Twenty-two weeks goes to Nolan in two eight and one six weeks terms. Mitchell gets thirteen weeks in two four and one six weeks terms. Scurry comes in for eleven weeks in two four and one three weeks terms. Borden is scheduled for two weeks, one at a time.

Thus seemingly measuring up to the crisis in heroic proportions, President Roosevelt gives the impression of being a much bigger man than he has heretofore been pictured.

Dictatorships

All this talk about making Mr. Roosevelt dictator gives Senator Borah of Idaho a large pain. Writing to a friend, the Idahoan, asserted that a dictatorship was not possible under our constitution.

It all depends on what is meant by dictator. In Italy it means supreme and unassailable power. In Turkey it means practically the same. In Russia the dictatorship appears to mean a little less than in Italy and Turkey.

The kind of dictatorship that is meant when the term is applied to certain powers congress is by way of conferring upon Mr. Roosevelt it altogether different from any of the European concepts.

In a sense, congress proposes to restore the presidential power to its former status. It would give the president a free hand in re-casting and reorganizing certain departments of government in the direction of economy and efficiency.

Many observers agree that some such action is necessary in this time of crisis. Congress having failed to achieve reform, the only alternative is to give the incoming president a clear field.

Former Sweetwater Man, Serving As State Comptroller, Receives Praise From Members Of House

Annual Report Of Comptroller, Just Off Press, Gives New Insight Into Expenditures Of Government

By GORDON K. SHEPHERD, United Press Staff Correspondent. AUSTIN (UP)—State officials, especially in these times, are accustomed to criticism.

A bill to place in his hands two-thirds of one per cent of gasoline tax collections for enforcement of the gasoline tax act was before the house. Objection was raised that there was no limit on how many might be employed.

Such a general endorsement of his economical and business-like administration of the comptroller's office was voiced that the opponents could only answer: "Well we have no assurance that he will continue as comptroller."

Sheppard came to the office from Sweetwater. He was formerly county tax collector of Nolan county. This made him fully cognizant of a large part of the comptroller's duties.

But that is only a small part of the department work. The gasoline tax collection, enforcement, inheritance tax collection and numerous other duties fall upon it, beside the duty of registering bond issues and approving accounts of the state department and institutions.

The annual report of the comptroller's office, just off the press gives an insight into state expenditures never before possible.

An "expenditure analysis" is a new feature of the report. It gives an analysis of all warrants issued and charged against the state general revenue fund.

From the tables it can be told at a glance, for instance, just what a specific legislative committee cost and what the money went for.

You can tell from it what it costs to run the state supreme court, the state library, any state institution or any state supported school.

If you think state records are loosely kept, you will be surprised to find the comptroller has a record of a note dated Feb. 12, 1851. He has suggested that it and later items dated in 1857 and 1865 be struck off by the legislature to avoid the expense of carrying them forward each year.

The accounts are worthless to the state, he says, as are approximately $1,000,000 in railroad bonds held by the state permanent school fund.

A part of the comptroller's report reviews the sources of income over an 11-year period. This shows the cigarette tax did not prove the income producer that had been expected.

Taxes have increased little in the decade and are now due to make a sharp drop; that the sulphur tax has been fairly constant and that the big increase has been in gasoline tax.

Galveston Bucs Have Veteran As Pilot Of Baseball Club This Year

By STUART E. JONES, United Press Staff Correspondent. GALVESTON (UP)—With playing managers the general order, the 1934 Galveston Buccaneers will sport in Billy Webb a pilot who has never tasted Texas League pitching.

Webb is not a neophyte at the managing game, for he piloted the Buffalo Blues of the International League in 1925 and bossed the Birmingham club of the New York-Pennsylvania loop in 1920.

This year will mark his Texas League debut, Webb having taken over the Buccaneer management to succeed Del Pratt, now at Lubbock.

With prospects of 30-odd players up for spring practice beginning March 11, Webb has cast himself tentatively for second base. Dick Goldberg, first base, and Charlie English, third base.

The latter two are counted by Webb as among his most valuable men. Both are new acquisitions, Golberg coming to the Bucs from the Baltimore Orioles and English from the Chicago White Sox.

Other infield prospects include Larry France, Ray Rogers, Joe Tasse and Carroll Burrows, rookies; and the following holdovers from last season—Molesworth, Allday and Fawcett.

New pitching material includes Bill Chamberlain, a purchase from the Chicago White Sox; Orville Jorgens, bought from Montreal; Hubert Vinson, Houston Yarbrough, John Welsh, Fay Couch, all rookies, and Thormahlen, Darrow, Cramer, Tubbs, Moore and Taylor, holdovers.

Catchers on hand will include four newcomers—Jack Menley, San Antonio; Hil Cuzensky, Northwest University; Ralton, inexperienced, and Jack Ailo, another recruit.

Three holdovers, Governor, Bell and Dunlap, and a rookie, Vasco Moore, make up the roster of outfield candidates.

"After the usual spring eliminations," said Webb, "I expect to have a 75 cent changed ball club outside the pitching department. I also expect to get some more help from the majors but will be forced to wait until they break camp before delivery."

The Galveston club has no confirmed holdouts, Webb said.

"Texas Camel Tales"

Few Texans, regardless of their familiarity with the history of their native state, are familiar with the famous camel experiment of the U. S. army during the administration of President Franklin Pierce when Secretary of War Jefferson Davis, appreciating the obstacles confronting the transportation service of the cavalry units then stationed in Texas, adopted the idea advanced by Major Crookman of the practicability of camels as the best means of transportation in moving the supplies of the army and in expeditions against the unfriendly Indians.

The story of this novel experiment, interspersed with the historical highlights of that era are interestingly told by Chris Emmett, Victoria, Texas lawyer, sociologist

CHAPTER VII

Janet did not seem to hear what he was saying. "Then it's true!" she repeated. "Oh, Rolf—you were there!"

"Well, I'm not denying it. I don't see that it's anything to make such a fuss about, though. Is there anything wrong in going to see a show once in a while? For Lord sake, Janet, what's the use of pretending? Things can't go on this way—"

"No," she agreed. "They can't go on this way."
He looked at her, surprised at the quiet tone. Rolf hated scenes as do all men. Was Janet really going to be sensible about this?
"Listen," he said more kindly. "I know I said I was going to the wrestling match. Shouldn't have said that, I suppose. But I didn't want to—well, to hurt your feelings. Don't you see, Janet? You know as well as I do that our engagement doesn't mean anything. You don't want to get married. If you did we'd have been married months ago. You think more of that job of yours than you do of me."

She was listening now. He saw that her eyes had filled with tears. "How can you say that?" she interrupted. There was hysteria mingled with the protest in her voice. "It isn't true, Rolf! Oh, you know it isn't!"

So there was to be a scene after all. The young man frowned. "I don't know anything of the sort," he said shortly. "But I guess you're right about it. I can see now we'd never have made a go of it. You and I are different, Janet. We don't even like the same things!"

The girl started to speak but whatever she meant to say was lost in a half-escaping sob.

"You never care if you're having a good time or not," Rolf went on. "Well, I do. I like to get out and go places, see things and know what's going on. Sitting around home evenings gives me the creeps! Work all day and save your money—that's all you think about. Well, what's the use? We've tried it for almost a year now and it doesn't work. It never will. We could go on this way for years and we'd never be any nearer getting married than we are today. It's because you don't really want to marry me."

Janet had found her voice. The words sounded a little queer, not quite natural, but she said quickly. "I didn't know you felt this way, Rolf. Why didn't you tell me? I thought we were having good times—" well, that's not my idea of a good time! What does it get you? Nothing! All the pennies and nickels you and I save will never make us rich. I tell you, Janet, it's no use!"

"But you used to say you liked all these things!"
The tears were welling up in her eyes again. Perhaps it was because Carlisle felt a tinge of guilt, perhaps it was because he knew he was not blameless, yet refused to admit it, that he answered harshly. "If I said that I didn't mean it. I'm telling you the truth now."

They had been walking along a quiet cross street. At the intersection, not a dozen yards ahead, the street led into a brightly lighted avenue. Janet could not bear the thought of those lights. She halted. The sudden anger that flared in her voice was almost as much of a surprise to the girl herself as it was to Rolf.

"So you're telling me the truth!" she exclaimed. "Then why don't you tell me about that girl you were with last night? I suppose when you were so busy Sunday you were with her, too. Oh, you needn't go on explaining! I understand. You liked to spend your evenings with me before you met her. She's the one who's changed your mind about—about everything!"

"That's not true. I mean—"

"Don't try to tell me what you mean! And don't go on trying to explain, either. I wouldn't believe you no matter what you said! Why should I? After the lies you've told me—"

"Aren't you making yourself rather ridiculous? Do you want the whole street to hear you?"
"I don't care who hears what I'm saying!" White-faced, chin raised defiantly, Janet met his eyes. "I don't care if the whole world knows! I wouldn't marry you now—not for anything! Not after the things you've said, after the things you've done. I—oh, I never want to see you again! Never! As long as I live."

As suddenly as his anger had come it spent itself. Tenderness swept over her face. "Oh, Rolf!" she cried in a voice that was low-pitched, frightened. "Oh, Rolf!" The young man's tone was frigid. "If that's the way you feel about it," he said with exaggerated politeness. "I guess I'd better say good night. You can get your car at the corner here."

Janet made her voice as cold as his. "I'm not going home," she said. "I'm going to have dinner here. Here in this restaurant!"
They were in front of an eating place. It was a restaurant Janet had never entered, quite and ordinary looking place. Food was the last thing in the world that she wanted then but the pretext would serve as well as any other to get away. She must get away from Rolf! This hideous quarrel couldn't go on. She wanted to get away, yet with her whole soul she wanted to stay, too. Not with the cold-eyed, unsmiling Rolf who was looking at her but with that other Rolf who had been affectionate and adoring. Couldn't he see she hadn't meant those terrible things she had said? Wouldn't he understand this was all a mistake?

He was speaking again. "Then I'll leave you," he said. It might have been any stranger using that clipped, formal tone.
For just the fraction of a second the young man paused. For just the fraction of a second Janet's eyes raised hopefully. Then with a quick gesture Rolf touched his hat brim. "Good night," he said, and was gone.

She stood where he had left her for several moments. She put one hand to her face and brushed away the tears. She did the same thing again without realizing that she had done it. A man and a girl were coming toward her and Janet saw that the girl looked at her curiously. Why not? People didn't stand in the middle of the sidewalk on Lombard street wiping tears from their eyes. People who were sensible didn't do such things. No wonder that girl was staring at her.

Pressing her lips together tightly, Janet turned and entered the restaurant. She found a seat at the side of the room. A waitress, short and stout and with very pink cheeks, handed her a menu card. "Would you like the special dinner?" the waitress asked glibly. "Veal steak with hashed brown potatoes, string beans, combination salad and choice of dessert."

Janet nodded. "Yes," she said. "That will be all right."
"Coffee to drink?"
"Yes, Coffee."
The waitress disappeared and returned with the food. Fifteen minutes later she was back again. "Is there anything wrong with the steak?" she asked. "Don't you like it?"

Janet looked down at her plate. She had not eaten so much as a mouthful. "There's nothing wrong with it," she said. "I'm—I'm just not hungry."
She raised the cup of coffee to her lips and drank some. It was

Lamesa Beats San Antonio Team To Take Third Place In State Tourney

Athens High School Returns To Champion's Throne, Succeeding Temple, Beaten By Lamesas

AUSTIN (AP)—Lamesa high school, with the smallest team in the tournament, won third place among the Intercollegiate league basketball teams of the state Saturday night by defeating Thomas Jefferson of San Antonio, 33 to 22. Athens high school succeeded Temple, which was beaten in the first round by Lamesa, as state champion, by defeating Jefferson Davis of Houston 36 to 20.

In the semi-finals Jefferson Davis had beaten Lamesa 35 to 31 and Athens defeated Thomas Jefferson.

Except for a brief few minutes cold and tasted bitter. "If you don't like it I can get you something else," the waitress volunteered.

"No. It's all right." A few minutes later Janet paid her check and went out into the street. She had not been in the restaurant more than 30 minutes but in that time night had descended. The street was as dark as it would be hours later. It was cold, too, Janet pulled her coat collar more closely about her throat.

There, almost where she was standing was the place Rolf had stood. It was there he had said those terrible things. "You don't want to marry me. You care more for your job! We'd never make a go of it—"

There were no tears in Janet's eyes now but her hand rose as though to brush away the memory of that scene. She had said terrible things, too. She had told Rolf she never wanted to see him again. She had said she wouldn't marry him. Well, he had gone. Their engagement was ended. It was all over. Everything!

She walked to the corner, turned into Center avenue and headed toward the safety zone where the street cars stopped. She had almost reached it when she paused. "Janet," she heard someone calling. "Oh, Janet—!"

In the first period, Athens led Jefferson Davis all the way with the brilliance of Olin Cobb, Bernell Trammell and Bruce Reagan on the offense and the scintillating work of Capt. Paul Morris and Wade Owens on the defense.

For one thing the Hornets showed the Houston aggregation too much height, and for a second they revealed too much ability to get the ball off the backboard and slap in follow up shots.

Olin Cobb led the champions' offense with four field goals and a pair of gratis throws for 10 points. Bernell Trammell and Bruce Reagan split honors for second with eight points each.

There was a three-way tie for scoring honors on the Jefferson Davis team where Frank Croucher, Emile Emmett and Pete Dowling each clicked with five points. So tight was the Athens' defense that Jefferson Davis scored only six field goals against 14 field goals for Athens.

In the semifinals, Athens got a terrific battle from the determined Thomas Jefferson quintet of San Antonio. The Alamo City lads jumped into a 4 to 0 lead when Arthur Kazdoy dropped in a couple of side court shots. This lead was increased to 10 to 6 at the conclusion of the first period. It was the first time during the tournament Athens had finished the first period behind their opponents.

Jefferson Davis of Houston eliminated Lamesa, 35 to 31, in the lower bracket semifinal. Jefferson Davis was in front from the start, playing a slow, deliberate game that puzzled the Lamesa defense.

GARNER IN HIS NEW OFFICE

he was fresh as a daisy.
 "Comeback—
 'A man with a torso like John L. Sullivan's and poor shriveled legs no bigger than your wrist,' commented one of his admirers, 'he is an astounding medical case and one of the greatest instances of physical courage the country has ever seen. He cannot stand by himself, yet he had the initiative to seek the presidency of the United States.'
 'Here is a wealthy man, one who had a town house, a handsome country home and a winter place. The average person in such a position, stricken as he was would have lain down and waited for the end.'

Courage—
 "Not this courageous soul. He won his fight and today, aside from the weakness in his legs, is a powerful physical specimen. Proof of this is that he can eat anything in the world—hot dogs, spare ribs and cabbage—anything that comes along."
 "No more apprehensive whippers are heard about the president's physical condition but now, openly and in admiration, the question is, 'How does he do it?'"

Abroad—
 The president is still undecided on some of his diplomatic appointments, and the present banking crisis has returned decisions. As things rest, the following seem certain or likely:
 London: Judge Robert W. Engam of Louisville, Ky., owner of the Louisville Courier-Journal
 Paris: Jesse Idder Straus, president of R. H. Macy & Co. is already favored by Mr. Roosevelt. France may have indicated that on account of anti-semitic feeling he would not be a popular choice there at this time.
 William C. Bullitt is still in line for Paris, though his appointment is not yet believed to be sure.
 Berlin: Gerard Swope of General Electric is receptive to this appointment, but he is not regarded as a suitable selection by Roosevelt associates. Neither is another applicant Ira Nelson Morris, former ambassador to Sweden.

This is one of the decisions yet to be made.
 Madrid: Claude G. Bowers, formerly of the New York World and noted for his biography, is earmarked for this delicate post.
 The Hague: William Gorham Rice of Albany, former Civil Service Commissioner, seems the most probable choice.
 Buenos Aires: Sumner Welles of Washington is thought to have this pleasant prospect before him.
 Copenhagen: Richard Crane of Westover Va., is most probable for this.
 Rome: Mayor Curley of Boston still has the inside track.
 Puerto Rico: Former Acting Governor Martin Travieso as a native Puerto Rican is the probable appointee.
 Cuba: Jesse I. Straus of New York may prefer Havana to Paris while conditions remain unsettled.
 Russia: The appointment of Phillip LaFollette of Wisconsin as ambassador is thought doubtful. If Russia is recognized a commission headed by Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Rome and Prof. Jerome Davis of Yale university is more probable.

The reported deal between Sen. Key Pittman of Nevada (chairman, foreign relations committee) and the advocates of soviet recognition to exchange recognition of soviet for resumption of Russian relations is believed by close Roosevelt circles to be just another piece of enterprising guesswork.

Precedent—
 Another precedent was shattered when Mrs. Roosevelt walked in on a White House press conference to say a few words in the ear of her husband. This was in the presence of 25 or more newspaper correspondents. She was probably the first wife of a president ever seen at such a gathering. The wives of the presidents have seldom been seen at the executive offices at any time.

NEW YORK
 By James McMullin
Aldrich—
 Winthrop Aldrich's bombshell about the abolition of security affiliates and strict regulation of private banks lifted the blood pressure of the Tories more than any event since the Declaration of Independence. Wall Street's agonized yell of "Treason!" should have been audible in New Jersey. You can bet your last dime that no one is laughing it off.

It is definitely understood here that Aldrich consulted with Congressional leaders before he lit the fuse and that his suggestions will be incorporated almost word for word in the Roosevelt legislative program. Instead of a new deal New York and the nation will get a whole new game. It is likely to be contract instead of auction.

Those interested might find it worth while to compare the Aldrich platform with statements published twenty years ago in a series of magazine articles by Justice Louis Brandeis on "The Money Trust." They would find more than a passing likeness.

Heredity—
 The comment is frequently made that Aldrich is developing a nice sense of publicity values. He should come by it naturally. His father—the late Senator Nelson Aldrich—also knew the art of making front page headlines. Banking legislation sponsored by Senator Aldrich helped greatly to pave the way for establishment of the Federal Reserve system.

Affiliates—
 Despite official denials you will see most other banks with security affiliates coming quietly into the fold before congress does its stuff. Some will be liquidated outright while others will be sold to the highest bidder—if any.

The National City's announcement that its affiliate would be divorced followed within twenty-four hours a personal conference in Washington between the bank's new chair—James H. Perkins—and President Roosevelt. The inference you might draw is correct.

Stock Exchange—
 Not even the best posted authorities are willing to hazard a guess on the date the Stock Exchange will reopen. You could get even money that it will be at least two weeks but something may happen to change the picture. Actually the exchange is waiting for orders from Washington. There is a sort of gentlemen's agreement whereby the exchange will be left out of official proclamations in return for obeying instructions promptly. Absence of publicity doesn't hurt the exchange's feelings at all.

Gold—
 The best information here on the government's gold policy is that no one but the government and the Federal Reserve banks will have any important amounts of gold when the shooting is over.

This monopoly is expected to last quite a while.
 The gold rush at the Federal Reserve bank produced some fancy alibis from ex-boarders who wanted to explain their withdrawals. Perhaps the classic was the man who produced $5,000 worth of gold bars with the explanation that he was a dentist and had thought it best to lay in a supply.

Bargains—
 In spite of newspaper items to the effect that during the period of the closing of the Stock Exchange no sizeable "gutter" market in securities existed, bootleg trading has been fairly heavy. Although the exchanges imposed the most rigid restrictions—generally observed by legitimate brokers and traders—thousands of shares of leading American corporations slipped through loopholes.
 American capitalists who are eager to obtain sterling sold their stocks to Britishers equally eager to get what they consider bargains. Most of the transactions took place between March 4th and March 7th; little has been done since. The total number of shares involved is estimated by experts to be around 450,000. When business is resumed stock transfer agents will be in a position to verify the figures.

Sidelights—
 Add victories of the crisis.... President Mortimer Buckner of the Clearing House has been photographed for the first time in 29 years. Reporters are not fond of him. He kept them waiting all day in the rain for a statement that never materialized. Ivy Lee was there and should have told him better. The Clearing House banks will have to shell out $100,000 for their beautiful but unusable scrip. That derisive chuckle you hear comes from the Federal Reserve.

es that thing enough he will buy it anyway.
 The bill is good. It is designed to bring about the greatest good for the greatest number and should receive the support of all on the basis of the welfare of the counties affected either directly or indirectly.

The very necessity for a new deal was occasioned by the economically suicidal way the large majority of us played our cards in the game of life.

Our remarkable President, from whom we have gotten new courage and hope, in other words says, the welfare of the United States and her people must receive first consideration.

Then why not Big Spring people rally as a unit behind Big Spring's basic industries and thereby solidify a sound, constructive unit for the leadership of our territory back to prosperity under THE NEW DEAL, WE CAN DO IT.

Why did you buy this NEWSPAPER?

SUPPOSING that, beginning tomorrow, all the newspapers are discontinued. What a furore the public would make. "News! News! We must have news or we will be no better off than the ancients." All right, suppose we give them news but cut out the advertisements.

Then you would discover that politics, the doings of society, notices of fires, accidents, deaths, scandals, sports, the activities of the police and criminals add little or nothing to the real comfort and happiness of this great age in the world's history.

Advertising is the NEWS of all the looms, of all the furnaces, of all the laboratories, of all the shops, of all the stores, of all the world, and all working for you.

Because of advertising, luxuries and necessities that once cost a king's ransom are yours at little prices. Advertising pits merchant against merchant, artisan against artisan, producer against producer, for your benefit, forcing out the best there is in everything and telling the world about it.

Read advertising. Keep abreast of today. Advertising furnishes you with facts and opportunities that otherwise you would never know.
