Watson Urges Public To Help Legion Corps

No Paper Monday

The following statement was issued Saturday by C. T. Watson, manager of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce, expressing his appreciation of work of the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps and urging support of its efforts to raise funds for purchase of uniforms. The American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps has made remarkable strides during its short existence and has been a valuable asset to the community and if properly handled will in the future be worth a great deal toward keeping alive the public community spirit.

Thomason Elated By Garner Choice

EX-KING DIES

Congressman R. E. Thomason of this district wired The Herald Saturday from Washington the following comment upon outcome of the national Democratic convention: The ticket is a great one that will sweep the country. I am happy about the nomination of my friend John N. Garner and am confident that he will add tremendous strength to the Democratic appeal to the voters in November.

Real Savings Sought: OF ALL the federal pay reduction plans offered in the present Congress the latest bill submitted by Senator Connally of Texas is most likely to find favor with the majority of taxpayers.

The schedule proposed follows: Salaries from $1,500 to $5,000, 15 per cent cut; from $5,000 to $10,000, 20 per cent cut; from $10,000 to $25,000, 25 per cent cut.

The measure would exempt the lowly clerk getting $100 per month but it would effect real savings by virtue of the graduated percentages affecting the salaries in the higher brackets.

Ladies Auxiliary Postponed Social: The members of the L. A. to B. of H. T. met at the Woodman Hall Friday afternoon and held only a business meeting.

Congenial Bridge Club Has Charming Party: The members of the Congenial Bridge Club were entertained with a lovely pink and yellow party at the home of Mrs. D. C. Hamilton Friday afternoon.

Workers' Conference: There will be a workers' conference of the Baptists of this association at Stanton Tuesday for an all day session.

Wet Parade Is Thrilling

Experiences Of Lovers Make Picture Very Popular

Thrills of modern life, exciting happenings which appear daily in newspapers and the engaging adventure of a young man and woman who find the fight for love and happiness as hazardous as the most fantastic jungle adventure, form the plot details of "The Wet Parade," which will open Tuesday at the Ritz Theater for two days.

Highlights of Plot: The story, based on Upton Sinclair's sensational novel, opens on an aristocratic Southern plantation before the World War, depicting the tragedy of a young girl whose father is driven to suicide as a result of his obsession by liquor.

Highlights of Plot include the heroine's attempt to prevent her brother from repeating her father's fatal error; the tragic murder of a nagging wife who tries to interfere with her husband's post-prohibition drinking habits; the wrecking of a "gin mill" by government agents and spectacular night club raids.

The picture also has its comedy moments as is assured by the presence in the cast of that inevitable laughmaker Jimmy "Schrodler" Durante.

The picture is directed by Victor Fleming.

Friday Club Has Buffet Supper On Thurman Lawn

The members of the Friday Bridge Club met with Mr. and Mrs. Lee Thurman Friday evening and enjoyed supper served buffet fashion on the lawn.

Mrs. Eileen and Mrs. Noeline assisted the hostess in seeing that the guests were abundantly served with the fried chicken and accompanying dishes that made up a good supper.

Bridge was scheduled for the evening but the guests spent most of the time listening to the broadcasting of the Democratic Convention.

They had the unique experience of listening to a man cast the vote for the Texas delegation for Roosevelt, who had been the club guest at the previous meeting, Walter Woodward.

Mrs. Lee Hansen, of Lamesa, Mrs. John Noeline, and Mrs. John A. Collins, of Denton, were guests of the club. Club members and their husbands, were Messrs. and Mrs. J. D. Biles, R. Homer McNew, W. H. Flewelling, Albert M. Fisher, Garland Woodward, and Mrs. Seth H. Parsons.

Famous Fight Team

Remember them in "The Spoilers"? They're together again—William Faroum and Thomas Santsch in "Ten Nights In A Bar-Room" at the Ritz Friday and Saturday.

Primitive, smashing combat between two strong men is the spectacular thrill of "Ten Nights In A Bar-Room," starring William Faroum, the all-talking picture which opens at the Ritz Theater Friday.

This modern sensational version of an old stage favorite brings together again William Faroum and Tom Santsch, the most famous light team in all photoplay history. Their battle is the original "Spoilers" is remembered vividly by hundreds of thousands. It stood alone for years as an epic of its kind.

Those two men who know how to fight meet again in the thundering climax of "Ten Nights In A Bar-Room." For weeks they trained as strenuously as two prize fighters preparing for a championship match.

When they met on the set under the studio lights they were in the best possible physical condition. From the first blow, their fight was a desperate struggle for supremacy.

The studio set and everything about them were forgotten as they tore into each other barefisted, terrified, as though the characters they were portraying had actually sprung into life with all their intense passions of hatred and revenge.

Exhausted, battered and bloody, William Faroum and Tom Santsch emerged from their spectacular battle, their eyes were filled with tears. It was a long time, if ever, that their tremendous battle in "Ten Nights In A Bar-Room" will be equalled—it will never be forgotten!

Mrs. Pendleton & Miss Ethel Evans Give Night Party

Mrs. W. W. Pendleton and Miss Ethel Evans were joint hostesses at a dinner at the Settles Hotel Friday evening to the members and guests of the Cactus Club.

A delicious four-course dinner was served in one of the private dining rooms of the Settles Hotel, after which the guests devoted the evening to contract bridge.

Mrs. Geo. O'Quinn made high score for the women and received a bottle of nice perfume. Mr. Gilbert made high for the men and was given a tie.

Patriotic colors were used throughout the party. A handsome centerpiece of red zinnias was the decorative note for the table. The tallies and place cards carried out the red, white and blue colors.

The guests and members were: Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Oldham, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hahn, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Pendleton, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Wright, Miss Ethel Evans and Allen Hodges.

50 out of town visitors. Mrs. Billie Gill Frost told the children of her trip to Dallas. Those who took part in the skill, which was the chief entertainment of the morning were Ethel Hooster, Stella Ruth Thomas and Thelma Jean Moore.

A Fourth of July contest was staged in which Homer Frost was winner. He received, as a prize, a quart of milk and pint of cream from the Kemp and Bird dairy. The members will meet Wednesday morning to practice another skill at 9:30. At 10 o'clock of the same morning, Mrs. E. F. Houser will meet with the Rhythm Band.

Reserved For Ladies' Billed

Res. Tender Speaks Four Language In Real Life

Jan Marugg, who speaks four languages and has been behind some of the most famous bars in London's fashionable West End, is playing an important role in Paramount's "Reserved for Ladies" in support of Leslie Howard, George Grossmith, Elizabeth Allan and Benita Hume, which is the feature picture at the Ritz Theater Thursday and Friday.

Marugg, who is the picture presides over a full sized cocktail bar in a Swiss tourist hotel, in real life speaks English, German, French, and Italian, and has been waiter at the Savoy, the Empress Rooms, Chez Tagliani, and the Piccadilly, all of which are names to conjure with among people who know their London. He probably knows at sight more men of political and social prominence than any member of the present House of Commons.

Economy Bridge Club Meets At Mrs. Leslie's

Mrs. L. T. Leslie entertained the Economy Bridge Club this week with a lovely party at the Settles Hotel.

Mrs. L. E. Maddux was the only guest. Mrs. Glyn Parnley made high score and received a white purse. Mrs. Harvell won second high and received a handsome sewing bag.

Delicious iced refreshments were served to the following members: Mmes. Geo. S. Grimes, J. J. Lane, Floyd Timmons, Maddux Lane, Geo. S. Harvell, Glyn Parnley and Mrs. Alton Underwood, who was elected as a new member.

Mrs. Glyn Parnley will be the next hostess.

Petroleum Club Has Meeting At Mrs. Faw's

Mrs. H. S. Faw was hostess to the members of the Petroleum Bridge Club Thursday morning at her home in Washington Place.

Summer flowers were effectively used in the decorations. Patriotic colors prevailed in the tallies and the prize wrappings.

Mrs. L. A. Talley made club high score and received an attractive set of glasses. Mrs. Hilliard made guest high and received a nice teapot. Miss Jones was consoled for low score with a novelty ornament for a whatnot stand.

The visitors were Mmes. Dee Hilliard, P. E. McClanahan and Miss Martha Edwards.

The members were Mmes. Monroe Johnson, Bob Austin, Frank Hamilton, L. A. Talley, W. B. Hardy, P. H. Liberty, Mitchell J. Groves, H. B. Hurley and Miss Lynn Jones.

Mrs. Granville T. Hall Is Hostess For Rainbow Party On Settles Hotel Mezzanine

One Of Loveliest Affairs Of Season Is Attended By Thirty-Two Contract Bridge Players; Mrs. Ford High Scorer

Mrs. Granville T. Hall entertained with a lovely rainbow party on the mezzanine of the Settles Hotel Friday afternoon.

Sweetpens from the hostess' gardens and summer flowers of Shasta daisies, gladioli and other pastel-colored flowers, the gifts of her friends for the occasion, were used for the room decorations and for centerpieces during the refreshment hour.

In the play Mrs. Ford made high score and received a lovely set of Dorothy Gray powder with accompanying vanity. Mrs. Van Gieson was consoled for her low with a dainty bottle of Houdou's perfume.

Mrs. Young cut for high and was given an ensemble of sheets and pillow cases, in peach shade. At the refreshment hour the first course was a combination plate on which was attractively arranged an open-faced sandwich, caviar canape, molded salad, relishes, and grape punch topped with orange ice. The second course was rainbow parfait.

ing our government their business for profit while we called it 'politics'.
 "We have in Texas more than 120 commissions, bureaus and departments of government, more than 12,000 employees on the state's payroll; we have four departments with jurisdiction over matters of health, four departments with jurisdiction over insurance, three with jurisdiction over auditing and control, a great number with police power, direct duplication in our rangers' force, our motor squad and the state militia, these overlapping sheriff's departments, constables' departments and city police departments. I propose to abolish a greater part of these and consolidate and co-ordinate the rest.
 "One group of the highway department overlapping our county organizations cost us in wages last year $151,000 per month. It is costing more than $15,000 per day to operate the state's motive power. State employees ride around in 45,000 state-owned automobiles and I don't mean one but many of them, lolling back on the rear seat while a state paid chauffeur honks his horn to make you fellows get out of the road. The highway department reported for the last two years an expenditure of $81,000,000. The commission paved only 1,037 miles of road, asphalted something like 400 miles, and gravelled and graded some. You can check the figures any way you like and you'll find that out of every dollar spent, 40 cents went into the road bed while it took 60 cents to get it there, and any business that spends 80 cents to invest 40 cents is a failure. I do not charge graft, but do charge some of the most foolish waste. I do not know how many streams there are in Texas crossing by highways. There maybe a million, and at every branch crossing in Texas there has been erected a pretty white sign on a pine post, telling you that the stream or dry branch is "West Sandy and not "North Boggy." Who cares about that! And now, every few hundred feet down the highways they are erecting concrete monuments marked R. O. W., which they intend to indicate right of way, but which really mean "Right of Waste", to show you where the road quits and the pasture commences.

 Against Bonds
 "I am unalterably opposed to a state highway bond issue. To vote such an issue would condemn our state to bankruptcy and our posterity to servitude. I favor instead the transfer of one cent of the state gasoline tax to be used for payment of county road bonds as they fall due and to adjust with counties not bonded by giving them road improvements. Such a one-cent transfer would provide funds amounting to approximately $7,000,000 a year, ample to meet the annual payments on county bonds in Texas of about $6,000,000 a year. The most unfair thing the people of the state of Texas ever did was to issue bonds and tax real estate to pay for highways for others to use at a profit.
 "I wish to state a few facts about the operations and manipulation of the oil trust. The Standard Oil group and the Mellon interests for the last two years imported into this country the equivalent of 300,000 barrels of oil per day. With this oil on the market they have decreased the average earning power of the oil field and allied workers in Texas $175,000,000 a year. They have deprived the farmers and royalty owners of probably $50,000,000 a year in lost bonuses and rentals, not to mention reduced royalties. They have reduced the annual returns of Texas oil by more than $200,000,000.
 Conditions are now as they were before the dissolution of the old Standard Oil trust. The price of crude oil, gasoline and lube oil to Texas consumers is fixed by them as they please.
 "I warn you that if independent competition is not maintained we will, ere long, pay as other countries do, where oil is produced and no independent competition exists, 200 per cent of the price of a barrel of oil for a gallon of gasoline or a quart of lube oil.
 "If you permit this monopoly to continue, you will but make it possible for the majors to import gasoline processed by foreign labor run through their own filling stations, while the independent operator is denied the right of competing on the Texas market with Texas produced oil.
 Jim Lobbied
 "Jim Ferguson, at the last session of the legislature, lobbied for a tax on Texas crude oil which would have placed a burden as high as 10 cents a barrel, or the equivalent of one-sixteenth over-riding royalty on Texas oil. Jim's idea of helping a drowning man seems to be to pour water in his face. Those who have followed the silent march of Ross Sterling tell you that he saved the oil situation in Texas. If he has, he has saved it for the major interests. If Sterling should live another 100 years he would not do as much for the oil situation of benefit to the independent operators as I have done in the last two years.
 "At Washington I stayed through all the last session of Congress, without pay, and largely at my own expense, fighting the battle of labor, seeking a tariff on oil. I aided in the negotiations that reduced the foreign oil importations last year by some 26,000,000 barrels.
 "I worked without pay through sessions of the last legislature to save the life of the independents. The Farish conservation bill had the approval of the governor so long as it regulated only the producers. After the four amendments I had written were put in the bill, providing for the regulation of purchasers and pipelineers alike, putting the big companies under control, and passed the House, it was found to be in disfavor with the governor and the fat boy sounded its death knell. He has acted for you every time the firm that advanced him approximately a million dollars, told him so.
 "As a result of the lack of pipeline control, it has been possible for the big combines to strangle from existence the little refineries in the state, to become the only buyers for crude in the state, to destroy the hope of the independent industry of the little city along their pipeline, to fix a charge of 54 cents per barrel for transportation of South Texas oil while they offered only 10 cents per barrel for the university and independent produced oil in that area. The lack of control has made it possible for the profits of the pipe line companies during the past calendar year to equal the total receipts for Texas production for the same period.
 Utilities
 "But the oil trust is not the only leech that is sapping the economic vigor of Texas. I refer to the public utilities, the gas companies, the electric companies, the telephone company.
 "The gas companies maintain the worst monopoly of them all. Too powerful to be checkedmate by any one city or town, whose authority ends at the city limits; these great corporations are able to rule in their own way.
 "Since 1914 the rates of the public utilities have been increased from 100 to 300 per cent, while the cost of serving has remained virtually unchanged.
 "The electric companies are guilty of the same piracy and where the telephone rates for business purposes, for an illustration, stood at $3 per month they are $7 and $9 per month.
 "Figures added, city by city, and town by town, over Texas lead to but one conclusion, that the public utilities are taking out of Texas annually more than $70,000,000 money that should remain in Texas as a buying power for Texas people. And the only solution for the condition that is part of the answer as to why thousands are more employed when there is more money in the United States than ever before, is state regulation of these public utilities which I make part of my platform and my platform was not dictated by any major interest or combine, but is a one man platform, every word my own, written while I was camped alone on the Frio river in a tent.
 Chain Stores
 "Chain stores are a greater evil than most people think and they must be curbed. A chain store can enter a town, pay more for produce to the farmer and sell for less to a customer than the home merchant can afford; while they take a loss in one city they make their profits back in the next. Then, when they have crippled the home merchant in that city, they reverse the order of their prices and charge more to the consumer and pay less to the producer, as is now done in Bay City, for example.

 "But that's not the main reason. The chains are driving out independent business. The major oil companies have driven out the independents in that industry. The utilities have successfully eliminated the independents in that line. Chain stores have bankrupted hundreds, thousands, of independent merchants, and chain banks are coming—are here now in some states. The time is fast approaching when there will be no independent business left in this country; and when that time comes we will be reduced to two classes. You may call them 'employer' and 'employee' if you like, but by the eternal gods, when you experience it you will be made to realize that they are 'masters' and 'servants'.
 "Neither Jim Ferguson nor Ross Sterling ever went before the legislature and suggested the fact that the utilities are taking from Texas more than $70,000,000 unfairly from the people.
 "Neither Jim Ferguson nor Ross Sterling have ever gone before the legislature and suggested to that body that of the more than 120 bureaus, commissions and departments in the state government, a greater part should be abolished and the balance consolidated and co-ordinated in the interest of retrenchment in expense and for greater efficiency.
 "Not until eight weeks after Tom Hunter's platform was published by the press of the state did any of these ideas occur to both Ferguson or Sterling. Now each of them plans to use a part of that Hunter platform. It makes me think it is a pretty good one."

of the big combines.

 educational program for our own undoing. In the U. S. Senate hearing at Washington where I closed the argument for the 14 governors of oil producing states represented, it was shown that the majors of that industry had spent more than a million dollars a month largely for propaganda that we gulled in while they put men of their thinking at the helm of our ships of state. Money was spent by other concerns maintaining a system of schooling, hood-winking plain people, while the utilities from Texas more than 70 million dollars a year in excess and unfair profits, while the oil trusts took fabulous sums each year of our buying power, standing our labor, pauperizing our masses, laying desolates our farms, while strutting the banks of their stronghold in the east with their ill-gotten gains of our natural wealth.

MELLOWED 80 MILLION YEARS
 While brutes were hatched from eggs in OKLAHOMA
 THEY were born, they lived and they died—these strange brutes. And yet the span of time from the first to the last of them covers only a small part of the history of the Cambro-Ordovician oil pool in Oklahoma—a history which includes millions of years of mellowing and filtering.
 Cambro-Ordovician crude, piped from the oil fields to the great Sinclair refineries, and carefully blended after the refining process, becomes the Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil of today—a product averaging 80 million years of filtering and mellowing.
 An important part of this refining process includes de-waxing (carried on by most refiners) and removing the petroleum jelly (carried on by few except Sinclair). To eliminate non-lubricating petroleum jelly, Sinclair chills the oil down to as low as 60° F. below zero. At this low point the petroleum jelly congeals and is removed by separating machinery.
 Have the nearest Sinclair dealer change your oil to Sinclair Opaline according to the Sinclair Law of Lubrication Index. Notice how quietly your engine runs. Then, at the next draining period examine the used Opaline. Observe how it still holds its rich lubricating body—how little oil has been used up!
 REMEMBER: Sinclair offers you your choice—Sinclair Opaline, made from the oldest Mid-continent crudes, or Sinclair Pennsylvania, made from the costliest Pennsylvania grade crude.

CHAPTER XXXI

The heat wave came. It arrived with scorching sun and days that seemed breathless from early morning until late at night. There was no breeze. Grass scorched in the parks where men and women and children, finding their lodgings unbearable, spread newspapers and slept on the ground. There was no rain—nothing to break the relentless succession of sultry days.

Dan was working longer hours than the vacation schedule was in force and the staff was short several men. He had to reach the office by 7:30. An hour before that time Cherry rose to start the coffee and prepare breakfast. It was the only part of the day that approached comfort. By 8 o'clock the sun was shining in the apartment windows and hot air was rising from the pavements. If the shades were lowered they shut off the faint stir of air that was the only promise of relief.

The heat wave began the second week in July. The third week came and it had not diminished. The fourth week opened and still there was no rain, no breeze, no sign of cooler weather.

Cherry seemed to wilt. She tried to keep the apartment in order, to offer Dan cool, appetizing meals but the strain began to tell on her. She grew paler than usual and her eyes were dark circles.

Letters came from her mother describing the seashore resort Mrs. Dixon was feeling stronger. The sea air was invigorating and the hotel had proved to be a quiet, comfortable place. Mr. and Mrs. Dixon had made a few acquaintances—not too many—and found them to be men and women of their own rigid social standards. They were using the car almost daily and were glad they had decided to keep Martin with them for the summer.

It was during the third week of the heat wave that Cherry, driven by the fact that laundry bills had been mounting higher and higher, bent over the ironing board before the two open windows of the living room and tried to give Dan's shirt the same smooth finish the laundry gave it.

The door leading into the hall stood open. Cherry was dressed in a recent purchase, a $5 cent apron that served as a dress. Her hair was pushed back from her face and screwed in a knot. Her face was guileless of powder or make-up and she wore a shabby pair of shoes because they were comfortable.

It was hard work ironing. She had finished three shirts and her shoulder ached but the pile of unironed garments was only half exhausted. Cherry knew she was still at it and none of the things looked quite as they should. It meant a saving of more than a dollar a week though to have the laundry delivered "rough dried."

"She felt something against her foot and looked down. Pinky, the kitten, had been lying at full length on the floor before the window. Now he stood up, stretched, and looked at Cherry appealingly.

"What's the matter, Pinky?" she asked. "Are you hot, too?"

For answer the kitten leaped to the window seat. He settled there as though waiting for a breeze.

A voice from the doorway called, "Well, of all things to be doing on a day like this—"

she mounted the stairs.

Up and down the ironing board, up and down, Cherry's hand moved. The shirt sleeves, then the collar and then the front. A button off here. That must be sewed on before the shirt is folded away.

She wiped the perspiration from her forehead, laid another shirt on the board. As the iron moved back and forth her thoughts flew to the cool white deck of a ship. Not such a ship as Dixie would sail on—an ocean liner, huge and majestic. Cherry could see white foam splashing against the blue. Gulls gliding to the surface of the water and then soaring aloft. Oh, to be on such a ship! To feel the rush of the cold wind—!

With a sudden cry she put the iron on its stand. There on the sleeves of one of Dan's newest shirts was a yellow-brown scorched spot. It was after six when Dan arrived. Cherry was putting away the last of the ironing. She had not had time to dress.

"This place is like an oven," Dan announced. "We can't eat here."

"You go somewhere if you want to," Cherry told him. "I don't feel like dressing and anyhow I'm not hungry."

"Do you good to get out. Honestly, it's smothering in here!" Cherry protested but Dan had his way. They dined at a restaurant in the neighborhood where electric fans kept the hot air in motion. There was an odor of cooking about the place that was not appetizing. The waitress blundered with Dan's order and this irritated him.

Cherry ate tomato salad and sipped iced tea. Somehow there seemed nothing to say. Both of them had frizzled nerves. Both were tired.

They walked for a while after they left the restaurant, then went back to the apartment. At the entrance Dan said, "You don't mind if I don't come up, do you? Think I'll drop in at the office. I won't be long."

She said that she did not mind. Cherry went up the stairs alone. She was asleep when Dan finally arrived and he did not mention next morning how he had spent the evening.

Dan telephoned later to say they had an invitation. Casey, the news editor, had rented a cottage at Willow Lake, 40 miles away. Mr. and Mrs. Casey were hospitable souls.

They had invited a group from the office for a moonlight beach party the following Saturday. There was good swimming at Willow Lake and it was cooler than the city.

Cherry was delighted. "But how'll we get there?" she asked.

"You and I will drive down with Max. The rest are going with Casey or Jo Beach."

The prospect of the outing seemed to do a great deal for Cherry. She washed and ironed her prettiest tennis frock. It was all white, cut with tiny sleeves and a full skirt that made her look almost like a little girl. Dixie loaned her a bathing suit. Dixie had a new one and the old suit that had become too tight for her fit Cherry very well. It was bright red, more daring than anything Cherry had ever worn but undeniably becoming.

Max and Dan were to come for her at 5:30. Cherry had the swimming suits packed and was ready before that time. She wore the white dress and looked cool and attractive.

The bell rang and Cherry hurried down the stairs. Pearson stood in the hallway.

"Where's Dan?" she asked.

"Tied up with a little work at the last minute. We're to stop at the office for him."

They stepped into the roadster and drove to the News building. Pearson parked the car and went inside. It was 10 minutes later when he emerged. "Dan says for us to go ahead," he told her. "He'll come with Beach—may be here for an hour yet."

"But don't you think we should wait?"

"I told up the whole party," Pearson informed her. "Beach has to stay anyhow. If we can get that last hour in the lake before the sun sets it's too good to miss!"

Cherry glanced over her shoulder, wondered why she had that vague sense of uneasiness.

Joseph Weldon Bailey Jr., Is Heard By Big Spring Crowd

Judge John E. Little, who introduced Joseph W. Bailey, Jr., here, paid high tribute to his father. He said it was necessary to give the democratic president-to-be a democratic congress of the old Jeffersonian type. He pointed to the younger Bailey as that kind.

"If the government pursues the same policy of the last thirty years, the end of the twentieth century will see the end of our nation," said Bailey. "I am not an alarmist."

He recounted how federal government expenditures had mounted from 1 billion in 1914 to fourteen billion in 1931. "If the present rate of taxation increases, by 1960 individuals will be taxed $1,000 per head," he declared.

Governments are destroyed by excessive taxation, he stated. He said unless the people stepped in to take a hand, riots would be numerous this year.

As a part remedy Bailey advocated economic administration of the government within strict construction of the constitution.

"About the only relief you can hope to get from Washington now," he observed, "is of all you have except your mortgage."

He opposed any tariff except for imperative protection. Consumers are now paying for high tariffs, he declared.

Government expansion in too many fields was rapped by Bailey as unconstitutional. He insisted that the government not try to help anybody, and gave everybody a fair chance.

"Stay in strict construction of the constitution and watch the business and commissions fall off like water on a ducks back," he said.

Bailey favored prohibition, but not federal prohibition. He said it was a question of governmental principle with him. Many people had disagreed with him on his prohibition stand, he declared, but always as a moral point and not a governmental question.

In no uncertain terms Bailey hit at fence-straddlers. He stated his position frankly on all matters coming to his attention. Sincerity is a prima facie qualification for the office of congressman, he said.

Bailey pledged to do what he thought right. "If I am wrong, I will return you your office, but I will forever keep my convictions."

Concluding, Bailey pledged that people with candidates not on a singular issue, but on all issues.

R. Q. Evans Is Heard Here

Unheralded Roger Q. Evans, San Antonio, candidate for governor, mounted the stand following the address of his opponent, Tom Hunter, here Friday evening.

Hunter's platform was good, he admitted, but quite inadequate.

Immediately Evans demanded tax readjustments saying the present "tax system is the most damnable one ever crammed down the throats of an unsuspecting public."

Every revenue dollar should be taxed, according to Evans. He advocated a measure allowing taxation only on the amount invested in property.

He described the conditions allowing "big insurance companies and chain stores" to go untaxed or lightly taxed. "As it is the small man has to pay 75 to 90 per cent of the tax."

Law training was no training for governor, nor was oil training, he held. He pleaded for support on the grounds of being a common man.

"I have had to labor for thirty of my forty years, and I know how hard a dollar is to earn. I say I will know how to treat yours," he declared.

Evans charged office holders with using public money to make race for re-election. This happened in the Texas county courthouse, he said, and in every similar building of any size in Texas. He accused state salaried men of using state cars made campaigns for Ross Sterling.

"Men," he cried, "I oppose that type of graft. You will not find one of my candidates attacking my race on a subject."

Candidate aligned with big companies are shackled and cannot fight the battles of the common people, he declared. Being a common man, he stated, he could make the fight.

Evans stated two qualifications. One that he had been through the school of hard knocks, and the other that he had "common horse sense."

Evans was charged, continued to elect a man of a political machine. He was attached to none, he said, and was making his campaign by "hitch-hiking."

Evans said he would fight for a law protecting money of depositors in a bank. He advocated that no department store pay employees less than $19 or $12 per week, and then work on a 48 hour basis and no 54 hours. The fee system, he said.

Health Officer Warns Against July 4 Fireworks

AUSTIN—Fourth of July warning against taking chances with powder, firecrackers, guns or explosives, has been given by Dr. J. C. Anderson, state health officer, designed to protect arms and fingers, eyes and lives.

"No man who draws state pay should be allowed to engage in private business," believed Evans. "Dr. K. Martin of San Antonio is doing the largest insurance business of any man in Texas because he is a highway commissioner," he charged.

Evans opposed any restriction on trucks and favored abolishing present truck laws. Such laws were interfering with a private individual's right to enter his chosen field, he said.

"Hunter says he was presented with a petition of 15,000 signatures requesting him to run," declared Evans. "My wife and five children are the reason I am running. It is true I am broke and have to run from town to town. A friend of mine offers to pay to put my name on the ticket," he revealed.

"I previously said Hunter would be my closest rival, but I don't believe it now. He is not fighting the common people's battles," he concluded.

Keen sympathy for Rep. W. M. Harman of Waco and his family is felt by Mr. Harman's friends and associates in the state government, over the death of his 14-year-old son in Waco, who died from injuries in a street car-automobile collision.

State highway contracts for construction, embodying requirements that workmen shall be paid for less than amounts specified in the contracts, will stand, and are not affected by the federal court decision denying the state power to require payment of current wages on university structures. It has been disclosed. The fault of the university contracts, in failing to secure for workers the current wages, was that this was not written into them, as the highway commission has done with its awards.

This can be done by all state agencies and boards in future that desire to see that workmen get the same amount of pay as in effect on private construction or work of a similar nature.

All that Texas seems to need to feel convinced it is coming out of the depression doldrums, is that the price of cotton and wheat should tag along with the fine recovery in prices of hogs. We could let others worry about the price of stock if we can get the price of livestock lifted a bit. Anyway, Texas is happy that the period of bank closings is long since past, and everything looks a lot sounder now.

than in any other department. B. A. Carter, also of San Angelo and opponent of Mr. Metcalfe, wired his regrets that he could not attend and speak as scheduled. He would, he wired, be here before the July 23 primary.

Mr. Frank Etter's band of roque artists turned in a unanimous victory over a quartet of Midland amateur players Friday night in another feature of the Carnival of Values program.

To Cecil Thixton and his gang of motorbike riders go quite a bit of glory of the three day show. Hundreds of fans watched the motorcycle polo games, in which a group of local riders clashed with an all-star team gathered from surrounding towns.

Carl Rountree, Lamesa, addressed the Friday night crowd here in behalf of his friend Penrose Metcalfe, San Angelo, candidate for reelection as state representative.

Briefly Mr. Rountree recalled how Metcalfe had led the fight to "stop pink boll worm operations, and led the fight for the reimbursement of the farmers."

"The first qualification of a representative is honesty," he said, "and you need have no fear that Penrose Metcalfe will ever sell out or misrepresent you."

Metcalfe, he said, had led in a fight to redistrict Texas so as to give Northwest Texas two additional representatives. A strong qualification of Metcalfe's experience, said Rountree, he said that counted for more in the legislative

Personally Speaking

Mr. and Mrs. R. Homer McNew and son, Bobby, accompanied Mrs. John A. Collins on her return to Denton Sunday morning. Mr. McNew will return at once. Mrs. McNew and Bobby will be gone for two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Peterson, of Ft. Worth, are spending the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Ira Thurman.

Mr. and Mrs. Felton Smith and Ruby and Doris attended the Knights of Pythias barbecue held at Cloverdale Park, Midland, Friday evening.

W. T. Whitteide, Jr., acoustical engineer with S. W. Nichols company, Dallas, who has been supervising construction work in the new city hall auditorium, has completed the work and returned to his home in Dallas.

Mr. and Mrs. Houston Cowden are spending a few days at Lake Kemp, near Wichita Falls, on a fishing trip. They expected to return Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hamblin and daughter, Kathleen, and Mrs. H. S. Paw and daughter, Jacqueline, are leaving Saturday morning for a motor trip to Santa Fe and other points in northern New Mexico. They will be gone about two weeks.

CHICAGO (UP)—Members of the Texas delegation, with Amos G. Carter, Fort Worth, presiding in caucus Thursday, reaffirmed their unyielding support of John N. Garner for president. They repudiated reports of a "deal" whereby Garner would accept the vice-presidential nomination in exchange for yielding to Roosevelt or any other candidate.

The delegates also voted to support two minority platform planks they were raising the estimate of agreements from 75 to 95 per cent of all oil interests in East Texas.

Commr. Thompson said a group which earlier had pressed other commissioners to leave out the field limit, thus permitting production to rise as new drilling brought in more wells, were now actively negotiating on an agreement, in view of the almost unanimous sentiment, to keep the field production within present limits.

Fillman Crance Is Named President Of Church League

A business meeting of the Methodist High League and Mrs. Thomas Sunday School class was held Thursday evening in the parlors of the First Methodist church.

New officers of the league were elected. Fillman Crance was elected president; Luella Woodson, vice president; Ola Mae Hartman, secretary; Good Graves, treasurer; Margaret MacDonald, reporter.

The following were placed at the heads of the various departments of the league: Juanita Slusser, worship department; Arlyne Chaney, social department; Mary Settle, social service; Johnnie Chaney, mission; Edith Dow Cordill, evangelistic.

Plans for attending the district meeting, which is to be held in Lorraine on Saturday and Sunday of this week, were discussed. A large number of the leaguers plan to attend and take part in the meet.

The members of the Busy Bee class, assisted by the boys of Dr. C. C. Carter's class have planned to sell candy, ice cream, trinkets, etc. on election day. Arlyne Chaney was appointed chairman of the committee which will decide what to sell. With Arlyne are Alta Faye Sanders and Good Graves. George Thomas, Doris Smith and Margaret MacDonald were named as a committee to acquire the trinkets.

Mary Settle, Maurice Smith, Thomas Joe Williamson and Lovine Koger will attend to the campus.

After the business meeting had adjourned, lovely home-made ice cream was served to the following: Johnnie Chaney, Arlyne Chaney, Mary Settle, Ramie Koger, George Thomas, Mrs. Thomas, Geneva Slusser, Belle Fleeman, Geneva Slusser, Tillman Crance, Thomas Joe Williamson, Good Graves, Clyde Thomas, Horace Penn, Jr., Johnnie Vantine, Doris Smith, Janice Smith, Margaret McDonald, Alta Faye Sanders, Bobbie Gordon, Lennie Lauva Long, Mrs. Long, Maurice Smith.

Rev. O. P. Clark, presiding elder of the Sweetwater district will meet with the officials of the church at 2:30 for the third quarterly Conference.

CHICAGO (UP)—Members of the Texas delegation, with Amos G. Carter, Fort Worth, presiding in caucus Thursday, reaffirmed their unyielding support of John N. Garner for president. They repudiated reports of a "deal" whereby Garner would accept the vice-presidential nomination in exchange for yielding to Roosevelt or any other candidate.

The delegates also voted to support two minority platform planks they were raising the estimate of agreements from 75 to 95 per cent of all oil interests in East Texas.

Big Spring And Vicinity

Third Of A Series Of Sketches Written For The West Texas Historical Society

By JOHN L. HUTTO

Foreword by the author: Since in the West Texas Historical Year Book for which this has been written, it is limited to a normal 200 pages. For this reason, together with the fact that several other pages must be included, it has been necessary to narrow discussion to Big Spring history to the minimum.

I have been dependent on the information received from old settlers and the very limited reference available. Had our early settlers known of the importance of their activities they surely would have kept a record of their doings. Paper files are not existent. However, much information was secured from the Big Spring Daily Herald of recent issues and from the Big Spring Weekly News and Will Hayden.

I appreciate the co-operation of those who have assisted in amassing the information which will appear in the Year Book. Doubtless there are mistakes. Where there was doubt, I wrote with less definiteness. The words "about" and "approximately" were used. In some instances splendid co-operation was received, hence fuller and more accurate accounts are found.

A distinguished citizen among the most honored citizens of Big Spring is H. W. Caylor, the son of a shoemaker. He is West Texas' own artist, although he was born in Nobleville, Indiana, has spent much of the last half-century in the West. Mr. Caylor built the first ideal country home in Howard county on his stock farm a few miles south of Big Spring. He pioneered in raising vegetable and fruit in commercial quantities. He was also a breeder of blooded hogs and cattle. Mr. Caylor is better known throughout the state for his interpretation of ranch life with the brush. With his wife, whose devotion is interlinked with his success, he has traveled thousands of miles throughout the Southwest, studying western scenes and ranch life. These studies in travel gave him an accurate and sympathetic knowledge of birds, cattle, especially the old Texas longhorn, horses, Indians, and Western life in general.

From a commercial viewpoint, Mr. Caylor's paintings have not reached their zenith. He has sold his pictures, however, for prices ranging from $100 to $1500. Catmen have been the principal admirers and purchasers of his pictures. His famous, "Going Up the Old Trail" hangs in the Stock Market of Kansas City. His "Prayer for Rain" a canvass 20 by 24 inches, was sold to Judge Caldwell of Abilene for $750. Other noted pictures of Mr. Caylor are, "The Fence Rider," "The Drift Fence," "The Rio Rock," "Hereford," "The Chuck Wagon," "Cowboy Sanctuary," "Stampede," "Romance at the Mail Box," "Trail Herd," and "Rain Rock."

The Cattle Industry
The cattle man has been the trail blazer of civilization in Texas since the beginning of her history. The cattle business was the first industry developed in the Big Spring country. Today the cattle business in Howard county ranks along with agriculture and the oil industry.

As was often true the little cattle man, squeezed out later by the big herdsmen, became the first settlers of the country. This was true in the Big Spring country. The first cattle barn to invade that west virgin range of "free grass" was Col. C. G. Slaughter. The Slaughter home was in Dallas, but his field of ranching operations moved westward with the frontier. He moved from Palo Pinto to the Double Mountain country, and later to Howard county, where his cattle ranged westward through out the region of "live water" up the Staked Plains proper. After the introduction of windmills as sources of water supply, he secured extensive holdings on the plains and even in New Mexico.

Those were the days of the open range. There were no fences and the cattle men had no strictly designated limits of operations. The possession of a water supply generally determined a man's range, and all cattle men respected the other's rights. Probably no group of men ever worked together so harmoniously where there were so many opportunities for differences. Cattle, possessing a roaming disposition, often wandered miles from their owners and mixed with other herds. The round-up was the most eventful time of the year. The call was given the mark and brand of the cow it followed.

On such occasions there were dozens of wagons and a hundred or more cowboys working together. The little cattlemen were invited to join the big outfits and all rounded up and branded their cattle together.

The manager of this vast range empire of the Slaughter during these early days was Gus O'Keefe. He later engaged in the cattle business for himself and became wealthy. He moved to Ft. Worth, owned much property there, and was the builder and owner of the Blackstone Hotel. His salary as manager of the ranch, large for those days, was $3,000. Cowboys were paid from twenty-five to thirty-five dollars per month. Old Slaughter punchers still living in Big Spring are R. E. Slaughter, a cousin of the old colonel, J. W. Carpenter, J. W. Barrett, and John Smith.

The range boss at that time was Henry Mason, a cousin of Colonel Slaughter. The manager had full oversight of the ranch. He usually hired and discharged cowboys, made purchases, contracts, and arranged for the delivery of cattle. As the title indicates the range boss had charge of the work on the range. He was head of the working force, had charge of marking and branding of the cattle, and the general oversight of the herd.

There were two Slaughter headquarters in the vicinity of Big Spring. The German Springs headquarters were in Howard county about twenty miles north of town. The Buffalo headquarters were in Dawson county. It is estimated that the Slaughter ranches, at the highest peak, ran around fifty-five thousand head of cattle and branded about twenty thousand calves annually. The brand was a long S on both sides and the mark was an underfoot on each ear. The first cattle were of the longhorn type. Later blooded varieties were introduced, first the short horn and later the Hereford.

There was much comment among cattle men when Col. Slaughter bought "Ancient Britian," a registered Hereford bull from importers of Chillicothe, Mo., for the sum of $5,000.

Other Ranches
Among the first ranches established southwest of Big Spring, in the vicinity of Stanton, was the Houston ranch. The brand was A L connected. The Quinn ranch was acquired by F. O. Oxher, and the brand was a diamond. It was generally known as the Diamond ranch. Brunson Brothers owned extensive ranch holdings in the same county.

The Locien Wells ranch was established by Hilburn Pierce of Waxahatchie with headquarters about sixteen miles southwest of Big Spring. This property, bought by

City Park Wants Many Cacti Plants To Build Huge Colorful Garden

The next step in the beautification of the City Park includes a large cactus garden, stated E. V. Spence, city manager, in an interview with the Herald Friday.

An area has been staked off in the park and a unique design for a cactus garden has been laid out. It may take time to complete the design, but with the cooperation of the citizens the cactus garden will be a rare sight and a tribute to the number of interesting varieties of this unique western plant, when it is finished.

The city believes that such a garden can be built with the expenditure of little or no money, if everyone will help by donating cactus plants, either from their own gardens or from trips abroad.

The specimens may be left at the City Hall or at the City Park. The city will take care of the planting because it is following a systematic outline.

The public is urged to help as much as possible with this. Cacti will live for weeks without water and most varieties are very easy to transplant. Therefore, if flower lovers will take along an old bucket or arrange some method to bring in the plants without injury from the thorns, and leave them in either of the specified places, the garden will soon begin to grow. How quickly it will grow depends on the number and kinds of plants received.

Mrs. B. F. Wills, representing the West Texas Memorial Museum, which is interested in the promotion of native plants, and Nat Shick, well-known local landscape designer, are assisting Mr. Spence in this project.

Opponent Of State Comptroller Quits

DALLAS, (UP)—Rex McCabe, only opponent of George Sheppard, Sweetwater, for comptroller in the Democratic primary, was out of the race.

McCabe said it would cost him more than the office paid to make a successful campaign. The comptroller's office pays $2,500 a year.

'This Is War' Says Chief Of Bonus Army General

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Walter W. Waters of Oregon, ruling as an absolute dictator over the bonus expeditionary force, decreed that its 12,000 to 20,000 members be organized into a real military unit.

He frankly aimed to impress the government with his army's potential power.

"This is war," Waters shouted to his men, and he ordered them to drill an hour each morning.

Veterans howled approval. Waters, who twice previously had resigned as commander of the bonus army, was formally re-elected by an almost unanimous ballot yesterday.

The bronzed Oregonian warned the veterans before the election that he was going to command with absolute authority or not at all.

"I'm going to be hard-boiled with enemies of the B. E. F. and I'm going to be hard-boiled with the B. E. F. If any man in the B. E. F. refuses to carry out my orders, he will be dragged out of Washington by the military police. To hell with civil law and General Glassford."

General Glassford is superintendent of police. His reply to Waters' outburst was a general order to arrest any veterans who took the law into his own hands.

Glassford inspected the bonus army camps and billets and found "an alarming shortage of food."

"Twelve cases of dysentery have developed in two days."

June Building Permits Higher Than For May

Building permits for June reflected a steady climb back to normalcy, almost doubling the amount listed for May of this year.

Nine permits issued in May totaled only $1,357 while that figure was almost approached in the first six days of June. Totals for this month reveal eighteen permits for a total of $2,421.

Building was not concentrated, according to reports, but wide spread.
