Bas-Relief The Old Bait Again Economy a la Ferguson Budget Balancing School Economies By Duard E. Scott

EDITOR'S NOTE: Views expressed daily in this column are those of the writers, and do not necessarily reflect the editorial policy of The Reporter-Telegram.

The old, familiar bait is dangling again. There it is, right in front of us, and mighty tempting. Maybe, this time, there isn't any hook hidden in it.

There on the outside is "abolition of the state ad valorem tax." It looks all right, beautifully decorated with "reduced appropriations of over eight million dollars."

Mrs. Ferguson admits that, in a year of sub-normal business, such as 1933 is likely to be, the 3% sales tax will produce a revenue of approximately $45,000,000.

Mrs. Ferguson's suggestion provides for two things: an equitable spread of the tax burden over a larger proportion of the people, and sufficient revenue to eliminate the state's $12,000,000 deficit in one year.

In considering the argument that the ad valorem tax places a burden upon the property owner while others are not taxed, there is much to be said in rebuttal.

Everything we buy has had included in its cost part of the taxes paid by the producer, the manufacturer, the wholesaler, the retailer.

The deficit, of course, presents a problem. The governor's plan would produce enough money to eliminate that deficit the first year.

Furthermore, there is no particular necessity for balancing the budget by complete elimination of the deficit the first year.

The governor calls for a pay-as-we-go plan. This could be done much better by reduced appropriations to a point where the state's income will cover them and leave a small surplus.

It is true that hard times have reduced the state's income. But these same hard times, with low prices, offer the state the same chance to reduce expense in proportion just as business concerns have been able to do.

The governor mentioned the desirability of keeping the school appropriation at $17,500,000 and no one will deny the desirability of that.

HONOR SLAYING TRIAL UNDER WAY; QUEER QUIRK DEVELOPS

EL PASO, Jan. 20.—With tears streaming down his face and his voice choked with sobs, Staff Sgt. Henry Wood told a federal court jury Thursday afternoon what his wife told him after returning home from a dance at the Army Y.M.C.A.

"My wife went to a dance at the Army Y. M. C. A. with Miss Tommie Long, who was living with us," Wood said.

"Pvt. Smith and my wife came home at 2:10 a. m. My wife's dress was torn. I asked her where she had been and she looked startled."

"Later my wife told me that Pvt. Smith had driven out on the desert with her and she rejected his advances, but finally she was overcome when he thrust a liquor soaked handkerchief in her mouth."

Landreth Production Co. No. 1 Holt, Ector county wildcat test, had drilled to 1660 feet without further show of oil today, after striking a slight oil showing from 4,140 to 4,200 feet.

Oil men today were doubtful that the well would produce, after going below 4,250 without additional showing. Located 2 1/2 miles northwest of the two Stanolind Oil & Gas company wells on the Dick Cowden lease, in the center of the southeast quarter of section 15, block 43, township 2 south, T. & P. JUVENILES TO APPEAR THUR. ON PROGRAM

Two phases of the annual banquet of the Midland chamber of commerce next Thursday night emphasize the cattle industry at Midland.

The menu will have for its chief item ranch fried steak.

Frances Lowe Peters will give a free hand drawing of the cattle brands of several Midland ranchmen. Jimmie Noland will be the interpreter.

This is said to be a clever stunt which will interest everyone. Jimmie asks Frances Lowe questions about cattle brands, and she makes pertinent replies as she draws the brands on a board. This stunt will last about five minutes.

There are only two numbers on the program besides the main address, and the entire program is figured to last an hour and 18 minutes. The program will begin at 7:30 that night, and everybody will be able to leave after 9.

WILD WARRNS OF "Compact" Plan

FORT WORTH—Unless the people of Texas want to see the oil industry of their state pass completely out of their control, and its regulation pass into the hands of a federal board at Washington—as was the case with their railroads—they must prepare to resist the adoption of the so-called "interstate compact."

"Federal control means monopoly of the oil industry," said the speaker. "It means the end of the independent oil industry of Texas. It means the end of the independent oil industry of Texas. It means the end of the independent oil industry of Texas."

VERBAL BATTLE RESULTS FROM FERGUSON MOVE

Ferguson Accused of Starting a Fight in Senate

AUSTIN, Jan. 20. (UP).—Representatives today received copies of the proposed three per cent sales tax bill which was formally introduced. The measure was calculated to yield $45,000,000 annually, levied as an occupation tax based on gross receipts, with a fourth of all occupation taxes allotted to public schools.

A senate fight was introduced over confirmation or rejection of Sterling's board of education appointments.

"If Jim Ferguson wants to start the fight, I'm ready," shouted Senator Holbrook. Senator Sanderford said Galveston and Dallas senators were starting the fight.

ANTIS LAUNCH CAMPAIGN TODAY AUSTIN, Jan. 20. (UP).—A campaign for 3.2 per cent beer by weight and four cent option without taxation was launched by anti-prohibitionists in the house of representatives today. Keg beer would not be returned, under the plan, with the tax. It would be sold in ounce bottles, paying a half cent tax.

NOTED LAYMAN, W. H. JENKINS, VICTIM DEATH

WACO, Jan. 20. (UP).—W. H. Jenkins, 85, noted Baptist layman, died at his home today. Classes at Baylor university were suspended in his honor. He was a member of the board of trustees since 1905 and for many years was president of the executive board of the Baptist General convention.

A funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with memorial services when Pat M. Neff, president of Baylor, returns from New York.

Play Better on Second Night

The second night of the one-act play, "For Distinguished Service," presented at the Yuca Theatre, was the best yet. The play was characterized by the cast, critics said.

The cast was composed of Mrs. Sam Ashley, Mrs. Jack Hawkins and Miss Phyllis Gemmill. The play was written by William Simpson, former director of the Colorado Little Theatre.

Much of the success of the play was attributed to Miss Letitia Williams, who prompted during rehearsals, her capacity for which was demonstrated for three seasons with the little theatre group.

MAY CUT CONSTRUCTION

AUSTIN.—The further inroads into the gasoline tax made by the legislature last year to help pay off county highway bonds, together with decreasing revenues, will reduce Texas highway construction this year to one-third of the 1929 amount, it was estimated today.

To the few misinformed persons who advocate a "holiday" play, the association's statement said: "We would say that Texas now faces such a 'holiday' without any further shifting of road money to other states. The highway law of last year took away one third of the state's road money to repay county highway bonds. Last year, due to the high tax and the depression, gasoline tax revenues fell off $1,375,000."

"The result is that, after the cost of maintenance is paid, Texas will have only about $3,000,000 including her federal aid, with which to build new roads. This will build about one-third the mileage that was laid in 1929."

"We feel it is sufficient 'holiday' even in such a time of stress as this. Some people will say it is too much, for in principle all gas tax money should go to roads. The morning public has been generous however, and made no protest over past diversions."

"It, however, there is any further inroad into this road money it will bring about the collapse of the highway program. The danger of this catastrophe gives motor car owners the right to a vigorous protest. And the motor car owners of Texas are a larger group than the voters of Texas in the last presidential election."

THE OLD CHILE RETURNS

Less than three weeks have elapsed since Don Arturo Alessandri came back to power in Chile, the shoe-string Republic of South America, and already the news from that land begins to have its old ring. In two respects Chile is acting with its old vigor and decisiveness. In one, that of foreign relations, not only verve but idealism characterizes the activities of the Government inaugurated December 24. In the second, that of internal economy and finance, already it is evident that Chile is not going to pussy-foot any longer.

President Alessandri has surrounded himself with an extremely able corps of ministers: Senor Miguel Cruceaga Tccornal, the new Foreign Minister, is a diplomat, international jurist and conciliator of more than excellent reputation in Chile and abroad. Under his leadership dynamic plans for inter-Latin-American peace, a customs union and cultural co-operation are being put into effect. The new Minister of Finance is Gustavo Ross, who favors not only a Latin-American customs union but the liquidation of Cosach.

President Alessandri had opposed the formation of Cosach—the Chilean Nitrate Corporation—from the very beginning. Popular opposition to this $750,000,000 combine of all the thirty-six nitrate concerns of Chile into a nitrate monopoly has increased since its formation by the executive decrees of March and April, 1931. Many Chileans accused ex-President Ibanez of having sold the nitrate industry—until recently the source of 60 per cent of Chile's public revenue—to North Americans. Others blamed the acuteness of the depression on the company, which has steadily lost money.

President Alessandri, denying that he was unfriendly to the United States, nevertheless frankly stated that he criticized "certain acts carried out by Americans in my country," believing that some of them had "forced it (the Cosach) upon my country against its interests and welfare." Although he has signed a decree which rather abruptly orders the liquidation of this combine, assurances have been given that the interests of North American and other foreign bondholders will be safeguarded.

It is good to have the old Chile back again. May its writ be permanent.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

One of the first acts of the commissioners court, from what I hear around here, was to sell the county car. What an act! I'll bet half of us fellows who want to go visit around over the county will have to use our own cars from now on.

Out at El Paso the new sheriff makes his deputies check in and out with the county car keys. It's getting to where their friends have to call a taxi instead of a county car when they want to ride home or across the river.

Folks, you are going to hear from this post of the American Legion. Woods W. Lynch post, one of the first to be organized in the state, has held a record for being the most inactive and the hardest to get into. The boys who have kept it alive finally drafted Major Harry Johnson as commander and he has appointed a bunch to carry on the work. They are meeting Tuesday night at the court house and they want every ex-service man in the county to be present, whether he belongs to the legion or wants to join or not. Harry Johnson is a steam-winder and all he wants is cooperation. He believes there is plenty for the legion to do around here and is willing to give it a lot of time and work if the rest of the fellows will throw in with him.

The story about how the senate tried to laugh the long down was a good one. They didn't.

Did you know it costs $4,000 duty for our state legislature to operate? Think of the money when you organize a lobbying machine to take up time with something that concerns only a few people.

ON STEER CAMPUS

The fourth annual Texas roundup of all axes will be held on the University campus April 15 and 16. There will be 10 sections of activities, including athletic contests of various sorts, social affairs, a series of lectures, dedication of several of the new campus buildings, reorganization of classes, religious observance and others.

Plagiarism and collusions are the two most misunderstood rules of the university, according to V. I. Moore, dean of student life. More students appear before the discipline committee for these reasons than for any others.

The broad sweeping slope in front of the main building is no more. The Littlefield memorial entrance to the campus at the foot of University avenue K has been completed, and the fountains are spouting water. The main building hill has been terraced. Two steam shovels are busy now moving some thousands of tons of dirt in front of the building. The old asphalt road in front of Dr. B. is gone, and students will in the future traverse the spot ten feet lower than they used to do.

A member of the first class ever to attend the University of Texas died last week. Jesse Hornsby, 71, attended the university one term in 1883-84. He was an uncle of Dr. Joe Gilbert, chief of the university health service.

A few odds and ends. Clyde Littlefield expects 33 gradsters to report for spring training beginning February 1. Uncle Billy Disch will start his baseball activities in about two weeks. Ernest Koy, football co-captain and star last year, originally came to the university intending to play only baseball. The Detroit Tigers will play the Longhorns in March. Andy Beck, University of Oklahoma basketball ace, got up from the "flu" and made 62 consecutive free throws. Home and home matches indoors are practically arranged between Dr. Penick's Steer netters and the University of Kansas tennis team of which Wilbur Coen, one of Tilden's proteges, is a star.

DON'T LET COMMON CONSTIPATION DULL THE JOY OF LIVING

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brings Relief

Constipation takes the sunshine out of your days. It may bring headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness, sallow skins, pimples. If neglected, it can seriously impair health.

Fortunately, you can avoid this condition by eating a delicious cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides two things needed to overcome common constipation: "bulk" and vitamin B. ALL-BRAN is also a rich source of blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears out the intestinal wastes.

How much better than dosing yourself with patent medicines. Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. With each meal in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

named "Sweetheart of Texas" in 1932, has returned to Austin, but on the screen only this time. A picture she was in was shown at a local playhouse a few days ago.

Jackson Cox is putting out the "Bulbord," a campus institution the last seven or eight years. The "Bulbord" is a big wooden square on which four cartoons in color depict campus life and problems in school.

A special display of John Keats' works has been arranged for public display in the Wrenn library next week. First editions, manuscripts, and letters will be arranged in a glass case. Among other items there will be two first edition copies of "Endymion" as originally published in their cardboard covers in 1818.

Today's statistics: The Wrenn library, one of the university's special collections, was purchased years ago for a quarter of a million and now conservative estimates of the worth of the collection is five million. This means that each of the 6,000 volumes in the collection average almost $1,000 each in value.

An education practice school will be erected on the university campus at 19th and San Jacinto boulevard. Contracts aggregating nearly $350,000 were let a day or so ago. The school will be used as a unit of the Austin public schools and will be maintained by the Austin school board, but special work in teaching will be available to all students in the university majoring in education at the school, which is to be a junior high.

Daily Texan editorials and letters to the Student Forum column of the paper have been trying to stir up interest in reviving a school of music at the university. No immediate action seems likely.

PUBLIC GETS BLAME

HOUSTON, (UP)—The corruption of political parties is entirely the fault of citizens, believes Dr. R. G. Carvillan, dean of Rice institute and professor of American history. In the first of a series of lectures, Dr. Caldwell said "if citizens shut their eyes to the significance of parties, they have no one but themselves to blame if the parties, cut off from their customary sources of revenue, turn for financial assistance to interested and sinister groups."

PRIZES TOTAL $25,000

FORT WORTH, (UP)—Awards offered during the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock show here beginning March 10 will total more than $25,000. The sum does not include cash prizes to be given winners in poultry and agricultural shows and rodeo events. Winners in the Hereford division will be given $5,400, prize shorthorn cattle will win $2,550 and Aberdeen-Angus awards will total $1,320. More than $1,000 will be awarded in the carload beef cattle division. $2,455 in the hog exhibit and $3,292 in the sheep and goat department. Awards in the horse show amount to $850.

PROTECTION NECESSARY

TEXARKANA, (UP)—It will be many years before India rises to the dominant form of government enjoyed by Canada and Australia, in the opinion of the Rev. W. G. Fletcher, Texarkana, who spent several months in the east. "India has not learned to hang together," the minister said, "predicting failure of Mahatma Gandhi's republican ideas and his campaign of non-resistance. As long as Moslems and Hindus are 'at each others' throats' there is need for British policing," he intimated. "I hold no brief for Great Britain, Mr. Fletcher said, 'But wherever the Union Jack floats there are good roads, justice, religious liberty and frontier protection.'"

Rankin Lions For Sul Ross

ERRORS appearing in classified ads will be corrected without charge by notice given immediately after the first insertion.

RANKIN—The Rankin Lions club as a body petitioned representatives from this district in the legislature to use their vote and influence against "any measures that would impair the usefulness of Sul Ross State Teachers college."

RATES: 2c a word a day, 4c a word two days, 5c a word three days.

The petition stated further that "a blow at Sul Ross is a blow at Rankin and Upton county. Nineteen Rankin high school graduates are now in attendance at Sul Ross college and we believe that not one-third of this number would be in college were it not for the fact that we have a state class A educational institution in this section."

MINIMUM charges: 1 day 25c, 2 days 50c, 3 days 60c.

"Furthermore, Upton county has within its boundaries approximately 200 sections of what is known as University land from which it derives no revenue for school purposes. Educational institutions further east are ably supported by funds received from this land. So we feel that it would be a gross injustice to the citizens of Upton county and West Texas to withdraw any part of the financial support which is now awarded to Sul Ross State Teachers college."

FURTHER information will be given gladly by calling 77

The petition to the legislators was signed by President A. C. Atkins of the local civic organization.

The Golden Text is from Psalms 57: "I will praise thee, O Lord, among the people; I will sing unto thee among the Nations. For thy mercy is great unto the heavens, and thy truth unto the clouds." Included with other passages to be read from the Bible will be the following from John 8: "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, if ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed. And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." The Lesson-Sermon will also include citations from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy; among these will be the following: "The best sermon ever preached is Truth, practical and demonstrated by the destruction of sin, sickness, and death. Truth makes a new creature, in whom old things pass away and all things are become new." Passions, fear, all sensuality, yield to spirituality, and the superabundance of being is on the side of God, good" (p. 201).

"MAN against WOMAN" Novelization by Arrangement with Columbia Pictures

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Johnny McCloud, one of the finest detectives on the force of "New York's finest" and one who does not carry a gun, visits the speakeasy night club owned by Mollie Ennis, and in which Lola Parker, the girl he loves, is the star singer, to find George Perry, an employee of a firm that has recently been robbed. In spite of the fact that Perry has been freed by the police, Johnny is still doubtful that the man is innocent. Johnny does a good turn for Ennis, who tells him that Perry and Lola are lovers. Johnny tries not to believe this; but when he speaks to Lola regarding it, she substantiates Ennis' statement, telling Johnny that she is going to marry Perry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Despite the protests of Lola and George, McCloud arrested the lad and took him to the station. Lola went to the jail to visit the lad, confident that he was innocent. "I know what you're thinking," he said. "I didn't want you to know, but you've found out anyway. It's all coming out now. McCloud wouldn't have made the pinch unless he had the goods on me." He paused to "You'd better not see me any more."

There was sad reproach in Lola's tone. "Oh, George—what did you want to do it for?"

"I don't know. It looked so easy. The men came to me and said there wouldn't be any risk—they'd just tie me up and make it look like a holdup, some night when I was workin' late—and all I had to do was to tell them the best night—when there was the most money."

"There was no risk at all—and my share was $10,000. I kept thinkin' how that'd start us off, honey, when we got married. That's all I could think of you and me. He was hopeless. "But you've got to forget me."

"I guess you don't know me so well," she said. "I don't forget people when they're in trouble."

"But I'm a crook. I'm no good, I tell you. They're going to send me to prison. I don't want to mess up your life."

"Oh, you're not a crook, George," she declared. "You were thinking of me, you did it for me. Everybody makes mistakes sometimes. You're not going to prison, honey." Perry shook his head. "McCloud's out to get me, Lola. He never lets up. What'll we do?"

"We'll find a way. There must be some way," Lola was determined to find it.

In the office of the detectives, McCloud was displaying a diamond ring. "If you was a girl and some guy gave you that, how would you feel about it?"

"O'Neill stared at the ring. "What'd you do—risk a dip?"

"I bought that ring," McCloud took it back and wrapped it up in tissue paper as he talked. "It's what they call a solitaire. You give it to a girl when you're engaged to her." He slipped the ring into his pocket. O'Neill commenced to roll a cigarette.

"And you get engaged to her by tapping her boyfriend on the chin and then socking her in the kisser?" O'Neill continued with elaborate sarcasm. "All you gotta do now is run down her kid brother with an automobile an' foreclose the mortgage on her old man's farm—then she'd marry you sure."

"She'll marry me just as soon as I send that Little Rat Perry up the river."

"What for?" O'Neill lifted his cigarette and lit it. "What've you got against him?"

McCloud turned from the mirror and started putting on his coat. "She'll marry me just as soon as I send that Little Rat Perry up the river. You can't get away with that, Johnny."

"I pulled him in on a hunch. This morning I got a phone call that makes the hunch good; all I need now is a little evidence."

"O'Neill was exasperated. "What's the matter with you anyway? Have you gone off your nut? You can't pinch a guy because he happens to go around with some dizzy little pick-up that you—"

"That I'm going to marry." His reached for his hat and started for the door. "Keep that in mind, Happy, when you talk about a lady." That night McCloud went to call upon Lola.

"Johnnie, I wanted to see you," she said.

The detective stared at a picture of Lola's mother on the wall. There was something in her tone, that made him wish to delay the interview. "If you look like your mother when you get to be her age, I'll be satisfied."

The girl was surprised. "How do you know that's my mother?"

"I sent to Sheboygan a couple of months ago to get a picture of her. That was right after I ran into you and came to the conclusion."

"What conclusion?"

"What made you send for my mother's picture?"

"I'm not the kind that rushes into anything. I wanted to see what kind of people you came from—so I went about it just like it was another case."

She was cutting. "Oh, you did." McCloud was cheerful. "Sure. I found out who your father and your mother were—where you were born—what school you went to—the time you had the mumps—when you had your tonsils out—where the mole is on your right shoulder—the works." He paused. She looked at him wonderingly. "You see, I know all about you—and you don't know anything about me at all, do you?"

"Only what they say about you." He looked inquiringly at the ceiling. "That you're a great copper." He was a little wistful. "Well, that's something, ain't it, Lola?"

"Not as much as being a great guy, Johnnie."

"What's your idea of a great guy?"

"A good sport."

"I guess that brings us down to"

George: Now listen to me. You got through with the mumps all right, but smallpox is different. It's liable to leave you all pitted and scarred. An' George's smallpox for you. I know what I'm talkin' about. Where's all the woman's intuition you hear so much about?"

He jerked his thumb toward the crayon enlargement of her mother. "If the old lady was here now, she'd tell you the same thing."

Lola looked at him steadily. "If the old lady was here now she'd want me to be happy. You see, you've sort of overlooked one thing—I happen to love George. And that being the case, you wouldn't want me to go back on him, would you? Especially when he's in trouble?"

"No, I wouldn't expect that. You wouldn't know how."

"I was sore at you last night, 'cause I thought you were framing George. But now I know you were just doing your duty. He confessed to me this afternoon."

McCloud almost betrayed his interest, but he caught himself. "Who confessed what?"

George told me all about it; he did it. It was for me, Johnnie. He's not a criminal. He just made a mistake—like you or I might."

The officer became judicious in his remarks. "Yeah—everybody rates as a crook one mistake."

Lola went to the table where she had put her purse and took some bills from it. "Here's his share of the money—he didn't spend a cent of it. He wants to give it all back."

She handed the bills to McCloud, who took them and commenced to count.

"Well, I can take care of that, all right," he said.

"And if you help him, he's willing to give up the names of the men who got him to do it. That shows he's sincere, doesn't it?"

McCloud put the money in his pocket. "Sincere—yeah, he must be."

"He'll never go wrong again—he

She came up to him and grabbed him by the arms, speaking hysterically, wildly. "You say you care for me? Will you prove it by helping him? Give him a break—get him off—and I'll do anything you say."

McCloud was patient. "You know what I told you a while ago—you mustn't step in on me while I'm workin'."

Lola took her hands off his arm and faced the man with hateful scorn. "I don't think they come any lower than you, Johnnie McCloud, anywhere. No wonder everybody in town hates your guts—Did I say guts? I apologize. You haven't got any. You go around without a gun because you've got ten thousand guns behind you—the whole police force of this city. You're like every other bully—a coward!"

TREE GIVES ODD SHOW

MEDFORD, Ore. (UP)—An oak tree near the courthouse here was feeling the call of spring late in November. The upper part of the monarch was putting forth new leaves, while the lower section continued its preparations for winter by dropping the summer foliage. Heat from the courthouse chimney, which some of the upper limbs touch, was believed responsible.

FAMOUS MEN RIDE AGAIN IN SHOWING OF DIX AND HARDING AT THE YUCCA

Bringing back to perpetuity the words that once thrilled the civilized world, RKO-Radio has reproduced the actual voice of Woodrow Wilson for the living public.

To do this the studio technicians are re-recording a phonograph record made by the great war-time president several years before his death, and inserted it in the spectacular modification "The Conquerors" opening at the Yucca theatre today.

On the screen the great man is shown in a motion picture study made on the occasion of his last public appearance. His lips move, and from them issue the academic phrases which changed the political structure of the world.

This novel bringing back to life of a voice long stilled by death, the same voice that talked to the assembled nations at Versailles and pleaded for "peace without victory," is utilized in a dramatic sequence of "The Conquerors."

The film co-stars Richard Dix and Ann Harding in a drama embracing four significant epochs in American history, and the lost Wilson voice vitalizes a stirring phase of post-war unrest.

against infliction of the death penalty and that he will render a fair and impartial verdict. He was accepted as a juror after less than two minutes of questioning.

At his trial, Hancock testified that he killed Mr. Harrison on returning from California after receiving a letter from his son stating that Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Hancock had stayed out all night.

He shot Harrison down in his home when Harrison went to visit him after his return. Mrs. Hancock at first was bitter against her husband, asserting that he "had no cause" to kill Harrison.

Later she helped her husband in his defense. Atty. Tom Lea pleaded the "sanctity of the home," and Hancock walked out of court a free man under a suspended sentence.

COLLIE IS LOST

One of the finest collies of the area, King, belonging to Mr. and Mrs. George Abell, has disappeared. Due to service demand for the dog, collie owners are on the lookout for him.

He is distinguished by his long nose and a two-thirds collar of white.

1916. Record number 35252-A in his "Address to the Farmers," 35252-B in his "Democratic Principles," 35253 is his speech on "The Tariff," 35253-B is his address on "Labor."

A portion of one of these was "processed" into "The Conquerors," the sensitive condenser microphone picking up certain parts of Wilson's speech and transferring it to sound film.

JOE E. BROWN AND GINGER ROGERS CAVORT ON SCREEN OF RITZ THEATRE

Joe E. Brown is coming to town. Coming to the Ritz theatre Sunday and Monday with preview show Saturday night in the First National picture, "You Said a Mouthful."

And what a mouthful! He's a marathon swimmer who can't swim! According to advance Hollywood reports, this wide apertured screen favorite, outdoes in hilarity even his recent laugh hits, "The Tenderfoot" and "Fireman, Save My Child."

Mistaken for a swimming champion, Joe is forced into a marathon race through his love for a beautiful girl and his own inability to explain matters. In deadly fear of the water, and never having tried to swim before except to practice the strokes on dry land, he musters up courage to start when he is presented with what he believes to be a non-sinkable bathing suit.

After a series of hilarious incidents in which he is nearly drowned, he surprises himself, and puts one over on his opponents, by winning the race and becoming a hero.

Joe is supported by an exceptionally strong cast, with the beautiful and peppery Titian-haired screen and musical comedy star, Ginger Rogers, again as his leading lady.

Others include Farina, of "Our Gang" comedies, who is Joe's mascot and swimming mentor, Preston S. Foster, Sheila Terry, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Harry Gribbon, Oscar Apfel, Edwin Maxwell, Walter Walker, William Burress and Frank Hagney.

The great marathon is swum between Catalina Island, off Los Angeles, and the mainland, where the regular marathon swimming championship races are held. There are a score of excellent swimmers, including several professional champions, who compete with Joe in the race, to be outdistanced by the deadly dry land swimmer.

This comedy, which is said to contain a riot of fun, and more hilarious gags than half a dozen ordinary comedies, was written by William B. Dover and adapted to the screen by Robert Lord and Bolton Maloney. It was directed by Lloyd Bacon.

expense as well as leaving children more time for work.

Going further into the matter, we find that the ad valorem tax as now in effect amounts to less than one-fourth of all taxes collected by the state government. Its complete elimination, without substituting any other tax for it, would leave approximately $82,000,000 for taxpayers to dig up in the same manner they have been doing. To substitute the sales tax would merely add from 20 to 40 millions of dollars to the present tax bill.

STORE ROBBED 15 TIMES

PLEASANT LAKE, Mass. (UP)—Fifteen times during the last ten years, burglars have broken into the Pleasant Lake post office and general store. The most recent break netted $100 in postal funds and $25 in groceries.

Raids on telephone boxes in the London area alone are responsible for a loss of $1500 monthly.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Today's most significant development was the press announcement that President-elect Roosevelt will again confer with President Hoover at 11 o'clock Friday morning.

That the meeting directly concerns the Japan-China war is evident in spite of the usual diplomatic denial that the Asiatic situation is responsible for the conference.

Certainly, the happenings in Jehol and the Japanese effort to isolate the United States from the other nations and place on this nation the responsibility for opposition to Japan's invasion of China justify this conference and perhaps in the near future.

Intelligent citizen can put an interpretation on the fact of the Roosevelt and Secretary of Stimson recently met in conference and Roosevelt shortly thereafter announced through the press that he was in full accordance with the present administration on the subject of treaties. He left no doubt that he referred to the treaty of the preservation of world peace which Japan and other nations had signed and which Japan is now violating by making war on China.

There is no doubt that a crisis of profound significance to the world is developing in Asia and that our government is not the only one that is thoughtfully, if not prayerfully, considering it. It would be very interesting to know what the secret archives of the government would show of the developments of the last few days. Whatever the future may bring, it is a wise move for this nation to let the world know that the coming change in administration will not detract from the force and effort of any declaration going forth from this government. The fact that the press of the entire world commented on Roosevelt's announcement shows that its meaning was clear to it. To show a lack of fear is often the way to peace.

By the time this is published the filibuster in the senate will probably have ended, and with defeat to those attempting to end that political activity.

Senators Robinson of Arkansas, Watson and Long thought they had settled today. Watson announced, and Long confirmed, that an agreement had been reached limiting debate after Friday noon to 30 minutes to each Senator. Senators Wheeler and Thomas blocked the agreement.

Long evidently made the mistake of making the arrangement without consulting his allies. However, conferences were being held fast and often and an agreement may be reached. Naturally, an agreement would be pleasing to Roosevelt's friends if it can be brought about before he arrives in Washington tomorrow.

It is that feature in the Glass bill which provides for branch banking which caused the filibuster. Long and his supporters are sincere in their belief that this provision of the law would give a dangerous power to the mammoth banks of New York and elsewhere and would result in those financial giants dominating the commerce, industry and agriculture of the country.

Other senators equally sincere believe that in no other way can the devastating procession of bank failures be ended. The rate of such bank failures since the first of the year has been about ten per day, and that, with all resources of the Reconstruction Finance corporation presumably working to prevent failures.

There is much room for an honest difference of opinion. As a rule, the press of the country is bitter in its denunciation of Long and his associates and the filibuster, but it is a wholesome thing that in a time of stress like this there are men in the congress who, right or wrong, have the courage of their convictions.

Let's not forget that in the last three years the financiers were ALWAYS wrong and the metropolitan press NEARLY always wrong.

Ninety per cent of our foot troubles and ailments are due to improperly fitting footwear.
