Motors Cut Out and Big Plane Dives Into Ground

BULLETIN

NEODESHE, Kan., March 31. (UP)—J. H. O'Brien, R. H. Brom-yng, and Joe Dadds, plane crash victims, died in a hospital this afternoon.

NEODESHE, Kan., March 31 (UP) Three were killed and ten were injured in a plane crash near here today.

The plane was returning to Winnipeg, Canada, with a basketball team from that city from Tulsa where a game was played last night. The dead are Pilot A. K. Hicks, Mike Shea, player and Harold Eagan, mechanic, who died in a hospital.

Most of the injured were unconscious when rushed to a hospital here. One passenger said the three motors seemed to fall, then the plane nose-dived. The ignition was off and the ship did not catch fire. The accident occurred on the second anniversary of the Kansas plane crash in which Knute Rockne was killed.

SENATE BODY WOULD FORCE 30-HOUR WEEK

WASHINGTON, March 31.—A compulsory five-day week, six-hour day for industry was voted yesterday by the senate judiciary committee which reported to the senate it would put more than 6,000,000 persons to work and "aid in restoring hope and confidence throughout the land."

The bill, approved 11 to 3, was sponsored by Senator Black (Dem., Ala.), and extensive hearings were held with many witnesses claiming it was unconstitutional.

In dealing with this phase the committee reported to the senate: "Congress is given the right to regulate interstate commerce by the constitution. . . . The right to regulate under all the decisions, included the right to regulate the people from that kind of commerce that produces widespread human misery, destitution, sickness and what."

"The power to regulate carries with it the right to prescribe rules that will save the people from destruction and protect all the people engaged in interstate commerce that destroy commerce itself."

The measure would penalize the movement in interstate commerce of goods produced by labor working more than 30 hours a week.

Only 30 Days for Getting Farm Loans

Only 30 more days will elapse in which farmers may make application for crop production loans, R. M. Barron, chairman of the Midland county farm loan board, pointed out Friday.

Barron and the other committee men P. J. Mims and Jess C. Miles, said that farmers who wanted loans this year should make application now, as the detailed work of filling out the application blanks can not be done by the chamber of commerce in a day or even in a week. It was pointed out that farmers who wait too late might not apply in time to get money. Time for applying for loans positively ends the last of April, the committee men said.

Versailles Treaty Terms Under Fire of Revision

New Borders Are "Fronts"

By JOHN M. GLEISSNER, NEA Service Writer

Pre-War Europe

Post-Versailles Europe

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Dictatorship of Adolf Hitler in Germany, new peace plans of Premier MacDonald and Mussolini, Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations and determination to retain mandated South Sea islands—all these, together with numerous international incidents—point to a revision of the treaty of Versailles, the treaty which remade Europe and defined the terms of peace between Germany and the allied powers after the World war.

The Treaty of Versailles was signed on June 28, 1919, and came into force six months later. Its basis was the speech of President Wilson on Jan. 18, 1918, in which he announced the famous "Fourteen Points," and his later addresses. The treaty was the result of the Wilson program with the exception of the second point, relating to "freedom of the seas," although the allies secretly had negotiated treaties of settlement among themselves.

The treaty was broad and revolutionary, unlike anything before considered by European diplomats. He asked for open diplomacy and an end to secret treaties, disarmament, peace machinery, and the most important, an end to alliances, and creation of the League of Nations.

Point 3 provided for removal of economic barriers, and Point 4 for reduction of armaments to a "lowest point consistent with domestic safety." These issues are now the cause of much of the ill-feeling in France.

Arbitration Clause The League of Nations, whose covenant united its members to guarantee each other's territorial independence and integrity. Members bound themselves not to go to war, and to submit all disputes to inquiry and arbitration.

The League of Nations was empowered to assume the lead in disarmament and did so in 1928, although little in that direction has been accomplished. The League is governed by a council of nine, which ordinarily was to include the United States, but which never entered the league, although in recent years it has participated "unofficially" in league activities.

Japan, a member of this council, has withdrawn, and its resignation will be effective in two years. France, Great Britain and Italy, members of the council, and Germany was given a permanent seat in 1926. Other members are chosen by the assembly, which is composed of the smaller member states and meets annually.

Rule Germany's Colonies One of the most important functions of the League is supervision of the government of Germany's ceded territories in Africa and elsewhere, through the Mandates commission, which inspects the annual reports of governors to which colonies were assigned.

The question of mandates and the ultimate disposition of the former German colonies will figure largely in any discussion of treaty revision. Germany's colonial empire comprised 1,027,000 square miles of territory in Africa, in the South Seas, and in the Shantung peninsula in China, with a total population of nearly 15,000,000 and an estimated value of capital of half a billion marks. German leaders continually have demanded restoration of at least a part of the colonies.

Another territorial problem created by the Versailles treaty and now regarded as one of the greatest dangers to peace is the Polish Corridor, which severs East Prussia from the rest of Germany, and makes Danzig a free city governed by the league.

Poland vs. Germany Poland insists she must have this territory to have access to the sea and aroused apprehension when troops were moved along the boundary after Hitler's victory. Another area in dispute between Germany and Poland is Upper Silesia, a part of which, with valuable mineral resources, was acquired by Poland under a plebiscite. Two million Germans in Polish-governed territory are supposed to have league protection.

The treaty awarded the Saar coal basin to France for 15 years, which meant the loss to Germany of most of her iron ore. France, of course, has obtained the "lost provinces" of Alsace-Lorraine. Smaller units of territory went to Belgium, Lithuania and Denmark.

Germany was virtually disarmed at Versailles, and Hitlerism has been accompanied by militarism. The treaty forbade Germany to use conscription, and limited the German army to 100,000 enlisted men for 12 years. A small flotilla of naval ships was permitted for sea-coast defense, but submarines and military aircraft were forbidden. Coast defenses were demolished and the left bank of the Rhine was demilitarized.

The section of the treaty providing for trial of the former Kaiser was never operative, because Holland refused to surrender him.

War Guilt One of the most irksome clauses of the treaty to the Germans has been the "war guilt" clause (See TREATY TERMS, page 4)

Another Weather Proverb Tossed By the Wayside

Sure enough, it was looking, early this afternoon, like another weather proverb would be given the razz. March came in like a gentle lamb—and it appeared at 2 o'clock it would go out the same way.

The sky was as serene as at that time as mid-summer, and only a faint breeze stirred the new green of the trees and shrubs.

If the month had had only 30 days, however, the proverb would have been sustained with vehement forces—for the year's worst sand-storm howled most of the day and a great part of the night.

It all means, when boiled down to words, that proverbs on the weather have more than one exception—the greatest of which is none apply to West Texas.

CAST OF ONE-ACT PLAY OFF TODAY

The cast of the one-act play of the high school left at noon to compete in the annual district contest at Ballinger, held today and Saturday.

Ballinger will present "Soul Vibrations," a comedy dealing with the fall of numerology, which four devoted wives take up and which four devoted husbands are compelled to follow in self defense.

Ozona will play "Jass and Minutety," one of the most "charming and popular plays ever to be presented."

Other towns entering the contest are Big Lake, Norton, Junction and Odessa.

The Midland cast, composed of John Ed Crabb, Roberta Duragan, Eddie Blanche, Cowden, Jesse Lou Armstrong, Ernestine Holder, Maggie Allen, Roy Skipper, Helen Foster, and Joe Roberts, was accompanied by Mrs. R. C. Crabb, Mrs. J. Ellis Cowden, Mrs. L. E. Barry, the play director, and Miss Stella Maye Lanham, in charge of makeup.

The senate deferred action on the Morrison deficiency judgment bill until Monday. As it stands, the bill requires the mortgages and actual value in foreclosure sales and file deficiency suits within six months after the sale.

California Shaker Molds Decision of Family to Return

This idea of an earthquake brewing all of a sudden and trying to shake one's house down around his ears doesn't appeal to Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Holcombe, so they packed their belongings and left their Bellflower, Calif., home and moved back to Midland.

Holcombe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Holcombe of 469 W. Dakota. He left Midland with his family, consisting otherwise of Mrs. Holcombe's two children, last June and has been in the rabbit breeding business.

Mrs. Holcombe was chased into the street by the quake, which was giving their home a genuine cocktail-shaking sort of treatment. They spent one night out of doors, even doing their cooking there. The next night they spent with a nephew of W. T. Holcombe, J. H. Sheppard of Riverside, Calif.

The Holcombes say many who have thrilled to California's beauty received too many adverse thrills in the quake to remain there, and the exodus has been enormous.

Midland Man on WTCC Committee

Appointment of Paul T. Vickers, secretary of the Midland chamber of commerce, as a member of the nominations committee of the West Texas chamber of commerce was announced this week by President Wilbur C. Hawk, at Amarillo. This committee will see that directors are nominated by member towns, supervise election of the district directors and conduct the convention balloting.

Vickers was on the program of the Big Spring chamber of commerce annual banquet Thursday night. He was in a dialogue with C. T. Watson, Big Spring secretary, in which inter-city antagonisms were banished. W. G. Riddle of Midland was also a guest at the Big Spring banquet.

The Midland secretary received notice Friday that he had been appointed regional chairman of the membership campaign of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries to have charge of the area embracing about one-third of Texas. The appointment came from H. W. Stanley, the state chairman.

Salaries of deputy supervisors of the oil and gas division were ordered cut from $3,600 to $2,000. An attempt to reduce the salary of the chief supervisor from $5,000 to $3,000 was defeated but the committee recommendation for $3,500 holds.

TWO STATES IN BRUNT ZONE; AID OF STATE PLED

Huntington Is Worst Hit of Etex Hamlets

By United Press

Twenty were dead and over 200 were on the list of injured, today in the wake of the tornado which swept East Texas and North Louisiana. Hundreds were destitute as their homes were leveled.

Huntington was the worst hit Texas point, with five dead. Other Texas fatalities included Mineola.

THE KNOWN DEAD

A tentative death list by community areas:

MOUNT HOLLEY: Mrs. Floyd Boyd, unidentified child.

SHELBYVILLE: Mrs. Jessie Vail, 35; Ed Passmore, 89; a woman identified as the daughter of Ben Graves; unidentified white man, about 25 years old; unidentified negro.

LINDALE: Lorell Shaw, 15; ne-gress; Luella Wimberly, 70, ne-gress.

HUNTINGTON: Mrs. Alonzo Linton, George Knight, Mrs. Oscar Roebuck, eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Welch; 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Woodrum.

SAN AUGUSTINE: Ferris Andrews, tenant farmer; Mrs. Andrews, and Andrews' child.

two; Center, two; San Augustine, three; Shelbyville, two; Hall Summit, La., five, and Mount Holley, Ark., one.

The storm hit Mineola and swept easterly toward the Texas-Louisiana line. It then turned south in Angelina and Trinity counties.

Relief was rushed to all stricken areas. The Texas house of representatives unanimously adopted a resolution asking Reconstruction Finance corporation funds for rehabilitation.

GREAT CONFUSION IN STORM'S WAKE

Mount Holley, Ark., Shelbyville, Huntington, and Lindale, Texas, were hard hit among the communities swept by the storm.

Indications the death toll might be higher came in the report of a telephone operator at Coushatta, La., that a storm striking Hall Summit, in north Red River parish, killed six persons and caused heavy property damage.

Darkness and softening of roads under a drizzling rain made work of caring for the injured difficult. Shattered communication lines prevented speedy identification of all the victims.

All available hospital accommodations at Shelbyville were crowded. Physicians rushed from Center and San Augustine to treat the injured Texans.

Eldorado, Ark. oil company officials said the storm damaged several small oil field towns. Derrieks were reported overturned at Standard-Umsted, McKensie and Laney, all within a 25-mile radius of Eldorado.

Negro School Wrecked More than 20 negro children were injured when the storm wrecked a schoolhouse near Shelbyville and a hasty survey of the area showed 20 or 30 white persons were injured.

The same storm previously had passed northwest of San Augustine, injuring four persons in the Lane community. A second tornado hit 10 miles west of San Augustine several hours later, wrecking several houses and injuring a girl.

Next President?

General Lazaro Cardenas, above, the present Secretary of War and Navy, is in line for the presidency of Mexico at the next election. He would succeed General Abelardo L. Rodriguez, whose term expires next year.

ROOSEVELT SIGNS RELIEF BILL; TO EMPLOY 250,000

WASHINGTON, March 31. (UP) President Roosevelt today signed the reforestation bill, the first of unemployment relief measures. He expressed the hope that he would have been working in three weeks and ultimately to include 250,000 workers.

The president invited the senate agriculture committee to confer with him today over the farm program. The committee recommended currency expansion to raise commodity prices.

RUTH JUDD GETS 7-DAY REPRIEVE

PHOENIX, March 31.—Governor B. E. Moeur signed last night a proclamation granting Ruth Judd a seven-day reprieve so she will not be hanged on Good Friday. The new date is April 21, as recommended by the board of pardons and paroles when it denied her clemency from the death sentence for the slaying of two women in Arizona's celebrated "trunk murder."

Miss Judd was "stunned" when she broke the news to her in her cell that the Arizona board of pardons and paroles had refused to commute her death sentence. Howard G. Richardson, of her counsel, said after a brief visit with the condemned woman last night.

She seemed unable to comprehend at first. Richardson said and when it finally was made clear to her that the shadow of the gallows had not been removed she had composed herself.

Her aspect, he said, as she assimilated the news, became "very stern." "I think the board has made an awful mistake," the attorney quoted her as saying.

The Rev. H. J. McKinnell, Mrs. Judd's 73-year-old retired minister-father, appeared shocked, but accepted the news calmly.

"If it is God's will, it is for the best," he said.

Mrs. McKinnell, the condemned woman's mother, was prostrated and forced to bed.

She expressed gratitude for the seven-day reprieve, although she declared it was "not enough."

"I didn't want Ruth to be hanged on her wedding anniversary," she said.

Possibility that Mrs. Judd would be executed in a sanitary hearing before a superior court jury remained indefinite. Such a hearing can be granted only upon certification of the prison warden of his belief of insanity.

BURDEN OF LOCAL TAXES

No cause is more popular today than that of economy in government. A magnificent start seems to have been made at Washington, and the spectacle is deeply encouraging. But while we're rejoicing, we ought to remember that the federal government can lighten only a part of our tax load.

City, county and state governments also collect taxes; and from most of us they collect a good deal more than does the federal government. Unless they too can cut their expenditures very sharply the economies instituted at Washington will be robbed of half of their effect.

It is up to us to see that our city councilman, our county commissioners and our state legislators understand this. Uncle Sam has shown the way; let's have some economy all the way down the line now. Let the local governments follow the national government's lead. Then we can really start cheering.

The Town Quack

when mailing them for their wives.

A man whose little wife attained the weight of 165 pounds wrote an article entitled "The Imminency of Life."

I know a preacher who refuses to tell a lie but he doesn't like to hurt peoples' feelings. When he meets people who have a homely baby, he begins before they can say anything to say, "What a baby! What a baby!" and of course they think he is enraptured with the child.

I always have admired a mild man and a mild cigar, so a friend of mine told me I ought to like this 3.2 per cent beer.

Charley McClintic tells a funny one that happened when the National Guard was camped at Palacios.

Some recruits were undergoing musketry instruction on the bar-rack square when the sergeant-major noticed that one of them was paying very little attention to what he was saying.

Striding up to the indifferent one, the sergeant snatched the man's rifle away and proceeded to give him a lecture on the mechanism. The recruit listened without showing the slightest interest, and at last the sergeant-major cried:

"Do you understand what I'm saying? You look as dull as ever. What was your trade before you joined the army?"

"Gunsmith," was the bored reply.

The paragraph about Harry Haight learning to drive a car reminds me of the old joke about the Indian who bought an automobile with some of his Oklahoma reservation oil money.

The salesman went into a lengthy explanation of the mechanical principle of the automobile, explaining the workings of the gasoline engine, the transmission, the differential and the various controls. When he had finished he asked the Indian if there were any questions he wanted to ask.

"That's all, Me don't see what makes it go without horses," said the Indian.

When Harry Haight got his first car they say the salesman took him out to teach him to drive.

"This is the clutch, this is the gear shifting lever and this is the brake," pointed out the salesman.

"Here, here, one thing at a time," Harry demanded. "Teach me to drive first."

I got a letter from an anonymous reader who said he was plenty tired of this column.

So am I, brother. If you had to get up every morning and grind out putrid paragraphs to provide early morning copy for the typesetters you would be more tired of the job than you are now.

Where you have the advantage is that all you have to do is quit reading, while I have to stay with it day after day, with no chance to quit.

Maybe my anonymous writer has to read the paper every day for fear he will miss the very issue in which his name appears. I can't get it off my mind the way we did J. R. Vandeventer. We kept his name out of print for five years and then said he operated a filling station, instead of service station.

I told the boss the other day that nobody could say I was a quitter.

"Of course not," he said, "you haven't started yet."

Genius is never appreciated until after it is gone. Some of these days I believe I will let the readers, the boss and the paper down by leaving out my column a few days. It would be my luck, however, for boss and readers to find that they can get along without me.

A writer says, "You should meditate a few minutes before mailing a letter. Letters have brought trouble to many people—at both ends of the line."

That advice, however, wasn't written to encourage husbands to carry letters in their pockets for a week.

adapted by BIANCO E. JONES
Metro-Goldwyn Mayer picture
The Reporter-Telegram presents this serialization of "Rasputin and the Empress," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, version of the dramatic fall of the Romanoff family, starring the three Barrymores: Ethel, Lionel and John. At the conclusion of yesterday's installment, the mysterious Rasputin had just convinced the Empress he can heal her son.

Once more a cry from the sick room caused the Empress to stiffen sharply. She stepped toward Rasputin. Almost pushing him, she said:
"Go in! I can't bear it any longer!"
Rasputin smiled with triumph.

giant peasant said almost jeeringly. "Send them away."
The Empress's face hid a thousand different emotions. Uppermost in her thoughts was the safety of the little Tsarevitch. Perfect quiet prevailed for a few brief seconds. Finally the Tsarina turned to Remezov. "You will leave," she told him quietly.
Remezov, shocked into a paralyzed disbelieve of his senses, finally found his voice. With a distinct effort, he said:
"Majesty, I refuse to go."
The Empress's voice became terribly deadly.
"What did you say?" she demanded slowly, coming closer to him. Remezov bowed before her. Then, turning to the nurse, he said:
"Report back to your headquarters."
He looked again at the Empress. With icy respect, he clicked his heels and stood at attention.
"Imperial Majesty, your physician in-ordinary begs to be relieved of his duties," he said.
"Granted," the Empress answered casually. As the doctor and nurse left, she turned to Rasputin, who still stood in the doorway. The man took her arm gently.
"Lie down and sleep," he said, fixing her with his black eyes.
The Empress started for the sick room.
"No," the man was firmly insistent. He turned her in the direction of a couch. She moved toward it like a somnambulist.
Rasputin quickly entered the sick room.

CHAPTER EIGHT
The night rain beat down furiously against the closed windows of the swaying carriage in which sat the distracted Dr. Remezov, and opposite him Prince Paul and Dr. Wolff, the famous specialist from Vienna. Outside, the driver, rain beating against his coat and square cap, held the reins of the horse, urging them even faster along the deserted Nevsky Prospect.
Electric lights from the small carriage flickered shadows to play over the occupants. Dr. Wolff, nervous, apologetic, hung to the window strap desperately, frightened by the rapid, bouncing motion of the swiftly driven carriage.
Paul braced himself as the carriage swerved sharply. His eyes were narrowed thoughtfully as he asked Remezov:
"Why didn't you go directly to the Tsar when this happened?"
"Excellency, I did at once," Remezov protested defensively. "But Her Majesty won't hear of it. This morning my colleagues tried to see the patient. There was a guard at the door."
"Do you have to go this fast?" Dr. Wolff interrupted fearfully.
Paul rebuked him sharply.
"The boy is locked up with a madman," he told him. "He may be dying."
Wolff took a better grip on the strap.

'The Sign of the Cross,' Greatest of Dramatic Spectacles of Talking Screen Comes to Ritz Theatre Sunday

Cecil B. DeMille's "The Sign of the Cross," greatest dramatic spectacle of our generation will play an advance engagement at the Ritz theatre, beginning with a preview showing Saturday night at 11:15 and for three days following, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. There will be three performances Sunday, commencing at 2:00, 4:30 and 8:00 p. m. Continuous shows will be given on Monday and Tuesday beginning at 1:30 each day. "The Sign of the Cross" until the last few weeks was shown only as a road show attraction at admissions as high as $2. The Ritz will charge but 25 cents for adults in the balcony and 35 cents for the lower floor seats. Children any seat for 10 cents.
More than two hours of glorious entertainment is promised by Manager J. Howard Hodge of the Ritz who advises that "The Sign of the Cross" is drama as deep as all humanity. Grand spectacle of a pagan world that was all spectacle . . . . Peppaea, in her bath of perfumed asses' milk—Peppaea, the red head of 65 A. D., sensuous goddess of silk-flesh who swayed Nero's unbalanced mind. And of Nero himself, with the body of a woman, the heart of a hyena, the soul of a snake. History records no more scabier character nor one more interesting.
The leading roles of this mighty drama are played by Fredric March as the prefect of Rome—Marcus Sulpicius; Elissa Landi as a Christian girl with whom he falls in love; Charles Laughton, eminent English actor, as Nero; Claudette Colbert as Peppaea.
This picture commends itself to the attention of all Christian people who are urged to go to the Ritz theatre this week end to witness one of its performances.

A medley of tunes popular during wartime days sounded about the studio lot at Universal City during the recent filming of "Private Jones," a drama of a disillusioned doughboy heading the attractive bill at the Yucca theatre with Lee Tracy in the title role. The picture opens at a Saturday night preview and shows Sunday and Tuesday as well. Many of the stirring airs are to be heard in the film.
"Tipperary," "Over There," "Madelon," "You're in the Army Now," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," "Hinky-Dinky-Parley-You," and even "They're Wearin' 'Em Higher in Hawaii" revived memories to many of the actors and company members engaged in making the reputedly swift-paced film. A portable piano on rubber-tired wheels was kept busy practically every minute of the time between scenes and Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart, Russell Gleason and other cast members joined in to produce very close barber-shop harmony once the fashion had been started.
Once again the familiar slang and phraseology which abounded during the days of the A. E. F. will be heard in "Private Jones." "Dog-robber," Russell Mack, noted director of "gold-brick," "shave-tail," "A. W.," "Once in a Lifetime," "The All-

Treaty Terms

been that causing her to accept responsibility for the war. German leaders repeatedly have denied Germany's sole guilt and have sought to produce evidence supporting this contention.
Reparations, provided in the treaty, have been an endless source of dispute. Originally Germany was asked to pay thirty-one billion dollars in annual installments of five hundred millions. France was to get 52 per cent, Britain 32. There were also payments in kind. Reparations subsequently have been greatly reduced, but remain a source of friction.
The treaty gave a large part of the German merchant marine to Great Britain. A degree of internationalism and other successful pictures.

Personals

Miss Mary Testerman, nurse at the Mid-West hospital, will leave this afternoon for her home at Ranger, where she will undergo a rest cure.
Mrs. W. E. Ryan and children returned Thursday afternoon from Lubbock, where they visited for several days.
Mrs. C. W. Crowley has been discharged from a Midland hospital and moved to her home, where she is reported to be recovering quickly.
National control was established over German waterways.
The treaty also forbade union of Germany and Austria, now being agitated. The war left Austria a country of 6,000,000 German-speaking people, unable to support herself economically, and with an army limited to 30,000.
