POPULAR "SINGING COUNT" IS DEAD

STOCKHOLM, (UP).—The "Singing Count," one of the most popular and original characters of Stockholm, is dead. Count Magnus von Rosen undoubtedly enjoyed greater popularity among rich and poor than any other public figure in Stockholm. He was a Bohemian aristocrat, always dressed with the most elaborate elegance, a man about town who would be seen daily leisurely strolling along the most fashionable thoroughfares or seated with a group of friends in some restaurant or cafe. He received his nickname from his habit of singing aloud in the streets as he walked along, and late night wanderers would often hear his songs echoing through the empty streets.

Marihuana Not Grown Here, So Officers Find

One can still stum a guitar in the Mexican quarters, but the growing of the marihuana weed is likely to plunge one into a legal maze. Officers were slow to recognize the weed because of its stunted growth in this climate, but they know it now and keep a close watch for it. Last summer found them keeping vigil after learning marihuana was being grown locally or being smuggled into the quarter from San Antonio and elsewhere. Mexicans questioned about a few weeds that looked like the "careless" plant, shrugged their shoulders, claiming they didn't know what it was. Officers sent a weed away for classification and received a report it was marihuana. They drove to the Mexican section only to find the brown people had assiduously cleaned their premises of weeds. Mexican officers usually show traces of using the weed, but evidently buy it from bootleggers from a distance.

PEOPLE GULLIBLE AND NON-EXISTENT FIRMS PROFITING

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Writer. NEW YORK.—Hard times bring prosperous times to petty racketeers. Every unemployed person, every woman desperately seeking a way to provide necessities for her family, is a potential victim of their vicious schemes. From would-be home workers—who include cripples, elderly folk, and children, as well as the jobless—white-collar bandits collect an estimated $150,000,000 annually. And they clean an almost equal amount from men and women willing to pay advance "commissions" for non-existent jobs, or for "exclusive" selling territories and the like.

Not all home-work plans are illegitimate. And there are many selling agency and employment plans which are operating entirely within the law. But the large numbers of reports circulated by the National Better Business Bureau and its 52 local agencies, and the fraud orders issued by the U. S. post office department, show that there are hundreds of gullible thousands who fail to investigate before investing their money with swindlers.

Hendersons Take Summer Courses

Bryan C. Henderson, assistant coach of the Midland high school, teacher of history and physical education, has enrolled in Dallas Tech for summer work. Mrs. Henderson will do work in Southern Methodist university.

Voters Urged to Weigh the Issues

AUSTIN.—Although as an organization, the Texas Democratic National committee will take no active part in the repeal and modification campaign preceding the election called for August 26th, the active heads of the organization, Roy Miller, director, and Frank Scobee, finance director, in a statement issued today, called upon Texas Democrats to support both repeal and modification, as a national platform demand. In their statement the organization leaders declared: "While we realize that both prohibition and modification are controversial questions among Texas Democrats, we feel it our duty to urge adoption of both the repeal and modification proposals at the special election called for August 26. The question as to whether or not Texas shall be wet or dry is not involved. The Chicago platform contained a ringing appeal, both for repeal and modification, in his acceptance address, President Roosevelt committed the party irrevocably to both proposals.

"Repeat of the eighteenth amendment will merely reestablish and make effective great fundamental democratic principles, namely, the states rights and local self government. All that repeal of the 18th amendment will accomplish, so far as Texas is concerned, is to give our citizens the right to determine for themselves whether the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors will be permitted or prohibited within the borders of our state. Inasmuch as prohibition is now in effect in Texas, under state constitutional amendment, that amendment subsequently will have to be repealed before intoxicating liquor can be legally manufactured and sold in Texas.

"So far as modification is concerned, we are only asked to concur in and conform to the action of the congress of the United States in revising the definition as to what constitutes intoxicating liquor. Congress, in its wisdom, has seen fit to declare by legislative enactment that any beverage having an alcoholic content of not exceeding 3.2 per cent by weight is non-intoxicating. The question of prohibition, therefore, is in no way involved.

"In accepting for Texas the decision of the congress and our great president which reflects the judgment of the democratic party in national convention, assembled, we feel that the democrats of Texas, regardless of their views with respect to prohibition in Texas, with the utmost consistency and without violence to their convictions, can support both repeal and modification.

"An American manufacturer in Poland wishes to have his 3-year-old son grow up in America; offers $50,000 to an American respectable family able to assure him first-rate nursing, board and education.—Write to... (an address in Warsaw)."

Hundreds of persons answered the advertisement, and were asked to remit $5.00 to cover the cost of investigating their references. Hundreds paid the amount, and, of course, heard nothing more of the matter. A heartless and widespread employment racket was broken up in New York when the courts ruled that no agency would be allowed to collect fees in advance. But the laws are lax in many other cities, and there are devious ways of dodging existing statutes.

A common one is to request a registration fee of from $2 to $20 to cover the cost of putting the applicant's name and qualifications (See PEOPLE GULLIBLE, Page 4)

Vacationists Are Issued Warnings

As the summer season approaches, a word of warning is timely to prospective campers, boy scouts, fishermen, and others who enjoy getting out into the open, relative to the possible dangers that may be encountered from the standpoint of contracting infection under the changed environment. This is especially true of dysentery that may be transmitted through food and water supplies.

Typical fever is a disease the amount of which is greatest, as a rule, where there is the least sanitation. It is an unnecessary and preventable disease. It is spread from person to person by water, milk, fingers, flies and food. Every case is contracted by taking into the mouth some substance contaminated with typhoid organisms, and these occur only in nature in the bowel and bladder discharges of persons sick with typhoid or from carriers, persons who have had typhoid and who after recovery still harbor the germs in their systems.

Persons planning a vacation or trip where sanitation may not be rigidly enforced or where food handlers are not regularly examined should protect themselves against this disease by being vaccinated. Three inoculations with typhoid vaccine, a week apart, are necessary to secure protection against this disease and the immunity established is good for two years. The purity of water or milk cannot be judged by looking at it. Play safe and have your doctor protect you.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

The girls were lined up 25 at a time. Lee walked quickly along in front, looking first at their teeth. (You didn't know they did that, did you?) Then the girls left-faced and he glanced at profiles. Finally he got down to ankles. "Young ladies," he told them, "you know there are more of you than there are jobs. If you aren't chosen it is not your fault, and I assure you it will not be mine." Once more he paced along the line, dealing out joy and sorrow. "You go, you go, stay, you go, you go, you stay," like that. Another 25 girls lined up, in 10 minutes were on their way. Soon the whole 500 had been interviewed (that's what they call it, anyway). The ones chosen to wear clothes were taller, the dancers were small. But they all shared good looks.

WE LIVE TOO FAST IN THIS AGE OF HURRY

The problem that gets the most attention these days is the problem of adjusting our economic relationships with one another so that all of us who really want to can get and keep a remunerative job.

Behind it, temporarily forgotten, is another problem which is perhaps even more acute in its demand for solution. It was touched on the other day by Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., in an interview at Memphis, Tenn.

"Life today," said Dr. Mayo, "is too tense. The mind gives out years before the body. We find old people all around us who have been dead for years and don't know it. They don't think any more—their minds have died, although their bodies live on."

Then the famous physician explained in detail just what he meant.

"Think what has happened to us in 35 years," he said. "Our life, once largely agrarian, was paced to the horse. A man could keep up his business in longhand."

"Now it has speeded up. Tractors and typewriters—a man had to have a typewriter, then a stenographer, then a lot of secretaries. And what happened? In 35 years the percentage of insanity doubled. Men outlived their minds."

"Perhaps man is slowly adjusting himself to this age, this speed. But it is a slow process. The tension has become almost too great."

Dr. Mayo is not the first medical man to issue this warning. But our usual custom is to stay about a generation behind our medical advisors in matters of this kind, and the killing pace of modern life has not yet really begun to worry us. We have wandered innocently into the midst of a lot of whirring flywheels, high-speed gadgets and rapidly moving assembly lines, and it has hardly occurred to us that all of this is a little more than we can stand.

It is not only in the economic field that we have progressed too fast for our own good. The machine age has compelled us to live our lives under conditions unlike those faced by any other men in history. Hand in hand, with our efforts to adjust things so that over-production and unemployment may be abolished there must be a sincere attempt to slow down the tempo of the individual life.

As things are now we use ourselves up at a pitiless rate, as Dr. Mayo says, we die long before we realize it.

THE RAILROADS HIT BACK

One of the most interesting bits of railroad news of recent years is the announcement that the Union Pacific road is about to put into service a new stream-lined, motor-driven train that can clip off an average speed of 90 miles an hour on long cross-country runs.

This is interesting not only because of the new transportation convenience it promises, but because it shows a large American railroad preparing to strike back at the competitors who have been putting all railroads in the hole lately. Instead of sitting back and weeping about the competition of bus, automobile and airplane, the directors of the Union Pacific are getting ready to give those agencies a little competition on their own account.

It is a pretty safe bet that other roads will be following suit shortly. Then we shall see whether the prophets of doom have not been a bit premature in chanting the swan song of the American railroad.

Lumbermen of northern California have replanted 25,000 acres of cutover land with 6,365,000 young redwood trees. The trees being replaced had taken from 1000 to 3000 years to reach their fine maturity, indicating how clearly California realizes that it is a young State with a big future.

In the midst of the hilarious crowd was a young American submarine officer and a gayly laughing girl, of lithe, graceful figure, of full, red, kissable lips and sparkling blue eyes. One of her arms was linked in his, in the other was a cock-eyed "Mama" doll. She laughed up at him. They were like two kids at a circus.

"Isn't it fun?" asked Tommy Knowlton. "I love it!" cried Joan, the young lady of firm character. Jostled this way and that by the seething, joyous throng, they drifted to a spot of refuge beside a tattooing stand where a mountain of a sailor stripped to the waist, two hearts pierced with an arrow tattooed on his breast, grinned at the crowd of spectators, while the "artist" pricked a girl's name on his chest—Anto—something or other.

Knowlton looked deep into the eyes of the American girl. "May—May I . . ." he stopped in embarrassment, despite the half-mocking tone in his voice. "May I have your name tattooed on my chest? Can I?" "Not mine!" laughed Joan. "I'd probably be so far down on the list that I'd end on your knees."

"That's where you ought to be right now!" "Behave!" said the girl, with a mischievous frown of the head, and they passed on in front of a fortune teller's booth, awaking the old crone who sat at the table at the entrance into fawning speech. "Tell your fortune lady! The secrets of life, death, love . . ."

Knowlton, with a joyous shout, possessed himself of Joan's hand and pulled her to the fortune teller. "Take a look at that hand, mother. Isn't she going to fall in love with a submarine officer?" "Don't please," pleaded the girl, but the old crone clung to the hand she would withdraw.

"Go ahead!" commanded Knowlton. "I want the low-down!" "Signorina," half-whispered the old lady, "there are a two men in your life. One of a them has caused you a sorrow."

"That's the other one!" cried Tommy Knowlton. "Both of a them love you . . . And you—a love them both, very much," continued the fortune teller. "Ah, competition!" said Knowlton. "I must attend to that right away."

Joan pulled her hand away from the old woman. "Tell his fortune," she said. "Sure, tell mine," he said, and thrust his hand in front of her. "And find the wrinkle in it that stands for HER."

The woman examined his hand in silence. "It is bad—very bad." She looked up into Joan's eyes. "You—a two hands—they do not go-a-together." The fortune teller next turned haggard eyes on Knowlton. "For—a you, much—a sorrow. Sorrow which end—a in morte subitaneo."

"Oh, keep still!" the girl flamed out in sudden anger. "You don't know what you are talking about!" The old crone spoke volubly in Italian to the girl, to which the latter protested in the same tongue, with some vehemence. "Will you two Dagoes stop double-crossing me?" grinned Knowlton. Joan took him by the arm and pulled him away from the fortune teller's booth.

less than a minute the carnival was deserted; the ferris wheel remained stationary. Concessionaires deserted their booths.

Knowlton was aware of their predicament. He was horribly afraid—not for himself, but for the girl whom he had unwittingly exposed to danger. He sought to reassure her by assuming a reckless, mocking attitude. "Can't say I'm not giving you the breaks!" he said, looking up into the sky. "We've got gallery seats for this show!"

"The one s-s-show where s-s-ground seats," the girl began, chattering in nervous fear, when her words were cut off, drowned out, by another terrific explosion, nearer than the first one. "Take me down," she pleaded. "I'm frightened."

Knowlton peered down over the edge of the car. "I don't see how I can. The engine won't run away!" When the last shattering of sound from the explosion had died away he detached himself from her arms and peered around the car, under the seats. "What!" he exclaimed, trying to make light of the matter. "No life preservers in this craft! . . . Maybe we could call out the fire department. They'd spread a net for us . . . If we had a telephone!"

Another shattering, rending explosion, followed by still another, completely demoralized the girl; she became hysterical. "I can't stand it!" she cried. "Air raids drive me crazy! I've been through others."

"Think you can climb down?" asked Knowlton. "I can do anything except sit still!"

CHAPTER V NO CYCLONE CELLAR FOR LOVE Tommy Knowlton climbed over the side of the Ferris wheel car.

"I should really be the last man to leave the ship," he said, "but if you slip, I want you to fall on me." "I won't look down," said the girl, grimly, and Knowlton realized that the idea of action, of doing something to escape from their exposed position, had calmed her unstrung nerves. Holding on to a strut with one hand, he clasped her thighs with his other arm and guided her feet to the crosspiece upon which he stood. When she had a firm hold, he lowered himself to the next segment, and repeated the process until finally, after several minutes of strenuous work, they found themselves on the platform at the bottom.

The street was empty of human beings, the carnival completely deserted, but the air was alive with the shrill screaming of the siren, and the flash of bursting bombs and shells sent high into the air by the anti-aircraft guns. Joan's evening gown was badly rent by their wild, rapid and perilous descent. Knowlton held her in his arms for a moment, after lifting her down to the platform, from the last steep crosspiece. "Brave girl!" he said in her ear, with the utmost conviction. "Now I'll find your slippers."

"Now if we could only find a good

Lots of things can happen in ten years. Ten years ago a Midland woman prayed every night that her husband would quit playing poker and drinking hard whiskey.

In 1933 he is praying in hope that his wife will quit playing bridge and drinking beer.

Meanwhile, parents of today talk so loosely, and conduct themselves so frivolously, that their children see no harm in doing the same.

This world needs a sterner parenthood, setting better examples.

Legal language is so complicated and difficult to understand that a death warrant and a marriage license sound very much the same.

Fact is a slow starter. Hearsay is quick on the start, and gets two-thirds of the way around the track before facts gets a stride.

A man was looking at tomb inscriptions in the cemetery yesterday, and came across one grave that brought back memories.

It was the grave of an old timer who was killed by another old timer because he was in the habit of started for the door.

"Goodbye," came the steady, sorrowful voice of Joan. Against the indefiable tragic foreboding in that voice, Knowlton summoned up all his oldtime spirit and gaiety.

"Don't keep saying goodbye like that . . . You frighten me . . . I'm coming back . . . I'm coming back."

He said it more loudly the second time, as if to convince himself. The young woman watched him open the door and close it after him without a backward glance, and her face took on a bleak and desolate look.

All the vitality and courage, the gay and reckless spirit which Knowlton had communicated to her drained out of her spirit. Her shoulders drooped, her head lowered, almost as though she were on the point of tears.

"Goodbye, sweetheart," she repeated softly to herself. After a time she looked up and around, like a child suddenly lonely and dwarfed by the immensity of the room in which it finds itself. Slowly she lifted her hands to arrange her hair, and noticed the brass wedding ring which Knowlton had slipped over her finger.

She made a gesture of final resignation, took the ring from her finger, slipped it into a cigarette box on the table, closed the lid, and set about making herself presentable to appear upon the street.

Judge Used King Solomon Tactics

TWIN FALLS, Idaho, (UP).—When evidence failed to prove the ownership of a 20-year-old work horse, Justice of the Peace H. M. Holler made practical use of a lesson from the Bible.

Evidence was equally divided and the judge was puzzled.

Finally he ruled that the horse be freed between the farms of the two claimants. Once released, the animal trotted contentedly to the farm of Victor W. Nelson and the judge thereupon ruled the horse was Nelson's.

ABSENCE

By HELEN WELSHIMER

I DO not think of you so very much. And that is odd . . . I was so sure I'd miss Your tall, clean strength, and gay eyes, laughter-filled, Your arms close-holding, and your eager kiss.

I DO not want you as I thought I would. The curtain dropped so softly on the play That I forget unless I tell myself That we are through--and you have gone away.

BUT now and then in some familiar place, Or when someone says small words strangely dear Because of you, I sense a sudden hurt, And for a minute want you, want you near!

Irrigated Seed Up in Three Days Says Stanton Man

Vegetable seed planted over garden irrigation tile were used this season in three days, according to C. Grey, grape grower of Stanton. Grey laid a row of tile between trellised grape vines. The water extends out between three to four feet on each side. The grape roots as well as the vegetables receive the moisture. Nine hundred feet of tile have been laid on the Grey place.

After losing two expensive shrubs, Mrs. S. H. Gwyn, yard demonstrator, decided it would be cheaper to lay 100 feet of tile than to replace shrubs. No shrubs have been lost since the irrigation process was begun.

NEW RACE RESORT BROWNSVILLE (UP).—Northern race track men and capitalists are planning a winter racing resort three miles from Brownsville on the Rio Grande.

Members of a syndicate have been in touch with the Brownsville chamber of commerce and a local attorney discussing possibility of purchasing 888 acres ideally situated for a track, and a local civil engineer has been retained to draw up preliminary plans. A quarter-of-a-million dollar project was launched at Matamoros on the Mexican side of the river ten years ago, and scores of fine horses were taken there, but a revolution broke out suddenly and ended the venture. Since then, unfavorable Texas laws have made racing on the American side unfeasible until May 24, when Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson signed the bill carrying the rider which legalized certificate wagering at horse races. Conditions of climate, scenic beauty and accessibility make the site tentatively chosen ideal. Twenty-five is now the most popular age for marriage with both sexes.

Sea Furnishes Magnesia Milk

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—The waters of the Pacific ocean now provide milk for science, as well as salt.

Changing sea water into milk of magnesia is the modern miracle being performed on a commercial basis by a San Francisco chemical company.

With water from the Pacific ocean as a base, the company produces milk of magnesia which conforms with all requirements of the U. S. Pharmaceutical Board.

The water is pumped into huge tanks, where calcium is added. The reaction forms milk of magnesia.

As this settles, it is drawn out at the bottom of the tank, and the used water is returned to the ocean.

Next, all salts not included in the milk of magnesia formula—sodium chloride, calcium salts, potassium salts, silicon, iron, bromine and iodine—are removed from the solution so that it conforms to the recognized formula.

Then it is ready for bottling and marketing.

PEIPING, China. (UP)—Newsprint manufactured from bamboo will be available to Chinese publishers if a program instituted by the Ministry of the Interior proves to be successful.

Of this amount $2,000,000 will be provided by the government and $3,000,000 by Chinese commercial concerns.

SCORING NIGHTMARES TAKE NO COGNIZANCE OF HITS MADE

SCOREKEEPER GETS WORKOUT IN TWO GAMES MONDAY

By JESS RODGERS
In two of the weirdest affairs ever played on the same night, Hokus Pokus defeated the Paposos 12-11 and Southern Ice defeated Magnolia

21-9 in last night's games. The first game set a new scoring record for the season but it lasted just five and two-thirds innings of the second game before it was surpassed.

The Hokus-Pokus and the Paposos looked like anything but the two strongest teams in the league in their game. Each side made seven errors while making more runs than hits. The Hokus made 12 runs on nine hits while the losers got only 11 tallies on 10 hits.

The winners started off with a bang, scoring four runs in the first frame but this lead did not last long as the Paposos made one each in the first and second and three in the third to tie the score. Hokus got one run in the third. The Connormen made two in the fifth to again go ahead, but the Indian youngsters came back in the sixth to go two runs in the lead; but, not to be outdone, the Hokus club tied the same number of times to win back their lead. This margin did not hold any longer than it took the Paposos to come in and start hitting and, when they were retired, the score was again tied. The winners came in for their half of the last inning and, by combining one hit with two errors, pushed over the winning run before more than one man could be retired.

To start the second, the Iceers sent 11 batters to the plate and when they were finally retired they had scored seven runs on three hits. They made four in the second and two more in the third before Magnolia was able to cross the plate a couple of times. The Iceemen made two in the fourth and one in the fifth while the losers were making one run in each of these innings.

After retiring the Howardmen scoreless in the sixth, the Magnolians put on a hitting rally, batting around and scoring five runs. The Iceers scored five in their half of the seventh and then stopped the losers with no more runs in their half, to finally end the playing for the night.

In the first game Mills and Heath of the Hokus and Stevens and Pylon of the Paposos each got two hits. In the last game, L. Jones with four hits and Branch and Woods with three each led the winners.

Branch got two homers and a double for his three hits. Four of the Magnolia's men were good for two hits each.

Hogan Assigned To S. T. Position

Joe W. B. Hogan is to resume his work for the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association on a South Texas assignment. He worked for the association up to a few months ago, when he resigned to manage a ranch for Mabee & Pyle near Midland.

Famous men who have recently drawn cattle brands for Marlon F. Peters, widely known collector of cattle brand drawings, include Irvin S. Cobb, who drew the old J. H. Barron J-Bar brand; Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, the E. Brooks Lee brand; Dr. Hugo Eckner, the Steeple O brand of Edwards Brothers, and Governor Ritchie of Maryland, the Stokes brand.

Among Midland ranchers who have recently shipped cattle to go to Dakota buyers, Proctor and Fesken and Frank Wolcott sold three cars each from their ranches near Midland to go to Oklahoma. W. M. Pyle, manager of the Mabee & Pyle interests in Midland, sold three cars of 2-year-old heifers to go to northern feed lots.

COUGAR WON FIRST PRIZE

EUGENE, Ore. (UP)—A baby cougar won for its owner first prize in the annual pet show for local children. Other entries included dogs, cats, turtles, tadpoles, mice, frogs, and a gigantic bronze turkey, who pulled a small wagon in the parade.

The Chinese li, a measure of length, is the equivalent of one one-hundredth of a day's walk; or the level this slightly exceeds one-third of an English mile, but in hilly country it might be as little as one-eighth of a mile.

before possible employers. For example, when postal authorities stepped into the Chicago office of Chas. F. Mayer, they found he was receiving a daily average of 1760 pieces of mail from men who had read his advertisements offering all manner of jobs at large salaries in South America "with transportation furnished." All that Mayer did, though, was collect $5 from each applicant and include his name on a long printed list which was mailed to a number of concerns with which he had no connection or agreement.

Mayer, incidentally, had been a professional mail-order swindler for several years. Any intelligent and properly cautious applicant for employment could have learned Mayer's record from the Chicago Better Business bureau.

By no means are all of the victims of swindlers uneducated. Thirtily school teachers recently paid $150 each to the "Broughton Institute of Ortho-Dietetics" in New York, for a course of instruction and the promise of jobs. One promoter of the fraud was convicted.

Men without jobs, but with savings in some enterprise that promises a livelihood, are the special prey of the "agents wanted" brand of racketeer. For a payment of a few hundred to several thousands of dollars, prospects are loaded up with merchandise of doubtful value and assigned to exclusive territories in which to sell the product. Entering the field with no knowledge of competitive conditions, the new salesman is likely to find himself enormously undersold by rival products. Then, failing to dispose of the quantity of goods specified in his agreement, he is ousted from the territory, which then is resold to another sucker.

Two other practices fattening today on the desire of idle people to turn their spare time into cash are the "song publishing" and "story and scenario" rackets. Harold B. Kohler, conducting the Equitable Music corporation in New York took $700,000 from amateur lyricists before he was halted by a government fraud order. His scheme, one of the elaborate ones, was to offer a $500 prize for the best parody written to some popular song. To those who submitted verses, he replied that the words would be suitable for a new song, and that he would handle the music written, and would handle the publishing for a mere $60. No copies, of course, ever were sold.

Last month the National Better Business bureau assigned an employe to compose the most inane, illiterate, garbled and plotless story within his power. The result was entitled "Home from the South Sea Islands," and concerned the adventures of one "Wm. Jackson . . . who was one of the very best workers in the factory where he worked but they layed him off because the form man was down on him." And so on, until "the beautiful girl through her arms around his neck and cried 'my Hero!'"

The story was submitted to three widely advertised "literary bureaus." First to respond was the Writer's Placement Service, of Omaha. They congratulated the author and offered to revise, criticize and correct the story for $3. Next, the Daniel O'Malley company of New York, found the story "original, dramatic colorful and lending itself to talkie dialogue adaptation." Their services were offered for $21.50. Not to be outdone by Omaha and New York, Hollywood followed with an order from the Universal Scenario Company. This concern was somewhat more critical. It believed the story needed whipping into shape before being submitted to a select list of magazine and book publishers. And it stood ready to do the whipping for only $35.

Individual Position Matches Played Sat.

Saturday saw a flurry of individual matches for San Belt positions. Henry Shaw and Don Sivalis, who recently played 41 holes before Shaw won, were deadlocked at the end of 19 holes and the coming of dusk. Joe D. Chambers and Red Knight were square at the end of 18 holes.

Frank Day won from E. M. Miller, 3-2, to regain third place on the ladder.

Fans to Hear a Canyon Program

"The rim of the Grand Canyon is one of the stillest places on earth," says Carwith Wells, Continental Oil company radio entertainer. "This is even true when there are hundreds of people there staring down into this mile-deep chasm. The grandeur of it renders tourists speechless."

"Furthermore," says Wells, "not many people have attempted to describe the canyon. Those who do, including myself, deserve to be shot." Wells' attempt to picture this wonder of the world, however, will be heard during the regular Wednesday night Conoco program on June 7, which will be broadcast by 20 N. B. C. stations.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station WFAA, Dallas, Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock.

Empire State Bld. Bomber in Picture

Americans who refuse to become alarmed at the warning of military strategists that any city can be destroyed in thirty minutes by air attack, are due for something of a shock through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Men Must Fight," which opens today at the Yucca theatre.

The picture, based on the Reginald Lawrence-S. K. Lauren play, which caused considerable discussion during its Broadway run, depicts an air raid on New York City with all its attendant havoc. The Empire State building, world's tallest structure, is reduced to shattered steel, and the traffic system, without which the masses cannot move, is paralyzed.

Men with rifle and bayonet, according to "Men Must Fight," will mean nothing. Air machines and gas bombs will be the deciding factor, their lethal power directed not so much against fighting forces as against the unprotected homes of those left behind. The action of the story is laid in 1940 when the United States is supposed to be on the verge of war. Diana Wynyard plays a woman who tries to prevent her son from risking the fate which befell his father, an aviator killed in the World war.

Also featured in the cast of "Men Must Fight" are Lewis Stone, Phillips Holmes, and Robert Young. The picture was directed by Edgar Selwyn, who directed "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" and "Skyscraper Souls."

The kangaroo was named through a misunderstanding. In 1770 Captain Cook asked a native the name of the animal and the native replied, "kan go roo," meaning "don't understand." Cook thought it was the name of the animal.

Planes flying the routes of air line operators in the United States during 1932 covered more than 50,000,000 miles.

Technicolor Film At Ritz Thrilling

Never has such an effective melange of thrills, chills, laughs and air of mystery been offered to the entertainment-loving public as is found in "The Mystery of the Wax Museum," by Warner Bros., which opened auspiciously at the Ritz theatre today. Warner Bros. again have given the motion picture fans a superb piece of screen entertainment.

Among the weird, fantastic stories of crime and mystery that have engaged the attention of motion picture writers and directors, this picture easily takes first rank. Every one of its scores of values is heightened by the finest color photography that has yet been shown on the motion picture screen. In this respect, it may be said to surpass even "Doctor X," which Warner Bros. produced last year as a sensational excursion into the domain of the fantastic.

Opening with a swift but sensational prologue in London, where a Russian sculptor has begun to attract the attention of art connoisseurs through his extraordinary skill in the modeling of wax figures, the story jumps to New York of the present day.

It would not be fair to the picture, nor to those who have not yet seen "The Mystery of the Wax Museum" to disclose any further details of this powerful drama.

Ably balanced against the mysterious elements of the picture, are the uproariously funny scenes between the girl reporter and her hard-boiled managing editor. Glenda Farrell and Frank McHugh carry off these situations in a most entertaining manner.

As the Russian sculptor, Lionel Atwill gives a subtle and fascinating performance, that ranks with the best things he has done in his career. As a wax genius, his power is infused into every scene of the picture in which he appears. Fay Wray, Allen Vincent, Gavin Gordon, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Edwin Maxwell and numerous other players contribute able support to the central figures and the dramatic values of the story. The theatrical values of the story. The theatrical values of the story.

oughness that marks all casts appearing in all Warner Bros. pictures again has resulted in a perfectly cast picture.

There are 1100 different kinds of animals and insects in the world, with thousands of varieties of each, it is estimated.

Bermuda onions are not the exclusive product of Bermuda. They are grown abundantly in Texas and Florida.

A spider, native to Australia and measuring only one-fourth of an inch, is reputed to be the smallest of this insect-like class.

Flying squirrels do not fly. The flap of skin connecting the fore and hind limbs enables them only to glide.

Timber wolves have sometimes been broken and trained to draw sleds.
