Farmers Are Given Deadline Extension

The pink boll worm commission again urges all remaining farmers to send their names in immediately for their pink boll worm claims.

The Midland chamber of commerce has already forwarded two lists to Austin and will forward a third list this week. If any farmers in Midland county have not yet been listed they are urged to register before 5 o'clock Saturday, as the third, and it is hoped by chamber officials, the final list, will be mailed.

Following is a letter received today by the chamber of commerce from Ben F. Chapman, secretary to the compensation claim board:

Again, I want to express the board's keen appreciation for the prompt assistance you have been giving in assembling names of claimants to be reimbursed on accounts of the pink boll worm quarantine.

The board is extremely anxious that this matter proceed as rapidly as possible and that the money be put into farmers' hands as the earliest practicable moment. I suspect that claimants who are in needy circumstances may not fully appreciate the great amount of work that will have to be done in assembling and proofing and finally approving claims from eight to ten thousand people and, although it is a voluminous, tedious job, I want you to know that it will be accomplished as rapidly as we can do it."

MRS. NORWOOD IMPROVED

Merchants Smile As Rush Started

Business pepped up so much this week that two store owners said they not only had their forces going full tilt all day waiting on customers, but had to work late three nights re-arranging Christmas stocks and displaying new goods.

Merchants reported business improving in dry goods, groceries, hardware, drug, variety store and furniture lines this week.

"People haven't stopped respecting needs of their families and friends just because times are off color, and they are buying presents for them," was the way one merchant explained the new impetus in business.

The Story of Christmas

And the shepherds came with haste and found Mary and Joseph; then, also the baby, lying in the manger; and they made known abroad all that which had been told to them concerning the child.

Window Unveiling Ushers in Xmas

BIG SPRING.—Hundreds of persons milled about the downtown district Tuesday evening as annual window unveiling formally ushered in the Christmas season here.

At 7 p. m. when red and green lights strung across streets were flashed on and window curtains come down, there was an estimated crowd of 1,500 persons on the streets.

One hour later traffic pams were occurring and there was not an available parking spot in the downtown section.

A continuous file of people viewing attractive Christmas displays arranged by merchants in every line of business.

No prizes were awarded this season.

Predictions that two powerful elevens will clash on Lackey field Friday afternoon at 3:30 were made when those in charge of the aggregation of ex-college and high school luminaries received a roster this morning of the Stanton lineup.

While Midland boasts such men as Carl McAdams, mentioned one year as All-America choice because of his savage play on the Kansas U grid squad, Bryan C. Henderson and Charles A. Leaton, Austin-college stars; Loyd Burris, Tech speedster; Maurice Nicholson, let-tem-man at end for TCU three years; Holtzman, stocky and fast back who still gives the appearance of being in excellent condition; and other clever backs and powerful linesmen—Stanton forwarded such names as "Speedy" Moffett, captain and quarter of a former invincible Tech squad; Russ Hyde, center and captain for Simmons U; Dad Pollock, great end; Buck Henson, Bloomer et al.

Stanton not only has a collection of speed, weigh, strength and other required qualities—it has the advantage of having played three games, and having won them all.

The Midland high school pep squad, on its own motion, voted today to cheer for the Midland club just as though the Bulldog squad were on the field. Claude Duffey assertedly was pressed into service by the ex-stars as cheer leader for the laity.

Tickets are on sale at several places, including the Scharbauer Coffee shop, Hotel Pharmacy, Scharbauer Cigar stand, Midland drug, Petroleum pharmacy and from Carl McAdams and school board members.

The fact that the game is expected to be closely contested, that all members of the squad have played excellent football in the past, that proceeds go into the athletic funds of the contesting towns—as well as the fact that a football game always creates a carnival spirit and satisfies an early winter urge—a great crowd is expected.

Former high school stars, such as Burris, Tom Collins, the Pinnell brothers, Al Straughan, J. Pliska, Red Hill and several others will see service, and those who watched them romp on the professor's greenward in years past will, of a certainty, be out to see if they still romp.

Officials are Hunt and Rushing of Odessa, and Reed of Big Spring.

Anyway, Don't Bet Against His Guess

BIG SPRING.—The temperature Tuesday night went down to 24 degrees.

So C. H. McDaniel, local weather forecaster, lost his prediction of a freeze by about four days. This is not the first time the weather has fooled him, he says. On one other time the freeze came several days later than he expected it thus making him miss twice in more than thirty years.

Apparently the weather man thought of the farmers this fall and the poor town dweller without any money to pay fuel bills, rather than the forecaster.

McDaniel said the first freeze should arrive Nov. 28th, with a possible lull of three days, making Dec. 15, the latest possible day. It arrived on the night of Dec. 5th.

A NEW COMPETITION

Shrewdness of Yankee traders is a household phrase. It is only in America that we have David Harums, according to the popular—and blindly smug—view.

But the Japanese seem to be showing us a few tricks along this line. And these tricks have reached the point where they hurt.

American manufacturers visioned a steady flow of gold into this country when they started to receive orders from Yokohama, Tokio and Osaka.

Locomotives, factory machinery, engine parts, valves and many other U. S. products went across the Pacific. Factory owners prepared for repeat orders on a large scale, once the Nipponese became acquainted with our products.

But they reckoned without the wily Orientals. To the last cotter pin, the Japanese copied the American machinery. U. S. models served for factory machinery. Out of these factories came low-priced goods, made with cheap Japanese labor.

Statistics show that great harm has been done to American manufacturers by the Japanese "copycats." Export trade has been damaged severely.

What can be done to circumvent this new threat is a matter for serious thought on the part of American industrial leaders.

carry. "It's a five passenger car," he replied, "but if the folks are well acquainted, it will carry ten."

One of our boys went without shaving for a few days, explaining that as long as he wore a beard he wouldn't have to tell a bare-faced lie.

Now that liquors have come back, a book on "wetquette" has been published by the editor of Ballyhoo, if you'll pardon my referring to that periodical. The title of the book is "The Drunk's Blue Book" which should be reason enough for you to lay off of it, but if I knew where to buy a stack I would place my order after advising you to lay off.

Among other things, he advises that it isn't good form for a person lying on the bar room floor to place his elbows on the brass rail.

However, the first men I heard use the word "wetquette" in Midland were using it with another meaning. S. O. Cooper, Holt Jowell and Wade Stevens seem to apply it to what a young father should know. Cooper already knew.

Bob Preston, who always rides a dish faced horse, sent me word that I must have a Roman nose because my nose is always Roman into other peoples' business.

I'll bet he spells Rome as in Strawberry Room.

A local salesman, showing an automobile to a young unmarried man, was asked how many people it would carry.

It was in school, Little Johnny didn't know when Napoleon died, and the teacher became indignant about it. So the teacher wrote a note to Johnny's mother, and stated in the note that Johnny was dull and stupid. Johnny's mother wrote the following in reply to the teacher's note: "I dared him to come," said Jimmy.

Liquor Cases to Be Handled Just As Usual, Belief

Sounding of the death note for national prohibition means but little to residents of Midland and West Texas. Federal prohibition agents have not been active here for several months and the Dean law, already operative, will continue as the weapon locally to combat sale and possession of liquor stronger than 3.2 per cent of alcohol.

District attorneys, the sheriff and constables of this section said that absence of the national statute would make little difference here because liquor cases would continue to be prosecuted in state courts.

However, convictions on liquor law violations in state courts in the last few years have been extremely rare in comparison with the percentage of convictions obtained on other grand jury indictments. For instance, in 51st district court at San Angelo during 1932 and 1933 there were seven liquor law cases. There were three convictions, three acquittals and one case dismissed after two juries had failed to agree. On the other hand, there has been but one acquittal in the 30 or 40 other cases handled. Tom Green county juries in state court have not been too severe in liquor cases. Several years ago when liquor cases were more frequent most of them were handled in federal court. Whether juries, now that national prohibition is a thing of the past, will continue their reluctance to convict in Dean law cases, remains to be seen.

The federal government from now on will be interested in liquor cases only when the liquor in question has not been tax paid. It is, of course, still against the federal law to manufacture or possess liquor on which revenue has not been paid.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT FOR A BROTHER KNIGHT

In memory of Brother William Roller, who died December 3, 1933, age 48 years, 11 months and 11 days.

Once again the Supreme Ruler of the Universe has called through death a beloved Brother Knight, and has taken him to that beautiful home above in the new Jerusalem. We feel that his going was years too soon, but God in his wisdom knows best. He has completed his labors of helping his fellow man, without pretense of biased victories, serving with an ever-helping hand. He has found his place in the hearts of all, and as a recompense of his services under the tri-colored banner he has received his plaques "well done" from the Great Chancellor.

And, whereas, the all-wise and merciful God has called our respected Brother to that beautiful home above, he having been a true and faithful member of our mystic order, therefore we ask you to "Sleep on, dear Brother, sleep on. For God has called you home to sleep and dream within his fold. On that bright celestial throne. Your smiles are missed within our hall. But God knows best for one and all. Even death has a wonderful mission. It lifts our hearts from our surroundings. Too long for that meeting up above. Does not heaven seem nearer and dearer. To know that our loved ones are there. And when on that judgment day We meet again in that great land, We'll kneel and say a word of prayer. Before we take our stand. Therefore, be it resolved that

San Francisco—Officials of the Shriners' annual East-West charity football game to be played here New Year's day announced four more stars had accepted invitations to play with the Western team.

They are Ed Barton, Denver university guard; Phil Sarboe, Washington State quarterback; Carl Jorgensen, St. Mary's tackle, and Jay Ted, end on this year's San Francisco Olympic club eleven.

KILL EIGHT BIG RATTLES. BIG LAKE—A party from Santa Rita, composed of E. L. Cagle, Frank Daniels, Bob Dille, and Clarence Strutz, killed eight large rattlesnakes south Santa Rita. The reptiles were taken out of a cave with fish hooks tied to the end of poles. While hunting the snakes they had a civet cat eating on a snake and had it all eaten except part of its tail.

Midland Lodge 145, Knights of Pythias in testimony of our loss, drape our Charter in mourning for a period of thirty days, and that we tender to the bereaved wife of our beloved and deceased Brother our deepest sympathy and condolence in this her hour of sad affliction that she may look forward to the time when the Great Ruler shall again unite these loving hearts.

And further be it resolved, that we spread a copy of these resolutions on the minutes of our next convention and also send our Brother's wife a copy also.

What Has Happened

As Personnel Manager of the Walling Steel Company, Buck Garrett managed to prevent labor troubles and is so efficient that he is soon put in charge of production. He also found opportunity to call frequently on Mr. Walling's daughter, Kay, much to the dislike of Walling. Although her father has forbidden her to see Garrett, the girl continues to do so.

Grenaker, manager of the plant, in order to get a steel contract, underbid all the other firms and then attempted to cheap the steel. Parker, senior partner, objected to this when the fact was discovered by Garrett and ordered that only the best of steel be used even if it meant a loss to the company.

Chapter III When Walling got home, Kay noticed something was wrong. She learned that her father had lost everything in the market and that Garrett and Sam Parker had taken control of the steel mills.

Kay, feeling that Buck had double-crossed her father, gave orders that she was not to be admitted to the house.

"You're back early," said Parker, when the lad came in crestfallen. "How's Kay?"

Buck took a note from his pocket and handed it to Parker. "There is nothing to say—Kay." "This isn't like Kay," Parker declared. "Evidently, she doesn't."

Buck broke in almost violently. "Let's forget it, Sam," he said. "All right," said Parker, quietly as he left the room carrying the letter. He went to a telephone and called up Kay. At first she didn't want to listen declaring that she had heard the whole story.

"No you haven't," Parker retorted. "Kay, I want you to come down to the hotel. I must talk to you."

When she got to the hotel Parker reasoned with her. "You're blaming Buck for Grenaker's dirty work. Grenaker got your father to try to get rid of me when I stopped that crooked cruiser deal. And when they sent Buck on that wild goose chase to Scranton, he came to me and told me what they were doing. The first thing that happened, Buck had your father elected vice-president and general manager at twenty thousand dollars a year. Now, go in and tell him you're sorry."

Just then Garrett's voice was heard as he burst into the room. "If she thinks she can turn me down without seeing me, she's crazy. I'm going to have a talk with her tonight if I have to kick in her bedroom door."

Kay stepped from behind a partition. "There's a law against kicking down bedroom doors," she said.

After Buck and Kay were married, they departed on their honeymoon. Buck spoke to the workers. "Thanks for the send-off," he grinned affectionately. "You mugs keep on turning out that company's stock today's meeting by the end of the year."

"We won't see you no more, Buck?" asked one of the workers. Garrett grinned. "Don't kid yourself. I'll be on your necks in a month. We're coming back here to live." He turned to Kay. "Isn't that right, Kay?"

She nodded, smiling happily, and the train pulled out of the station. But Garrett did forget the little town and his fellow workers who had pushed him to the top of the ladder. Instead, he installed himself in a magnificent apartment on Park avenue and began to play the stock market. What he had learned the day he spent with Parker had got into his blood and he began to deal in steel with the idea of building up the biggest corporation in the entire world.

As Buck came home early one evening his wife was surprised for Buck seldom had time for his own domestic duties. "That man's here again," he said grinning. "Kay got up quickly and went over to him. "Hello, darling," she said as they went into each other's arms. "Did the market declare a holiday?" "Why?" her husband inquired. "You're home so early."

Buck chuckled. "You talk as if I only came home on Sundays." There was a note of earnestness in the girl's voice. "Sometimes I'm afraid that'll happen. You keep getting busier and busier all the time."

"Nonsense!" he exclaimed. The girl looked at his an instant and then smiled and nodded. "Did you make a lot of money today?" "Plenty," he replied. "What are you going to do with it?"

He grinned. "Put it under another hen and hatch out some more."

"And what are you going to do with that?" Buck didn't know. For an instant he tried to find an answer and then changed the subject by saying, "Stop asking questions and get your coat on. We're going out for dinner."

"But I'm not dressed," Kay protested. "We'll find a quiet place where they won't notice."

As they reached the street, a beautiful car drove up to the curb. It was the last word in motor vehicle.

"How do you like it?" Buck asked. "Mine?" Kay inquired. The man grinned and said, "Sure."

"It's grand," she exclaimed enthusiastically. "Let's find a place that's miles away."

"Sold," Buck promptly nodded. Then, turning to the chauffeur, he said, "Long Island, Fred. We'll tell you when to stop. You can put plenty of side subjects in these side pockets." Buck said as they got in. "Feel how roomy they are."

"It's lovely!" Kay exclaimed. Buck looked at her scornfully. "What am I going to do with that money? Keep buying you things?" At his office, Garrett was an entirely different sort of individual. He tried to hold conferences, dictate, telephone and watch the stock ticker all at one time.

At the same time, he picked up some papers and handed them to a clerk. "Send them up to the attorneys at once." And, once again, turned back to his secretary, "Better get in Consolidate. It'll hit 260 by the month is out."

Without pausing, Buck picked up his phone and called Graham. While waiting for the call, he continued, "Hoping to see you in New York and so forth and so forth... finish it yourself." Then he spoke to the phone. "No! I don't want any part of it. What's Standard doing? Yeah? Pick up fifteen thousand at one-forty-three. Let me know."

As he replaced the receiver, Mrs. Garrett was announced. "Have her come in," said Buck, his face lighting with surprise.

While waiting for his wife Buck continued, "Send a telegram to Blake and ask him when they're going to get that injunction against the Cromwell Mines."

"Mr. Everett's been waiting," announced his secretary. "I'll see him afterwards."

Then the phone rang and Buck answered it. "Hello? Oh, how are you, Drake?" (To Be Continued)

GETS HOBBS POSITION Miss Lena Biggs from Midland recently took the position of ticket seller at the Rex theatre at Hobbs. She held a like situation with a Midland show-house.

The Christmas Seal this year strikes a festive note, depicting the Yule log of song and story, as it was dragged toward the manor house in medieval times. In those days, nobody knew the cause of tuberculosis, but we know the cause today, and what is better, how to prevent it. Christmas Seals raise money to pay the cost of prevention.

Mae West in "I'm No Angel" At Ritz Sunday

Why does Mae West appear in modern, modish garments in her new picture, "I'm No Angel," when she was such a success as the queen of the Gay Nineties in her last picture, "She Done Him Wrong?"

"Aren't you tempting the fates a little bit," the wise boys asked, "by not repeating the characterization that made you famous?" Mae West isn't tempting the fates a bit, she declares.

"I don't want people to get the idea that I am the old-time type of girl," the curv'd beauty of "I'm No Angel," coming to the Ritz theatre preview Saturday night, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. "I'm right up to the minute, and just now I am anxious to dispel any mistaken impression that I can play only the hot mamas of thirty years ago."

On the stage, Miss West created a remarkable record for versatility. As a dramatic actress, she played everything from Little Eva and Little Lord Fauntleroy to "Sex," "Zaza" and "Diamond Lil."

She was a vaudeville headliner for a number of years, doing comedy and dramatic sketches, singing "scorch" songs and dancing. She originated the famous shimmy dance, while she was in vaudeville. She also was featured in New York musical comedy as "the Baby Vamp."

In "I'm No Angel," a story written by herself, Miss West reveals this flair for versatility. Besides her dramatic characterization of Tira, the lion tamer, she exhibits her ability as a comedienne; also she will sing a series of torrid songs, and dance the "midway." This dance is performed without any movement of the feet.

Cary Grant is Miss West's leading man in "I'm No Angel," which Wesley Ruggles directed.

GOLD HUNTERS TEAR DOWN Interior of Ranch Home TULARE, Cal. (U.P.)—Vague tales of gold, hidden 70 years ago in a now abandoned ranch house, led to destruction of the interior of the place recently for the second time.

Treasure seekers, who apparently spent several nights in their quest, tore down the fireplace in an old house erected in the 1860's on a stage coach line. Tradition had it that gold was buried somewhere in the building.

Gold hunters tore up the fireplace and floors two years ago, also.

Almost twice as many girls as boys die of tuberculosis between the ages of 15 and 25. Tuberculosis associations are devoting special attention to this age group. Christmas Seals support their work.
