W/HEREVER you buy CHESTERFIELDS on land or on sca, you get them just as fresh as if you came by our factory door-have one if you will. I think you will find that they are milder—that they taste better.

I have noticed that CHESTERFIELDS are made rightnot hard and soft; no flabby cigarettes-each one well-filled.

"What would taste good for dinner tonight?"

How many wives have asked that question ... and how many brides of the future will ask it...of indifferent husbands, right after breakfast or lunch? Hopefully at first, almost desperately after a time, and finally as part of a dull, daily soliloquy. For every wife discovers that a man with a newly satisfied palate is a total loss as a source of inspiration for future meals.

Nevertheless, it's an important and trying matter, this business of planning the menu. There are cook-books, of course, but better than that, why not find out what's new in the markets? Pick up your newspaper-that will tell you. There's news about food-in the advertising of local markets and stores, and in that of the nationally known producer of tempting things to eat.

Here's a new way of buying and serving chicken, for example, and one that's no trouble at all. Or a ham, with a new and piquant flavor. It may be that artichokes have just come to market—the first of the season. Or berries, or fruit, or corn on the cob. The advertisements in your paper tell you these things, with the prices, and where you can buy them. IS it "just as good"?

What do you know of the product? If the substitute merchandise is lower in price, is it because of inferior workmanship and materials?

In business, as in life, a successful product invites a host of imitators. Many of them trade on the demand and good will created by saying "We don't spend money advertising this article and therefore can sell it for less."

In every case this reasoning is unsound. Honest advertising protects you, as a consumer, by telling you exactly what a product is or will do.

A manufacturer can, by advertising, sell goods to you at a lower price,

Advertising creates a market of hundreds of thousands of consumers, making large scale production possible. With mass production, the unit cost of each article is lowered. You as a consumer, then, can buy it for less

If a man makes a mouse trap that is good, he can be, and is, proud to tell you about it, with advertising.

If it is a cheaper mouse trap, or an inferior imitation of the mouse trap you picture as ideal for you, he may seek to throw you off the track by saying, "This is just as good, but we don't advertise it."

Buy the brands that are honestly advertised. For, with advertising, a manufacturer or merchant publicly guarantees his merchandise to be as represented.
