WHEN NO MORE HELP COMES The Dallas News, in its editorial yesterday entitled "The Failing Fountain," graphically pictured the situation in which communities of Texas will find themselves unless the legislature is given authority, by vote August 26, to issue bonds for relief of unemployment. It is comparatively easy for the community to sit back and feel that it is "someone else's" job as long as funds are being provided by the government, but when this aid is cut off and hundreds of families are destitute on the hands of the remaining citizens, the period of sacrifice really will begin.

Some new thought is advanced in The News' editorial which should be carefully considered:

Some critics of the $20,000,000 relief bond issue on which Texas will vote Aug 26 object to what is described as Federal threat to coerce the State into sharing the cost of supplying the needy. That is one fault of even a necessary national code. The community, relieved by the Government of meeting the full cost of relief, falls easily into the comforting thought that this is someone else's job. Certainly it is not a national responsibility and only the unprecedented unemployment figures of the last two years brought the congressional appropriations on which Texas, like other States, has been relying for many months. But, as a matter of fact, Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins as no choice other than to cut off Federal help for States that will not match relief dollars distributed from the Treasury. His fund is not inexhaustible.

The Federal relief fund totals $500,000,000. Up to Aug. 2, it had been tapped for $102,016,505. In July alone $48,721,713 was granted. With an average of $50,000,000 per month, the entire fund would be drained in eight months. But the necessary amounts have been increasing so rapidly that Hopkins estimates the available supply would be exhausted before next winter is over without State sharing.

Texas cannot care for its winter unemployed by charitable donation. The amount needed is far too great. Passage of the constitutional amendment authorizing the $20,000,000 bond issue for relief purposes is an emergency matter. It must not meet defeat.

AN EVER-WIDENING CIRCLE

There has been much discussion of how many people will be given work as a consequence of NRA's establishment of a work week of 35 hours in factories and 40 hours in the so-called white-collar pursuits.

The National Industrial Conference Board attempts to give a partial answer. It estimates that 838,000 additional factory workers would be needed to maintain the output as of May of this year, and 841,000 workers in "other pursuits." This is a total of 1,680,000.

The figure does not, of course, make allowances for increased activities which would result in many ways from the return of this number to work. Nor does it include those who are returning to work as a result of the general upturn in business.

Apparently there is no way to make a definite calculation. Higher payrolls bring increased consumption, and increased consumption brings more jobs. The theory is that the recovery process will operate in an ever-widening circle.

Harold Clay, a young Poughkeepsie banker, is the club's chairman on arrangements, but hasn't been able to arrange anything yet because the president wants to stay home for awhile. Everyone is hopeful, though, of the influence of Moses Smith, the club's president. Smith happens to be the manager of the two farms owned by Mr. Roosevelt.

OLD UNIVERSITY SHACKS SOON TO BECOME HISTORY

AUSTIN, Aug. 12.—In a few more weeks all the wooden shacks which for nearly two decades have formed an important part of the physical plant of the University of Texas will have passed into history. In due time, perhaps, legends and traditions will be built up about the shacks, so slightly buildings which served for so many years to provide class rooms for students and offices for members of the teaching staff.

Notwithstanding the drabness of the exterior and interior of these buildings and their dingy and uninspiring surroundings, thousands of students weathered the chilly drafts of winter and sweated under their asphalt-covered roofs in summer in pursuit of knowledge. Most of the students came through the ordeal unscathed and to them the knowledge that the few remaining shacks on the campus are about to disappear may bring some faint pangs of regret.

The same thing is probably true of historic "B" hall, which until it was converted into an office and class building a few years ago, was the dormitory for men students, many of whom prided themselves as belonging to the plebeian element as distinguished from those who were members of fraternities. "B" Hall has been marked for the wreckers and it will have disappeared from the campus within the next few months.

The first half of the building was erected in 1890 as a gift of the late George W. Breckenridge, banker of San Antonio, and former member of the board of regents. In 1899 the remainder of the building was built also through Mr. Breckenridge's generosity. "B" Hall was the community center for the so-called "barbarians" or non-fraternity men who year after year carried on an unbroken warfare against those whom they termed the elite or fraternity-affiliated students. The lines were often drawn between the two groups in student politics and various other matters. At times the spirit of rivalry between the two elements was intense.

It was when the United States entered the World war that the value of the unpartisan building was proved in a highly practical way. The war led to the construction of a long string of these buildings on the East side of the campus, for the use of the Student's Army Training Corps as barracks. It was in that row of shacks that many students lived while they were receiving preliminary military training during the time they were attending the university.

With the end of the World war the university found further good use for the wooden barracks. They were transformed into class rooms and offices, and to this good day, some of them are still serving for those purposes. The work of tearing down the last of them is now in progress and by the time the fall semester opens all of them will have disappeared.

Those old military buildings serve to recall that no educational institution in the country performed better service for the government during the World war than the University of Texas. The institution, in co-operation with the War department, conducted military training of the faculty members handling the instruction work in each of the schools. In May, 1917, the school of military aeronautics was established in the group of buildings that had formerly been occupied by the State School for the Blind, an integral part of the greater University of Texas.

EQUIPOISE, ABLE TO CARRY WEIGHT, NEARS CROWN OF TURFDOM IN WINNINGS

By WERNER LAUFER, NEA Sports Writer

They'll be putting Primo Carrera on the back of that great horse, Equipoise pretty soon. And when they do don't be surprised to hear that the greatest weight-carrier of them all—since Whiskbroom II broke the record of two minutes for a mile and a quarter.

"Ekky," C. V. Sonny Whitney's great handicap champion, will take up his freight car duties as a race horse again in the Hawthorne Gold Cup, a $25,000 added affair to be staged at the Cienega, Ill., racing plant Aug. 24.

The Gold Cup is made to order for Equipoise. It is a "weight-for-age" event, which means that horses will carry weight according to their ages, rather than according to their ability.

The Hawthorne race with its rich purse was probably foremost in the minds of Equipoise's handlers when he was withdrawn from the recent Saratoga handicap. That race, with a much smaller purse, would have had "Ekky" carrying the crushing burden of 122 pounds.

The great equine has a truly enviable record. In his four years of campaigning he has started 38 times and won 24 of the races, and was unplaced in only five.

who should not be far behind the leader at Goshen are: Hollywood Portia, to be driven by his millionaire owner, John L. Dodge, of Lexington, Ky.; Sir Raleigh, owned by Allen J. Eaton, the driver who placed The Marchioness home victor in the Hambletonian last year, and Dick Reynolds.

THIS DOG WAS NEWS

MISSION, Tex. (UP)—When Jack, the "houn dog" mascot of the Mission Volunteer fire department, tumbled from pumper No. 1 while making news.

Jack hasn't missed a fire alarm in four years. When he was thrown from the pumper as it rounded a sharp corner, firemen were surprised. They concluded it had been long since there had been a fire in Mission that Jack had forgotten to "lean in" on the corners.

Fire Chief Ray Landry's records show that Jack has been in Mission since January, 1933, with a total loss of only $10. The fire siren sounded this month for the first time in approximately 150 days.

Under the Dome Of the Capital

AUSTIN, (UP)—Attorney General James V. Allred and Walter C. Teagle, head of Standard Oil, met in Washington during the recent oil code hearings.

Show Business Has Changed Costumes

By JACK GAVER, United Press Drama Editor

NE WORK. (UP)—Show business is trying on a new wig, dabbling in a new makeup box and donning a complete change of costume for the 1933-34 season which, to coin a phrase, is just around the corner.

The government, of course, is at the bottom of it all and will come in for a lot of kudos if the plan works out. When this business of everyone getting codes, and in the summer time at that, cropped out, managers and producers of the legitimate theatre decided that this was just the lifeline they needed and proceeded to whip themselves and all other factions of the theatre into line.

Consent of the president to use state and local officers and employes in effectuating the national industrial recovery act.

Non-compliance with the national regulations is not to be excused because of a concern's being exclusively within the state.

Violators of fair practices as set out in national codes is made punishable by $500 fine, with each day's violation a distinct offense.

Public works contracts are limited to those who use materials and supplies furnished in accordance with code fair practice regulations.

Other provisions of the code are: Press agents guaranteed $50 a week when in one locality, and $75 when traveling.

Minimum wage for stagehands, musicians and wardrobe mistresses to be no less than under their present contracts.

Elimination of over long rehearsal periods. Usuals, ticket-takers, scrubwomen and such guaranteed minimum wage of 25 cents an hour for a 44-hour week.

Company managers and treasurers to receive at least $40 for a 44-hour week.

Rights to Plays: Alteration in the sale of motion picture rights to plays. Producers who could not share in the picture sale unless the plan ran for three weeks, to receive 15 per cent if the show runs one week, 25 per cent if it runs two, and 50 per cent (the present rate) if it runs three or more.

Dramatists to receive a minimum advance of $500 cash which can be deducted from royalties after the third week of a run.

After these specific provisions the code deals with fair trade practices. A fair proportion of seats in all parts of the theatre must be available at the box office. Ticket brokers may not charge exorbitant fees.

Cut-rate agencies may not favor one attraction over another. It is an unfair practice to assist in indiscriminate distribution of free passes. Barring acts of God, and such, curtains must rise at the advertised time. Excerpts from critics' reviews must not be distorted in advertising.

Block Buys Banned: Producers must not assist in securing release of an actor from a play so he can make a motion picture. (This last is one of the really fine things of the code if the producers will combine with it a little discretion and not sign up stars who will be able to play only six or 12 weeks before they must go west to fulfill a picture contract.)

"Buys" of large blocks of tickets for certain attractions by ticket agencies are banned.

The weak point of the code is the ticket question. There will always be some fly-by-night individuals to sell choice seats at high premiums as long as there are people who don't care how much they pay as long as they are getting the best.

A National Legitimate Theatre Committee composed of nine members has been formed to see that the code works, to arbitrate disputes, and to deal with any new situations which may arise.

Bing Crosby Makes Good at Sidelines

By ALANSON EDWARDS
United Press Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD. (UP).—To be a success in sidelinings is enough for Bing Crosby.

Where most persons want to become successful in their chosen work, Bing made out in a big way with his hobby.

Always musically inclined, the crooning Crosby, while attending Gonzaga University in Spokane, Wash., played in a small band as a sideline.

Then he took a job in a real band as a trap drummer, and sang choruses as a sideline.

Eventually Bing got a job as vocalist with Al Rinker in a Los Angeles theatre. Paul Whiteman heard him, liked him, signed him with Harry Barris, and he became one of Whiteman's "Rhythm Boys."

Wandering for three years, Bing finally landed back in Los Angeles and joined a hotel orchestra. He made a few records—as a sideline—and got his program broadcast.

The young crooner's records went over in a large way, and when the orchestra job ended Bing was presented with a large contract by a network.

Bing's radio work attracted motion picture attention, and so as a sideline he came to Hollywood to chorell in The Big Broadcast.

It was still just a sideline, mind you. He came back this year to do College Humor, and Paramount promptly signed him for two more flickers with star billing.

Now that Bing is a movie star, he is taking up radio work as a sideline.

Considering the condition of the roads and weather, Napoleon made remarkable time in his retreat from Moscow; he traveled from near Vienna to Paris in 312 hours, a journey of 1400 miles. This was an average of almost five miles an hour.

Battle of Lock Of Hair Is Ended

PARIS. (UP).—After seven years of court battles, a lock of Napoleon on the First's hair finally has gone to the National Museum at Cologne.

Mlle. Ada Scavini, wealthy resident of Bologna, bequeathed to the Society for the Protection of Animals all her possessions with the exception of a little casket in which reposed the treasured lock and that she bequeathed to the same society in Turin. There was one condition, and that was that the Turin society should feed all of the dogs that came into the town daily.

This was a greater undertaking than any society could stand, and it finally was decided that Napoleon's lock must be sacrificed.

The society at Bologna came to the front and claimed possession of the lock on the grounds that all of the other goods of Mlle. Scavini had been left to them.

Then the parents of Mlle. Scavini appeared with lawyers to object, maintaining that this part of their daughter's will could not be considered as a part of the legacy left to the Bologna society.

Then the seven year struggle began, fought out alternately before the tribunals at Bologna and Turin, while the object of the fighting reposed in a metal box in the safety deposit vaults of a Bologna bank.

The court has finally decided to award the wisp of hair to the Bologna Zoological society.

LONDON, (UP)—The story of an Eton schoolboy's joke, which is said to have nearly separated the ex-Kaiser from his horse, thereby causing that former monarch much embarrassment, has elicited a denial from the exile through his Lord Chamberlain at Doorn.

When Wilhelm was visiting Queen Victoria at Windsor Castle in July, 1891, he inspected the Eton Volunteers. During the inspection a blank shot was fired which caused some of the horses to rear and cavort.
