Congress Should Address Self to Cowman-Sen. Small

Excerpts from Address Made by Sen. Clint Small

"A new concept of government has been assumed at Washington. It is utilitarian, making for the good of the greatest number. The old Jeffersonian tenet of 'the least government, the best government' performed gave way to the necessity for abolishing exploitation of the weak, and for breaking down barriers of the depression and setting up prerequisites for a return of normalcy."

"The cattleman is not the 'Forgotten Man, he is the man the Forgotten Man has forgotten.' Remedies for other industries, the cowman has been considered and administered, and several industries are already convalescent. But the cowman faces ruin unless something is immediately done for him."

SMALL SAYS TEX. COMMISSION NOT TREATED FAIRLY

SWEETWATER, Jan. 25. (AP)—State Senator Clint C. Small of Amarillo, advised here Thursday that Governor Ferguson had summoned a special session of the legislature, predicted the lawmakers would not authorize the issuance of additional relief bonds.

"This legislation was passed by a large majority of both houses and signed without protestation by the governor, signifying my approval," said Senator Small.

"The legislature did its best to place the responsibility for the expenditure of this money in the hands of a commission composed of the governor and substantial business men over the state. The commission thought this commission would direct relief work in Texas."

"We have striven for years in an effort to get economy in the administration of governmental functions and now our efforts disintegrated, extravagance and waste we have never before demanded. We want all Texas people fed and taken care of, and this can be done at a minimum expense and in an efficient manner if the relief commission, composed of men acquainted with Texas affairs are permitted to handle the job."

"I hope that the legislature will not be asked to pass a bill extending the time for the payment of taxes of any description. The state must stop its indefinite attitude with reference to tax collecting at some period, and I am sure that we could find no better time than the present. A great majority of the people of the state are paying their taxes. It is unjust discrimination to allow further special treatment to those who are eager to take advantage of the extensions granted by the legislature. I think a survey (See COMMISSION, page 4)

Establishment of beef as a basic commodity and other extension of relief to cattlemen should be among the first functions of the new congress. Sen. Clint Small, gubernatorial candidate told 136 listeners Thursday night as the annual election banquet of the chamber of commerce was held in the crystal room of Hotel Scharbauer.

Speaking on "Cotton, Cattle and Cows" Applied to the New Deal, the Amarillo senator and former gubernatorial candidate, traced briefly a succession of events which under a "new concept of government" have been disastrously affecting the cotton and oil industries and said the other basic Texas industry should share in the benefits of the New Deal.

"The cattleman is not the 'Forgotten Man, he is the man the Forgotten Man has forgotten.' Remedies for other industries, the cowman has been considered and administered, and several industries are already convalescent. But the cowman faces ruin unless something is immediately done for him."

His explanation frequently drew applause as he explained the failure of the economists to foresee that the cattle industry would not adjust itself to the new conditions, but instead create a buying power that would inevitably create the desired demand for the cattle products, but no reservation was made for the surplus of beef already on hand.

"The cowman has been the last to criticize, but conditions are deplorable and the new congress should address itself to the cattleman first."

"No per capita allotment of money can be settled upon any producer except through a compensating tax, however, and the cattleman, like the cotton farmer and the pig raiser, must bear his share of the load when relief comes."

"There must be a higher protective tariff to insure the American producer against foreign imports."

"This new conception of government depends on concrete effort and response of the nation as a whole. It is literally a government by, as well as for, the people, when analyzed."

"This year will find raked from the ashes of the depression blessings rather than curses, and I bespeak confidence for achievements it hides out."

"The speaker impressed his audience with the necessity of urging national representatives to fight for making beef a basic commodity. He did not say a processing tax on beef would be the only solution, but defended such a tax from too quick criticism. In spite of the "snap judgement" directed by critics against the processing tax levied upon the beef producer, the speaker explained, no per capita allotment of money could be settled by the government upon the producer except through a compensating tax to direct money back to the treasury, and the beef industry must bear its share of this flow-back to the treasury just as the cotton farmer and the pig raiser, he said.

"The concept of government changed in March of last year," he said. "Hitherto had existed the Jeffersonian tenet of the 'least government, the best government' and people are the best governed. Liberty through restraint has been brought to the front since the new administration was inaugurated, however, and the utilitarian concept of the 'greatest good of the greatest number of people' overproduction contributed to retirement of the oil industry, government having to assume a precedent for exercising its high responsibility. It has partially restored purchasing power in the cotton and oil industry, and we are all better off and brought to the producer new hope, vigor and enthusiasm by reducing of surpluses. Prosperity had been the up and the oil industry, the Export Trade was discovered, and proved to be the straw that almost broke the camel's back. The industry faced bankruptcy, stocks were forced down, securities values fell and solvency was jeopardized."

"The industry could not control its own destinies, and operators could not agree on a solution. Ho, oil was rampant. The state couldn't handle the situation, in spite of called sessions of the legislature. So the New Deal made the administration of oil affairs its own function and stocks rose in value and the general tone of the industry changed overnight."

"Because production was kept down to the consumers' demand, fair returns to the industry may now be expected. Senator Small introduced the state bill to regulate the oil industry, the bill passing in a special session after failing in a regular session."

"Praises Roosevelt. The new government was highly praised by the speaker, as was President Roosevelt. The administration has tried to end the exploitation of the weak, he said, and has compelled concerted effort towards sought-for aims, by market agreement, ethical codes, price fixing and the like. It has specifically stood for non-repeal of anti-trust laws. It is a new conception of government, he said, now being exercised, and one that depends more than ever upon the whole citizenship. He summed up his address by explaining the needs of Midland for a chamber of commerce, especially (See CONGRESS, page 4)

Chamber Report To Be Published In Sunday Issue

"Tightening the Traces," the annual report of the chamber of commerce by Secretary Paul T. Vickers will be published in currency in the Sunday issue of The Reporter-Telegram.

The secretary was one of the first in the country to distribute printed copies of his report at annual election banquets, believing the value of the report would be more pronounced in that manner, inasmuch as members could take the report home and read it at their leisure, and also compare it from year to year with other reports. It also saves valuable time which would be required for reading the lengthy report at a session which should be devoted to other details.

DESPERADO AND GANG CAPTURED THURS. EVENING

No Defense Move Is Made by Killer At Arrest

TUCSON, Jan. 26. (UP)—Fifty deputies mounted machine guns around the Lima county jail today, guarding four of the Midwest's most desperate gangster-killers who were captured by a small town police force.

John Dillinger, leader, Russell Clark, Charles Makley and Harry Pierpont, accused of a score of robberies and murders and prison breaks and all delinquent in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, were held for return to answer various charges.

Dillinger was armed, but did not resist arrest. "Shaken down" at police headquarters where he admitted his identity when confronted with fingerprint records, Dillinger had on his person a pistol and $9.17 in currency.

Money and Guns In his baggage, which he apparently was engaged in moving to a house he had rented that afternoon, was a suitcase full of currency, the amount undetermined, and two sub-machine guns in a steamer trunk.

The woman taken with him Dillinger said was his wife, and she at first declared such was. Later when Dillinger had gone to his cell, she told detectives her name is Anna Martin and that she is not married.

The money in the suitcase, when counted, was found to be $6500 in currency, bringing to a total of $27,000 the amount taken from Dillinger and three henchmen arrested earlier.

The gang leader and the woman drove to the house which had been occupied by one of his men in an automobile with a Wisconsin license. Dillinger walked into the house to be confronted by three police pistols.

The odds appeared too great, and the man who is credited with having shot himself out of several police traps surrendered without attempting to draw his pistol.

Others Captured The 30-year-old gang chieftain was captured soon after the roundup here of three of his henchmen, Charles Makley, Russell Clark and Harry Pierpont, escaped Indiana convicts accused of slaying Sheriff Jess Barber to deliver him from jail at Lima, Ohio, last September 26.

Two other women also were arrested by police raiders, making a total of seven persons in custody. Makley and Clark were overpowered in an apartment where police said they had been living with two women companions. About two hours later Pierpont and a woman were picked up in a tourist court in the southern part of the city just as they were packing up their automobile, preparatory to leaving, police said.

EAGLE'S SCREAM IS HEARD

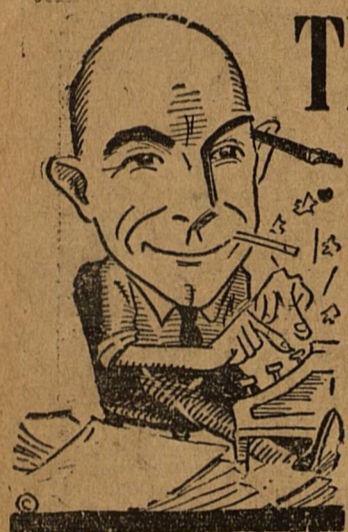

There is a general disposition among commentators on the recovery program to assume that the Blue Eagle campaign is falling short because the consuming public is not supporting it. Once in a while something happens to indicate that this assumption is mistaken.

A Cleveland (O.) restaurant lost its Blue Eagle some time ago on order of General Johnson, because it failed to comply with the code. The other day the proprietor filed papers pleading for restoration of the emblem, promising to observe the code fully, and asserting that the restaurant's profits have dropped by 50 per cent since the Blue Eagle was taken away.

Here is pretty direct evidence that the consuming public does support the NRA program. The Blue Eagle has a solid cash value, in spite of what the critics say.

If you don't believe it, ask the man who has lost his.

Range Prices for Wool Lambs up

SAN ANGELO, (AP)—With more calf buyers in West Texas and more lamb orders than at any time in the last six months, the range market has moved up to 5 1/2 cents for woolled lambs while steer calves are selling at 4 1/2 cents a pound. These are the best prices in recent months. Buyers are taking any kind of woolled lamb they can find. One load of 46-pound lambs sold in the Sonora country for 5 cents a pound while offers of 6 1/2 cents a pound were made in San Angelo. Kansas buyers paid 4 1/2 cents a pound for part of four carloads of calves that left the Sonora country. Similar prices are reported from the Highland Hereford country. Ranchmen predict a light calf crop in 1934. About half the calves in the Highland Hereford area are sold out. Roy Hildreth paid 5 1/2 cents a pound for 1,200 lambs from Marsh Lea of Fort Stockton and R. A. Neal of Adrian, Michigan, paid 5 1/2 cents a pound for two carloads of lambs at Millersview. Ranchmen predict that lambs will go to 7 cents a pound. Hamp Carter of Rankin loaded out a double deck of solid mouth ewes to an Oklahoma buyer at $3 a head, an advance of about $1 a head over the previous market. Tom Springston of Eldorado has sold two loads of bred yearling ewes to a Cleburne buyer at $6 a head. C. B. Hudspeth has loaded 3,400 head of mutton lambs out of the Alpine country to Seth Patterson of Kansas City at 5 1/4 cents a pound. Lucerne is another name for alfalfa. DOCTOR'S ANSWERS To Questions By S. C. Babcock, M. D. Q. "at times such as these," when everything points to the necessity for more population and industry. "The spirit still prevails here for a chamber of commerce." I can readily judge from talking with you," he said. He spoke an abiding confidence in recovery phases for West Texas and for the nation in 1934. "I said blessings rather than a curse would be raked from the ashes of the depression and summed up his address by a gracious compliment for Midland and Midland people.

Ulmer Reviews Year
Not a note of political campaigning was allowed by the senator to obscure during the lecture and the big crowd followed him with interest that was not divided. Many of his political friends spoke with him after the address, but he confined his conversation to generalities and, beyond a sentimental "I won't begin to campaign before April," did not discuss political affairs or his coming race for the governor's chair.

Ulmer, for two years president of the chamber, and toastmaster and introduced the speaker. He described Sen. Small as "an outstanding senator, and one of our greatest statesmen." It is reflected in the trust of his constituents and the common cause. Not only is he a friend to West Texas, but to the entire state. He is generous and liberal, and has the future of the oil man, farmer and cattlemen continually in his consciousness," he said.

The Dillinger gang, the eastern authorities said, is blamed for several murders and a long series of bank robberies. Dillinger, a native of Terre Haute, Ind., is sought as a participant in many of the crimes charged to the Dillinger gang.

An old, faded photo of Marie Dressler, long before even her Weber and Fields days on the stage, had one of the most important parts in her latest appearance on the screen.

From it was painted the portrait which proves the crux of the dramatic situation in "Her Sweetheart" (Christopher Bean), in which she and Lionel Barrymore appear on the Yucca screen Sunday and Monday, and at Saturday's preview.

The painting, supposed to be one painted by an artist who loved her in her youth, precipitates the entire dramatic climax by the amazing story, adapted by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, from the celebrated stage play, "The Late Christopher Bean."

Navel Orange May Be Outstanding Product

WESLACO, (AP)—The Texas navel orange, developed by the state experiment station near Weslaco, promises to become an outstanding product of the Lower Rio Grande valley although the September storm interfered with tests.

The productiveness is the only characteristic about which comparatively little is known. The crop of 1933 promised to be a record breaker, but the storm blew most of the fruit from the trees. An average of 900 fruits per tree were picked up after the storm as compared with an average of 407 fruits per tree for the same type of navel of comparative age.

The fruit has a sprightly sub-acid flavor as described by W. H. Friend, superintendent of the experiment station, the skin has a fine texture, the pulp tender and the fruit fewer seed and less rag than most varieties.

Change Punishment For Horse Thieves

STEPHENVILLE, (UP)—There was once a law, unwritten, of course, in Erath county that decreed that any person found guilty of stealing cattle, mules or horses was a subject for a lasso and a limb. No few men paid the penalty by swinging from the limbs of large trees along the Bosque and other streams.

This week it will be a different story. Three men who are lodged in jail here under charges of mule theft will face grand jury action, the first of this type of case in the county for several years.

A farmer living near here heard a commotion the other night, and got to the door in time to see one of his best mules ride off in a trailer. He called the sheriff, who gave chase. A mile down the road the sheriff met the mule limping homeward. A broken rope was around its neck.

The sheriff continued the chase and overtook a car with a trailer near Glen Rose. He arrested three men, the men denied the charge, but the sheriff said it was evident that the trailer had hauled a mule. It had hair and blood on it and was wrecked on one side evidently done when the contrary mule made his break for liberty. The mule had a cut foot and skinned leg. This, the sheriff said, caused the blood to be on the trailer.

MEXICO BETTER THAN IN LAST 25 YEARS
DEL RIO, (AP)—Conditions in Mexico are better than they have been since the time of Diaz which ended about 25 years ago. C. M. Newman of El Paso, said while passing through Del Rio recently. He is generally regarded as one of the best informed men on Mexico.

The good conditions in Mexico is in part caused by the general belief in the stability and strength of the existing government. There is a great deal of gold mining in Oaxaca and over the southern Mexican states. Domestic and foreign capital has opened gold mines that had been closed but which under improved processes of refining, now can be operated profitably. The rise

BUSINESS SUPPORTS THE NATION
BANKS SUPPORT BUSINESS

And, what is true on a national scale, is true on a local basis.

To make the explanation clearer, this country depends upon its industries to support it; every industry is dependent upon stabilized banking for its continuance; every bank is dependent upon the financial condition of the nation for its stability.

Thus, we are all parts of an endless chain which must continue unbroken if we are to survive.

It is this bank's welcomed obligation to aid the business life of its territory to the full extent of its resources, experience and contacts.
