Romantic Career of Violinist Here Tonight Is Stranger Than Fiction

As romantic as any fiction, is the story of Chris Thaulow, the young Norwegian violinist who is to appear at Midland this evening at 8:00 at the high school auditorium in a free concert under the sponsorship of former Simmons university students.

How he came to America with money in the bank, lost every penny, worked as a butler, and yet turned his misfortunes into a stroke of good luck, is a story to rival the adventures of a Horatio Alger hero.

Thaulow is an exceedingly handsome young man and exceedingly modest. He is reticent about speaking of himself and his adventures.

Father an Artist

Thaulow's home is in Norway. His father is a famous artist. Young Thaulow began studying music at an early age and at the age of 14 he began conducting orchestras in Christiania and Paris.

He caught a taxi and drove to a bank to present his letter of credit, only to learn that the Norwegian bank had failed and his fortune was gone.

He had no prospects for a job and he didn't have enough money to join the musicians union. Then is when he slept in Central park with the violin under his head.

"I finally got a job in a Shubert show and went with it as far as Philadelphia, but was kicked out because I could not sing and tap dance," Thaulow recalls, laughing.

Standing before the Philadelphia Athletic club one day, he saw a beautiful Minerva limousine, exactly like the one he had owned in Norway.

"You can have the one I have here if you like it," the chauffeur replied. "I'm quitting."

And he got the job. He was combination butler and chauffeur for the millionaire owner of the limousine.

While not on duty he practiced and one day his employer, passing down the hall heard him playing and entered.

"James," he said, "I didn't know that you were a violinist. I'm having a 'stag' party tonight here. Will you play for my guests?"

"James" consented and that night still in his butler's dress, he stopped before the guests to play. One of the company offered to accompany him.

The pianist turned on him: "Since when does a butler instruct me in the playing of a composition?" the pianist asked indignantly.

"I'm sorry," Burke apologized. Finishing his solo the butler returned to pantry to mix cocktails when someone stepped from behind and addressed him in Norwegian, calling him by his correct name, Thaulow.

"I don't understand you," Burke replied. "I am English and my name is James Burke."

"Oh, no it isn't," smiled the man. "Your name is Chris Thaulow. I heard you play before the king and queen of Norway. Whatever are you doing here working as a butler?"

And then the story came out. His inquisitor was the secretary to the piano accompanist, who in turn was

EVEN YOU WERE BORN A CRIMINAL

BERLIN, (NEA)—As all men were born equal, so were they born criminals, in the opinion of Dr. Franz Alexander, internationally known. "We usually ask, 'Why does a person become a criminal?'" Dr. Alexander explains. "To my mind, it would be more to the point to ask, 'Why don't all people become criminals?'"

"Everyone is born into this world with instincts and impulses that are not adjusted to society. If a child could realize the demands of his instincts, he would act as a criminal. To overcome this natural tendency, the demands of his instincts must be adjusted. This is a gradual process that is never completed. By that I mean that only one part of his personality ever becomes adjusted. The other parts remain criminal. The fact that a person is able to exclude these criminal impulses from his consciousness marks him as a cultured, civilized human being."

HAIGHT SUMS UP LIONS CLUB WORK FOR YEAR; MANY PROJECTS FLOATED

The Lions club Wednesday had several features that were interesting and pleasing to its members.

At the conclusion of the musical program Lion Harry L. Haight was called upon to give a brief history of what the Lions club had accomplished since it was organized in Midland in 1927 with the largest charter membership in the history of Lionism.

The records, Haight pointed out, showed that the Lions' major activity, that of looking to the treatment of the blind and the hearing-impaired had been most satisfactorily carried out.

More than $700 a month from the Midland county budget was saved in 1931 through abolishing the office of county farm agent and through cutting down other county expenditures.

Six Youths in Home-Made Boat Will Dare Jungle on 12,000-Mile Voyage

By NEA Service

PITTSBURGH—Off on a 12,000-mile jaunt over seething tropic seas, through trackless jungles wastes where no white man has trod before, up evershifting courses of steaming, uncharted rivers where legend says white Indians live . . . That is the story of six eastern youths who have started a tour of the Caribbean sea in a 42-foot home-made boat, driven by a 72-horsepower automobile engine.

The six hope, among other things, to find a tropical plant which may result in the extermination of the house fly within 10 years, to study Mayan architecture, to find new metals to be used in combatting disease, to explode or verify the story of the white Indians on the Magdalena river in Columbia. . . And they hope to be back in Pittsburgh, their starting point, in October, 1932.

Leader Is Veteran Organizer and commander of the expedition is J. Martimer Sheppard, 29, oldest in the party and already a veteran of three somewhat similar trips into Central and South America.

His companions are: Frederick H. Wright, 20, metallurgist from Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J.; Edward T. Jones, 21, zoologist from University of Pittsburgh; Edward B. Foote, 23, University of Pittsburgh, to study architecture; LeRoy R. Bulkley, 23, of Pittsburgh, zoologist, and Stanley Stephens of Johnstown, Pa.

Their boat, the Quest, launched at Homestead, Pa., where it was built, is a 42-foot craft, powered by a 72-horsepower auto motor which will give them a cruising speed of 12 miles an hour, with a maximum of 16.

Their fuel tanks hold 300 gallons, capable of taking them 1200 miles without refueling, they estimate.

Dog Goes Along Deland, a 76-pound Airedale, is a member of the crew, and he is to be left to guard the boat when all the members of the expedition leave it. On a previous Central American trip, Deland killed a native who was trying to steal supplies from the camp he guarded. The Quest's itinerary includes some of the most romantic spots in the fabled Caribbean. After a trip down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, the boat will turn eastward for the Florida coast and then southward to Havana.

Yucatan, with its Maya ruins and its "Cube," a tropic plant said to contain a fluid deadly to insects but harmless to men and animals, will be the next port of call. Members of the expedition expect to test this plant to see if it can be grown in the southern portions of the United States to be used in killing the billions of house flies which now infest the nation.

To Dare Indians After Yucatan, the Pennsylvania Pan-American Research expedition—for that's its formidable name—will travel down the east coast of Central America, where the fierce San Blas Indians live. The Magdalena river, in Columbia, will be explored, and there it is that legend says a race of white Indians has lived for centuries. This trip is considered the most hazardous of the lot, for the Indians in this country are both fierce and hostile.

Tales of emeralds and other precious stones as big as marbles will be traced on the Magdalena trip.

If the expedition gets out of this adventure safely, its course will then be eastward and southward to the mouth of the Orinoco river. The party plans to explore this river for several hundred miles before turning the nose of their small vessel back toward the Caribbean.

From the mouth of the Orinoco, the expedition will proceed to the STICKER SOLUTION

STILL IN FRANCE

PARIS.—The war has been over for 13 years, but France still has ample evidence of England's aid in the conflict in some 62,000 Britishers, for the most part ex-soldiers who are living here.

When the war was over England called its troops home, but the call of some of the French mademoiselles was even greater than that of their native land, and they are now working in France to support a French wife and children.

For the most part these English ex-service men work as automobile drivers, interpreters, guides, in small shops and cafes, or organize a small business of their own.

To organize these men, the British legion has been established in France, with a membership of 1,100, and this outfit does a lot to aid the ex-soldiers.
