side by side by the light of the shaded lamp to read the Bible. "Robert talked earnestly of what a life of faith meant, the sacrifice,

Tom Simpson was the fellow's name I think he said it were He had a most athletic wife and wateg rid of her

He did his best most every thing that man could figure out to rid himself of his athletic wife This is how it come about the joy, the reward; then, reaching over, he took my hand in his and, telling me of his love, asked me to become his wife and enter the work as helpmate by his side.

"I said 'yes' to God and 'yes' to Robert."

The marriage was arranged. The young couple's honeymoon was a trip to Stratford, Ont., where he worked as a boiler-maker in a locomotive factory, preaching at night. Aimee phoned into housework, played, sang, and testified at the nightly meetings.

After six months in Stratford they set off on a revivalist trip across the country. They sailed for China by way of Great Britain and the continent. One of the anthems with which they spurred on converts at their meetings was the following, sung to the tune of "Bringing in the Sheaves":

"Bringing in Chinese, Bringing in Chinese, We will go rejoicing, Bringing in Chinese." In Hankow, China, Semple fell ill. He was sick just one week and died. A month later a baby girl, named Roberta, was born. The 20-year-old widow started home with her tiny daughter and eventually reached New York to join her mother.

Life could scarcely have been more bleak than it must have looked at this time. Aimee was without money, in poor health, and with a child to support. She and her mother took up revival work. Presently the horizon brightened. Aimee met Harold McPherson and again she fell in love.

Next: Aimee weds Harold McPherson on a "companionate" understanding, but their romance ended in divorce when she returned to preaching. She builds Angelus Temple.

Helpful Health Suggestions

Food and Drink What is the answer, Mr. Health Officer, to too much eating and cut out the booze? Why so many don'ts if you are as strong as an ox? Buddy Phillips—Buda.

Don't over-eat is the best of advice. Too much food clogs the intestines, generates poisons within the body which it finds difficult, if not impossible to throw off, and in general has the same effect on the vitality as banking a furnace would have on a fire.

Don't drink booze. Try water and milk, or pure fruit juices instead. Alcohol lowers mental efficiency, poisons the nerves, impairs body resistance to infectious diseases and tends to degenerate the arteries. Scientific research will substantiate this indictment of alcohol.

Don't nearly always had best be observed. —State Health News.

SPORTS REPORTS

By R. C. HANKINS

One goes back to the dark age of baseball, to the 1906 series between the Cubs and the White Sox, for the last parallel to successive 2-hit pitching performances staged by Grimes and Earnshaw in the present World series.

The A's looked like champs yesterday, coming out of a two-day sleep with a roar that produced 10 hits off Sylvester Johnson and Jim Lindsey, twice as many as they fortunately collected off Hallahan and Grimes in the two games preceding.

What would Rube Walberg, a southpaw not seen during the series, do in the box against Hallahan today? Would Hallahan be as wild as a March hare, or right again? Those questions bothered the shekel rattlers around the coffee shop most of the morning.

Mr. Williamson of Big Spring continues to make direct statements about who will win football games of the week end. For instance, he says of the Midland-Stanton game, "Midland will win a close game."

Top Flight, a daughter of Dis Don-Flyatt, won recognition as the turf's two-year-old champion of 1921 by capturing the rich Belmont futurity and several other important juvenile stakes.

Top Flight's victory in the futurity ranks as one of the greatest in the history of that classic as the filly carried a crushing impost of 127 pounds. No other filly ever carried that much weight and won the Belmont futurity.

As a rule two-year-old champions hardly ever develop into prominent three-year-olds. The exceptions to this rule on the American turf are Man O' War, Morvich and Reigh Count, three of the greatest three-year-olds of all time.

Aggies Prime for Iowa State Team

COLLEGE STATION, Tex., Oct. 7.—Smarter under the 7-0 defeat handed them the past week-end at the hands of Tulane university's Green Wave, Coach Madison Belle's Texas Aggies are working for their game Saturday with Iowa university at Fair Park stadium in Dallas with a determination that bodes no good for the Hawkeyes.

Saturday's game will be the last for the Aggies before starting their Southwest conference schedule, for the Cadets are slated to play the Texas Christian university Horned Frogs in Fort Worth Oct. 17. It will also be the Aggies' last appearance on the State Fair program for several years at least, for the Cadets were during the past year released from contract calling for future games at Dallas between the Aggies and intersectional opponents.

As the annual Aggie-Southern Methodist university game this year is to be at College Station, the game with Iowa will be the Cadets' only appearance in Dallas this year.

Other good two-year-olds were Tick On, Liberty, Limited, Sweep Light, Morfar, Osculator and Polonaize.

MANY FACTORS JOIN TO BRING NEW OPTIMISM

(By the Associated Press)

A new note of cheer was sent reverberating through the business world Tuesday by a variety of developments.

President Hoover began a series of conferences with congressional leaders, bankers and real estate men to map out a constructive program to aid American finance and business.

Hoover's Proposal By bringing together private capital and a liberalized government cooperation, the president hopes to ease credits and put into use many of the country's assets now frozen by the unusual conditions of recent industrial activity.

The news was greeted by one of the swiftest advances on the New York exchange in recent years. The gains averaged well over 5 points on 559 stocks.

Grains advanced strongly. Cotton went up $1.55 to $1.75 a bale. The curb market reflected the breathing-taking up-rush.

Washington Fired Yorktown Opener

About five o'clock on the afternoon of Oct. 9, 1781, Gen. George Washington stood in the American works before Yorktown. In his hand was a smouldering fuse with which he was to fire the first American gun in the bombardment of the town where Lord Cornwallis had taken post.

Finally the big gun was loaded and primed, and as the gunner stepped back, Washington put the fuse to the touch-hole. There was a deafening roar, a violent concussion, and the cannon belched black smoke and deadly missile.

The standard work on the Yorktown campaign, quoted by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, Henry P. Johnston writes of the first shot: "The journal of more than one American officer mentions the fact that the first shot from the American battery was fired by Washington himself."

COTTON PRICE IS DISASTROUS SAYS T. COMMISSIONER

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 4.—The probable disastrous aftermath of selling cotton for present prices was pointed out today in a statement by J. E. McDonald, commissioner of agriculture.

McDonald said he could not advise holding cotton, but suggested that every Texan "stop and consider what the marketing of our major commodity at one-half production cost will mean."

"With present prices for agricultural crops, the farmer is left without buying power vitally necessary to sustain government, commerce, transportation, schools and society. All must suffer. There is no escape. At this time the price of middling 7/8 cotton averages less than 5 cents per pound at the primary markets of Texas.

"The south is again caught unprepared to market its cotton crop judiciously. Cotton of high grade, staple and extra spinning value is being thrown on the market for less than half of production cost, and with a full realization that Texas has recently enacted a law limiting planting for the next two years to 30 per cent of cultivated acreage of each farm and with fair prospects for similar legislation by other cotton growing states.

"As commissioner of agriculture, I could not advise holding cotton; but I would suggest that every Texan stop and think what the marketing of our major commodity at one-half production cost will mean to our state, commerce, schools, society, labor and homes. If the cotton growing states adopt similar laws, and if adequate financing and sane marketing systems are established, for the 1922 crop, we should have within the next 12 or 15 months cotton prices reflecting more nearly cotton's intrinsic worth, perhaps 15 cents, and should we choose to continue a demoralized mob in production and marketing we can very easily see 2 cents per pound or $10 per bale, which will put the finishing touches on the cotton growing industry and a complete collapse of cotton lands.

"I appeal to every Texan to stop and think and lend full support to solution of our agricultural problems. Agriculture is fundamentally basic and confidence in values of farm lands and products must be restored before we can feel our financial and social structure is secure."

SAYS WEAK MALES ATTRACT WOMEN LONDON.—It's not the big, strong "he" man who sets the female heart palpitating, if you take the word of Frau Vicki Baum, famous author. It's the little, puny weaklings who attract the female and makes her want to mother them.

"It is the fallacious belief of many that the strong man, the masterful type, delights most women," Frau Baum says. "This is not. Perhaps the weak type of woman will look to him, lean on him, take strength from his vitality."

"Strong women may admire the strong, successful and self-assured man, but love them or yearn tenderly toward them? No, I don't think so. Most women are drawn toward the weak male. It is gratifying to a woman to feel that she is needed; that her ministrations are important to some human creature. A weak man is like a clinging child to women. They want to mother him, encourage him, help him. All their maternal instincts are marshalled in his behalf."

Tells of Attitudes Toward Paroles

AUSTIN, Oct. 7. (UP)—Friendliness and forgotten convicts in the Texas penitentiary find a real "pal" in a great-grandson of Patrick Henry who spoke the immortal words "Give me liberty or give me death."

Stanhope Henry, senior member of the state board of pardons and paroles, studies cases of long-term convicts who have served many years of their penalty and deserve executive leniency.

Henry is to be "father" to those convicts who have neither friends nor relatives left in the outside world to intercede in their behalf. Of the 5,000 prisoners in the Texas prison system, 1,825 of them were eligible for parole at the last count, Henry pointed out.

But Governor Sterling will allow no man to pass the gates of Huntsville penitentiary into the world beyond the walls without the certainty he has a job. "Chances are that a convict released without a job would be right back in no time," Henry declared.

Sterling has granted more pardons in six months than Governor Moody granted in the same time but he has not shown more clemency, according to the descendant of Patrick Henry.

"Dan Moody got a name for being hard on prisoners because he didn't give many pardons," Henry explained. "That was because he believed in giving paroles which he could extend if the prisoner got along all right. He let as many prisoners out as almost any governor but never got credit for it."

Henry defined certain terms familiar to the board of pardons and paroles as follows: A pardon is an unconditional release. A parole releases a prisoner for a limited time which may be extended. A furlough is a leave of absence granted in case of sickness or some other trouble in the prisoner's family.
