A temporary injunction restraining the state highway commission from rerouting the state highway through Odessa was granted Saturday by District Judge Charles L. It is understood here that plans for rerouting the highway through Odessa would mark the path along the general direction of the railway.

GREAT POTASH SUIT ON TRIAL IN NEW MEXICO

ARTESIA, N. M.—V. H. McNutt of San Antonio, Texas, former resident of Artesia, took the stand in federal court at Roswell last week in his own behalf in his suit of $400,000 for his services against the United States Potash company. McNutt seeks $400,000 for his services in connection with the discovery of what is believed to be the greatest potash field in America. The discovery was the result of 'exploring for oil in the Artesia field. The early testimony dealt with McNutt's attempt to prove his claim for $400,000 services rendered in the discovery of the potash field in southeastern Eddy county, east of Carlsbad. The vast potash deposit was found by accident according to the testimony.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5. (UP).—The house today defeated the Garner resolution for outright repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The action, it was believed, definitely ended the possibility of congressional approval of appeal in the present short session which opened at noon. The vote was 271 to 144, only five short of the two-thirds majority PRIEST DELIVERS necessary.

The house agreed to consider the resolution on a technical parliamentary move, Majority Leader Urainey introducing the resolution almost as soon as the body convened. In de-bate, he spoke first, briefly reading prohibition plans of both parties. The senate adjourned after a brief opening session.

The house considered only the repeal resolution. As John Garner, his face flushed, announced the vote, some cheered but the majorities of the control of of those voting for repeal sat

Congressmen Blanton and Patman voted against the resolution, Congressman Sanders was for the resolution, but was absent and paired.

The crowd in the gallery was one of the greatest of the administration.

LOS ANGELES.—If fantastic, yet LOS ANGELES.—If fantastic, yet scientific dreams come true, persons now alive may enjoy the Jules Vernesque experience of breakfasting in New York, lunching over Greece, dining in Pekin and eating the ensuing breakfast at the starting point. Possibility of constructing airplanes that will be able to whizz through the stratosphere entirely around the world in 24 hours is seen by scientists here, who are planning to undertake experiments shortly to develop a new type of engine.

An airplane of radical appearance but of apparently correct theoretical design, which would travel at a speed of 1000 miles an hour, is described by Dr. A. L. Klein, professor of aeronautics at the California Institute of Technology, in a seminar on "Superaviation."

Not Impossible

"There are many practical problems to be solved before a model of such a plane can be constructed, but thus far no insurmountable theoretical difficulties have presented themselves," asserts Dr. Klein.

"One of our problems is to obtain on a large enough scale a testing field with the low air density of the upper air. Before the engine would operate as an automatic gasoline-burning rocket could function, the plane already must be moving at heretofore unattained speeds."

This last difficulty, according to Dr. Klein, is not impossible to solve. By making all changes in design that are now theoretically possible, the California savant estimates that the speed of planes powered with the present type of engines can be increased at least 20 per cent.

The plane which will be used for flying at altitudes of between 15 and 25 miles, it was pointed out by Dr. Klein, must be powered with the ordinary internal combustios engine in addition to strange, tube-like engines.

In addition to his startling illusions. In addition to his startling illusions Rekab also performs some of the favorite tricks of the fake spirit mediums. One of these is the famous slate writing test. In presenting this feat with which unscrupulous mediums have hoaxed the public for many years, Rekab laughingly says that believe it or not, it is accomplished by natural means.

Everyone who witnesses the performance of Rekab and Company marvels at the smoothness and the sound of the sound of the percentage of youthful criminals who have had the training of boy scouts is practically nil. What other king ever uttered words that have been quoted and pondered over like His simple sermon on the mount? Where ever lived a king with the magnanimity and the generosity of Jesus Christ? Who was ever a greater friend of little children than He? There has been none!

"The world admires a manly character, and who ever answered the description of a 'real man' better into the matthew 8: "And when Jesus Was come into Peter's house, he saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever. "The world admires a manly character, and who ever answered the description of a 'real man' better than did Christ? It takes a man to enter a desecrated temple and single-handed to clear it of buyers and sellers. It takes a man to meet his rankest enemies and tell them face to face what he thinks of their hypocrisy and deceit. It takes a man to suffer a mental agony of an hour that changes his sweat into blood; it takes a man to bend his back to the lash of scourges and be mute; it takes a man to wear a crown of thorns and not complain; it takes a man to carry a heavy cross to death; it takes a man to hang a victim between heaven and chang a victim between heaven and cearth and call mercy upon the heads of his slayers. Jesus Christ did all this because he was every inch of him a man.

"Diogenes, we are told, went every day to the plazzas and pub-lic squares of Athens, carrying in his hand a lighted lantern, looking for a MAN. Had he met with Jesus of Nazareth, he would have blown out his lantern and ceased his search, for he would have been face to face with the full measure of a

Concerning the strength of His empire, the missionary said: "Nations hear town in lowly fear. Yet where are they today? The winds and the storms and the rains have beaten upon it with the fury of a tropical nurricane, but they have beaten in vain, for His church was founded upon a rock and of it the Master and King has prophesied 'the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.'"

The speaker ended his discourse by an apostrophe to Christ, the King, pledging, in the name of his audience, fidelity and loyalty until death by the faithful observance of the commandments, and asking Christ to stand by in the day of conflict and battle with the powers of darkness.

When the sermon was over, the Catholic congregation stood and renewed aloud and in unison their profession of faith by reciting the "Apostles' Creed," and their baptismal vows. Then the congregation knelt and received the papal blessing, given by the missionary in the name and by the authority of Pope Plus XI.
