HOUSE PASSES ROAD TAX RELIEF

PRORATION BREAKING, SAYS LONG

Makes Statement in Offering House Resolution

AUSTIN, Sept. 16. (UP)—The declaration that "oil proration in Texas is about to break down" was made today by Representative Bob Long of Wichita Falls in the legislature. He made the statement in offering a resolution under which the house would investigate pipe lines and ratable taking laws.

TRAGIC STORY OF INSULL IS TOLD COURTS

CHICAGO, Sept. 16. (UP)—The tragic story of where approximately one billion dollars investing of the public's money went in a crash of the Middle West Utilities company was told in red in the receivers' report submitted to the federal court today.

Federal Building Matter up Again

Midland may get definite information about its possible federal building within the new few days. Congressman Ewing W. Thompson of El Paso, said while at Midland for a brief time Thursday he was making a special trip to Washington to sit in at the approaching reports, Colorado, Marfa, and Pecos also may get federal buildings, allocations for these having been made at the same time of that for Midland.

Mexican Fiesta Is Held Today

A ball game this afternoon at 3:30, speeches at 7:30 and a dance following are slated by Midland Mexicans as the order of events to their annual celebration in observance of their fatherland's divorcing itself from the rulership of Spain.

MAY DIVIDE FIELD

BIG SPRING.—State Engineer W. F. Canode has been investigating the Howard-Glasscock county oil fields in an effort to determine the needs of the fields with reference to proration.

TO PLANT TREES

BIG SPRING.—The civic committee of the Big Spring chamber of commerce will convene within the next few days to determine and to definitely plan for civic improvements during the fall, winter and spring months. The committee is considering the advocating of planting Arizona cypress in large numbers during the fall months. The committee sponsored the planting of 1000 elm trees here last fall and early spring. More trees will probably be planted this year, according to Edmund Nostetine, chairman of the committee.

$250,000 Bath

A Majority

A quarter of a million seems a lot of money to pay for a bath, especially when someone else took it, but that is the bill Ben C. Kohlmeier faces unless Los Angeles courts decide otherwise. For the bath was taken by Mrs. Myrtle Mannon Morris, above, "Miss Florida" in a beauty contest, with Kohlmeier assisting, according to witnesses, and her husband wants the $250,000 for alienation of the beauty's affections.

Parents Urged to Support Cub Idea

By MARION F. PETERS As a supporting influence to the Boy Scouts of America, there was created by the national council during 1931 an organization known as cub scouts. This move was made in order that boys between the ages of 9 and 11 years may be brought into contact with the game of scouting so that when they reach the age of 12 years they may become regular scouts, with some knowledge of what scouting means.

Boss Says Hoover Will Be Elected

PORTLAND, Ore. (UP)—"Bert" Hoover will be re-elected president, according to B. S. Cook, 76, who 40 years ago employed the future president as an office boy at Salem, Ore.

Turtle Travels 30 Miles to Ranch

NYSSA, Ore. (UP)—Turtles may journey slow but sure, but there is at least one turtle which is a little bit less slow than some of its brethren.

SHIELDS DRAWS 2-YEAR VERDICT; MURDERS TO BAT

Adjustment of district court for the week followed the assessing Thursday of a two-year sentence in the penitentiary for Frank Shields, Midland man charged by one indictment on two counts with forgery and passing of forged instrument. Later he must face another similar charge. He filed an appeal motion. Two negro murder cases will be tried next week, both slated to go to bat Monday. Defendants are Dorris Dixon, charged by indictment with having shot to death a member of a negro orchestra here, and Searcy Baker, indicted on a charge of murder after another negro had died of knife slash wounds several months ago.

Mayor Releases Enmeshed Snake

ST. CHARLES, Ill., Sept. 16. While the frustrated spider looked on—with raging eyes so many witnesses attested—Mayor L. Langum last night freed the 10-inch garter snake that had been held prisoner in its web for 25 days.

Late News

SIoux CITY, Ia., Sept. 16. (UP)—Sheriff John A. Davenport today telephoned Governor Dan Turner, asking that militiamen be sent here to combat the farmers' blockade of the city. Previously, the governor had denied militiamen and was again requested after deputies were stoned in retaliation for clubbing pickets yesterday.

Natural Kettles Give Town Name

HOG SCALD, Ark. (UP)—The way Hog Scald got his name is as follows: A number of large bowl shaped holes are in the rock surrounding the town. In the old days residents used to fill them with water. The water would hold as much as 40 gallons. Then they would drop hot rocks in them until the water was "scalding." Hogs then would be dropped in the water to scald—hence the name "Hog Scald."

One Man Fort To Be Dismantled

ABERDEEN, Wash. (UP)—The one-man fort with two six-inch guns, is being dismantled. The fort is located at North Cove, Willapa Harbor, and was constructed as a part of Uncle Sam's wartime defense.

QUESTIONED, KILLS SELF

QUINCY, Mass., Sept. 16. (UP)—Charles E. Dubois, handsome jewelry salesman, shot and killed himself today while authorities were pressing the investigation of the mysterious disappearance of his wife five weeks ago.

WADDELL RITES READ; FUNERAL IS AT COLORADO

FORT WORTH, Sept. 16.—Funeral services for W. N. Waddell, 72, former chairman of the Livestock Sanitary commission, who fell dead Wednesday afternoon in the Fort Worth Club, were held at 11:45 o'clock this morning at the Harvey & Cole chapel. Rev. J. Leslie Fennell officiating.

BOY TESTIFIES FOR STATE IN TRIAL OF HALL

PECCAS, Sept. 16.—In wavering voice, 18-year-old Bud Reed, Crane county ranch boy, told Thursday of the shooting of T. C. Barnsley, a prominent Crane cattleman.

Retail Stores Show Business Increase

AUSTIN.—August sales of 96 retail stores reporting to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research totaled $2,618,644, as compared with $2,571,733 in July, an increase of 10 per cent as compared with a usual seasonal increase of only 3 per cent. This notable increase is attributed partly to cool August weather which naturally interested customers in fall merchandise, and partly to improved business sentiment generally. These 96 stores include department stores, men's and boys' clothing stores, men's specialty shops, and men's wear shops.

Daily Operation Of Grand Resumed

Announcement is being made today by J. Howard Hodges, manager, that the Grand theatre has started its fall and winter schedule of full time operation.

BIG SPRING FORMALLY OPENS ITS NEW CITY HALL AND AUDITORIUM

BIG SPRING, Sept. 16.—Big Spring formally opened her new $200,000 municipal building and auditorium, erected from proceeds of a bond issue voted in June of 1931, in dedicatory ceremonies Thursday evening.

GOVERNOR EXPECTED TO SIGN BILL TODAY

AUSTIN, Sept. 16. (UP)—With only four dissenting votes, the house, shortly before noon, passed the $90,000,000 road bond tax relief bill. This was sufficient to sustain the emergency clause giving immediate effect.

GOODMAN FINDS MUCH GOOD IN NEW ACC BANKS

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article was carried in the September "West Texas Today" a magazine published by the West Texas chamber of commerce, and was headed "Goodman Foresees Abundant Good from Agricultural Credit Corporation Banks."

Official Clues in Case

ALBANY N. Y. (UP)—The slaying of Jack "Legs" Diamond, New York gang leader, in an obscure rooming house here, still may be solved.

Fatal Celebration

The once powerful gang chieftain, who gained his name "Legs" for his ability at running while a minor hoodlum, was erased in virtually downtown Albany a few hours after he had attended a wild party celebrating his acquittal of charges of torturing two farmers in an attempt to learn the location of a liquor still.

GASOLINE PRICE REDUCED

FORT WORTH, Sept. 16. (UP)—Gasoline was reduced one cent by major companies here today.

SOMERVILLE LEADS

BALTIMORE, Sept. 16. (UP)—Ross Somerville of Canada was six up and all others square at the end of the first eighteen holes in the American amateur golf championship today.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

With $3,000,000 capital and red-counting privileges, the agriculturists should be able to borrow about $20,000,000. This would not have been such a huge sum of a few years ago, but now will be of incalculable aid to their great livestock growing state.

INJURIES FATAL

BIG SPRING.—Tom Sullivan, a long-time resident of Big Spring, succumbed at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon to injuries suffered Monday morning in the yards of the Texas & Pacific Railway company, of which he has been an employe about 20 years.

NEW BELGIAN FORTIFICATIONS

A short cable dispatch from Brussels the other day tells of plans to build ultra-modern fortifications all along the German border. Such fortifications are to center on the points by which the German army invaded Belgium in 1914.

Back of this little news item stands the real reason for the failure of nations to disarm—the distrust of one nation for another.

That is the reason that taxpayers in little Belgium must not only pay for the last war, but start paying for the next one in advance.

And if the organizations fighting to reduce armaments and lessen the chances of war want to get at the root of the whole trouble, they would do well to devote a large portion of their time and incomes to fighting that one thing.

So long as the people of one nation are desperately afraid of invasion by another, the seeds of war may be said to be eternally in the ground.

"I Don't Care" Refrain Haunted The Hectic Career of Eva Tanguay

her "I Don't Care" song, and seldom was pictured in the demure pose in which you see her (in center) in a youthful portrait. Even when her vision had so failed that she one night fell from the stage into the orchestra pit, her "public" still was demanding that she continue to be the mad, eccentric character she had created.

Side Glances By Clark

"You see, doctor, it's her dollie that's sick."

Here she comes, there she goes . . . dizzy, mad-paced Eva Tanguay! . . . Old-time theatregoers clutched the arms of their seats. Fronds flared up the aisles. People about town applauded. Here was the most amazing performer of her generation . . .

And in three articles, of which this is the first, Gilbert Swan set out his verbal telescope and traces this mad-cap's meteoric flight across the theatrical firmament. . . .

NEW YORK—Forty-six years ago, almost to a day, an eight-year-old child waited timidly at the side door of Parsons Hall in Holyoke, Mass. She had heard that amateurs were allowed to appear on the stage twice a week. She had made secret and elaborate preparations for this moment. And when finally she faced the theatrical man, he first grinned, then chuckled, and finally broke into a laugh.

For never had been seen a more grotesque costume than this little girl was wearing. It was made of a large and well worn parasol. A hole had been cut in the umbrella, just large enough to admit a youngster's body, and it had been filled up to resemble the costume of a ballerina. Several table dollies supplied the sleeves. . . .

Strong—And Proud of It. Loney Haskell, veteran of the vaudeville boards, sat back and recalled how Eva had taken great pride in her muscularity. . . .

Must We Abolish Love? No, Protest Eugenics Experts

By HELEN WELSHIMER, NEA Service Writer NEW YORK—But what shall we do with love? . . .

That is the question that people were asking the world's greatest Eugenists who recently held their third international conference at the Museum of Natural History in New York. . . .

"People fall in love when they believe that they have found a person in whom their ideals can be realized," Dr. O. G. Campbell, president of the National Eugenics Research Association, explains. . . .

She cared enough to work tirelessly. She cared when that tragic night in a vaudeville house when her voice started breaking. On another evening she cared when, contracts obscuring her vision, she was led to the stage only to misjudge her distance and fall into the orchestra pit. . . .

Amusingly enough, Jean Dixon, who wrote the song for her, is practically unknown outside Tim Pan Alley. And the Mons. Zittel who wrote "Nothing Ever Bothers Me" has become the "Zit" of Zit's theatrical weekly. . . .

Swapping Yarns with Col. True

Col. True maintains a standing invitation to others to write to him and tell of their own extraordinary experiences. No holds barred. Address Col. True, in care of The Reporter-Telegram.

Col. True. Dear Sir: I have just read Mr. T. W. Olliff's "hog and sweet potato story." And I remember the incident well, but he seems to be a little mixed in relating the story. Let me refresh his memory. His uncle, Mr. James R. Young, lived in Osceola, Mississippi county, Arkansas. It was about 1894. He had a field of sweet potatoes down near the river—within a mile or so at least of the river. . . .

There was an apple tree in the back yard of the place I owned. It was a most unusual apple tree, in that it was so high nobody had ever been able to harvest the crop that grew in the top of it. I took so long to climb to the top that the fruit was rotted by the time a man could get to it. That year I spent the latter part of the winter and most of spring climbing to the top. I got there about the time the fruit ripened in the summer and started picking off the apples and throwing them down. I worked feverishly for several weeks until the crop was harvested and started down. I reached the ground in January, but the apples were all gone. Everyone had smashed as it fell, and folks down below me on the river said the Mississippi ran apple cider for two weeks after I quit throwing the fruit down. . . .

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

J. M. Speed received a complaint the other day from a customer who had bought six cans of corn syrup and, after using them all, found that his corns were as bad as ever. . . .

And then there was the office stenog who wandered in her mind, but she didn't wander far. . . .

One Midland woman cut her vacation short because every time she wrote her husband for money he sent it by return mail. . . .

I have heard of murdering the queen's English, but I heard the other day about a man who claimed to have heard a murder committed and didn't even bother to report it. He heard a music student do the job, and the victim was Beethoven. . . .

The man who told his wife he would shoot any man who flirted with her at the seashore, was advised by the spouse that he had better bring a machine gun. . . .

"Is your mother home?" a neighbor asked Newell Ellis Junior. "You see me mowing this grass, don't you?" . . .

A campaign story I heard for the know it," Dr. Campbell says. "I should say that the majority of the cases of love at first sight are successful. People have already formed their ideals, know what they want, and recognize it when they see it, in eagerness, by the time they reached marriageable age their inborn eugenic capacities would be so important that they wouldn't fall in love with someone who didn't measure up to their ideals. . . .

"Eugenics believes in the influence of education in mate selection. Or, in other words, this understanding makes you want the best, and a substitute won't do. . . .

If the school and the church would teach eugenics we wouldn't fall in love with the wrong people," he adds. "In love or marriage, it is necessary to know a man or woman's character, background, heredity, intellectual capacities, organization of his special senses, his family, and other factors. If there is failure to measure up in any respect, love will not result, as a rule. . . .

Co-education colleges have the approval of the group. So do early marriages. College contacts promote them. Girls in co-education institutions are more likely to marry, and also have fewer divorces proportionately than those who attend girls' schools, Dr. Campbell and his assistants affirm. . . .

Campus moonlight has a way about it. But if you have the proper knowledge of eugenics and its importance you won't succumb to a serenade and a big white moon. . . .

Love at first sight will be love at first sight, Dr. Campbell says. But a little second sight will give you definite proof, Dr. Laughlin emphasizes. . . .

Loggers Become Cave Dwellers. KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (UP)—No loggers at the Shaw-Bertram camp, near here, haven't turned cavemen, but it certainly seemed a good idea at the time. . . .

Instead of sleeping in sultry bunk houses during the recent heat wave, when the temperature rose to 103 degrees, 30 men comprising the night shift moved to a cavern near the camp and established sleeping quarters where the temperature was only 40 degrees. The men were bundled in heavy blankets during their daily "snooze." . . .

The first school in the city of New York was started in 1663 by the Reformed Dutch Church. . . .

first time is one told by Jim Ferguson on Governor Sterling. He told it publicly all over down-state. . . .

Ferguson said that three years ago Sterling became ambitious to become governor of Texas. He talked it over with his wife and she suggested that they might look into the Bible for guidance or inspiration. They opened the Bible without looking for any page and the first sentence they read was to the effect "that the meek shall inherit the earth." . . .

Ferguson said that not being an educated man that Sterling didn't understand it. In fact, he didn't understand the meaning of meek. And neither did Mrs. Sterling for that matter and so they looked it up in the family dictionary. . . .

"And when Sterling found out that 'meek' means 'humble,'" said Ferguson, "he made up his mind right then to run for governor." . . .

One of Amos Carter's favorite stories: In Mr. Carter's Port Worth Star Telegram someone advertised that he would pay 50 cents for each bull-frog skin mailed to him. Shortly after the advertisement appeared, an enthusiast from a small place in West Texas wired the advertiser: "Will ship 50,000 skins within a week." . . .

Elaborate Luncheon at Hotel Scharbauer Wednesday Opens This Season's Work for The Fine Arts Club; New Officers Named

One of the most elaborate affairs of the early fall season was given by the Fine Arts club Wednesday when the organization opened its year's work with a lovely luncheon in the private dining room of the Scharbauer hotel.

A profusion of roses and greenery furnished the decorative note. The tables were beautiful, featuring a many-color motif in the glass ware, floral decorations and other appointments. A large United States flag in the center of the table and surrounded by the six Texas flags lent an artistic touch to the scene. Favors were miniature Lone Star state flags.

Woman's Place Is in the News

A Hawaiian Club More than 80 American women of Hawaii are organized into a club at Honolulu, representing 50 different professions. The group is connected with the Women's Legislative Council of Hawaii, does much social service work and assists girls financially with their education. Every girl who has ever borrowed from the fund has paid back the entire amount. The club maintains a cottage where women and girls spend their week-ends. Prominent travelers who stop over in Honolulu nearly always address the club group. America's Olympic Nurse Although Katherine Townsend Roche is not likely to be hailed as an American star of the Olympic games, she is contributing an im-

In that capacity, Miss Roche already has established a record, for she is the only nurse who has been chosen twice. When the games were held in Holland four Boys aren't the only ones who want to go down to the sea in ships. Somewhere in the Atlantic is the 28-foot sloop Tallin, which three boys from Esthonia are taking back home, under the command of Ahti Walter, who is 20 years old. Sixty girls from over the country, hearing about the jaunts to China and other places that the boys have been taking, wrote asking that they be allowed to go along. None of them did.

TONIGHT TELLS THE TALE IN THE NOCTURNE PENNANT PLAYOFF

HARDWARE EVENS COUNT IN FAST GAME THURS.

By HERB ROUNTRIE
Tonight MUST write fits to any and all play on the football field, and it will crown the Midland Hardware company or the club-picked men of the All-Star club as city champions. For Midland Hardware came back last night in the most exciting game, as well as the best, of the season and won their second consecutive game from the All-Stars, placing them neck and neck with the opposition in the pennant chase.

Tonight tells the tale. Last night's game was another of those fluke varieties, with Hardware winning 4-3 after being outdressed 14-0 in the first half. The defense of the All-Stars, just as the defense of the Hardware in the first two games, failed to function, the All-Stars making five. The winning run was scored when Joe Pierce dropped Ronald Morgan's fly and the baserunner kept padding Madeline home when "Fat" Woods dropped Pierce's throw to second. As a matter of fact, Hardware made only one earned run during the night.

Hardware tied the score of the All-Stars in the eighth and won in the ninth. The All-Stars scored twice in the first and once in the fourth, when Luther Tidwell's boys spiked the platter twice. The rest of the scoring was by the Hardware in the two last innings, as mentioned.

The game tonight will begin at 7:30, the following lineup representing the All-Stars: A. Estes, first, Cook, catching, Gemmill and Adman, pitchers, E. B. Estes first, Woods second, Brunson short, Stevens third, Warren and Whitmore utility, Smith left, Parrott middle, Woolly right.

Sketches Show Safety Measures Adopted

One of the new rules provides that when hard substances are used in construction of thigh guards, shin guards and braces, they must be padded with felt, foam rubber or some other soft substance . . . and is meant to reduce the number of injuries caused in the past by equipment, such as leg pads, that often were as hard as steel.

Under the new rules, five men of the receiving team must stand on the 45 yard line, 15 yards from the kicker, who may place-kick, punt or drop-kick. This is meant to abolish the flying wedge, shown below, formed when players could run back and set up a triangular interference around the ball carrier that often resulted in injuries to tacklers in its path.

The rule providing that a substitute may enter the game in the period subsequent to his retirement is aimed at the danger of leaving groggy men in the game on the chance that they may recover. The rule should give more rest for the players, and has been hailed by nearly all the coaches as a great benefit for colleges with small squads.

In 1932 the ball will be dead when any part of the ball carrier's body, except his hands or feet, touches the ground. That is expected to make the referee's decision that a man is down almost automatic. It is meant to prevent crawling that led to piling up of players on the body of the man they were trying to stop.

TCU AND NTSTC MEET FOR GRID GAME TOMORROW

FORT WORTH, Sept. 16.—The Horned Frogs of Texas Christian University, first Southwest conference eleven to get under way, will meet Coach Sisco's Tigers from the North Texas Teachers' college at Denton at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Christians stadium.

Coach Francis Schmidt is expected to give all of his 38 squad men a chance to break into the line-up in this first practice game. He probably will start his more or less regular line-up, but that is due to his clubs of the loop sending him their cards anywhere from a couple of days to the greater part of a week behind time. Election of new officers will be held before the game.

Rickard the Man To Bring Boxing Out of the Mire

By WERNER LAUFER
NEA Service Sports Writer

Two stacks of glittering $20 gold pieces in the amount of $30,000 started the golden era of boxing. The gold, exhibited in a window of the crude frame bank building in Goldfield, Nev., in 1906, collected interest to the extent of so many millions of dollars that even Tex Rickard, the sports world's greatest stacker of coin, couldn't have counted them.

The window display was the purse that a bonanza-glutting mining town offered for a fight between Jack Johnson and Bailing Nelson. The idea was publicity that would put the crude camp of Goldfield on the map.

Rickard owned the gaudiest saloon and gambling emporium of the many that fronted on Goldfield's knee-deep-in-mud main drag. Consequently he was the community's leading citizen.

Tex had started life as a cow hand. Then he became a wanderer, mucking for gold in the west and the frozen north. Though he was not afraid of work, he dreamed of wearing a fancy "fiddle and flute" (his slang for suit), carrying a cane and handling the gold after it had gone through the United States mint. So he became a gambler, and when the rush to relieve the gold lodes of Nevada got under way, Rickard was nicely ensconced in "the Northern," where roulette, faro and other forms of gaming kept the precious metal in pleasant circulation.

The outside boxing world, with headquarters in San Francisco, heard the rumor of Goldfield's $30,000 display of gold, an offer that outbid the then Croesus of Flistiana, Jim Coffroth, for the Nelson-Gans fight. Newspapermen were sent to investigate, and in their stories from Nevada gave the world the first big ballwhoo of boxing.

That fight in Nevada, the first real prize fight that Tex Rickard ever saw, gave him the vision of a new industry. When the gold frenzy at Goldfield cooled in the stretch, Rickard hurried away to Reno where he dealt in copper properties and kept an eye open for another chance to cash in on boxing.

That opportunity grew out of the nation-wide search for a white hope to dethrone the arrogant champion, Jack Johnson. Rickard was not long in finding a backer. His calm eye and careless draw attracted an angel in Reno, who put up the purse with only the reward of a couple of ringside tickets.

Jeffries came out of retirement, signed a guarantee of $101,000 for his effort to restore ring supremacy to the Caucasians and became the first "white" champion of the world. The might Johnson knocked him out. Rickard, soured on the fight game by the loss of important paper money, went back to poker. "Having a share of the market title to Jess Willard in Havana."

Dempsey came riding out of the west on a championship drive steered by the wily Jack Kearns, first and greatest of the modern "build-up" managers. Rickard saw him fight, and he exclaimed, "That's my feller! there's a battler tall-er to fit the order of Showman Rickard, and Tex moved quickly in the promotion of a bout at Toledo, Ind. was the greatest combination boxing had known—showman Rickard, Dapper Jack Kearns and Dempsey, the killer. They climbed from peak to peak, striking richer and richer rewards. The pinnacle was reached with the second Tunney-Dempsey fight that grossed $2,658,660.

Rickard saw "nice people" in evening dress at a cocktail party had brought up from the mud of Goldfield, And, at the climax of his career, he died.

Rickard, the man who would stake his last dollar on the drop of a fluttering maple leaf, trembled at the suggestion of a surgeon's scalpel. "They won't carve me with them face gloves for a second time," he said for acute appendicitis was ordered.

And they didn't. The knife was spared. Eckhart passed along without him, boxing swiftly succumbed to the attacks of a sickness as deadly as Rickard's.

Lake "Dragon" Huge Garfish

HUTTIG, Ark. (UP)—Tales of a "dragon" with a head "like a horse and a body like a dragon" spread rapidly around this section. It was in Grand Marie lake.

Farmers armed themselves and set out for the lake.

They were rewarded with a sight of "it." They blazed away. Many bullets reached their mark. The monster was pulled ashore and was found to be a gar. It was more than 10 feet long.

The gar did have a head like a horse, at least the upper part of its jaw had been broken so that it pointed upward. It looked "like a camel," for it's back had been broken.

Blondie sat perfectly still, gently petting her father's hand, seemingly unable to speak. Then suddenly she buried her face in her father's lap and burst into tears.

"I'm here, Pa! Blondie's here, Pa . . .," came her muffled sobbing voice. "Too late! . . . Too late!"

BLONDIE Of the Follies

By Frances Marion

CHAPTER XXVI

The taxi came to a grinding stop before a large warehouse. Blondie and Lurline leaped out and ran down a long, dirty passage toward a sign marked "Office."

"I'm Miss McClune," said Blondie, nervously, to a girl seated at a desk. The girl motioned them to follow her and led the way to a room at the rear of the general office. The two girls entered, and Blondie stopped suddenly as she saw her father leaning over him, quickly she pulled the rings off her fingers and gave them to Lurline.

"What's the idea?" Blondie said simply, and hurried to her father. "What's the matter? . . . Are you the doctor?" asked Blondie, and the doctor nodded.

"He hasn't seemed well for a long time," a man in his shirt sleeves spoke up. "He collapsed suddenly and fell off his chair—he struck his head—I think he's just stunned."

"No—can't you get him to a hospital?" Lurline asked excitedly. "I wouldn't move him—it's not his head, that's just a scalp wound." Then he whispered in her ear. "It's a heart attack."

"Failing to get any recognition from her father, Blondie was getting hysterical.

"Pa! Pa! It's Blondie!" she called but there was no response from the stricken man. Blondie looked around wildly at the little group. "Oh, can't you do something?—What are you standing around for? . . . Pa!" she moaned. Lurline bent over her gently.

"Are you a daughter, too?"

"No—can't you get him to a hospital?" Lurline asked excitedly.

"I wouldn't move him—it's not his head, that's just a scalp wound." Then he whispered in her ear. "It's a heart attack."

BLONDIE Of the Follies

The first funeral in the McClune family was over and the surviving members had returned from the cemetery. The little flat was depressed with the hush that always follows such events, and everybody talked in subdued tones.

"I think the blanket of violets that Mr. Pratt sent was the most beautiful floral creation I've ever seen," Lurline exclaimed.

"I touched me, and he's never seen Pa, never laid eyes on him."

Blondie turned on him with quick irritation. "Oh, stop it, please."

"Pa adjusted the crepe band on the sleeve of his checkered coat and ignored the request. . . . and why you instructed its removal from the casket is beyond me."

"Oh, you do, Miss . . ." Blondie started to retort, but Gert cut in. "Well, what's beyond me—if you ask, and you haven't—I think you are out of your mind, Blondie, give up Mr. Pratt and your apartment, and your limousine, just because poor old Pa died."

"I agree with you, Mrs. Slattery," said Lurline.

"You do, Miss . . ." replied Gert, imitating her grandly. "Gert came out of it, Lottie. This is Gert."

"Yes . . . and I poked you in the nose once for . . ."

"Yes, I did," and Lurline turned away as Blondie stared at them dully.

Blondie walked over to her mother who was dabbing a crumpled handkerchief to her redened eyes. Mrs. Callahan was silently trying to comfort her, patting her on the shoulder.

"I know it won't be easy for you at first, but I can let you have what I can from my pay out of the show it—Lurline!" began Blondie, hoping that her mother would understand.

"How much does that work out to, Blondie?" her mother asked anxiously.

Lurline supplied the answer with a disdainful shrug. "About eighty dollars—it's a pittance—a positive pittance."

"It's more than I used to get at the store . . ." exclaimed Blondie, quickly.

"We had your pa then," said her mother. "He got thirty dollars when he worked and you know he never spent anything on himself . . . he'd bring the check home and hand it to me . . . just like that . . . remember, Gert? He was a good man, your Pa."

"Don't I know he was good," cried Blondie, trying hard to control herself. Then gently, "I'll be good to you, too, Ma. But you'll just have to get along on what I—er—really earn . . ." Blondie stopped as her mother began to cry again. "Ma, I have to—can't you see, I—I have to do what Pa would want me to do," pleaded Blondie.

"Any post now will bring me that letter from Hollywood," said Pete, suddenly, trying to draw attention to himself. "If I land that job for the movies I'll take me off your hands—did I tell you about that, Blondie?"

Blondie deliberately turned her back on him.

"I wrote a swell detective story in three days," he boasted. "It's better than 'Sherlock Holmes,' ain't it, Gert?"

There was an obvious silence, and the raucous street noises filled the flat. Blondie turned to her mother

"Well, that's all there is—I've got to look out for myself—I want to marry one of these days and have kids."

"Well, I've got a couple I'll lend you, now!" said Gert.

"Charming little cherubs!" said Lurline, looking disdainfully at the two ill-kept children screaming for attention.

"I'd like to see a kid of yours!" Gert exclaimed.

"You never will!" replied Lurline loftily.

Blondie ignored the side talk, and again laid down her ultimatum to her family.

"Well, I'm going to live on what I make from the show—that's all," and she moved toward the door.

"You'd better change your mind before somebody else hooks Mr. Pratt," warned Lurline.

"I don't want to discuss those things here . . ." Blondie replied quickly.

"You're gonna work in that show on the day of your Pa's funeral?" asked Ma, surprised.

"If Pa were watching—and I think he is—he'd know that what I'm doing is right," Blondie replied.

"Now, that's an insane theory—do you believe in that, Lurline?" asked Pete.

"Part of Blondie's attraction is her eccentricity . . ."

"Blondie's eccentricity! You kill me," Lurline said.

"I will one day!" came back Lurline. Then, turning to Blondie, she said: "Come on, Miss McClune—get your hips out of here."

"I should write and thank Mr. Pratt on behalf of the family," asked Pete.

"He's been thanked enough," declared Lurline.

"No—please don't . . ." said Blondie, as she kissed her mother lovingly. "Goodbye, all!"

"You say your pa would like you to do what you're doing?" Pete asked. "Do you think he'd like to see us living from hand to mouth again, like we used to?"

"Aw—she's upset now—I know how she feels . . ." declared Gert. Lurline followed her, followed by Mrs. Callahan, who never took part in the McClune family discussions.

As they reached the stairway, Mrs. Callahan whispered to Blondie. "Right—I wish you'd do the same, Lottie. I'd like to see you two kids come home and find two nice young men of your own class . . ."

"Mother, mother, mother, mother—just what I need—just what I need—annoyed. "Goodbye, dear," and she kissed her mother hastily.

"Goodbye, then, children—take care of yourselves . . ." Mrs. Callahan called as the girls went down the stairs.

As their car pulled away from the curb, Blondie said earnestly, "I guess your mother's right about coming down to earth again."

"Mother's always been like that—no vision—no vision at all."

"Remember the first time I came down here with you in the car?"

"Indeed, indeed."

"I certainly envied you."

"Well, you got everything for your self, didn't you?"

"Yes, everything—and nothing."

"What do you mean, you got nothing?"

"Oh, I want love; I want to be in love."

"Aren't you?"

"I guess we both are, aren't we?"

"Why do you keep bringing up Larry Belmont? Forget him! I have."

"No, you haven't forgotten him, and I haven't either."

Lurline looked away. "Oh, I hate this part of town." Then to the chauffeur: "Come on, can't you hurry, please? . . . We're not going to a funeral . . ." Catching herself, Lurline looked sympathetically at Blondie.

"I'm sorry, kid . . . I didn't mean to bring it up . . . I'm sorry."

"I know," Blondie said, simply and the two girls lapsed into silence.

Blondie was whistling . . . whistling like a little boy in the dark to mask his fears . . . whistling the little tune that Pa used to hum as they sat on the fire escape those long summer evenings in the past, holding hands . . . and dreaming of the future. "Pa! Pa!" Blondie cried suddenly. Then her voice broke into sobs. "Oh, I loved him so! . . . I loved him."

Popular demand for C. L. Jackson to again represent the Sand Belt Golf association as secretary has been started. Jack always gets his records out on time, and newspapers interested in knowing how the Sand Belt standings are may find out the instant the secretary gets the match cards from the seven clubs. Sometimes it may appear that he is slow in getting out records, but that is due to his clubs of the loop sending him their cards anywhere from a couple of days to the greater part of a week behind time. Have you checked up on your dog lately? Now is a good time to give him that personal inspection you have been neglecting, what with vacations and the like just ended. Look in his ears, between his toes, at his eyes and in his mouth. A dog clean inside as well as outside will be found in excellent condition, his eyes clear and non-matting, his canker in his ears, his gums firm and free from food pockets and tooth scale. If any of these defects are found attend immediately to them and then start the dog on a good conditioner powder, fed in his food. He'll be oked.

Undoubtedly the most talked-about cartridge today is the new .22 Hornet. More so, in fact, than the small game circles than the .30-06 is in big game circles. For many years there has been a steadily increasing demand for a super-accurate cartridge for both small game and target shooting. Many small game hunters tried out other calibres with little or no success. The .22 long rifle, even with high speed, hollow point ammunition, was woefully lacking in killing power on the tougher varieties of small game, and the larger calibres, such as the .25-30, were incapable of the half splitting accuracy required. With the introduction of the Hornet came the realization that here, at last, was the cartridge for the small hunter. At a velocity of 2,600 feet the Hornet offers a flat trajectory necessary for effective game shooting at 150 to 200 yards, and the

Child Expected by Pretty French Wife Of Aga Khan; Is Heir to Fabulous Sums

By MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service Writer

LONDON.—Throughout the Moslem world has passed the joyous word that the beautiful French Catholic wife of the Aga Khan is expecting a child in December. And 70,000,000 Mohammedans over whom he exercises religious and spiritual authority are hoping it will be a boy. Already gifts are being gathered together for the great occasion. There will be costly sables from Mongolia, ivory from Africa, silks from China, gems from Burmah, ingots of gold, priceless fabrics, blood-red horses, even elephants as part of their great tribute.

Boy or girl, the child will at birth be one of the richest persons in the world. The Aga Khan himself does not know the extent of his own wealth, except that it is fabulous. Many of his treasures are beyond appraisal. As a lineal descendant of Ali, who was a nephew of Mohammed, founder of the Moslem faith, the Aga is spiritual head of the Khojar sect of Moslems. These number millions in India, Persia and East Africa and it is their duty to keep their leader in luxury.

In addition to the steady stream of gifts that come to the Aga Khan, there is the traditional ceremony, at the end of each Mohammedan solar year, of paying him his weight in gold. At that time comes a committee of elders from India who solemnly weigh him—and he tips the scales at about 200 pounds—then measure out the exact equivalent in gold. He is thanked for accepting it, and begged in return to bestow upon them some of the water in which he has bathed.

Bath Water is Medicine
All of the Aga Khan's bath water is saved, for it is considered holy. His followers buy tiny bottles of it as much-prized charms against disease and evil spirits. Almost every week he ships a barrel or two into some remote province.

His wife, who is his second, is the daughter of a French restaurant keeper. She became a Paris dressmaker and for years had known the powerful and wealthy Indian widower. But when he first proposed to Mademoiselle Andreé Josephine Marie Leonie Carron, she flatly turned him down.

But the Aga Khan has a bit of iron in his makeup and never takes "No" for an answer. The result was that they eventually were married with due Moslem ceremony at Aix-les-Bains by the Grand Imam of the Mosque of Paris.

His bride wore a dazzling gown of emerald and chocolate, which are the Aga's racing colors. In her chestnut hair, she wore a priceless diamond tiara which had once been part of the crown jewels of the Shahs of Persia. A half-million-dollar diamond was a wedding present; her trousseau cost $40,000. As a memento of the occasion, she dropped $10,000 in the town poor box.

At Antibes, on the French Riviera, she has a big house which her husband has named Villa Andree after her first name. Now she is going into retirement in their big chateau near Aix-les-Bains to await the birth of their baby. The Aga also has a couple of houses in England and one of the finest palaces in Bombay.

Enthroned at 10
He was born in 1875 in Bombay and at the age of 10 succeeded to the hereditary power exercised by his father. He was educated at the College for Princes at Rajkumar, in England's difficult job of ruling India, he soon showed himself a friend of the British Raj, although he never failed to criticize when he thought it was necessary.

He showed his mettle when the World war broke out and when the Germans not only succeeded in bringing Turkey into the conflict on their side, but were seeking to stir up a holy war of Moslems against the Allies.

He issued a statement urging the Moslems the world over to put themselves, body, purse and influence at the disposal of the Allies. He offered his own sword, being willing to go even as a private soldier. But the British government thought he could render more signal service by his speeches. So he went to Egypt at considerable risk to his life, and did much to counteract German influence there. The Allied governments have showered him with honors and decorations.

Aside from his religious and political interests, Aga Khan is one of the greatest sportsmen in the world. His stables of thoroughbreds are reported worth nearly $10,000,000 and he wins more prize money than any other owner. He loves boxing and tennis, is a plunging gambler, and is a familiar figure at most of the continental casinos.

Introduce Child to Moslem Faith
The Aga Khan's first wife was a beautiful Italian woman, Signora Therese Magliano, whom he married in North Africa in 1908. She died after an operation in Paris in 1926. They had one living child, a son, Aly Khan, who lives mostly in Lon-

Tom Tyler Film At Yucca Saturday

Following up his enormously successful Monogram series of Western pictures, Tom Tyler, ace Western star, appears for the seventh time before audiences of the Yucca theatre in "Vanishing Men," which Manager Bonner presents for Saturday only.

Tom has been seen here this year in such outstanding thrillers as "Galloping thru," "The Man from New Mexico," "Two-Pisted Justice," "Partners of the Trail," "The Man from Death Valley" and "Single-Handed Sanders," but his latest feature, "Vanishing Men," is even better than the previous attractions.

In "Vanishing Men" Tom plays a strong role as the honest sheriff of a small cattle county who is determined to clean out a powerful gang of cattle rustlers, although he is hampered by the double-dealing of his best friend, a high-priest, and numerous gun battles, sensational rides, thrilling leaps from galloping horses and over cliffs, and the gallant defense of a deserted cabin in which Tom is trapped by an infuriating gang.

The exceptional cast are such well-known players as Yakima Canutt, the rodeo star, W. L. Thorne, Raymond Keane, James Cagney, John Harlow, and pretty Adele Lacy. Harry Fraser directed from the screen play by Wellyn Totman.

Chester Morris Scores at Grand

Chester Morris emerges in "Corsair" at the Grand theatre on today and Saturday as a full-fledged United Artists star—an elevation which brings the young actor into the ranks of Chaplain, Colman and Cantor.

This Broadway actor who three years ago was unknown to picture audiences has reached the heights of stardom in "Corsair," a picture which Morris was imported from Broadway to portray the leading role in "Alibi," a picture which made him a celebrity almost overnight. His work since then includes "The Divorcee," "The Big House," "The Case of Sergeant Grisco" and "The Bat Whispers"—each role quite unlike the others—brought him a following which is extremely flattering.

It was Roland West, United Artists producer, who discovered Chester Morris, and West has sponsored him through his career and their friendship is a particularly firm one. Chester bought Roland's house, they week end with their wives, the former Sue Kilborn of Paramount and the former Jewel Carmen of Ziegfeld's Follies.

On the stage in New York Chester Morris played with Claudette Colbert in "Fast Life." His best stage role was in "Crime." Cecil B. De Mille and David Wark Griffith registered enthusiasm for him as a picture personality, and Griffith tested him. But it was Roland West looking at some of the United Artists studio, who saw the test of Morris and wired him to take the first train out of New York.

MARFA FAIR

The conference of cattlemen that will be held at Marfa on October 6 and 7, during the Marfa Highland fair, promises to be an exceedingly interesting meeting. There will be representatives of the American National Live Stock association and representatives of other live stock associations from different parts of the United States in attendance.

Some of the subjects to be discussed are: bovine tuberculosis eradication on the range, meat advertising campaigns, traffic matters, oleomargarine legislation, other legislation, finances, and many others affecting the business in general. The leadership of the cattle business in the western part of the United States will be present at the gathering. The meeting will be open and all stockmen and others interested in the cattle business have been invited to attend and enter into the discussion of the subjects which will be considered.

HERE FROM VALLEY

T. Elmer Bizzell spent Thursday here on business, returning this morning to Pharr in the Rio Grande valley, where he has extensive irrigation holdings.

don and Ireland, is studying law, but shares his father's interests in racing and motoring.

It would be expected that the new-born child of so wealthy and powerful a man as Aga Khan would be welcomed into the world and into the Moslem faith with great ceremony. Such will not be the case, however. The Imam of the Mosque at Woking, England, said to your correspondent:

There are no special ceremonies connected with the birth of a child in a Moslem family, except that we Moslems make it a point to recite slowly the call to prayer in the ears of the newly born. This, as you can readily see, is to create an everlasting effect on the delicate membranes of the child, to the effect that God is great. We do not formally receive any child into the Moslem faith, for we believe that, according to the saying of the Holy Prophet, every child is born a Moslem. It is his parents that afterwards make of a Christian, a Jew, or what not.

New Low Prices Boost Kirk's Sale

Always an outstanding bargain, Kirk's Coco Castle, at new low prices, is now featured by its makers as the greatest soap value in America.

Once for ounce, the cake is the same—still half again larger than any other of the three leading toilet soaps. In quality it's still the same 100 per cent Pure Coco Castle that established Kirk's as one of the finest toilet soaps—for hands, shampoo or bath. But the price has now been reduced to a point where the consumer actually can buy five cakes for what she used to pay for three.

Men who have been in the soap business all their lives say that never in their memory have they seen such a value. Proving again that it pays both dealer and consumer to buy from America's largest soap makers, Proctor & Gamble!

All this is surely good news for the dealer; and to make it complete, the Eligat uses of this rich-lathering soap are being told of this opportunity in a big-time way. For Proctor & Gamble are announcing this price reduction with size in brilliant black and white display. Bold headlines, a full inch in height, flash the message "Ounce for ounce, quality for quality, never has any standard toilet soap been priced so low," and business flashes into the dealer's store—to stay.

While the force of this price announcement is stimulating sales to very marked extent, not for one moment do Proctor & Gamble intend to check the steady flow of advertisements which have drawn thousands of new users to Kirk's Coco Castle.

In their campaign already prepared for fall insertion in leading Midwestern newspapers each advertisement features a very adroit situation with human-interest photographs. Headlines are as compelling as the photographs themselves. Copy tells the message of Kirk's superiority in ending body odor.

Not one of the millions subject to body odor—or anxious to avoid risk of such offense—need trust to a corrective less reliable than Kirk's or to a soap which substitutes a heavy perfume or medicinal scent. Now, for a few pennies a cake, these bathers may have Kirk's—the marvelous castle bath and toilet soap which makes oceans of lather even in cold hard water. Penetrating lather that goes deep into the pores and removes every trace of dirt, oily film, then rinses off in a flash!

To get full benefit of the splendid business inspired by the new low price and its accompanying powerful advertising campaign, dealers are urged to display the effective window cards, and posters which Proctor & Gamble have prepared to help spread the news.

Two Women Are Dog Catchers

PHILADELPHIA, (UP)—Philadelphia has two women dog catchers. Unlike other dog catchers they are not paid for their work. They are Mrs. Clara Yarrow Stork and Mrs. William Charb. They take the animals they capture to the P. S. C. A.

The idea of becoming dog catchers came when they learned the city had failed to make an appropriation for such work for the first time in 61 years.

Yucca Crowds Are Like Old Times

Last night's attendance at the Yucca, reminded many of better days of the past in Midland, when parking space and choice seats were scarce. It was a response to John Bonner's invitation to get started with the New Show Year's parade of entertainment hits. And judging from the comments, the festival of entertainment served to the patrons measured up to the expectations of all.

Lionel Barrymore, one of America's greatest actors, portrayed one of his mightiest roles, a climax of a lifetime of stage and screen appearances. The picture "Washington Masquerade" is one of the most timely productions yet presented on a local screen. Its political setting is of unusual significance at this particular time, and the performance given by Barrymore is one that will be long remembered by all who see it.

RADIO STARS MAKE HIT IN A SPECIAL BILLING

"Honey Boy and Sassafras" the stage attraction sharing honors with Barrymore's screen triumph, kept the audience in an uproar of laughter from the time they appeared until the final curtain. These popular radio stars, who have been playing all the prominent theatres of the Southwest for several months past, are nearing the finish of their engagement. They will soon be back on the air in Dallas, broadcasting from station WFFA. They extended an invitation to Midland people to visit them when in Dallas, and they would gladly take them through the broadcast station. They made a distinct hit with last night's patrons, and their popularity will doubtless bring even greater attendance to the beautiful Yucca during today's performance. They are appearing at a special matinee today, and again on the regular night schedule. Their performance is one that appeals to every age and sex. It is clean, rapid-fire entertainment from start to finish.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Special music will feature both services Sunday at the First Baptist church. At the morning hour the men's chorus will sing, and Mrs. A. J. Florey will sing a solo. In the evening service, there will be music by the orchestra, and the male quartette. Congregational singing led by full chorus choir at both services.

The subjects of the sermons by the pastor will be: Morning: "An X-Ray of Christ." Evening: "The Other Nine." Time of services: 9:45, Sunday school, with a congenial crowd, a comfortable room, and consecrated leadership for every age from the cradle to the grave.

11:00, morning worship. 8:00, evening worship. Mid-week service Wednesday evening at 8:00, "Studies in Galatians."
