TEN YEARS BACKWARD

"King's Canary Refuses To Sing" is the headline in which an American tabloid crystallized the situation in respect to the long silences of the late Poet Laureate, Dr. Robert Bridges.

The laureateship is often enough a somewhat thankless task. The public sets its expectations high. If the poet does not write, then the canary is chided for not singing.

"The Aeneid" and "Henry V." it is pointed out, are not prevented by their patriotic fervor from being first-rate verse. But they were written a long time after the events they commemorate.

PARCHMENT VS. POETRY

John Kilcup, an American Indian, lives in White Plains, N. Y., not far from "the shining Big-Sea-Water" out of whose misty depths uprose, in 1626, Mijneer Peter Minuit from Holland to buy the island of Manhattan from the red men for a fistful of guilders.

Recently, at a powwow in the Supreme Court, John Kilcup claimed that certain wages due him as gardener had not been paid. Such an item, of course, is not news. But the manner in which the Indian presented his plea is news.

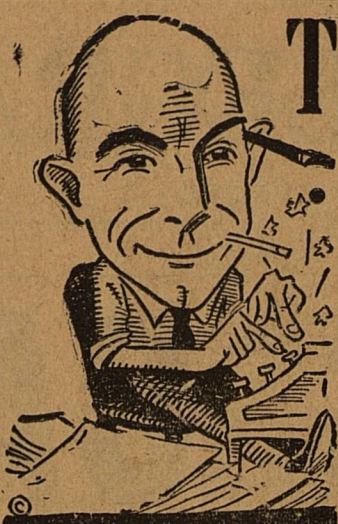

The merits of the case apart, the manner of its presentation already prejudices the reader in favor of the plaintiff. There is power in a poem quite lacking in prime prose.

"The Man Who Wasn't Paid," by John Kilcup, deserves a place in the next anthology of American verse—especially if its author wins his case.

junctions have since been filed in several counties and temporary writs of restraint granted.

County Attorney Sanders hit upon the idea of restraint by injunction for violation of the state revenue law when his attempt to prosecute a Brady beer retailer for local operation violation resulted in a verdict of acquittal by a County Court jury several weeks ago.

When the temporary orders of restraint was granted at Brady on December 19, the defendant defied the court writ by continuing sale of beer but upon final hearing he was fined $25 for contempt of court and remanded to jail until he made a $500 bond as assurance that no more beer would be sold on his premises without the necessary license.

The defendant, through his attorney made application to the Texas Supreme Court for leave to file a habeas corpus action on the ground that the state law regulating the sale of 3.2 beer was unconstitutional because it was passed in anticipation of adoption of a constitutional amendment authorizing the manufacture and sale of 3.2 beer.

District Judge Miller, in perpetuating the injunction, stated that even in the event the local option features of Texas' beer laws should be held invalid it does not follow that the revenue law regulating the manufacture and sale of beer also is invalid. The legislature has constitutional right to pass a revenue measure to regulate any situation which is anticipated to arise in the future, the jurist said.

The Brady beer situation arose about a month after McCulloch

Entirely Different Barbara Stanwyck "Ever in My Heart"

It's an entirely new and different Barbara Stanwyck on the screen of the Ritz theatre today and tomorrow in "Ever in My Heart," her latest starring vehicle for Warner Bros.

Almost always she has appeared in the role of a woman more or less soiled. In "Baby Face" she was a gold digging girl who had no scruples whatever about vamping and ruining men for the sake of luxury. In "Ladies They Talk About" she was a gangster and convict and in "Ten Cents a Dance" and "Illicit" a gum moll and taxi dancer. Even in "The Purchase Price" she starts out as a cabaret girl enomorata of the bootlegging proprietor.

In "Ever in My Heart," however, she is a changed woman, being a New England girl of strong character and moral fiber assailed by cruel fate. To Miss Stanwyck's credit, her talent is such that she is said to enact this role with even more force and feeling than she has portrayed the women of the underworld. The picture is said to be a romance of rare beauty as well as a drama of terrific emotions and dynamic action. It is tinged with the pathos of an American girl who loves and is married to a German professor at the time of the great conflict.

The cast is unusually strong.

Handling of Beer at Brady Held up As Pattern to All

BRADY (P)—County Attorney J. R. Sanders' method of handling Brady's beer situation has become a pattern for other local option areas of the state.

By BILL PARKER

There still is an unsolved mystery hovering over the University of Texas coaching job. Jack Chevigny last Saturday was appointed successor to the resigned Clyde Littlefield but this failed to entirely clear up the situation.

Why did the board of regents wait so long before announcing Chevigny was to be the next coach? Why were prominent coaches instructed to report to Austin for interviews concerning their possibilities of securing the position?

On Thursday, January 4, this paragraph appeared in a story I wrote concerning the coaching situation at the University of Texas: "There's room for only one—that one, the final choice, appears to be Jack Chevigny. The under-current news service was picked up a confidential dispatch and passed it along that Chevigny will be the Longhorns' gridiron mentor when next season rolls around."

It is laughable to think that Chevigny was surprised. He knew at the National Association meeting at Chicago three weeks ago that he was going to be the next coach. He was never worried when the regents called in other coaches for interviews. Jack's only worry was that one or two sports writers who knew that he had the job clinched would come out with a sensational story that he had been employed to succeed Littlefield. When I wrote that story on January 4, I knew that Chevigny was the next coach at the University of Texas but never definitely said so because it was not the proper time and because it would not have pleased Jack.

FINE FELLOW

Jack Chevigny is a splendid fellow. He's going to have his hands full installing the Notre Dame system at the University of Texas. Jack knows the coaching ropes. He knows he has a tremendous job developing a winner for dear old Texas alumnus. He knows the wolves will bark for his scalp if he fails. But Jack has courage, ability and can take it. If he doesn't go over—if he fails to please—then the football program at the University of Texas can be tossed into the ash can. And let's hope Jack will use a different system in coaching than the board of regents in announcing a new coach.

LANDMARK RAZED

SAN SABA. (P)—CWA workers have razed the old J. S. Williams homestead, a landmark of bygone days in this country. The house, built in the 50's stood until recently on the municipally-owned city lake property.

According to C. P. Looney, son-in-law of the late Mr. Williams, most of the lumber used in constructing the house was hauled by oxen from Bastrop more than 70 years ago. Only one room was built at that time, more rooms being added later.

The original room served for many years as the meeting place for the San Saba Masonic lodge. This room had a ceiling of red cedar which was built by Bro. Bastrop.

Mr. Williams came from New Orleans to San Saba and built a mill along the water's edge at the city lake. He was a lover of shrubs, flowers and trees and gathered pecans and plants from widely separated areas and was one of the first exponents of pecan propagation in this section.

FIRE BAND PLAYS

HOLLAND. (P)—The Holland Volunteer Fire band celebrated its fine record about four hours too soon at a banquet recently. Sixty-four guests were there to celebrate the fact that the town had only a $300 fire loss during 1933.

Shortly after the guests had gone home a fire destroyed a hatchery in the southwest part of the town before the alarm could be sounded and the firemen get there. The damage could not be learned but estimates placed it considerably more than the entire 1933 loss.

Since May, 1930, there have been 85 successful flights across the Atlantic. There have been only 13 unsuccessful flights, and, of the 13, only five planes were lost at sea.

CATS TO REMAIN IN TEXAS LEAGUE

FORT WORTH. (P)—The mud-died Fort Worth baseball situation was cleared Tuesday when Sam Lard, current owner, agreed to sell his holdings to a group of Fort Worth citizens for $40,000 cash. As soon as legal details can be adjusted the citizens' committee will pay Lard the stipulated sum and take over the franchise stadium, playing field and all other property connected with the club.

President J. Alvin Gardner and Texas league club owners agreed to allow Lard and the citizens' committee ten days to complete the deal. The league will meet here again Friday, Jan. 26, and officially transfer the franchise.

Representatives of the citizens' committee who met with Lard and completed the agreement were Roy Westbrook, J. M. North, Joe C. Maxwell and Stanley Thompson. They represented a group of more than 20 leading Fort Worth business men who will become associated in operation of the 1934 Fort Worth team.

President Gardner and club owners waited most of the day for Lard and the citizens' committee to agree on a purchase price. It was unofficially reported that Lard twice rejected offers but finally agreed on $40,000. While not officially announced, it was understood that Lard and the new owners would split the current club indebtedness which is approximately $15,000. In assuring Gardner and league magnates they had agreed to sell, Lard said all he needed to complete the deal was a typist and an attorney.
