EXTENDING POWER OF SOCIETY

THAT tragic dispute at Hastings, N. Y., in which a man and his wife barricaded their doors to keep their infant daughter from being taken to a hospital for a life-saving operation, is a thing that could have happened at no other time than the present.

A few decades ago the mere notion that anyone might try to override a parent's wishes about a child's welfare would have seemed unendurable. The tradition of endless ages still held good, until very recently—a man could do what he liked with his own, and "his own" included members of his family as well as his lesser goods and chattels.

Let Fred beat him 79 to 102.

Monday afternoon, Addison held a First Monday and auction sale on the "Trades Day" lots east of the Ritz theatre. He auctioned off $78 worth of golf clubs and bags to the highest bidder, the highest bid was not reasonable and the highest bid worth of policies and the private and the private and the private and the private chattels.

Now we have got past that; and because two bewildered immigrants in a small town hadn't got adjusted to the new viewpoint, the state's attempt to save their daughter's life seemed to them cruel, high-handed and deeply

And for those of us who are sitting on the sidelines. there is an interesting parallel to be drawn.

What else was this stubborn, heart-breakingly confused attitude on the part of the John Vasko family than a last flare-up of the rugged individualism of the old days?

There was a time when it was none of the state's business how a man chose to rear his children. It is only reness how a man chose to rear his children. It is only re-cently that the higher duty and responsibility of the state pop in his mind, sometimes to his has been recognized. This poor immigrant shocks us, today; our grandfathers would have called him a hero.

And we are beginning to see, now, that this extension of society's responsibility spreads into many fields. Not only has society the obligation to step inside the family circle, on occasion; it must interfere in many other matters with which it never before concerned itself.

In sheer self-protection, it must interfere with a man's private business. It is getting ready, now, to regulate the amount of foodstuffs a man may raise, if he be a farmer; to say how many hours his employes may work, and what pay they shall get, if he be a manufacturer; to say what he may do with his money, if e be a financier. It has to do these things and many more like them, because the old individualistic system will not work any longer.

And the men who protest at this extension of power are, in some ways, strikingly like this misguided immigrant who fights to keep the doctors from saving his daughter's

Under existing law, no other decision was possible for the court to make.

Therefore with a 40 barrel minimum for the poorest wells it is probable that even the 791,000 bar-rel allowable is not large enough to give proper allowable to some tracts where all the conditions of sand, porosity and absence of water are favorable to large production.

The present East Texas allowable just about equals the combined production of the states of California and Oklahoma.

On the theory of well potentials alone, East Texas would be allowed more than one hundred times as much as California. This, of course, marks the end of well potentials as the principal and controlling factor in fixing allowables.

Surely it is time for the oil men to realize that they are faced with a crisis which compels immediate

What will happen to the price structure in every field when the only limit to East Texas production is the capacity of trucks, railroads and pipelines to carry it away one need not be a prophet to foretell.

In anticipation of this very condition I have heretofore submitted to the department of interior, in addition to the first brief published in this newspaper some two weeks ago, the following statement and recommendations:

Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C.

The proof seems to be conclusive that the condition of the oil business continues to grow worse and that there is no prospect of early improvement under any past or present plan of handling the situa-

The magnitude of the business, and its direct effect on general national business conditions make it imperative that action be taken at once to remove the menace of a collapse in that industry which would seriously interfere with any and all plans for general business

Three years of continued and serious effort within the industry itself, and coupled with the attempted interstate agreement of the principal oil producing states, has failed to find a workable solution.

The principal reason for this volved which by their very nature preclude successful state control. A further limitation and, as mat ters now stand, an insurmountable one, is the existence of national and state laws which make ineffectual all agreements to control outputs and markets in a manner necessary to the stabilization of the

The slow process of the legislative changes in these laws, assuming that such changes can be made It would be unjust to charge the at all, furnishes no prospect for relief in time to avent a condition which will presently be beyond the power of any agency to correct.

It must be conceded that the It is also apparent that all the facts point to a still further de-moralization of the price structure. This condition has already advanced to the point where by forcing abandonment of many so-called stripper wells it seriously impairs oil reserves that are on an irreplaceable national resource. No matter what divergence of opinion there may be as to the extent of the oil resources of the nation the fact remains that there is very definite and fixed limit to the extent of such resources and that it would be a profligate and well-nigh criminal policy to reck-lessly dissipate them. Wisdom and good judgment demand that the national policy in relation to its oil reserves be determined by considerations of safety for the future of our oil supply and not by leaving to chance future discoveries the economic independence which an assured long time supply of oil gives us.

Having determined that the facts warrant federal action in the interest of the general welfare there remains to be determined what the nature of that action should be.

A consideration of all the facts demonstrates the need of modification of some national laws in order to permit agreements which might otherwise be at variance with statutes designed to prevent ertain trade agreements.

Further than that, in order to legalize the necessary federal con- on every shot. trol, broad powers would have to be granted the executive branch of the government.

MEXICO ALL SET FOR BIG FIESTA

By DORRIS WEAVER

EL PASO .-- Preparations for Mexbe held in C. Juarez, Chihuahua May 1st to the 15th inclusive, unde the auspices of the Veterans of the make ready to receive the thousands of visitors expected on the opening date. The fete, which has the back ing of the federal government of Mexico and the state government of Chihuahua, is five-fold in purpose,

To demonstrate the progress made by the people of Mexico in all branches of commerce, science, arts, iterature, mining, and agriculture during the past twenty-five years, under the new regime. To invite capital investments in tural, and social relations between Mexico and foreign nations, particularly the United States. To demonstrate the universal good will of the Mexican people toward all, and their desire to co-operate with the governments of other countries for the best solution of the complicated problems which confront the civilized world. To pay homage to the patriots of 1910 who offered their lives for the progress of the Mexican nation. Juarez, directly across the Rio Grande from El Paso, which Arthur 'Bugs' Baer once described as the 'capital of all Mexican wars," was chosen as the location of the national fair because it is more appropriate for it, geographically and historically, than any other city in Mexico. Juarez was the first city to fall under siege when Madero, after successfully uniting Orozco and Vil la, advanced in May, 1911.

Madero, called "The Apostle," was treacherously murdered after his forced resignation from the presidency February 19, 1913; but the revolt against all of the old Paul Whiteman, radio's King of Paul Whiteman, radio's King of abuses which he inspired in the hearts of the Mexican people, swept on into the judicial, educational and agrarian reforms that have made for the astounding progress of the "New Democracy.

At the fair, the first of its kind to be held in Mexico, agricultural livestock, mining, industrial, com-mercial, educational and culture ex nibits will be featured.

There will be sporting events of all kinds. Daily horseracing at the famous Juarez race track, internaional trackmeets, participated in by he Mexican Olympic track and field squad which entered the Tenth Olympiad at Los Angeles a year ago. Entrants from the United States will compete also. One of the most interesting features of the track meet will be gymnastics performed by hundreds of Mexican school children, to demonstrate the impetus hole with his 7-iron from several athletic training in schools has received under President Abelardo Rodriguez, who, in his youth, was

FIRE FIGHTER ON AIR

Jack Pearl, alias the Baron Mun chausen, will relate a few of hi typically outlandish tales of adven ture as a volunteer fireman during the Magic Carpet program, Thurs day evening, April 27th, at 10 p. m (EST) over WEAF and a nationwild network. He will be heard direct from the stage of the Palace The-atre in Dallas, Texas, where, with Paul Whiteman and his orchestra. he will be making a personal appear

In full regalia—flaming red shirt a nozzle in his belt, and his firehat tilted jauntily on the side of his tilled jauntily on the side of his head—the Baron will be heard addressing the natives of Dallas, on the proper methods of caring for fires, fire-files, fire-sales and a miscellany of similarly related subjects. With fire alarms still ringing in his ears, this indomitable fire-parter has amassed a wealth of data for his address.

Paul Whiteman, radio's King of Jazz, with several of his most talented vocalists and instrumentalists. will also be heard rendering a program of popular dance tunes.

Negro Waitresses Are New Innovation

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UP)-Ne gro waitresses, attired in natty blue or lavender uniforms, touched off with an "Aunt Jemima" bandana headdress, are a recent innovation on the diners of the Bankers Express of the New York, New Haver and Hartford railroad.

Reduced prices, with the man who wants coffee and doughnuts for 15 cents as welcome as the par who desires a hearty breakfast an added touch to make the serv ce inviting. On the same train in the eve ning, from New York to Boston, "supper" will be served instead of "dinner," with the menu priced to suit the times. A palindrome is a word or sentence which reads the same either backward or forward.

Many functions will be held at
