"MODERN" WORLD OF DICKENS

The most interesting thing about the recent news of the retirement of Charles Dickens' son as a judge in the London courts is the way it reminds us that we are not quite as far away from Dickens, the man, as we usually suppose.

Dickens' best novels are not out of date—they never will be. But we who read them get an impression, somehow, that their author belonged to another, and a more distant, world than ours. The London of "Oliver Twist," for instance, the America of "American Notes," are not the London and America of our day. They belong far back in the past. The man who wrote of them, we feel, must have lived a long, long time ago.

But Dickens' son still lives, and has only just retired from an active career. To be sure, he is 84; but he links us with Dickens, just the same, and the news of his retirement reminds us that the world of Dickens is not quite as far away from us as we commonly suppose.

Swapping Yarns with Col. True

Col. True maintains a standing invitation to others to write to him and tell of their own extraordinary experiences. No holds barred. Address Col. True, in care of The Reporter-Telegram.

Dear Colonel: Although Arkansas seems to be the locale for a great many extraordinary happenings, I actually did have this experience there—an experience which is peculiar in several ways.

I came upon a number of turkeys in a clearing. I picked out the smallest one in the bunch, leaped and grabbed his leg. He flopped his wings easily and soared up into the air with me. When he had flown with me to about two miles high, I decided I would have to do something or he would take me so far away I couldn't get back. So I let go.

my feet went in clear up to my knees. I struggled for an hour or two, trying to pull my feet clear but couldn't do it, and finally had to go up to a house nearby and borrow an axe to chop myself clear. I got the axe and when I returned, there was a dog chewing on my leg. Angered, I chopped at the animal with the axe and cut him right half in two. Then, dismayed at what I had done, I grabbed up the two pieces of dog and stuck them back together again. But in my hurry I got the rear end upside down.

The dog didn't seem to mind very much; soon got used to his strange construction and developed into the fastest dog in that whole country. He ran end over end, using first one pair of legs and then the other, and could outrun anything on feet, wheels or skids.

But, speaking of turkey hunting, reminds me of a system I used. I had an Irish setter dog that would point nothing but turkeys. One winter in my spare time I rigged up a gun on his back, so sighted as to give deadly aim on anything he pointed.

Then I attached the trigger to the foreleg he always raised when he pointed.

The next spring I sent him out. Every time he saw a turkey he would point; the lifted foreleg would fire the gun and there was a dead turkey. I used to send him out alone in the mornings and then in the afternoon go out with a logging wagon and pick up the dead turkeys.

Few Bartenders Take Their Drinks

RENO, Nev. (UP)—The men who man bars in Reno's many speakeries cling rigidly to the old-time saloon theory that the man on the other side of the bar should do most of the drinking.

In fact, a surprising number of the bartenders and proprietors of liquor establishments do not drink at all. That, they say, is no handicap to the preparation of zesty libations. Some claim that liquor is best judged anyway, by rubbing a few drops between the palms and sniffing as it evaporates.

Moderate Drinkers Generally, the bartenders may be classified as moderate drinkers. The man who gets drunk on the job does not last long, particularly in the higher class places frequented by members of the local divorce colony. The moderate drinker, according to saloon men, is the best bartender because during the course of an 8-hour shift—as is customary here—a good many extra 50-cent pieces will be taken in as a result of parties getting generous and buying the bartender drinks. The bartender buys back, of course, but that is a regular practice here, regardless of whether the bartender is a drinker.

Unusual Devices A few of the non-drinkers employ unusual devices to get the money for personal drinks without doing any drinking. One man, for example, has a wine bottle filled with sweet apple cider back of the bar. He happens to be a floor worker who hasn't touched a drop for years. When a party invites him to drink he accepts, calls for wine and the bartender serves him the sweet apple cider.

More general is the practice of taking a short beer, which is very short indeed. There are a few, though, who are extremely frank and state simply and plainly that they do not drink.

DAMPNESS DOES IT WASHINGTON.—It is these damp cool days that make you want to take an axe to your neighbor's radio, or throttle his daughter—the one with operatic aspirations. According to the Bureau of Standards sound is heard farther on a damp, cool day than on a dry, hot day. They have found that sound is absorbed more readily when the air is dry and hot than when cold and full of moisture.

"Hotel Universe"

Editor's Note: This is a review of a drama read Wednesday afternoon before the Play Readers club, by Mrs. J. R. Ashley.

"Hotel Universe" by Phillip Barry—it was first produced by the Theatre Guild at the Martin Beck theatre in New York City in 1930.

It is a fantastic play dealing with life and death and the subconscious mind. Ann Field gives a house party at the Hotel del Diviers in the south of France. All her guests are bored with life and have planned in their different ways to end it.

Stephen Field, Ann's father, who lives with death, talks with each guest separately and brings each one back to him or herself. Each goes back into his childhood and returns to his own life happier and more contented.

A happy ending ensues with the exception of the death of Stephen.

How much it may cost you Not to have a telephone

In case of sickness a single call may be priceless

Meeting emergencies...

"... please hurry! ... 178 Elm Street."

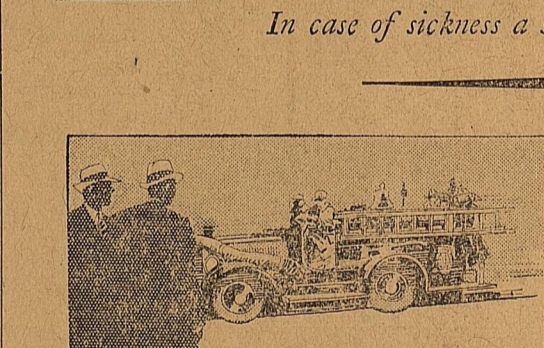

When there is a fire... or burglars... a telephone call brings firemen or police rushing to your aid. At such a time, not having a telephone may prove costly.

Finding a job...

EMPLOYER: "Telephone three men on this list. Tell them to come to work tomorrow." When there is a job to be filled, employers and agencies want to get in touch with you quickly. Not having a telephone may mean fewer opportunities for work.

Getting things done...

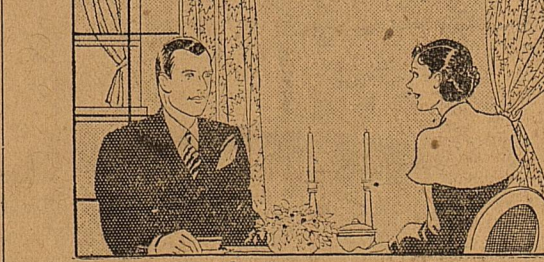

"Seems I have more time since we got the telephone. This morning I ordered the groceries, had the man call for your suit and got most of the housework done. This afternoon I had the drug store send out some dye. You won't recognize that old white dress now." A telephone saves time and strength for the jobs you have to do in person.

Brings firemen rushing...

Tell them to come to work...

I have more time...

The cost of having a telephone is reasonable... Not having one may prove expensive... Call the business office... Say "I want a telephone."

MIDLAND RETURNS PECOS AERIAL HEAVES FOR 34-6 VICTORY

LARGE CROWD MUFFLED FROM HEAD TO FOOT AGAINST WINTRY FRESHET SEES MANY LONG-DISTANCE JAUNTS

Pecos' Eagles failed to make the most of their "glorious chance" against the Class A Midland Bulldogs Friday afternoon, Midland ramming and running back intercepted passes for a 34-6 win.

Both clubs played brilliantly in spots, erratic in others. Numerous long runs were stacked up, mostly by the Midland backs. Rival captains, G. B. Hallman for Midland and Baker for Pecos, skillfully piloted the afternoon and continually paved the way for gains of their clubs.

Midland was led in scoring by its fleet captain, who went across the goal line three times and failed to score another when an offside penalty of his mates recalled his goal line trek after snaring a long heave from Sherrod. Jones and Lewellen scored the other two Midland touchdowns. Captain Baker intercepted a Midland pass and dashed 45 yards for the only Pecos counter, though Sherrod, Jones and Lewellen scored the other two Midland touchdowns. Captain Baker intercepted a Midland pass and dashed 45 yards for the only Pecos counter, though Sherrod, Jones and Lewellen scored the other two Midland touchdowns.

FOOTBALL SKETCHES

By R. C. HANKINS

Back in the nose-guard days, a young fellow named "Pete" Cowan used to gallop for Simmons U. Friday afternoon, two of his sons played in the Pecos lineup against Midland. "Pete" is one of those fellows who played an entire year with Baylor U. and was not even out of West Texas, so far as we know, while doing so. Figure this if you can. The explanation: A young scamp whose name at Midland was J. Ellis Cowden was at Baylor and wanted to play football. But his paper, Cowden said, his son, no Ellis pulled a last one. He played on the Baylor varsity under the name of Cowan, lifting the name of "Pete" Cowan, played a successful season, one of his long runs winning a game decisively, and otherwise evaded in loco parentis. During those same days of spill-cannon reinforced moleskins, Dun Reiger was an All-Southwestern guard at Baylor, and two other Midlanders were prominent among those in the rah-rah section, Joe Youngblood and Elliott H. Barron.

The noted "Ox" Cowan, great full-back of Sul Ross, and later a coach of sorts, was a nephew of "Pete." The kids of that family blow up in playing flat, look him out of them while teething.

What strikes us as the most remarkable play we saw was Red Sheridan's great running back of a kickoff for touchdown, was made by Tom Collins, Midland lineman. Any big man who can block out the first man and the last on a run made by a fleet back deserves a lot of credit. And, while we have too little space to give individual attention to all those who showed up well in the Friday game, we must point out the work of Bill Hogsett and Sherrod on ends, the oftentimes brilliant work of Captain Hallman, Gordon Jones, even though he was a bit sloppy on pass defense despite his running 'em back like nobody's business, Joe Roberts and the fighting spirit of the rest.

Pecos pulled a nice gymnastic series during the half, so much so, in fact, that Mr. Jess Rodgers, sports-writer, unblinkingly went over to the table where sat several exceptionally pretty Pecos girls and got the following information as to who was on the squad: Byron Keen, Melba Keen, Mary Ellen Chapman, Lois Dudley, Ernestine Sain, Sarah Chapman, Mary Katherine Knox. Mrs. Martin is sponsor. We should like to offer congratulations for the outstaying act and express our solicitation at the state of their health by asking if pneumonia resulted from exposure of knee and legs to that combing breeze that blew up from the ice house.

Something to think about: Every play against the Bulldogs Friday was launched by a Colie, that being the name of the Eagle center.

Allen Sherrod converted four out of five placement kicks in the game. Not bad.

Jones and Tolver staged an interesting race when the Midland speedster was airing for a touchdown. Both ran until their tongues hung out, but Tolver finally dragged Jones down. They were running at a snail's pace at the time. Earlier, Jones stopped Mitchell, pulling him down from behind, on the Midland one-yard line.

Pecos made 93 yards on 21 attempts in line of scrimmage, an average of nearly four and a half yards; Midland tried 56 running plays, picking up 284 yards, an average of slightly more than five yards.

Our congratulations to the First Methodist church on the moving here of the Rev. K. C. Mintzer. A real sportsman, gentleman who keeps religion first but who cannot keep his boyish love of clean sports from cropping out when he speaks. We asked him to attend a Bulldog practice session with us and he immediately accepted. While it's a bit early to get inquisitive, we wonder if one gets to calling him "Casey."

There's a little story about the minister you possibly remember from the public prints. The story is revealed in the morgue of the big state papers each year on Labor day when he gets invitations to address labor gatherings far and near. At a little place near Beaumont are the railroad shops of large line. In 1922 when the country was torn by strikes, the railroad town was simmering with pent up mob spirit and anything might have happened. Mr. Mintzer called together the civic strength of the town and organized a sort of vigilance company which, while non-militant, expressed to the railroad men its intention of working hand in hand with them in keeping down lawlessness. The story goes that the railroad men responded at a time when shots were about to be fired at guards on the outside of a sort of stockade, laying down their arms, and during the entire strike, there was not so much as a fist-light there. The place was possibly the only railroad town which such a record was established. The Midland minister was named to head the organization and, out of appreciation for his work, he has been called to Beaumont, Houston, Fort Worth, Dallas, Lubbock and other Texas cities for Labor day addresses. He preaches today at both services of the Methodist church and we hope the church is packed to the rafters. We'll be among those present. You can't do any more.

It was a funny sight Saturday to see the Monahans football squad drive up to the hotel, discard their "snipes" in the gutter, and start unloading. The squad is not in the interscholastic league and has played football since only two years ago. There was no coach last year, so the game was not played. "Every man in the school comes out, but the only rabid yerd town which such a record was established. The Midland minister was named to head the organization and, out of appreciation for his work, he has been called to Beaumont, Houston, Fort Worth, Dallas, Lubbock and other Texas cities for Labor day addresses. He preaches today at both services of the Methodist church and we hope the church is packed to the rafters. We'll be among those present. You can't do any more.

This year's funniest football story to us: Coach W. T. Powell, mentor of the Monahans squad, got excited. Very excited, in fact. We asked him for his lineup and he gave every boy's name but one. "Do you at right tackle?" he asked his seven reserves. "I did," a little fellow answered. "What's your name?" the coach asked. Incidentally, the coach was a star for two years at the College of Mines at El Paso. He is principal as well as coach.

A great time was had by all (did you ever hear that expression before?) as evidenced by Principal D. D. Shiflett shooting the gun twice to end the half. Or was it the third quarter? Or does he make a habit of those nice little girls who give us that nice cheer that must have been flavored with raspberries, thank you. We really are not at hammer and tongs with each other, are we? We readily admit we asked Jess to write that little dig at your failing to yell as much as we thought you might, but after all, we'd try to make love to every member of the squad at once if we weren't so antiquated and doddling. Does that dissolve the break in diplomatic relations? We hope so and hope, furthermore, we have to wear cotton in our caps as we do while flying with some of these wild birds—so your volume will not injure our delicate ear drums.

Despite our getting permission to cross the field, the deservedly popular principal threatened to shoot us with the timing gun and to initialize the home club half the distance to the goal line if we didn't vamoose. And didn't we!

Overheard on the bench: "Hot damn! There goes Johnson!" Dub Stanley hastily slipped on his helmet. He was a substitute for J. Nobles and J. acted as if he had hurt his knee.

One for Coach Barry to tell his children some time, if "some time" comes. He had nine men absorbing the Monahans thrusts for about two downs out there Saturday. Midland had not yet scored, and called time to send information to the coach that two cylinders were missing. "A good one on you," we piped off to the coach. "Not on me," he rushes us up. We still wonder who the joke was on.

To conclude: Say, whose dog was that that followed the pep squad, then went over and inspected the team? And if every member of the pep squad carried the double-barrelled punch and noise of Kathleen Scruggs the racket in the cheering section would resemble a bunch of minnie's stuffed with T. N. T.

Gotta go and hunt Ironhead, who got lost. Understand he went to Pecos after the game and developed a case of amnesia.

Here is the lowdown on Texas-T.C.U. direct from Francis Schmidt headquarters:

There isn't much room for arguing the T. C. line is superior to that of the Longhorns. T. C. U. is big. Texas is big. When big team meets big team, you know what happens—It's either a tie or somebody wins.

Only one thing will keep Bohn Hilliard from being an all-conference selection: that is the fact he has not blocked anybody all season or shown any serious intentions of doing so.

Bohn Hilliard is a wonderful broken field runner.

If he makes many broken field runs against T. C. U., it will be very sad.

The game ought to be a pip.

HORRIFYING

WASHINGTON—If you are fond of sea bathing, do not read this. But, according to the annual report of the Committee on Submarine Configuration and Oceanic Circulation (whatever that is), of the National Research Council, the sea is literally alive with invisible organisms, germs, and bacteria of all kinds. Five hundred thousand organisms to the cubic centimeter (.001 cubic inch) of water have been found of the Massachusetts coast, with similar results discovered in the Pacific.

Sherrod intercepted Jones' pass on the Midland 45 and after eluding several tackles, raced for a touchdown. BULLFIGHTERS ROMP

LUBBOCK, Nov. 5.—Making first downs at nearly every offensive thrust, the Texas Tech Matadors swamped the Trinity university Tigers of the Lone Star conference, 79-0, here Friday night.

With his squad limited to 25 men according to contract terms, Coach Cawthon alternated two complete lineups during the game, taking full advantage of the new substitution rule.

Colorado won easily. Colorado had a push-over beating, Rota 65 to 0. The visiting Yellowhammers never had a chance against the Wolves' flashy attack. Coach Cantrell kept his first string in for the first three minutes of the game, then started yanking, and nearly the whole squad saw action. Colorado had the game led, 20 to 0, at the end of the first quarter.

Paul Kneller, halfback of the Wolves, supplied the game's most sparkling play when he caught Rota's kickoff at the beginning of the third quarter, on his one-yard line, and ran 99 yards to touchdown.

Colorado faces its sternest test next Friday, playing the Sweetwater Mustangs.

Bees Struggle To Save Home

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (UP)—A strange struggle over a hoarded "treasure" is going on in this city. The principals are a hive of independent bees and a beekeeper. A tree holds the "stake."

Two years ago the bees swarmed in a little hollow tree in the downtown district and set to work storing honey, apparently unmindful of autos roaring by, or people crowding close to see.

Walter Bielfield, beekeeper, recently was given permission to move the swarm to his farm. It appeared impossible to salvage the honey without injuring the tree, for the single opening, oddly enough, was near the base of the tree and less than two feet from the sidewalk.

But Bielfield conceived a plan. He placed a trap over the opening, whereby the bees can leave but not re-enter. Then he placed a patent hive a few inches away.

In 21 days—about the middle of October—young bees were hatched in the new hive, Bielfield said. Then he removed the trap. The new bees, he believes, will re-enter the tree, "rob" it, and transport the honey to their own hive.

"Bees are terrible robbers as well as great workers," Bielfield declared.

"WHO KILLED JENNY WREN?" ANSWER IS ON YUCCA THEATRE SCREEN TODAY

"Who Killed Jenny Wren?" the question which seems to have taken the entire Western continent by storm because of the extensive promotion given the mystery in a six weeks' advance broadcasting with prizes of $6,000 offered for the best conclusions of an unfinished version of the plot will now be answered on the screen for the benefit of the moviegoers. The feature photoplay, "The Phantom of Crestwood," with the authors' own ending, is at the Yucca today and Monday.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Woody and children, Mrs. E. H. Watson visited friends in Midland Saturday. J. J. Willis of Odessa visited with friends in Midland Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Mann and Mrs. Emily Kannon spent Saturday in Alpine visiting relatives who attend Sul Ross college.

Was left open: "Who killed Jenny Wren?" It will be found solved in the last few feet of the motion picture. In the meantime one wonders:

Was it Ricardo Cortez, seen lurking about the death scene, revolver drawn? . . . He was known to want certain love letters.

Was it H. B. Warner? He had known Jenny pretty well—in fact, too well. . . . She had forced him to give a dinner in her honor at his home. . . . An hour later she was dead. . . .

Was it Pauline Frederick? Jenny was not only attempting to blackmail her brother, but attempting to marry her sister, Esther Wren, into Pauline's family. . . . Pauline Frederick slept in the next room to the ill-fated Jenny. . . .

Was it Anita Louise? Her pending marriage certainly was jeopardized by her fiancé's attitude toward Jenny Wren. . . . She, too, was close by. . . .

Was it Robert McWade? Jenny had attempted to extort money from him on the eve of his running for a political office. He needed every cent. . . . yet if he did not come across, well. . . . Jenny would have told the public all.

Was it Aileen Pringle? Jenny knew her husband. . . . intimately. . . . and Aileen knew Jenny knew her husband intimately. . . . Was it Mary Duncan? The man she loved was at Jenny's mercy. . . . and Jenny never had been known to be merciful. Mary was one of the first to appear following Jenny's death scream. . . .

Was it Gavin Gordon? If Jenny had even breathed what she knew about him! Did he yield to an impulse to kill in the middle of the night? . . .

George E. Stone—did he kill her? How did he happen to turn up so suddenly? What was he doing at Crestwood? . . .

Charles Dickens wrote a "Life of Christ" especially for his children. Although the manuscript still exists, it has never been published.

AT THE LIBRARY

Midland readers who enjoyed "Coronado's Children," the story of the XIT ranch, and similar writings have a treat in store for them in "Southwestern Lore." Edited by the genial J. Frank Doble whom Midland people recently heard lecture here, this ninth volume of the Texas Folk-Lore society publications is a delightful hodge-podge of interesting things.

I call it a hodge-podge because the various contributors have written of everything from razorback hogs and Mexican shepherders' superstitions to cowboy yarns and a "Love-of-God" shaver (whatever that is). There is fascinating reading here for anyone who has the slightest interest in traditions, superstitions, and other human fancies. . . .

In this limited space only a few of the more outstanding articles in the collection can be mentioned. "Folk-Lore Shooting" will challenge the interest of any man who has ever heard tales of the marvelous shooting feats of the old Two Gun Men. The author of this article concludes that some of these great marksmen might well be surprised at hearing their own exploits as told by imaginative admirers.

There is not a more mirth-provoking article in the book than that on "Razorbacks." It contains a supply of interesting razorback hog yarns that should entertain anyone who ever heard of these animals. "Folk-Lore of the King Ranch Mexican superstitions of the region workers on this vast South Texas ranch.

What we call the constellation of the "Big Dipper" is not a constellation of their quaint beliefs; these Mexicans say it is a "corrida" or wagon outfit of cowboys with their forward dragging tongues, they say because everything in heaven works opposite to things on earth. Many other of their curious superstitions are here described by a man who has lived among these simple people.

"Superstitions About Cotton" is a collection of negro beliefs. Probably very few people in West Texas where cotton raising is a new industry have ever thought of being superstitious about the plant. Fort Worth negroes have, for this article sets down superstitions expressed by students in a negro high school in that city.

Dozens and dozens of curious beliefs about the fact of cotton and marriage, good luck, bad luck, and even on conjurers' magic are included. One odd superstition is that cotton planted on sandy soil will set down superstitions expressed by students in a negro high school in that city.

No folk-lore collection would be complete without songs. "Southwestern Lore" has its share. Here are given the songs of vaqueros and others, including the words and music to the famous "Hell in Texas."

Altogether the book is a pleasant and entertaining one. "Southwestern Lore" is a recent addition to the county library. It has been put on the fourteen-day shelf.

"AMERICAN MADNESS," MASTERPIECE OF SCREEN, SHOWING AT THE RITZ

In "American Madness," Columbia has taken a daring and sensational theme, closest to everyone's heart today, and from it turned out an exciting melodrama, which deserves a high ranking in any list of the best pictures of the year—or any other year—for that matter. "American Madness" is now at the Ritz theatre where it will be shown today and Monday.

When he is unable to pay, they give him the alternative of aiding them to rob the bank or be "put on the spot." He changes the time-lock on the vault, so that suspicion, after the robbery is committed and a watchman murdered, falls upon Matt Brown, assistant cashier, played by Pat O'Brien. The job was done at midnight, and at that hour the crafty cashier had arranged an alibi for himself by inducing Huston's wife to go to his bachelor apartment after attending the theatre. O'Brien finds them there together.

The big bank scenes are extremely interesting and faithful in detail. Besides the work of the principals, there are striking minor performances by a score of frequently seen character players. The direction by Frank Capra, who produced such hits as "Submarine," "Drillable," "Flight," and "Ladies of Leisure" is superb.

Baby Is Born On Fire Truck

VIENNA (UP)—The youngest person ever to experience that greatest of boyhood pleasures, a ride on the local "fire-wagon," is undoubtedly little Josef Eosset of the Austrian industrial center Wiener Neustadt. He was born on one due to the fact that his mother had taken the wrong street car a few minutes before his birth and found herself landed before the local fire brigade headquarters instead of the maternity hospital.

An obliging fire chief, on having his attention attracted to the expectant mother, immediately ordered his fastest ambulance truck put at her disposal for a quick run to the maternity clinic. Little Josef's stork outraced the truck's motor, however, and presented him to his mother hale, hearty and squawking lustily several minutes before the hospital could be reached.
