YANKEES CANE TOLL PLACED AT 200

Yankees Drub Cubs In First Game of The World Series

AMERICANS WIN 12 TO 6 GAME GOOD

Gehrig Starts Fire-Works With Home Run in 4th

Crashing out a decision in early frames, the American league champions, the New York Yankees, walloped the Chicago Cubs, victors of the National league, 12-6, in the first game of the World Series today.

THE LINEUP: CUBS: Herman 2b, English, E. 3b, Cuyler, rf, Stephenson, lf, Moore, cf, Grimm, 1b, Hartnett, ss, Koenig, ss, Bush, p. YANKS: Sewell, J. 3b, Ruth, rf, Gehrig, 1b, Lazzeri, 2b, Dickey, c, Chapman, cf, Koenig, ss, Ruffing, p.

packed mass of humanity in the great stands. Those who thought the power punch of the Cubs would be sufficient to down the mighty champions of the American league who were into their seventh world series game this afternoon, were doomed to disappointment.

It was thrilling, that getaway shown by the Cubs in the first inning and kept the big bats of the mighty Yankees spiked for three innings.

But in one dismaying moment, the sort of circus the Yankees have a habit of holding up their sleeves until the appointed time, the game had changed.

Second Inning: Cubs—Hartnett fanned, Koenig went out to pitcher, first, unassisted.

Third Inning: Cubs—Herman went out to first, English was out, first, pitcher, Cuyler hit safely, and Stephenson flew out to center.

Fourth Inning: Cubs—Moore popped out to third, Grimm fanned, Hartnett hit down the left field foul line for a double, Koenig was hit by a pitched ball and was given a free trip to first.

Fifth Inning: Cubs—English fanned, Cuyler fanned, Stephenson went out on a high fly to center.

Sixth Inning: Cubs—Moore went out to third, Grimm walked, Hartnett fanned, Koenig out at first.

1000 INJURED; BIG PROPERTY DAMAGE

SAN JUAN, Sept. 28. (UP).—The hurricane, devastating this area, left at least 200 dead and a thousand injured, the most recent check-up showed. Thousands were homeless. Immense property damage was reported at Puerto Rico.

The storm swept northeastward today to Santo Domingo where it was dissipated. Santo Domingo reported that no lives were lost. Heavy crop damage was reported.

Governor General James R. Beverley telegraphed to the war department at Washington, asking aid from the Red Cross, in a copyrighted interview to the United Press. Beverley wrote that the damage exceeds that of the 1928 storm. He was unable to determine the total loss of life and property.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Sept. 28.—A hurricane swirled through Puerto Rico and lumbered on, leaving a death toll that probably will mount into hundreds and property damage that will finally be calculated in the many millions of dollars.

Governor James R. Beverley last night estimated the dead at more than 200 and the injured at 1,000. The United States weather bureau in Washington said the center of the disturbance likely would pass over Port Au Prince, Haiti, today.

Father Lanza's advice would indicate Santo Domingo, the capital of the Dominican Republic, would escape the brunt of the winds. Santo Domingo dispatches at 8:30 p. m. said high winds and heavy rain had struck the city but no material damage was done.

At San Pedro de Macoris, 70 kilometers east of Santo Domingo city, 70 houses were destroyed in the late afternoon. The governor's couriers, sent out to gather information on the hurricane, brought him back information upon which he based his estimate of the dead and injured. He said this estimate undoubtedly would be revised upward.

Because of broken communication lines there was no way of telling how many dead there were. Rafael Veve Jr., assistant general manager of the Fajardo Sugar company, arriving in the capital after a fatiguing journey of eight hours from Fajardo only 30 miles away.

"All the towns between Fajardo and Carolina, more than half the distance to the capital, were leveled," Veve said. "All the plantation houses were destroyed."

There were 32 deaths in Fajardo when it was hit at 3 a. m. and I saw about 100 dead between Fajardo and Carolina. I can well imagine thousands dead in the districts I traversed.

120-Mile Wind Starting shortly before last midnight, a 120-mile wind lashed San Juan and the hinterland, wrecking buildings, ripping the roofs from houses, blowing down their side walls and ruining the valuable citrus fruit and coffee crops.

When the storm left Puerto Rico and headed westward toward Santo Domingo communications in the island had not been restored. It was established that in Barrios 14 were dead, in Sbanallana 4, in Catano 2, and Rio Piedras 10. Other reports said the death toll in Rio Piedras was as high as 40.

A preliminary check indicated that none of the Americans living here was killed or injured but an American resident escaped without property loss.

Thousands Homeless The work of relief and repair got under way in such confusion that it was impossible to determine the extent of the casualty list but it was apparent that hundreds had been hurt. Thousands of persons were left homeless.

ITALY SETS A TAX EXAMPLE

The Italian government seems to have hit upon a new scheme in the matter of levying income taxes—a scheme which, while open to possible abuses, nevertheless has something to commend it.

Mussolini's council of ministers has approved a decree providing that tax assessors, in estimating a taxpayer's ability to pay, may go beyond his tax return and base their assessments on his scale of living.

In other words, demonstrating that you have a moderate income would do you no good at all if you lived on a palatial estate, operated a string of motor cars and maintained a great staff of servants. Your lawyer's cleverness at concealing your sources of income wouldn't help you. You'd pay taxes on the basis of what you spent, as well as what you earned.

Such a system could be abused, of course. But doesn't it sound as if it had a bit of good, common sense in it?

In the course of his summer's travels the observant motorist probably has been impressed with the fact that there are as many ways of spelling "sandwiches" as there are of making them.

But if you ever have any ideas of taking a dish in politics, my advice to you is to be either a republican or a democrat. And if you have any ideas about trying to get the democrats in power again, you may look a little funny trying to put the republicans in power in Texas.

I hate to see the Ferguson's in office as bad as anybody, but I also hate to see Hoover in the president's chair. If you have a ticket reading Bullington for governor and Roosevelt for president, you surely are indulging in a mixture.

Swapping Yarns with Col. True

Col. True maintains a standing invitation to others to write to him and tell of their own extraordinary experiences. No holds barred. Address Col. True, in care of The Reporter-Telegram.

Dear Col. True: Is it true that you and my uncle Arthur once went up to the moon? He tells me that you and he were once riding night mares on an Arizona ranch, where you met a snap dragon and had a big fight with it. The next thing you knew (so he says) you were on the moon. Uncle Arthur says that you got the big dipper and dipped up some milk from a milky way and lived on green cheese and milk for a week. Is it true you had dates with the Seven Sisters? And did you really spend a night in Job's coffin? He says you caught a falling star and came back to earth. Is that true?

JUDITH EMORY. Madam: Your uncle is an old friend of mine and I know him to be a man whose reputation for truth and veracity is beyond question. It grieves me to learn that a niece of his would be so unreasonable as to doubt anything he ever said. However, I must say that he has told you of one of the least interesting

THEY NEVER CAME BACK

Advertisement for 'THE STRANGE STORIES OF SIX MISSING PERSONS' featuring a woman in a long dress.

This is the second story of a series of six on the strange cases of America's most famous missing persons, a subject made timely by the disappearance of Colonel Raymond Robins, friend of President Hoover. By ROBERT TALLEY, NEA Service Writer (Copyright 1932, NEA Service) In a lifetime which no shadow seems ever to have crossed, Joseph Force Crater had worked his way upward from a law clerk to a position of honor and trust as justice of the supreme court of New York. He served in that high office just four months and then, in August, 1930, he did this: Returned unexpectedly to New York City from his vacation at Belgrade Lake, Maine, telling Mrs. Crater that he had just received a telephone call relative to political business. Spent three days in his chambers at the New York county courthouse and on the last day was seen tearing up papers and putting other papers in a brief case and in four cardboard boxes, according to his secretary, Joseph Mara. Sent Mara to cash two checks to-

Justice Crater drove away into oblivion never was located, despite the best efforts of New York detectives. The single theatre ticket he purchased that evening had not been used. Every clew led to a blank wall of mystery.

A $5000 reward for information as to Justice Crater's whereabouts was offered by the New York board of aldermen. The thousands of circulars bearing his photograph were mailed to sheriffs, police chiefs and American consulates in every land.

False clews sent to detectives hoping about the night in North Dakota had shaved him, he had been seen in the Adirondacks, he was a patient in a Virginia sanitarium, his body had been found floating in the water off New England.

Over long distance telephone from Montreal came a report to New York police that seemed hot. A very calm voice said: "I can't tell you my name because I don't care to get mixed up in it, but Judge Crater is in Room 761 of this hotel. I am in the hotel now."

By the time the caller hung up, New York police had Montreal details about the night in North Dakota had shaved him, he had been seen in the Adirondacks, he was a patient in a Virginia sanitarium, his body had been found floating in the water off New England.

Reports that Justice Crater had been kidnapped for ransom or murdered for the $5100 he is supposed to have had with him at the time of his disappearance, persisted, but they too, still lack confirmation. From time to time bodies thought to be his have been found at various places in the United States, but none could be so identified.

Justice Crater's dinner companions on the night he vanished could offer nothing to clear the mystery. They were William Klein, a Broadway attorney, a show girl named Sally Lou Ryan, and Miss Ritz's parents. They left the restaurant at about the same time he drove away in the taxicab. He seemed in good spirits and there was nothing to arouse their suspicions.

Another factor in the case, which it seems would make Crater easy to identify, was his unusual physique. Though he was six feet tall and weighed 185 pounds, his head was so small that he wore a 6 1/2 hat and despite his bulk, he wore a size 14 collar.

Further details of his description say he wore tortoise-shell glasses for reading, a yellow gold Masonic ring, a square-shaped gold wrist-watch with yellow strap and affected colored shirts. He was 41 years old.

Justice Crater was a former law associate of United States Senator Robert S. Wagner of New York and had also taught law at Fordham. He was appointed to the supreme court bench of New York by Governor Roosevelt on April 8, 1930, on the recommendation of Senator Wagner and others. The senator has been unable to penetrate the fog of mystery that has enveloped his long-time friend.

Clinging to the hope that her husband is still alive, Mrs. Crater believes he is either temporarily deranged or is being held captive. "I know of no reason why he left me or should have abandoned his career," she says. "I do not believe he would have done so voluntarily and without constraint if he was of normal mind. Nor do I believe he would remain alive, save by mental infirmity or restraint."

Police Captain John Ayres, head of New York's Missing Person bureau, says it is the strangest case he has ever experienced in his 13 years in that kind of work.

Next: The strange disappearance of Dr. Charles Brannett, the ex-barber who became a millionaire. . . . Did he write those letters and telegrams that floated back for weeks after he vanished—or were they written by his murderers?
